and the other, the Examining Churches. ^aThe Walloon Synods have two Funds, one whereof is properly called the Scholars Settlement as beforementioned, consisting of Bonds and Obligations whereof the Churches of Amsterdam and Middelbourg are the Trustees. 'Tis out of this Fund, that the poor Students, devoted to the Ministry, are maintained. The other, which is looked upon by most, but the Synod, to be the poor Student's Fund, is M. Mouche's Donation, and consists in a capital Sum, which the beforementioned Mouche, who was a rich Dutchman, or Walloon, had appropriated by his last Will and Testament for "preaching the Gospel to the Infidels, or "savage Natives of America in their Mother Tongue; and he therein declared his "Mind and Will to be, that the Rents, Issues, and Profits thereof should be employed to no other Purpose or Purposes whatsoever, and that no Sum or Sums of "Money should be raised thereupon: However, since no Person whomsoever could "be found duly qualified for that Purpose to that Time which was in the Year 1726 "the Synod was empowered by the States in 1716 to make use of the Income or Revenue thereof towards the Maintenance and Support of such poor "Students as were set apart, or devoted to the Ministry." The Synod is much to be commended for their ingenuous Confession: But who could ever have imagined, that such a Republick as Holland should be incapable of providing proper Missionaries to America? Be that as it will, the Church of Amsterdam has the sole Direction of that Endowment or Donation.

^fTHE Examining Churches, are ^gthose which the Synod nominates by turns for the Examination of all such Discourses as are published on Religious Topicks, or on Matters relating thereunto. In one of their Articles, It is resolved, "that such Dissertations "shall be sent in Manuscript to the Examining Churches; and in another, that no "Member or Members of the Protestant Churches shall print any Books on religious "Subjects, without first communicating his or their Intention to the Examining Churches of the Province wherein he or they reside, and without their Approbation "being first had and obtained." The Article last mentioned is very conformable ^hto the Discipline of the Protestant Churches in France. If a literal Construction be put upon it, no Layman must presume to write directly or indirectly, on any Topicks of Religion, without the Licence and Approbation of the Examining Churches: And that is more fully and clearly exprest in the ⁱ*Ecclesiastical Discipline of the United Provinces*. That Resolution plainly shews, that Foreigners entertain a very wrong Idea of the Tolerance of the Dutch which they look upon as an absolute Freedom. 'Tis a general Notion, that neither their Churches, nor their Magistrates ever concern themselves about Religion; but 'tis a gross Mistake. There are Instances to be produced, which demonstrate, that their Ecclesiastical Discipline has been enforced more than once by the secular Power.

THE Simplicity, of those Ceremonies which are observed by the Protestants in the Celebration of their two Sacraments will not admit of a long Description. The two Prints hereunto annex strike the Eye more strongly, and are more ex-

^a Resolutions, &c. ubi sup. Chap. xiv.

^c Extracted from the Resolutions &c. ubi sup. Art. 3.

^f Resolutions, &c. ubi sup. Chap. xvii.

^g Ibid. Art. 1.

^h Discipline &c. ubi sup. Chap. i. Art. 15. and Chap. xiv. Art. 16.

ⁱ No Person who professes the Protestant Religion is permitted to print or publish any Book, or Manuscript whatsoever, or any religious Subject whatsoever, whether it be an Original, or a Translation only, until such Book, or Manuscript as beforementioned be duly examined, &c.

pressive than Words themselves. I shall content myself therefore with enlarging only on those which I take to be the most essential, and the most strictly observed. The Baptism of an Infant is preceded by the reading of a Formulary, or Office of Baptism, and a Prayer; after which the Minister, addressing himself to the Godfathers and Godmothers, asks them in direct Terms whether they assent to what the Dignity of a Sacrament requires of a true Christian, and which is unfortunately reduced, in almost all Communities, to nothing more than a meer Ceremony. According to the Protestants (I mean the Calvinists) the Sacrament of Baptism ought always to be administered in Publick, that is to say, according to the Terms made use of in the Discipline of the Protestant Churches in France, ^k in Ecclesiastical Assemblies, “ where there “ is a Church duly prepared, and set in Order for that Purpose.” If an Exception to the general Rule be admitted, 'tis only when the Saints reside amongst Infidels, or when any imminent Danger, or actual Persecution obstructs their assembling together, or some other emergent Occasion of the like Nature. This Rule is for the most part observed in all the Protestant Churches. As to the Baptism of adult Members, whether Anabaptists (supposing they have never been baptized before) Jews, Mahometans, or Pagans, the Minister who officiates addresses himself to the Parties themselves, and by divers Interrogatories, obliges them to renounce those Errors, Superstitions, and Acts of Idolatry, in the Behalf and Practice whereof they have been trained up from their Infancy to that Time.

THE Lord's Supper, or Holy Communion, which the Print here represents, is that of the Protestants of the United Provinces, which bears a very near Affinity, in all Respects, to that Form or Solemnity observed by the Protestants in France. Several Deacons and Elders stand within Reach of the Table, where the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper is administered: The Elders to take Care that a due Decorum be preserved, suitable to the Dignity of that mysterious Ceremony; the Deacons to cut the Bread in small Pieces, which the Minister distributes amongst the Communicants, and to fill the Cup, which he likewise administers to them after the same Manner. In some other Places, as at Geneva, and in Switzerland, they don't seat themselves round a Table, in which Particular some pretend the Primitive Protestants endeavoured to imitate the last Supper which our blessed Lord eat with his Apostles. They there present themselves before two Ministers; one administers to the Communicants the mystical and emblematic Piece of Bread, the other the Cup, or a common Glass, with a small Quantity of Wine in it. In case the Communicant has a natural Aversion to Wine, the Discipline of the Churches in France ^l indulges the Communicant, and orders the Bread only to be administered to him. In order to be duly qualified for receiving the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, the Party must have attained to the Years of Discretion. In some Countries they publish the Names of their young Catechumens. Before they presume to approach the Lord's Table they must at least be examined before the Consistory. There is a peculiar Form for the Administration of the Holy Communion which begins with a Discourse on the Institution, the Nature of it, and the Duties incumbent on all such as partake of the Blessed Sacrament. After that introductory Discourse, the Communicants repair to the Place where they are to receive the Lord's Supper, the Men first, and the Women afterwards; and during the Celebration of the Sacrament, the Reader, who at the same

^k Discipline &c. Chap. ii. Art. 6.

^l Discipline &c. ubi sup. Chap. xii. Art. 7.

Le BAPTÊME des REFORMÉS.

La COMMUNION des REFORMÉS.

Time is likewise the principal Chorister, reads alternately several Chapters out of the sacred Scriptures, and sings several Psalms. This Chanter is always a Layman, sometimes a Mechanick, and at most but a School-master. At Geneva, and several other Places where the Protestant Religion prevails, such as are Candidates for the Ministry, execute that Office. The Communion Service concludes with a Prayer, and an Exhortation sometimes longer and sometimes shorter, as a Minister thinks most convenient, together with the Anthem of St. Simeon.

THE solemn Observance of the Lord's Day consists in three Sermons regularly preached every Sunday by three several Ministers. Before the Sermon begins, the Chanter beforementioned reads some Portion of the sacred Scriptures, and sings two or three Psalms. After that, the Minister mounts the Pulpit, sets another Psalm, and then delivers a Prayer of his own composing. As soon as he has done, he opens his Bible, and reads the Text which he proposes to explain and improve. The Sermon having lasted an Hour, and sometimes much longer, the Minister who delivered it, makes another extempore Prayer; but before he begins, recommends all such as are any Ways afflicted in Mind, Body, or Estate &c. to the Prayers of the whole Congregation. That being ended, another Psalm is sung, and then the Minister dismisses his Audience with a general Benediction. Should the Reader expect from me any cursory Remark on that particular Act of their Devotion, I should assure him, that the same Failings and Imperfections are to be met with therein as are conspicuous in other Places.

As to their other religious Solemnities, they are reduced to one or two annual Fasts, and to four grand Festivals, that is to say, Christmas, Easter, Witsuntide, and the Ascension, to which may be added New Year's Day, on which the Shops are shut up as on Sundays in several Protestant Countries.

I SHALL close this short Dissertation with a Remark wherein I pretend to be impartial and to do Justice to the Discipline of the Protestant Churches, in Opposition to those of some other Communion, who for Want of better Information, charge the Protestants with too much Negligence and Remissness in that Particular. Their Discipline is very prudent, and in many Particulars very strict and severe. As a Demonstration of the Truth thereof, I shall refer the Reader to those Chapters in the Ecclesiastical Discipline of the Protestants in France, which treat on the several Duties of Ministers, Consistories, and such as enter into the holy State of Matrimony. Evangelical Moderation is therein particularly recommended; and as an Instance thereof in the 23d Article of the last Chapter which treats of By-Laws, we find the following Passage. "All manner of Persecution, all Revilings, and opprobrious Language against those who are Members of the Romish Church, even against those who are Monks and Ecclesiasticks, should not only be prevented, but as much as possible, be checked and discouraged." Have therefore those sanguine hot-headed Ministers, who, in their Discourses from the Pulpit, intermingle such a Number of controversial Points so warmly argued, and so full of bitter Invectives against ^m Papists and Hereticks, absolutely forgot that Moderation and Candour so strenuously recommended to their Discipline? Doubtless they have; nay they pretend thereby to aggravate and enhance the Iniquity of the contrary Party, and demonstrate to their Brethren, the Merits and Advantages of that whereunto they are attached; after which like undaunted Christians, they open a free Passage to the Celestial Mansions for all such Saints as embrace their Doctrine. Nevertheless God forbid that I should ascribe that Frailty and Imperfection to the Protestants alone, since, by such an Act of blind Partiality, I should too evidently demonstrate, that I knew nothing of the World.

^m A Term as frequently in the Mouths of the Protestants, and as familiar to them, as that of Huguenot was formerly to the Roman Catholics.

470 *AD*ISSERTATION on the RELIGION &c.

The END of the FIFTH VOLUME.

I N D E X.

A.

A Bassines, nominal Christians only, p. 188; observe Fasts, and visit the Sepulchres of their Dead, ibid. seldom enter into a Church till they are three-score, ibid. Rapine and Plunder, their principal Employment, ibid. their nuptial Ceremonies, ibid. their funeral Rites, ibid.

Abbot, or Hegumen, an Officer belonging to the Grecian Patriarch.

Abdjesu, substituted Patriarch of the Nestorians in the Room of Simon Julacha, 189.

Abdon (St.) and St. Sennan, a Festival of the Maronites, 274. Besson's Account of a remarkable Miracle which happened on that Day, in the Chappel dedicated to those two Saints, on the Top of the Metropolitan Church of St. Sergius, ibid.

Ablutions, the Form thereof observed by the Mahometans, 296.

Abrahamites, Deists of Egypt, a particular Account of their Tenets, 287. N. (a).

Abuna, the Title given to the Archbishop of Ethiopia, 229. N. (s); the Signification of the Term, ibid. his extensive Power, 232. his Manner of Ordination, ibid.

Abyssines, an Account of their Tenets and Customs, 229 & seq. their Language, what called and why, 229. are inclinable to be reconciled with the Romish Church. ibid. David Emperor of Ethiopia, writes with all Submission for that Purpose to Pope Clement the seventh, ibid. are ambitious of being circumcised, and why, 230. N. (w); boast their Descent from Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, ibid. copy the Jews in several of their religious Ceremonies, 231. N. (a); are absolutely dependent on the Patriarch of Alexandria, 232. their Form of Ordination, ibid. admit Infants to be Clerks, 233. their Monks never marry, ibid. are guilty of gross Prevarication, ibid. their Monarchs frequently take Holy Orders on their Coronation-Days, 234. assume the Title of Kings of Israel, ibid. the Ceremonies observed at their Coronation, ibid. their Crown, of what it consists, and its Embellishments, 235. their Notion of its being dropt down from Heaven, and why, ibid. their pompous Title, ibid. their Royal Signet, what, ibid. their Emperors formerly attended at the Altar, ibid. that Privilege since lost, and by what Means, ibid. are indulged in a Plurality of Wives, ibid. their Form of proclaiming their Queens or Empresses, ibid. their Monarch arbitrary, ibid. their Form of Baptism, 236. their Mairon and Galilaum, what, ibid. their particular Notion with Respect to the Generation of the Soul, 237. Several other Opinions on that Topick, ibid. N. (p); a particular Account of their Festival of the Epiphany, ibid. of their Confirmation, 238. of their Sacrament of the Eucharist, 239. of their Churches, 240. of their Punctuality in bringing their Oblations to Church, 241. a peculiar Confession of theirs, called the Confession of the Censer, ibid. wherein it consisted, ibid. the Ceremony thereof, ibid. are strict in the Observance of their Fasts, ibid. entertain dreadful Apprehensions of Excommunication, 242. their Ceremony of the Extreme Unction, Simple Unction, and the Candle or Lamp, ibid. their Nuptial Ceremonies, 243. are Polygamists, ibid. Divorces easily procured by both Sexes, ibid. Wives purchased, ibid. the Ceremony of a Wedding described by Alvarez, ibid. their Marriage Rites according to Gaia, ibid. their musical Instruments, 244. worn by their Priests, ibid. how played upon, ibid. their Dances looked upon as Acts of Devotion, ibid. the Merit thereof, on what grounded, ibid. pray for their Dead, and invoke their Saints, &c. ibid.

Adamites, who they were, and what Principles they held, 382.

Adrian (Pope), convenes a Council, wherein all the Records of that which Photius Patriarch of Constantinople had projected against Pope Nicholas the First

I N D E X.

- are publickly burnt, 7. is induced for some particular Reasons to acknowledge Photius as legal Patriarch, with Restrictions, ibid. condemns Photius, 8.
- Aer*, a Veil made Use of by the Greeks, for the Covering of their Chalice and Patins, in the Administration of their Holy Communion, 99.
- Agapes*, what, 98. N. (m).
- Agapius*, a Greek Monk of Mount Atbos, Author of a Treatise, entitled, the Salvation of Sinners, published at Venice in 1641, and 1644. Wherein the Doctrine of Transubstantiation is strenuously maintained, 51; his Authority despised by Sieur Aymon, and by Claude, ibid. N. (l).
- Agnes* (St.) remarkable for her Cure of sore Eyes, 185. the Ceremonies observed by the Mingrelians on her Festival, ibid.
- Agricola*, a Lutheran Divine, employed by the Emperor Charles the Vth, to draw up his famous Interim, 347.
- Abatballa*, Patriarch of the Nestorians, and Successor of Abdjesu, 189.
- Albert*, Grand Master of the Teutonic Order in 1526, declares himself of the Lutheran Party, 337.
- Albigenses*, a Sect among the Vaudais, inveterate Enemies to the Romish Church, 325. favour the Schisms of Calvin and Luther, ibid.
- Albuquerque* (Don John), first Archbishop of Goa, and Patron of the College erected at Congranar for the Instruction of Youth in the Latin Ceremonies, 199.
- Alcoran*, the miraculous Assistance which Mahomet had in the Composition of it, 288. the Contents of it, ibid.
- Aleppo*, an extraordinary Ceremony observed in the Conveyance thither of the Holy Water of the Lake Samercand, 113.
- Alexander* the Vth, (elected Pope in the Pisan Council) promises to promote a Reformation in the Church, 324.
- Alexander* (Jerom), is sent by Pope Leo the Xth. to the Elector of Saxony to prevail on him to espouse his Holiness's Interest against Luther, 331. proves unsuccessful, ibid. his particular Account of Luther, 346. N. (g).
- Alexander* the IIIrd (Pope) receives a Dissertation against the Errors of the Greeks, from one Hugo Eterianus with Relation to the Procession of the Holy Ghost, 12.
- Alexander* the IVth, (Pope) attempts to revive the Negotiation with Theodorus Lascaris, which Vatacius had begun, 15. proves unsuccessful, ibid.
- Alexandria*, the Patriarch thereof very powerful, 87. the grand Title assumed by him, ibid.
- Alexiowitz* (Peter), late Czar of Muscovy, finishing his Travels over Europe, declares himself Head of the Russian Church, 81. N. (d).
- Alix*, his facetious Reply to Claude, 69.
- Allatius* (Leo), his Catalogue of the several Churches, dependent on the Patriarchate of Constantinople, taken from Nilus Doxopatrius, 27. N. (d); his Character of Caucus, Archbishop of Corson, 35.
- Alysius*, the Adoration of him and the Apostle Peter, a Festival observed by the Greeks, on the 16th of January 122.
- Amaury*, a profest Enemy to the Romish Church, and why, 325.
- Ambou*, what, 106. a farther Description of it, ibid. N. (d).
- Ambrose* of Milan, a Festival observed by the Greek Monks on the 7th of December, 121.
- Amorgos*, an Urn there, looked upon by the Greeks, as the Oracle of the Archipelagus.
- Amurath*, Emperor of the Turks, in 1444. defeats Ladislaus, King of Hungary, at Varna, 20. the Consequences thereof, ibid. his remarkable Address to Jesus Christ on the Violation of a solemn Treaty made with him by the Christians, ibid. N. (e).
- Anabaptists* of Wittemberg, who their principal Leaders, 335. are opposed by Luther and forced to fly, ibid.
- Anababus*, what, 152. N. (q).
- Anaphora* of the Cophti, what, 223.
- Anastasius Sinaites*, a Monk of the 7th Century, a strenuous Advocate for the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 62.
- Anastasius* and Timotheus, a Festival observed by the Greeks, on the 22d of January, 122.
- Anchorets*, an Order of Grecian Monks, 73. N. (d); their Manner of Life, 74.
- Andrew* (James), a Lutheran Divine, surnamed Schmidlin, and why, 354. N. (x); his infamous Character, ibid.
- Andrew* (the Apostle), a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, on the 30th of November, 121.
- Andros*, (the Island of) a Religious Custom observed there on the Festival of Corpus Christi, 160.
- Andronicus*, Son of Paleologus, renounces, after his Father's Death, the Reconciliation made with the Latins, 17.
- Andronicus* the younger, (Emperor) inclines to a Reconciliation, 17. sends Barlaam to Pope Benedict the XIIth with new Proposals, ibid.
- Angelus* (Christophulus) his Account of the Manner of fasting, observed by the Greek Monks, 76. N. (i). Annates,

I N D E X.

Annates, the Abolition thereof in England, by Henry the VIIIth, 341.

Anne (St.), a Festival observed by the Greeks, on the 25th of July, 123.

Annunciation of the blessed Virgin Mary, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, on the 25th of March, tho' it falls in Lent, 117.

Anthony (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 17th of January, 1722.

Antidoron, the Signification of the Term, 109. N. (k); and 111. Ricaut's Account of it, ibid. it is given to the Sick, ibid. its extraordinary Vertues, ibid. is eaten fasting, ibid. is an Image, or Shadow of the Eucharist, 112. the Person who makes it must be free from all Pollution, ibid. the Reason for it, ibid.

Antimensium, or Super-altare, a portable Altar entrusted to the Care of the Prefect, an Assistant to the Patriarchs, 92. N. (y); the Manner of its Consecration, 115.

Antioch, the Patriarch thereof, the poorest of all the Patriarchs, 87.

Antitypes, the Symbols or Elements of Bread and Wine made Use of in the Sacrament, so called by the antient Fathers, even after the Consecration, 61.

Apomuron what, 137. the Origin of it, ibid.

Apostolicks, not only renounce the Pope and his Authority, but condemn the Sacraments and Fasts, &c. of the Romish Church, 25.

Apparition of Saints, a Festival observed by the Cophti, 226. a particular Account of the Manner of it, ibid.

Archimandrite, an Officer or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarch, 93. his peculiar Province, ibid.

Archimandrite, a Principal, or Abbot of a Convent, 151. the import of the Term, ibid. his venerable Title, ibid.

Arcudius (Francis) makes a Breviary for the Use of the Greeks, 78. but without Success, it being rejected and despised by them, ibid. made use of only by a few Basilian Monks of Crypta Ferrata, ibid.

Armenians reconciled to the Romish Church by a Decree of the Council of Florence, in 1439.(21) their Tenets and Customs described, 244. & seq. their Reconciliation with the Church of Rome, confirm'd by an Act enter'd into in the Reign of the Emperor Constantine and Fridat their King, when Sylvester was Pope, and Gregory their Patriarch, 248. are Monosophytes by Profession, ibid. hold the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, according to Ricaut, 249. N. (m); A Catalogue of Errors ascrib'd to them by one John Hernac, their Countryman, but reconcil'd to the Romish Church,

251. Tournefort's Account of their Tenets, ibid. N. (n); abstain from eating of Hares, and why, ibid. N. (o); are too superstitious in the Observance of their Fasts, 252. celebrate the Nativity, and Epiphany of our Saviour on the same Day, ibid. hold in great Veneration the Title of Master or Doctor, and why, ibid. their Doctors styl'd Vertabiets, ibid. N. (s); a particular Account of their Power, &c. ibid. Monachism in great Vogue with them, 252, their two Orders of St. Basil and St. Dominic, ibid. the latter called united Fryars, and why, ibid. their divine Service perform'd in the Armenian Language, ibid. the Bible translated for their Service about Chrysoptom's time from the Septuagint, ibid. Mesrop the Hermit look'd upon as the Inventor of their Characters, ibid. Ricaut's Account of their Confession of Faith, 253. their Number of Patriarchs, their Title and Places of Residence, ibid. Armenians of Poland reconcil'd with the Romish Church in 1666. ibid. N. (a); the Manner of electing their Grand Patriarch, 254. his extensive Authority over the Clergy, ibid. the vast Number of Villages under his Jurisdiction, ibid. a remarkable Stratagem of his to raise Money, ibid. their Bishops reside in Convents, 255. are under the same Regulations as their Monks, ibid. their Revenue from whence arising, and the several Badges of their Quality, ibid. the odd Qualifications requisite for the Priesthood. ibid. the whimsical Ceremony observ'd by their Wives on their first Admission, ibid. their Ordination of Children, ibid. their Devotees go in Pilgrimage to Itchmiazin and Virap. 246. their extraordinary Veneration for those two Places, ibid. thought equal with those of the Romish Devotees, to the Lady of Loretto and St. James in Galicia, and far preferable to those made to the Temple of Jerusalem, ibid. their long and solemn Preparation for that religious Purpose, ibid. their Veneration for their Churches, and their modest Deportment to them, ibid. an Account of their Fasts, ibid. of their Festivals, 257. the most solemn of them particularly specified, and the peculiar Ceremonies observ'd on those Holidays, ibid. their Sacrifices of Beasts like the Jews, and other Oblations, 258. an Account of their Churches from Father Le Brun, ibid. & seq. their Liturgy commended, 260. a Description of the Bread made use of at the Celebration of their holy Communion, ibid. their Kifs of Peace, how transferred from

B

I N D E X.

- from one to another, 262. administer the Communion to Infants, ibid. their several Abuses with respect to the Communion, 263. the Administration of their Viaticum, ibid. the Form of their Baptism, ibid. their stated times for that Ordinance, ibid. the Deportment of the Godfather and Mother on those solemn Occasions, ibid. their Chrism or Confirmation, when and how administered, ibid. the stated Time for preparing their Chrism, and the Form observ'd therein, 264. auricular Confession practis'd amongst them, ibid. the Form of their Absolution, ibid. their nuptial Ceremonies, 265. their secular Priests oblig'd to marry, 267. the absurd Manner of their Administration of extreme Unction, ibid. their funeral Solemnities ibid. the usual Custom of washing their Feet in the Church, and anointing them with Butter instead of Oil, ibid. the Form of the Bishop's Benediction at such times. ibid. visit the Monuments of their Dead on Easter-Monday, 268. their Custom of commemorating the Dead, as observed by the Inhabitants of Julfa, ibid.
- Arnaud* (Dr. of the Sorbonne) Author of the Perpetuity of the Faith, and a very learned Discourse on the Theology of the Greeks, 31.
- Arnold* of Brescia, a profest Enemy to the Romanists, and why, 325.
- Arnold* of Villeneuve, a profest Enemy to the Romish Monks, and why, 325.
- Arfens*, the Patriarch thereof excommunicates Michael Palæologus Governor of Constantinople, instead of John Lascaris, for his Inhumanity towards that Prince, 15, N. (c.)
- Articles* (preliminary) of the Council of Basil, held in 1434, and ratified by the said Council and Pope Eugenius, 20.
- Artzeburst*, what, 117. kept as Fast-Days by some Armenian Hereticks, in Commemoration of the Death of a favourite Dog, ibid. N. (k); the Signification of the Term, ibid. by whom first instituted, ibid. the Intention thereof, ibid.
- Ascension-Day*, a solemn Festival of the Armenians, 257.
- Asceticks*, Grecian Devotees, a particular Description of them, 152.
- Asrael*, a superior Angel, (according to the Mahometans) 289. his peculiar Province, ibid.
- Assembly* of Doctors at Paris condemn divers Books, as being repugnant to the Doctrines of the Catholic Church, 337.
- Assistants* to the Grecian Patriarchs, the Order in which they attend, 90. their several Names or Titles, ibid. & seq.
- Assonna*, a sacred Book of the Mahometans, 288. the Contents of it, ibid.
- Assumption* of the blessed Virgin, a solemn Festival observ'd by the Greeks on the 15th of August, 123, the Origin thereof, 124. The same likewise a solemn Festival of the Armenians, 157. as also of the Mingrelians, and appropriated to the Benediction of their Lands, 186. the Ceremony thereof, ibid.
- Assumption* of the Body of St. John the Evangelist, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 26th of September, 121.
- Asterisk* what, 99. N. (t); the Signification of the Term, ibid. Tournefort's Account of it, ibid.
- Athanasius* and St. Cyril, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 18th of January, 122.
- Athanasius* of Thessalonica, his extravagant Purchase of the Patriarchate of Constantinople, 84.
- Athens*, the Archbishop thereof maintains the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 70.
- Atlas*, a Mountain inhabited by a select Body of Quietists, called Palamites, from one Gregory Palamas their head, 18. and also by Grecian Monks, 154, N. (c). its Situation, ibid. resorted to by Christian Greeks, and why, 155. the Number of Caloyers residing thereon, 156. the Number of their Convents, ibid. by whom protected, 156.
- Avitabolis*, a Missionary of Pope Urban the 8th, his Account of the Principles of the Iberians, 173. of their Form observed in Baptism, 175. of their Confirmation administered at the same time with their Eucharist, ibid. of their political State, 176.
- Auricular* Confession practis'd by the Greek Church, 38. and by the Armenians, 264.
- Ausbourg*, Melanchton's Confession there presented to the Diet held in 1530, confuted by the Catholic Divines, and afterwards altered by the Lutherans, 339. the Decree of that Diet strenuously exclaim'd against by Pope Paul the IVth, 350. the Lutheran Confession publish'd there, and presented to Charles the Vth in 1530, (399).
- Aymeric*, a Patriarch of Antioch, before whom the Maronites recant their Errors, 269.
- Aymon* (Sieur) his scurrilous Character of the two Synods, held at Constantinople against Cycil Lucar, 52. N. (q).

B.

Balsamon (Theodorus) Author of a Treatise wherein the first Instance is to be met with of a formal Schism between the Greeks and the Latins, 12.

Baracha,

I N D E X.

- Baracha*, of the Cophti, what, 220.
- Baratz*, the Emperor of the Turks Letters Patents, 83. the extensive Power of them, ibid.
- Barba* (St.) a solemn Festival observ'd by the Greeks on the 4th of December, 121.
- Barbes*, the Pastors of the Valdensian Churches, 366. the Signification of the Title, 373. N. (v). on whom conferred, ibid.
- Barbereau*, his Account of the Ignorance and Stupidity of the Greeks at Constantinople, 43. N. (o).
- Barberini* (Cardinal) publishes at Rome Holstenius's Dissertation on the Sacrament of Confirmation, as observ'd by the Greeks, 36.
- Bardas*, Uncle to the Emperor Michael the III^d, advances Photius in six Days, from a Layman to the See of Constantinople, 4.
- Barlaam* is sent to Pope Benedict the XIIth, on behalf of the Emperor Andronicus, 17. his Propositions, 18. his Declaration to the Pope, ibid. his Scheme disapproved of by his Holiness, ibid.
- Bartbolomew*, a Dominican Monk, who was successful amongst the Armenians, and accomplish'd a Reconciliation between them and the Romish Church, 229.
- Basil*, Associate of Michael the III^d, (Emperor of Greece) orders him to be murdered, 7. the Consequences thereof, ibid. is inclin'd to a Reconciliation, and makes all the Advances that can be desired to Pope Adrian the immediate Successor of Nicholas the Ist, ibid. is sooth'd by a fictitious ill-contriv'd Genealogy, to espouse the Interest of Photius, ibid.
- Basil*, Archbishop of Theſſalonica, his hypocritical Answer to Pope Adrian, with respect to a Reconciliation, 11.
- Basil* (St.) holds a Monastic Life to be perfectly angelical, 73. is acknowledg'd by all Grecian Monks, of what Order soever, to be their Founder, ibid. his Liturgy, an Abridgment of St. James's, 93. the Reason for contracting it, and the several stated Times for reading thereof, 94, a Festival observ'd by the Greeks on the 30th of January, in Commemoration of him as one of their three œcumenical Divines, 123.
- Basil*, Mass abolish'd therein, 1529. 339. an Assembly held there in 1536. 343. the Declarations of the Divines at that Time, ibid.
- Basilian Monks* of Crypta Ferrata, receive the Breviary made for the Greeks by Francis Arcudius, 78.
- Basilides*, a remarkable Maxim of his, 255. N. (e).
- Bathenians*, otherwise called Ismaelians, a formidable Sect in Asia, Perſia, and Aſſyria, whose Sovereigns bore the Title of the Kings of the Aſſaſſins, 281. the Signification of the Term Batben, ibid.
- Baudius*, an Advocate for a Reconciliation between the Protestants and the Church of Rome, 359.
- Baudouin* the I^{ld}, the last Latin Emperor of Constantinople, 15.
- Bayle*, his Account of Part of the Conference which Luther had with the Devil, 333. N. (f); his Answer to Claude's Apology for Luther, 346. N. (g).
- Beggars*, renounce the Pope and his Authority, 325.
- Bells*, the Use of them prohibited by the Turks amongst the Greeks, 94, an Account of the Instrument made use of in their stead, ibid. the Reason why they are prohibited, 113. N. (b); the Use of them prohibited by the Pagans, and why, 213. the Virtue of them according to the Latins, 215.
- Benediction* of the Waters, a Festival observed by the Armenians, and how solemniz'd, 257.
- Beres*, Mingrelian Monks, their Manner of Initiation, 180.
- Berkin* (Lewis) is condemn'd by the University of Paris, and afterwards burnt, 338.
- Bermudas* (John) Patriarch of Ethiopia, his fallacious Treatment of the Court of Rome 229.
- Bernard* (St) his severe Imputation on the Priests of his Time, 324.
- Bernardi*, a Monk, some Articles drawn up by him, censur'd by the University of Paris, 338.
- Berne*, a Conference held there in 1528. relating to the Reformation, 338. the Result thereof, ibid.
- Besson*, his Account of a remarkable Miracle which happens on the Festival of St. Abden and St. Sennan, in a Chappel dedicated to those two Saints by the Maronites, 274. his Account of the Creed of the Druses, 282.
- Beza*, look'd upon as a second Calvin, 348. his Works censur'd by the Lutheran Formula as prophane and blasphemous, 397.
- Bidi*, a Deity of the Indians, 216. the Form, Title, and Signification of it, ibid.
- Blessed Bread*, a particular Account of it, 111. & seq.
- Blessed Virgin* held in peculiar Veneration by the Greeks, 116. N. (b).
- Bodeſtein*, otherwise called Carleſtad, made a Profelyte to the Protestant Religion, by Luther ; 329.

Bohemi-

I N D E X.

Bohemians, a Dissertation on their Religion and Ecclesiastical Discipline, 381. formerly called Hussites, and Calixtines, and why, ibid. style the Pope Antichrist, 382. their Sect divided into three distinct Parties, by Beaufobre, ibid. their Bishop Stephen burnt at Vienna, ibid. send their Apology to Erasmus for his Perusal and Approbation 384. his Answer thereto, ibid. he writes a Pamphlet against Schlecht, wherein he speaks in favour of the Bohemians, ibid. Bohemians send Deputies to treat with Luther in 1522, and 1524. who are rejected and despised, 384. Luther's Character of them, ibid. a Correspondence between them revived in 1532. Luther publishes a Vindication of their Doctrine and Ceremonies, and gives them an extraordinary Encomium, ibid. N. (v); Bohemians by their Confession made in 1504. acknowledge seven Sacraments, 384. their Confession reformed by Luther, and their Sacraments reduced to two, 385. are persecuted and fly for Refuge into Poland, 386. unite there with the Lutherans, and Zwinglians at the Synod of Sandomir, ibid. an Abstract of their Discipline, ibid. & seq. give the Title of Unity or Brotherhood to their Church, ibid. the Members whereof it consists, ibid. the several Classes of their Auditors, 387. the several Officers of their Church described, ibid. & seq. an account of their Synods and the Ordination of their Clergy, 389. of the Election of their Antistes, 390. of their Method observed in Divine Worship, and the Administration of the Sacraments, ibid. of their Form in Baptism, 391. in Admission of their Novices, ibid. of their Marriage and Funeral Solemnities, 392. their strict Observance of Sunday and other Festivals, ibid. their Pennances and Excommunications, ibid.

Berrer (Katherine) a Nun, marries Luther, 337. Bossuet, his Exposition of the Catholick Faith, 356. his Character of Leger, 369.

Bostangi Bachi, Protector of the Convents on Mount Athos, and that of Maura Mola, on the Bosphorus, 156.

Brandenburgh, its Elector in 1539. renounces Popery, and why, 344.

Brentius, an Advocate for the Doctrine of the Ubiquity after Luther's Decease, 346. N. (g); in 1551. publishes the Wittenberg Confession, 399.

Brioche, a Master of a Puppet-shew, sentenced by a Council held in one of the Cantons of Switzerland to be punished for an impious Magician 299. N. (p).

Brothers of Bobemia, blended with the first Lutherans in 1504. — 326. the Date rectified, ibid. N. (p).

Brunswick, the Princes thereof openly declare themselves of the Lutheran Party, 337.

Bucer, his Confession presented to the Diet, held at Ausbourg, in 1530. in favour of the Sacramentarians, 340. by order of the Landgrave of Hesse, he endeavours at a Reconciliation between the Lutherans and Zwinglians, 342. the Steps he took towards it, ibid. his Declarations at the Conference held at Cassel before the Landgrave, ibid. dies in 1551. 548. his Character, ibid. N. (m).

Bugenhagen, (John) the Reformer of Lubeck, Hamburgh, &c. 343. establishes Lutheranism in 1536. in Denmark, 344. Author of the Danish Liturgy approved of by Luther, 420.

Bulls and Dispensations when first put up to sale, 83. Rome the publick Mart or Office for that new Commerce, ibid. the Consequences thereof, ibid.

Bull, published in 1520. by Pope Leo the 10th, against Luther, 320. the Contents thereof, ibid. the imperious Style of it, ibid. N. (z).

Bullenger, his Works censured by the Lutheran Formulary, as profane and blasphemous, 397.

C.

Cabasilas, Bishop of Dyrrachium in the 13th Century, maintains two kinds of Adoration of the Eucharist, one before, the other after Consecration, 66. Settles the time for supreme Adoration 67.

Cœnsbites, an Order of Greecian Monks, 73. the Explication of the term, ibid.

Cajetan (Cardinal) constituted by Pope Leo the 10th, to be Luther's Judge in Germany, 328. his warm Conferences with him there unsuccessful, ibid. receives a submissive Letter from Luther, ibid. Calixtines, who they were, and why so called, 381.

Calogeres, Widow Nuns, of Constantinople, their manner of Life, 75.

Caloyers, a general Term for all Monks, 151. the Signification of the Term, ibid. N. (l); make a prophane use of their Excommunication, 164. and of their consecrated Bread, ibid.

Calvin, Reasons for his acting in the Capacity of a Reformer, 324. is suspected at Paris as a Favourer of the new Opinions, 342. flies from thence, and withdraws to Santonze, ibid. the Progress of the new Doctrine during his Re-

I N D E X.

- Retirement, ibid. the Court of Rome and her Adherents, burn all the Advocates for the Reformation wherever they find them, 343. Calvin publishes in 1536 his Institutes, and settles at Genoa, 344. is opposed there, and forced to depart the City, ibid. withdraws to Strasbourg, sets up for a Preacher there, and marries the Widow of an Anabaptist, ibid. returns triumphant to Genoa, and regulates the whole Discipline of the reformed Churches, 345. his severe treatment of one Jerome Balsac, 348. his remarkable Title to a Pamphlet against Westphalus, 349. procures Seroetus to be burnt in 1553. ibid. his Character at large, ibid. N. (q); his Works censured by the Lutheran Formulary as prophane and blasphemous, 397. his Character, 452.
- Calvinism*, meets with a favourable Reception in France from the Encouragement given to it by Margaret de Valois, Queen of Navarre, 342.
- Calvinists* receive a Confession of Faith drawn up by Cyril Lucar, Patriarch of Constantinople, conformable to their Principles, in order to a Reconciliation with their Sect, 23. reduce the Ecclesiastical Body to a State of Democracy, 319. very numerous and powerful in 1558. all over France, 350. are encouraged by the King of Navarre, ibid. are persecuted with the utmost Severity by Henry the 2d. King of France, 351. an Account of their Ceremonies and religious Customs, 451. & seq. of their several Confessions, 453. N. (g); reject all the Apocryphal Books, 454. and all Ceremonies 455. their several Tenets, 456. their Ecclesiastical Discipline, 458. their Consistories, ibid. their Classes or Conferences, ibid. their Cœtus, ibid. their Synods, 460. the OEconomy of them, 461. an account of their Schools or Seminaries, 463. the Form of their Excommunications, 466. N. (x); the Form observed at the Consecration of their Churches, 466. their Fund for the Maintenance of poor Students, ibid. their examining Churches, 467. an account of their two Sacraments, Baptism and the Lord's Supper, 468. their strict Observance of the Sabbath, 469. their Fasts and Festivals, ibid.
- Camera*, what, 118
- Camus*, Bishop of Bellay, endeavours to reconcile the Protestants, 355. and writes a Treatise for that purpose, 356.
- Canon*, the Signification of the Term, 93.
- Canonizations*, the Right thereof amongst the Romans solely in the Pope, 124. on whom conferred by the Greeks, ibid. are very expensive when procured 125. as most of them are vicious as well as poor; but very few have any Right or Claim to that Honour, ibid.
- Cantacuzenus*, (John) a Usurper, revives the Project for a Reconciliation, in order to ingratiate himself with Pope Clement the VIth 18. writes Letters to Pope Innocent the VIth, with Proposals for an Accommodation, 18.
- Canubin*, a Convent so called situate on Mount Libanus, the Residence of the Patriarch of the Maronites, 269. Canubin, a Corruption of the Term Cænobium, ibid. N. (s).
- Carcis*, the Archbishop thereof dependent on the Archbishop of Theffalonica, 156. its Situation, ibid. N. (g); no Women allowed to go to Market, ibid. the Calleyers vend their Wares there, ibid.
- Caritapulus*, (Emanuel) Patriarch of Greece sends Deputies to the Pope in 1249. in order to bring about a Reconciliation, 14. but without Success, ibid.
- Carlestadt* made a Profelyte to the Protestant Religion by Luther, 329. demolishes Images, forbids the Elevation of the Host, and marries, 333. quarrels with Luther at Wittenberg, and becomes his implacable Enemy, 336. is forced to leave Wittenberg, and withdraw to Orlemund, where he is chosen Minister of the place, ibid. is suspected to favour the Anabaptists, ibid. is forc'd by Luther to fly from Orlemund, ibid. withdraws to Strasbourg, and prints two Dissertations at Bazil, ibid. the use of them prohibited at Zurick, and Strasbourg, ibid. his particular Tenets, ibid.
- Caroli*, (Peter) several Propositions of his condemned by the Faculty of Paris, for being inconsistent with the Principles of the Catholick Church, 337. N. (w).
- Caryophilus*, Titulary Archbishop of Iconium, confutes one Zachary Gergan a Greek by Extraction, and Bishop of Arte, who wrote a Catechism in Defence of the Protestants, and opposes strenuously the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 58. N. (i).
- Cassander*, publishes by order of Maximilian the 2d. a Treatise called the Consultation, 356. Annotations made thereon by Grotius, ibid.
- Cassel*, a Conference held there, before

I N D E X.

- the Langrave of Hesse, 342. Bucer's Declarations therein, ibid.
- Cassim Gbeun*, the Turkish Term for the Festival of Demetrius observed by the Greeks on the 26th of October 121. the cautious Conduct of the Turks ten Days before and ten Days after, ibid.
- Castan*, a rich Present made by Mahomet to Gennadius first Patriarch of Constantinople after his Conquest of it, 83. a Description of it, ibid. N. (f).
- Castrensis*, called likewise Thuroferary, a Minister or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91. N. (r).
- Catalogue*, of the several Churches dependent on the Patriarchate of Constantinople taken by Nilus Dexopatrius, and quoted by Leo Allatius, N. (d). Catalogue of the several Churches dependent on the Patriarch of Constantinople taken from Dr. Smith's Dissertation on the present State of the Greek Church, 29.
- Catechist*, an Assistant or Minister to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. his proper Offices, ibid.
- Catharcs*, a Sect among the Vaudois, inveterate Enemies to the Romish Church, 377.
- Catherine*, (St.) the Virgin and Martyr, a solemn Festival, observed by the Greeks on the 25th of November, 121.
- Catholics*, and Protestants conspicuous for their partial Proceedings in point of Controversy, 4. the Dissertations published on both sides very voluminous, and very favourably received, ibid. their scurrilous Treatment of each other, and the Result of their religious Squabbles, ibid.
- Caucus*, Archbishop of Corfou, his Catalogue of Errors, charged upon the Greeks in his Dissertation on their Doctrines dedicated to Pope Gregory the 13th, 32. the Character of Caucus by Leo Allatius 35.
- Celibacy*, the Abolition of it in the Priesthood approved of at Strasbourg in 1524. 335.
- Censer*, a sacred Vessel, used by the Greeks, 99.
- Ceroforary*, an Officer belonging to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92.
- Cerularius* (Michael) Patriarch of Constantinople, opposes the Latins with respect to their making Use of unleavened Bread in the Lord's Supper, and some other Ceremonies, as therein living in Communion with the Jews, 9. is excommunicated by the Pope's Legates, in sancta Sophia, after a very solemn Manner, ibid. several Abuses are laid to his Charge, ibid. he opposes his Excommunication by a Decree, 10. complains against the Latins, and charges them with some trivial Niceties as capital Errors, ibid. dies in 1058. ibid.
- Chalice*, a sacred Vessel used by the Greeks, 97.
- Chambia*, a Hymn so called by the Mingrelians, sung at the Celebration of their Holy Communion, 181.
- Chanters*, or Choristers, a particular Order of the Priesthood amongst the Greeks, 145.
- Charatch*, a Poll-Tax paid by the Greeks to the Grand Signior, 85. N. (s).
- Charenton*, a Synod held there in 1637. 354.
- Charity*, amongst the Greeks very cold, 87. the Consequences of it, ibid.
- Charles* the Vth (Emperor) receives a submissive Letter from Luther, 330. determines to compel the Protestants to surrender by Force of Arms, 340. orders the famous Interim to be drawn up, 347. by whom and when published, ibid. is censured by all Parties, ibid. published in 1550. a severe Edict against the Professors of all Religions whatsoever, except that of Rome, 348.
- Chartophylax*, a Minister or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 90. N. (p.) his particular Offices, ibid.
- Chartularius* an Officer of the Greek Church, 115.
- Chasuble*, a sacerdotal Vestment of the Greeks, 97. N. (e).
- Chilo*, Charabes, his Ambition to be advanced to the Patriarchate of Constantinople, 84. N. (b).
- Chios*, the superstitious Notions of the Natives with relation to the Dead, 160.
- Chrism*, the Consecration thereof performed by the Greeks on Good-Friday, 127. according to Ricaud, on Maunday-Thurs-day, ibid. N. (i). as much is made thereof by the Bishop or Archbishop, as will serve the whole Year, 127. the Ceremony observed in carrying it to the Communion-Table, ibid. the various Ingredients, ibid. N. (k).
- Christ-Jesus*, the reasonable Terms with which he expected his Disciples should comply, 3.
- Christians* of St. John, an Account of their Tenets and religious Customs, 279. from whence they derive their Denomination, 282. Tavernier's Account of them, 283. at first they inhabited the Country round about Jordan; but being persecuted by the Successors of Mahomet fled into Mesopotamia and Chaldea, and were there under the Jurisdiction of the Patriarch of Babylon, ibid. their Belief

I N D E X.

- Belief full of Errors extracted from a Book called the Divan, ibid. are called Sabi by the Persians and Arabians, ibid. hold one annual Festival, ibid. baptize in Rivers, and only on Sundays, ibid. their Form of Baptism, ibid. the Notions concerning Christ, ibid. have a peculiar Veneration for the Cross, ibid. acknowledge the Sanctity of Zacharias, Elizabeth, the blessed Virgin, and the twelve Apostles; St. John the Baptist is notwithstanding their most illustrious Saint, ibid. a Description of their sacerdotal Vestments, 285. their Form of Ordination, ibid. their Priests obliged to marry Virgins, ibid. an account of their Sacrament of the Eucharist, and their Masses, ibid. their Festivals, ibid. observe no Fasts and perform no Penances, ibid. N. (n); a particular Description of their Sacrifice of a Hen, ibid. & seq. their Priests Butchers by Profession, 286. are cautious of being polluted, ibid. have an Aversion to any thing that is blue, and why, ibid. an equal Aversion to green, and why, ibid. their Nuptial Ceremonies, ibid. are indulged in Polygamy, but debarred the Privileges of Divorces, ibid. their Widows not allowed to marry again, ibid.
- Christianity*, a Description of it, 2. Christmas-Day, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 25th of December, 121. Christmas-Day, a Festival observed by the Mingrelians in Commemoration of their dead, 186.
- Chrysobergus*, (Nicholas) a Patriarch of the Greeks, the first who made Profelytes of the Russians to the Christian Faith, 297.
- Chrysostom*, (St.) his Liturgy; an Abridgment of St. Basil's Abridgment of St. James's, 94. the Reasons for a farther Contraction, ibid. the stated times for reading thereof, ibid. Chrysostom, (St.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 13th of November, 121.
- Circassians*, vide Abassynes.
- Claude*, a Protestant Divine, acknowledges that he wrote with too much Hurry and Precipitation, 69. Alix's facetious Reply thereupon, ibid. Claude justifies the Conduct of Luther, 346. N. (g); his Arguments to prove the Validity of the Protestant Ministry, 406. N. (k).
- Clemangis*, (Nicholas) a warm Advocate for a Reformation in the Church, 324.
- Clement* the 6th (Pope) sends Embassadors and Nuntio's to Cantacuzenus, in order to treat on a Reconciliation, 18.
- Clement* the 7th receives Letters from David, Emperor of Æthiopia, in order to a Reconciliation of the Abyssines with the Romish Church, 229. his Holiness is applied to for his Promise to the Diet of Nuremberg to convene a free Council, but without Success, 335.
- Cologne*, the University thereof condemns Luther and his Writings, 330.
- Colyba*, a funeral Collation, 143. of what it consists, ibid. called likewise Colyba, ibid. N. (p); the Derivation of the Term, ibid. the Signification thereof, ibid. the Latin Term for it, ibid. bears Affinity with the Epule feriales; and the Parentalia of the antients, ibid.
- Comenius*, his Character, 386.
- Comnenius*, (Alexis) the Grecian Emperor, applies to the Pope and the Latin Christians for their Assistance against the Infidels, 11. makes a Proposition to Pope Paschal the III, either to go himself, or send his Son to Rome, to receive his Crown from the Hands of his Holiness, ibid.
- Comnenius*, (Manuel) proposes several important Queries to one Hugo Eterianus relating to the Procession of the Holy Ghost, 12. the Effects thereof, ibid.
- Complin*, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93. otherwise called Completorium, ibid. N. (f); the Signification of the Term, ibid.
- Communion* of the Laity, an Account of it, 110. & seq.
- Conception* of St. Anne, a Festival observed by the Greek Monks on the 9th of December, 121.
- Conception* of St. John the Baptist, a solemn Festival of the Greeks, observed by them on the 23d of September, 121.
- Concordate*, or Treaty of the King of France with the Pope opposed by the University of Paris, 326. their Appeal when lodged, and against whom levelled, ibid. the Pragmatick Sanction dissolved by the said Concordate, ibid. N. (q) Conde taken Prisoner at the Battle of Dreux, 353.
- Confederacy* entered into by the Protestants at Smalkalden, and with what Intention, 340.
- Confession* of Faith agreed to be used in common between the Greeks and Latins, with relation to the Procession of the Holy Ghost, at the Council of Florence held in 1439. 21. Confession a religious Ceremony observed by the Greeks, 128. the Practice thereof applauded by a modern Protestant, ibid. the stated times for it, ibid. the Ceremony observed in the doing it, 129. Penance, the Consequence of it, ibid. wherein that Penance consists, ibid. after that Absolution, ibid. the Form thereof, ibid. Confession practised by the Clergy, once a Month, ibid. by the Laity once a Year only, ibid. the Manner of it very vicious and irregular in both, ibid.
- Confirmation*, performed by the Greeks at the same time with their Baptism, 127. how performed by the Apostles, 128. the supernatural Effects thereof, ibid. the difference between the Form observed by the Greeks and Latins, with respect to the use of their Chrism in Confirmation, ibid.
- Consecration* of the Greek Churches, the Solemnity thereof, 112.
- Constantine* and St. Helen, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 20th of May, 123.
- Constantinople*, lost by the Latins after the Possession of it for 57 Years, 15. and retaken in 1261. by Michael Palcologus, ibid. the illustrious Title assumed by the Patriarch thereof 82. the Patriarchate thereof stript of all its Privileges by Mahomet, 84. the Number of the Churches in that City, and the Form in which they are generally built, 113.
- Contacium*, a Church Ritual, entrusted to the care of the Hieromnemon, 91. N. (t).
- Cophti*, a Description of their Tenets and Customs, 218. why so called, ibid. N. (r). hold the same Principles as the Jacobites, 218. their Ceremonies at Mass, 219. in the Administration

I N D E X.

- tion of the Eucharist, 220. of Baptism, ibid. Description of their Corban, ibid. N. (2). the Signification of their Ikodicon, Higos and Drops, ibid. observe four grand Fasts, 221. testify a profound Veneration for Images, ibid. their Patriarch generally resides at Cairo, his Style, and the Extent of his Authority, ibid. eleven Bishops dependent on him, ibid. their Arch-Priests very numerous, and next in Dignity to their Bishops, ibid. an Account of their Churches, 222. and of their Mats, ibid. have burning Lamps in their Churches, which hang between two Oltriches Eggs, 225. the Intention thereof, ibid. an Account of their Festivals, 225. of their Epiphany by Pansep. ibid. of the Apparition of their Saints, 226. the Exaltation of the Cross, ibid. of their Rouse and Prognosticks, 227. of their nuptial Ceremonies, 228.
- Coptic Monks* as much the Objects of Contempt, as those of the Greeks, 224. are exempted by Mahomet from the Charach. ibid. an Explication of the Term, ibid. N. (5). their various Customs, ibid.
- Corban* of the Copti what, 220. a particular Account of it, ibid. N. (2).
- Corban* of the Ethiopians, or Abyssines, the Manner of preparing it, 240.
- Corissus* (George) gives his Testimonial of one Gregory's Abstract of the religious Principles of the Greeks, by way of Catechism, 49. the Character of Corissus, as drawn by the Protestants, ibid. N. (3).
- Corfu*, the Greeks of that Place maintain the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, notwithstanding they are inveterate Enemies of the Romish Church and the Pope, with respect to his Infallibility, and the Doctrine of the Procession of the Holy Ghost, 70. an Image of our Lady there, remarkable for its miraculous Operations, 137.
- Corporal*, a Description of it, 106. N. (9).
- Corpus Christi*, a solemn Festival, how observ'd in the Island of Anáros, 160. and at Naxos, ibid.
- Corracius* (Michael) a Cretan, in his Dissertation on the Dignity of the Priesthood, printed at Venice, 1642. establishes the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 51. treats Luther as an Arch Heretick and an Apostate, ibid.
- Cosmus* and Damianus, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 1st of November, 121. called Anagyres, and why, ibid. N. (1). a miraculous Fountain in Athens consecrated to them, ibid.
- Covel* (Dr.) an Englishman publishes in 1722. an Account of the Greek Church, wherein the Character of Dositheus, Patriarch of Jerusalem, and of all the Greeks in general, his Contemporaries, is drawn in the blackest Colours, 67. N. (6).
- Council*, held at Constantinople in 879. generally called the Sham Eighth Council, disannuls that held in 869. together with all the Proceedings against Photius, 8. held at Nymphaea, 14. the Consequence thereof, ibid. of Lions, conven'd in May, 1724. 16. the Proceedings therein, ibid. of Constance, in 1418. receives Proposals from Paleologus, for a Reconciliation, 20. of Basil, in 1434. advises John Paleologus to send Ambassadors to Rome to treat about a Reconciliation, 20. the several preliminary Articles agreed to at that Council, ibid. and confirm'd and ratified by that Council and Pope Eugenius, ibid. of Florence, held in 1439. the Proceedings thereof towards a Reconciliation, 21. of Nice, the Advocates for Image Worship gain a remarkable Conquest therein over the Iconoclasts, 77. held at Pisa, in 1505. their Declaration with respect to the Necessity of a Reformation. 324.
- Critopulus* (Metrophanes) asserts, that the eastern Church acknowledges no other than Christ-Jesus to be the Head of the Church, 39. acknowledges the Transmutation of the Bread and Wine into the Body and Blood of Christ; but at the same time confesses it to be a Mystery beyond all Comprehension, 68. a strong Advocate for Monachism, 73.
- Crowns*, made use of by the Greeks in their nuptial Ceremonies, 133.
- Crucis Descripio*, an Office peculiar to the Prefect of the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. N. (2).
- Cuculle*, or Conculle, what, 152. N. (7).
- Cardes*, otherwise called Torremans, an Account of them, 282. are Strollers and Vagabonds, and their Religion as uncertain as the Place of their Abode, ibid. the Footsteps of Manichæism to be discerned amongst them, ibid. hold two Principles, and call the Devil their Doctor, or Head, ibid. pay no Adoration to the Deity, but acknowledge his Existence, ibid. have a peculiar Veneration for black, and why, ibid.
- Ciril*, (in the 15th Article of his Confession) acknowledges two Sacraments, only instituted by Jesus-Christ, 37. N. (m).
- Czar* of Muscovy (Peter Alexiowitz) after he had finish'd his Travels over Europe, declar'd himself Head of the Russian Church, 81. N. (1). made an annual Present to the Patriarch of Constantinople, as a Mark of his Esteem, 86.
- Czar* (Volodimir) his Baptism, and Marriage, 297.

D.

- Damascenus*, (St.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 26th of October, 121.
- Dances* of the Indian Christians. a Description of them, 215.
- Dancing*, what called in the Discipline of the Tauhis, 375. how punished, 376.
- Dandini*, his Travels to Mount Libanus, published with Notes by Father Simon, and when, 31. N. (2). his Account of the Greeks 39. his Account of the Tenets and Customs of the Maronites, 269.
- Daniel* the Prophet, and the three young Men Ananias, Azarias, and Misael, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 17th of December, 121.
- Danish*, Liturgy composed by Pomeranus, and approved of by Luther, 420.
- Dantzick*, the Nuptial Ceremonies observed there described by Ogier, 440. a particular Funeral there described 445. D'Aranda (Peter) Bishop of Colaborra, inveighs against Indulgencies and some particular Tenets of the Romish Church, 326.
- David*, Emperor of Æthiopia, writes a submissive Letter to Pope Clement the 7th, in order to a Reconciliation, 229.
- Deacons*, Ministers or Assistants to the Grecian Patriarchs,

I N D E X.

- Patriarchs, 92. A particular Order of the Grecian Priesthood, 146.
- Deaconry, the Antiquity of it, 147.
- Deans, Ministers or Assistants to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. their particular Offices, ibid.
- Debates on Points of Religion, their natural Result and the pernicious Effects of them, 2.
- Decree, for a Reconciliation signed 6th July, 1439. at the Council of Florence, 21.
- Decrees of an Heretical Assembly of Divines convened by Photius at Constantinople against Pope Nicholas, burnt before the Door of St. Peter's Church, N. (k): a violent Rain falling at the same time, rather augments than extinguishes the Flame, ibid.
- Dedication of a Greek Church, the Solemnity observed on that Occasion, 112.
- Defixio Crucis, an honourable Office, peculiar to the Prefect belonging to the Greek Patriarchs, 92. N. (z).
- D'Huiffeau, publishes a Treatise in 1670, called the Re-union of the Christian Religion, 358. the same answered and confuted, ibid.
- Demetrius, (St.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 26th of October, 121.
- Demoniacs, the Ceremony observed in the exorcising them, 132.
- De Mont's Critical History of the Principles and religious Customs of the various Nations in the Levant, recommended and abridged, 30.
- Denys, (St.) his allegorical Sense of the Ceremony of washing of Hands, 147.
- Deputy, one of the Assistants to the Greek Patriarchs, 92. his particular Employment, ibid.
- De Rouiffeau, a smart Epigram of his in French and English, 352. N. (t).
- Descartes, censured both by Catholicks and Protestants for conversing with Persons of both Persuasions, 130. N. (a).
- De Serres publishes a Dissertation de fide Catholica, in order to a Reconciliation, 357.
- Despoticon of the Copti, what, 223.
- Deutereuon, a Minister or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91.
- Dresden, the Consensus published there in 1571. 399.
- Dreux, a Battle there, wherein Conde was taken Prisoner, 353.
- Dicaioophylax, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarch, 92. his peculiar Office, ibid.
- Diet, held at Spire for the Regulation of Differences in religious Matters, but without Success, 338.
- Dioscorus, Contemporary of James the Disciple of Severus, Patriarch of Antioch in the 6th Century, rever'd as a Saint by the Jacobites, 217. N. (p).
- Disobedience to the Injunctions of the Church, looked upon as Impenitence, 130. Excommunication the Consequence, ibid.
- Dispensations, when first put up to Sale, 83. Rome the publick Mart or Office for those Commodities, ibid. the Effects thereof, ibid.
- Divan, a Book from whence the Christians of St. John extract their erroneous Tenets, 283. a summary Account of their particular Tenets contained therein, 284.
- Division, Heresy and Schism, three Children of Darkness, 3.
- Divisions. in Religion compared to Insurrections in a State, 3. the fatal Effects of them, ibid.
- Divorces, easily to be procured amongst the Greeks, 136.
- Doctor, or Expositor of the Gospel and Psalter, a particular Minister or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91. N. (w).
- Dordrecht a Synod held there in 1618 and 1619. 457.
- Dositheus Patriarch of Jerusalem, honours the Works of one Simeon of Thessalonica with an Epistle Dedicatory to the Prince of Moldavia, 66. N. (e). his Character and that of the Greeks in general drawn in the blackest Colours, by one Dr. Covel, 67. N. (b).
- Doxology frequently repeated in the Service of Matrimony by the Greeks, 133.
- Doxopatrius, his Catalogue of the several Churches dependent on the Patriarchate of Constantinople, 27. N. (d).
- Drops or Dew, what called by the Copti, 220. N. (z). the Time of their falling, ibid. their Notion concerning it, ibid. the Ceremony observed on the first Night, 227.
- Du Bourg, a Counsellor in the French Parliament burnt, and for what Reasons, 351.
- Duprat (Cardinal) Archbishop of Sens, in 1528. holds a Council at Paris, in order to oppose the Lutheran Doctrine, 339. two ridiculous Customs prohibited by that Council, ibid.
- Durzi, an Account of their Tenets and Customs, 281. from whom descended, ibid. N. (l). call'd Molbedites, 281. the Signification of the Term, ibid. a vile Character given of them by Purchas and others, 282. practise the enormous Sin of Incest, ibid. their particular Notions relating to the Souls of the righteous and the wicked, ibid. are never baptiz'd, but circumcised, ibid. Besson's Account of their Creed, ibid. their Monks strict in their Fasts, and reside in Desarts, ibid.
- Dypticks what, 107. N. (w).
- Dyze (Alexander) publishes a Treatise call'd Means for the Attainment of a Reconciliation, 358. pleases neither Party, ibid. is suspended pro forma, ibid.
- E.
- Eagle, a Grecian Hieroglyphic, 89. what it alludes to, ibid.
- Easter, the most solemn Festival of the Greeks throughout the Year, 119. their formal Salutations at that time, ibid. the particular Ceremonies observed by them on Easter Sunday and Monday, ibid.
- Easter Sunday, a solemn Festival of the Armenians, 257. Several particular Ceremonies observed by them on Easter Eve and Easter Tuesday, 258.
- Ecdices, Ministers or Assistants to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91.
- Echellensis (Abrabam) his Account of Abdjesu Patriarch of the Nestorians, 189.
- Eckins, an Advocate for the Pope against Luther, 329.
- Election of the Greek Patriarchs dependent on the favour of the Grand Signior, 71. the Post to be purchased, ibid. the Bishops who chuse them mercenary, and hold up their Interest at unreasonable Rates, ibid. the Ceremony thereof, 88.
- Elektor of Saxony, (Frederic) protects Luther under the Persecution of Pope Leo the 10th, 328. 6 F Elektor

I N D E X.

- Elect* of Treves makes Proposals to Luther, 332. Luther's Answer thereupon, ibid.
- Elect* of Brandenburg, in 1539. renounces Popery, and why, 344.
- Elect* of Saxony, Ringleader of the Protestant War in Germany, banished by the Emperor out of his Dominions 347.
- Eleutherus*, and Liberalis, (Sts.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks on the 15th of December, 121.
- Elias* the Prophet, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 20th of July, 123. Elias (St.) a Festival, how observed by the Mingrelians, 186. Patriarch of Babylon, enters into a solemn Reconciliation with Pope Pius the 5th, 190. and acknowledges the Church of Rome to be the Mother of all in a Letter to Pope Paul the 5th. ibid. annexes thereto his Confession of Faith, ibid.
- Emperor of the Turks, the supreme Head of the Greek Church, 83. the Reasons for it, ibid.
- Eparch*, what, 93.
- Epimanicia*, or Maniples, sacerdotal Ornaments of the Greeks, by whom worn, and for what Purpose, 97. N. (b).
- Epiphany*, or the Kings, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 6th of January, 122. Holy Water made for the Service of the whole Year on this Festival, and the Eve thereof, ibid. the solemn uses made thereof, ibid. Spon's Account of their baptizing the Sea on this Day, ibid. the Miracles consequent thereupon, ibid. Of the Mingrelians, how distinguished, 185. Of the Copti, a particular Description of that Festival by Vansleb, 225. of the Ethiopians, a particular Description of that Festival, by Father Colvaren, 237. Or Benediction of the Waters, a Festival of the Armenians, 257. how solemnized, ibid.
- Epitrachelium*, a sacerdotal Vestment of the Greeks, 96. N. (a); how rendered by the Latins, ibid.
- Epulæ Ferales* of the Antients, a funeral Collation like the Colyva of the Greeks, 143. N. (f).
- Erasmus* is solicited by Luther to espouse his Interest, 329. his Refusal, ibid. he gives a Character at large of Luther in a Letter to Melanchthon, 332. N. (c). his facetious Reflections on the Protestant Priests hurrying to be married 334. several pieces of his, especially his Colloquies condemned by the University of Paris, 338. he receives an Apology from the Bohemians, for his Perusal and Approbation, 384. his Answer thereto, ibid. he writes a Pamphlet against one Schlecht, wherein he speaks favourably of the Bohemians, ibid.
- Erickson* (Gustavus) assembles the States of Sweden to receive the Lutheran Religion, and abolish the old one, 335.
- Ezra*phil, a superior Angel, according to the Mahometans; his peculiar Province, 289.
- Eterianus* (Hugo) presents Pope Alexander the IIIrd, with a Dissertation on the Errors of the Greeks, with relation to the Procession of the Holy Ghost, 12.
- Ethiopians*, vide Abyssines.
- Euchelaion*, the Signification of the Term, 136. made use of by the Greeks to express their extreme Unction, ibid.
- Euchologos*, a Ritual, or Church-Book, composed by Father Goar, 95.
- Eugenius* (Pope) ratifies and confirms the preliminary Articles of the Council of Basil in 1434. 20. is deposed at Basil, 21.
- Eugenius* the 4th (Pope) receives a Remonstrance from Cardinal Julian relating to the Conduct of the Romish Clergy, 327.
- Eulogium*, the Signification of the Term, 111. Virtues ascribed to it, ibid.
- Eulogiums* of the Dead called by the Antients Nemina, 141. N. (l). The Manner of their Performance, ibid.
- Eustrates*, Eugenius, &c. Martyrs, a solemn Festival observ'd by the Greeks on the 13th of December, 121.
- Exaltation* of the Cross, a solemn Festival of the Greeks observed by them on the 14th of September, 116. a particular Duty incumbent on them that Day, ibid. N. (i).
- Exaltation* of the Cross, a Festival observed by the Copti, 226. the Manner of it, ibid. and by the Armenians, 257.
- Exarch*, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91. his Office, 92.
- Excommunication*, the peculiar Manner of its Performance by the Patriarch of Jerusalem, 39. N. (e). From the Greek Church, the Form of it according to Angelus 130. Ricaut's Account of it, ibid.
- Exorcism*, the Ceremony thereof performed by the Grecian Priests on a Saturday, and the Reason thereof, 130. N. (d). of a Demoniac, the Ceremony of it, 132.
- Ex-Superior*, or Proegumenus, his particular Office, 151.
- Extreme Unction*, why so called, 36. the Manner of its Administration, 137. the Differences observed in that Particular between the Greeks and the Latins, 138. the Intent and Design of it, ibid. the absurd Manner of the Practice of it by the Armenians, 267. shamefully neglected by the Maronites, 279.
- Eyenas*, Luther causes himself to be taken into Custody there, 332. the political Design of it, ibid.

F.

- Faal*, a Book of Divination, consulted by the Christians of St. John, 287.
- Faber* (James) contributes towards the Progress of Luther's favourite Doctrine of the Ubiquity, 338.
- Faculty* of Paris condemn divers Books as repugnant to the Articles of the Catholic Church, 337. reject Melanchthon's Proposals to Francis the Ist, for a Reconciliation, 343.
- Fan*, an Instrument made use of in the holy Communion, 107. N. (r).
- Farel*, preaches up the new Religion at Geneva in 1535. 343. unites the Vaudois with the Zwinglians and Calvinists, 344.
- Fasts*, more strictly observed by the Greeks than the Latins, 76. a particular Account of them, 116. & seq.
- Fast* of Nineveh, observed three Days by the Nestorians, 196.
- Fasts* of the Armenians, 256.
- Fasts* of the Maronites, 272.
- Flagellans*, who they were, 382.

Francfort,

I N D E X.

Francfort, the Inhabitants thereof favour Lutheranism, 337.
Fratricelli preach up the Antichristianity of the Pope, 126.
Ferdinand (Emperor) endeavours to prevail on the Protestants to refer to an Oecumenical Council, 350. their Answer, ibid.
Festivals, observed by the Greeks, 116 & seq. by the Mingrelians, 185. by the Armenians, 257. by the Christians, 285.
Forbesius, an Advocate for a Pacification, 359.
Foulon, (Peter) Head of the Theopaschites, attempts to get an Addition made to the Greek Trisagium, 105, N. (a).
Formulary of the Lutherans, 397.
Frederick, Elector of Saxony, protects Luther, 328.
Fredericstadt, the Ceremony observed there in the Consecration of a Church, 402.
French King enters into an Alliance with the Protestants against the Emperor Charles the Vth, 348. opposes at the same time the Progress of Calvinism in his own Dominions, ibid.
Friday, a general Fast among the Latins, 117.
Funeral Solemnities of the Greeks, 138. of the Nestorians, 198. of the Armenians, 267. of the Maronites, 279. of the Russians, 313.
 G.
Gabriel, Archbishop of Philadelphia, his Works published by Father Simon with Annotations, 31. N. (m); recommends the Adoration of the Eucharist after Consecration, 65. settles the Time when Adoration ought to be paid, 66.
Gabriel and Michael, (St.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks 121.
Gabriel the Archangel, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123. his superior Power over the other Angels, 289.
Gabriel, Patriarch of the Copti, his Treatment of the Pope's Legate after his Receipt of a Sum of Money from Rome, 218.
Galeas, Duke of Milan, represented as a Saint of the first Order, 315. N. (r)
Galileum, of the Abyssines, what, 236.
Gaming, how punished by the Vaudois, 376.
Gayank, an Armenian Term, 249. N. (r).
Gazettes, Venetian Pence, ten of them a Priest's Fee for a Burial, 142.
Gemiana, a Church of the Copti, remarkable for the Apparition of this Saint in it, 226.
Geneva, in 1535 espouses the new Religion, 343. is the Asylum for persecuted Protestants, ibid.
Gennadius, a Monk, threatens all who acquiesce in the Reconciliation agreed to at the Council of Florence with the utmost Severity, ibid.
Gennadius, first Patriarch of Constantinople, receives particular Favours from Mahomet, 83.
Genual, a sacerdotal Vestment, 97.
Genutius, (Ferom) Bishop of Ascoli, a sworn Enemy to Luther, 328. N. (t).
George, (St. of Cappadocia) a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123. how observed by the Mingrelians, 186.
George, Duke of Saxony, solicited by Luther to embrace the Protestant Religion, 337.
Georgians, an account of their Principles, 173. Pope Urban the VIIIth sends Missionaries to them, 173. their Nuptial Ceremonies, 182.
Gergan Zachary, writes a Catechism in Defence of the Protestants, 58, N. (i); is confuted by Caryophilus, titular Archbishop of Iconium, ibid.

Germanicus, Patriarch of the Greeks, writes a Letter to the Pope and Cardinals relating to a Reconciliation, 14.
Germanus, Patriarch of Constantinople, celebrated for his Penetration into Types and Allegories, 100.
Girdle, a sacerdotal Ornament of the Greeks, 97.
Godfathers and Godmothers amongst the Greeks, their Care of the Infants for whom they stand, 126. are prohibited from marrying together, ibid.
Good-Friday, the Ceremonies observed by the Greeks on that Day, 119.
Golden Cross, the Privilege of wearing it granted by Mahomet to Gennadius, 83.
Golden Nuptials, when solemnized amongst the Lutherans, 439.
Gom, what, and how used, 183.
Grand Oeconomist, first Minister to the Grecian Patriarchs, 90. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Sacellarius, 90. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Official, 90. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Logothetes, 91. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Referendary, 91. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Prothonotary, 91. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Archdeacon, 91. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Ecclesiarch, 92. his Offices, ibid.
Grand Ecclesiastical Interpreter, 92. his Offices, ibid.
Grand-Fast, of which the Consensus of Dresden was an Abridgment published in 1571. 399.
Grecian Admiral, his remarkable Expression to demonstrate his Aversion to the Romish Church, 23.
Grecian Bishops, mercenary in their Election of a Patriarch, 71.
Grecian Clergy, subsist on Simoniacal Practices, 73.
Grecian Monks, their manner of Life, 73.
Grecian Nuns subject to the Rule of St. Basil, 75. are respected by the Turks, ibid.
Grecian Charity very cold, 87.
Grecian Women, in some Cases not allowed to enter the Doors of their Churches, 96.
Grecian Mass, the Ceremonies thereof 99 & seq.
Grecian Tunic, or Stoccharium, a sacred Vestment, 96. N. (z).
Grecian Stole or Orarium, another sacred Vestment, 96.
Grecian Epitrachelium, how rendered by the Latins, 96.
Grecian Pola, a Description of it, 96.
Grecian Maniples, the Use of them, 97. N. (b).
Grecian Girdle, what, 97.
Grecian Genual, what, 97. N. (c).
Grecian Planet, Chasuble, Phelonium, or Poly-staurium, what, 97. N. (e).
Grecian Prothesis, what, 97. N. (f).
Grecian Churches, an account of them 112 & seq.
Greek Clergy disapprove of Paleologus's Scheme for a Reconciliation, 15.
Greek Churches, the Author's Character of them, 29.
Greeks, set up a Patriarch of Natolia at Nice, 14. their Character, 92. are charged with erroneous Tenets by Caucus, Archbishop of Corfu, 32. likewise by Father Richard a Jesuit

I N D E X.

- Jesuit, 35. N. (r). acknowledge seven Sacraments, 37. practise auricular Confession, 38. refuse to eat Blood and suffocated Meats, 39. acknowledge no other Head than Jesus Christ, ibid. shew no Regard for the Romish Saints, 40. their Notions of Purgatory, 40, 41. N. (g) & seq.
- Greek* Fathers deny that Angels behold the Divine Essence in Heaven, 43.
- Greeks* of Constantinople, their Ignorance described by Father Barbereau, 43. N. (o); acknowledge the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 46.
- Greeks* treat the Host with Irreverence, 64. N. (z).
- Greeks* of Zante and Corfu maintain the Doctrine of Transubstantiation notwithstanding they are professed Enemies of the Romish Church, 70.
- Greeks* their Ecclesiastical Discipline extracted from Father Simon, 71. & seq.
- Greeks* of Trebizonde, their extravagant Offer to Mahomet, for the Patriarchate of Constantinople, 84. N. (b); testify a peculiar Regard for the Russians, 86. are prohibited the use of Bells by the Turks, 94. the Instrument made use of instead thereof, ibid. Preaching seldom practised by them, 95. their Horologium a Branch of their Office, 96. the Confession of Faith required by them from the Saracens when they became their Proselytes, 101. their Method of venting their Malice described by Ricaut, 113. an account of their Fasts and Festivals, 116. maintain an exalted Idea of the Eucharist, consecrated on Holy Thursday, 120. their several Sacraments, 126. Their Funeral Solemnities, 138. an Account of the Ordination of their Clergy, 145. their Ordination of Bishops, 148. a farther Account of their Monks, 149, their superstitious Customs, 158, & seq.
- Greek Physicians*, their superstitious Practices on their Patients, 159.
- Greeks*, an Account of the several Branches of their Schismatics, their Tenets and Ceremonies, 171 & seq.
- Gregoras*, (Nicephorus) prevents a Conference with the Nuncios of Pope John the XXII. 17.
- Gregory* the VIIth (Pope) convenes a Council, wherein one Botaniatus is excommunicated for usurping the Throne of Michael Paratinaceus, 11.
- Gregory* the XIIth, (Pope) founds a College for the Education of the Grecian Youth, 26.
- Gregory* the XIIIth charged with erroneous Tenets by Father Richard, a Jesuit, 35. N. (r).
- Gregory*, (a Grecian Priest) publishes an Abstract of the Religious Principles of the Greeks, 49. the same testified to be Orthodox, ibid.
- Gregory*, (St.) his Liturgy 94. compared to the Communion Office of the Church of England by Ricaut, ibid.
- Gregory Nazianzen* (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 25th of January, 122.
- Gustavus* seizes in Sweden, the Effects of the Priests and the Treasures deposited in their Churches, 336.
- Guy*, a Carmelite, his Reason why the Greeks consecrate their Wafers for the Sick on Holy Thursday only, 120. is called a Lying Legend by Allatius, and a wretched Author, by Father Simon, ibid. N. (q).
- Guises*, a Conspiracy formed against them in 1560. by the Protestants, 351.
- H.
- Hagios*, the Signification of the Term, 220. N. (z).
- Halberstat*, espouses the new Religion, 344.
- Hamburgh* espouses the new Religion, 343.
- Haratch*, a Tax paid to the Grand Signior, 85. N. (s).
- Heidelberg*, Mass abolished there, 345. and the Lord's Supper administered in the Vulgar Tongue, ibid.
- Heikel* of the Copti, 222.
- Helding*, incumbent of Sidon, employed by the Emperor to draw up his famous Interment, 347.
- Henry* the VIIIth, King of England, solicited by Luther to embrace his Tenets 337. the Affair of his Divorce from his Queen contributes towards the Reformation in England, 338. his solemn Contract with Anne Bullen, ibid. her Coronation, and the Decree of Rome against his Majesty's Divorce, 341. the King causes himself to be declared Supreme Head of his own Church, ibid.
- Henry* the II. King of France, persecutes the Protestants in his Dominions, 351.
- Heraclea*, the Archbishop thereof, consecrates the Grecian Patriarchs, 88.
- Hesse*, the Princes thereof declare in favour of Lutheranism 337. and endeavour to reconcile the Lutherans and Zwinglians, 339. Langrave thereof has two Wives, and his Declaration to the Reformers thereupon, 344. a Council convened at Wittemberg on that account, ibid. an Act of Indulgence agreed to, ibid. with a particular Proviso, 345. a principal Engine of the Protestant War in Germany banished by the Emperor, 347.
- Hieromonachi*, a superior Order of Monks, 151.
- Holstein*, the Inhabitants observe a Form of denouncing heavy Curses on their Enemies, 411.
- Holstenius*, (Lucas) a Dissertation of his on the Sacrament of Confirmation publish'd at Rome, 36.
- Holy-Thursday*, the Ceremonies observed by the Greeks on that Festival, 119. a Festival of the Armenians, 258.
- Horace*, an Observation of his with respect to the Burial of the Dead, 141. N. (k).
- Horary*, a Mark or Badge of the Deaconry in the Grecian Church, 148.
- Hornac* (John) his Catalogue of Errors imputed to the Armenians, 251. N. (p).
- Horologium*, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 95.
- Hospidi Pomili*, Russian Terms, 300. the Repetition of them, 12 or 15 times, one Qualification for Admission into Holy Orders, ibid.
- Hospinian*, his Account of Luther, 346. N. (g).
- Humbertus* writes an Apology for the Latins, 9. charges the Greeks with several Abuses, ibid.
- Hungary*, the Queen of, indulges the Protestants in the Exercise of their Religion, 348.
- Huss* (John) burnt by Order of the Council of Constance, 325.
- Hussites*, who they were, and why so called, 381.
- I.
- Jacobites*, reconcil'd to the Church of Rome, 21. called Christians of the Girdle, 173. their Custom of wearing Belts, ibid. their Ceremonies and

I N D E X.

- and religious Customs, 216. their Practice before Baptism, 217. their Families in Syria and the Parts adjacent, ibid.
- James* the Brother of John, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
- James* (St.) his Liturgy approved by the Greeks, 93. read but once a Year, ibid.
- James*, a Disciple of Severus, rever'd as a Saint by the Jacobites, 217. N.(p).
- James* of St. Andrew, an Advocate for the Doctrine of the Ubiquity, 346. N.(g).
- Janniques*, who they were, 383.
- January*, the 1st Day thereof observed as a Festival by the Greeks, 122.
- Iberians*, a Branch of Greek Schismaticks, 173. Pope Urban sends Missionaries to them, ibid.
- Iconoclasts*, Persons who maintained the Bread and Wine made use of in the Sacrament, to be Antitypes after the Consecration, 62. Enemies to Image-worship overcome by the Advocates for it, 77.
- Jeremias*, Patriarch of Constantinople, is solicited by the Lutherans to adhere to their Confession, 23. are rejected, ibid. his Deposition soon after accomplish'd by them, ibid.
- Jericho*, the Vertues of the Rose thereof, according to the Greeks, 163.
- Jerom* of Prague, burnt by Order of the Council of Constance, 325.
- Jerom Genutius*, Bishop of Ascoli, a protest Enemy to Luther, 328. N.(t).
- Jerom Aleander*, is sent by Pope Leo the Xth to the Elector of Saxony, to prevail on him to espouse his Interest against Luther, 331.
- Jerom Bolfac*, his Treatment from Calvin, 348.
- Jerusalem*, the peculiar Ceremony observed by the Patriarch in the Excommunication of the Latins, 39. N.(e). the Patriarchate the richest, next to that of Constantinople, 87.
- Jesus Christ*, acknowledg'd by the Greeks to be the only Head of the Church, 39.
- Ignatius* is treated with Infamy in a Council conven'd by Photius: However, in a Council conven'd by Pope Nicholas the 1st, Photius is depos'd, and Ignatius restor'd to his See, ibid. thought to be poison'd by Photius, 7.
- Ignatius* (St.) a Festival of the Greeks, 121.
- Images*, an extravagant Veneration paid them, 77.
- Imam*, what, 295.
- Immersion*s, practis'd by the Greeks, 297.
- L N B I, Characters engraved by the Greeks on the Crosses which are laid over the Breasts of their deceased Friends, 141.
- Indians*, or Christians of St. Thomas, their religious Customs, 198. pay homage to the King of Portugal, 199. N.(d). a heavy Charge of erroneous Tenets drawn up by Meneses against them, 202, & seq. are strict Observers of their Lent, 204. the Customs observed by them with respect to their Women in Child-bed, 205. an Apology for them, 206, & seq. an Account of their Descent, 210. lie in their Churches all Night, 215.
- Innocent* the IIIrd writes to the Emperor of Greece, and the Patriarch of Constantinople, to join the Latins in the Crusades, in order to take the Holy Land from the Mahometans, 13. the Emperor's and the Patriarch's Answer, ibid.
- Innocent* the VIth (Pope) receives Letters with Proposals for an Accommodation from John Cantacuzenus, 18. and afterwards from his Successor Paleologus, ibid.
- Innocent* the IVth (Pope) converts a great Number of Historians at Diarbeck, 195.
- Interim*, a famous Instrument drawn up by Order of the Emperor Charles the Vth, 347.
- Invention*, or Discovery of St. John Baptist's Head, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123.
- Joachim*, Elector of Brandenbourg, renounces Popery, and why, 344.
- Joanna*, a Nun, imposed on by one William Postel, 58.
- Joasaph*, Patriarch of Constantinople, deposed by Order of Mahomet, 84. N.(g).
- John* the VIIIth, (Pope) threatens to excommunicate and depose Ignatius, unless all whom he had ordained Bishops, Clerks, &c. should in one Month abandon Bulgaria, 7. writes a warm Letter to Photius against those who admit of an Addition to the Nicene Creed to express the Holy Ghost's Procession from the Son as well as the Father, 8.
- John* of Parma, General of the Franciscan Order, sent by Innocent the IVth into Greece, sets the Reconciliation on Foot through the Encouragement of one Laurentius, 14. is thought to be the Author of the eternal Gospel, and deposed in 1256. 14. N.(b).
- John* the XXIIth, (Pope) receives a Confession of Faith from the Patriarch Veccus, 16. excommunicates all such as refuse to acknowledge the Roman Church as Head of all the rest, ibid.
- John* the XXIIIrd, (Pope) sends Nuncio's to Constantinople, in order to treat about an Accommodation, 17.
- John* the Baptist, his Martyrdom, a solemn Fast observed by the Greeks, 116.
- John* the Baptist, a Festival observed by the Greek Monks only, 120. his Nativity observ'd by the Greeks, 123.
- John* the Evangelist, a Festival observed by the Greeks in Commemoration of him, 120. observe another 123.
- John* Baptist Leopard, charges the Melabites with Interpolations in the Canons of the Council of Nice, 172.
- John* Le Clerk, first Reformer of the Churches of Mezts and Maux, burnt for demolishing some Images, 335.
- Jordan*, the supernatural Virtues of its Waters, 163. Nestorians bathe themselves there in Commemoration of Jesus Christ and his Baptism, 197.
- Joseph*, the Grecian Patriarch, his Character, 16. reconciled to the Latin Church, 21.
- Jovet*, Author of the History of all the Religions in the known World, 386. N.(y).
- Isbodicon*, what, 220. N.(z).
- Ismaelians*, a formidable Sect in Asia, Persia, and Affyria, whose Sovereigns distinguished themselves by the Title of the Kings of the Affassinnes, 281. likewise called Bathenians, ibid.
- Ichmiazin*, the Manner of electing the Patriarch thereof, 254. Stratagems of his to raise Money, ibid. an Account of the Pilgrimages thereto, and to Virap, 256.
- Judas Alpheus*, a Festival, 123.
- Julacha*, Simon, Patriarch of the Nestorians, 189.

I N D E X.

- Julfa*, the Nuptial Ceremonies of the Armenians there, 266. the particular Custom of commemorating their Dead, 268.
- Julian*, (Cardinal) his Remonstrance to Pope Eugenius the IVth, with respect to the Conduct of the Romish Clergy, 327.
- Julianus*, (Cardinal) justifies the Violation of the Treaty made by the Christians with Amurath Emperor of the Turks, 21.
- Julius* the IIIrd, (Pope) agrees to a Reconciliation with the Nestorians, 189.
- Jurieu*, a Treatise of his intended to reconcile the Lutherans and Calvinists, 355.
- Justinian* (Emperor) institutes the Custom of shaving Monks in the Form of a Crown, 152.
- K.
- Kalendar* of the Greeks, 120 & seq.
- Kabia*, a Country inhabited by the Nassaries, 279.
- Katherine de Melitis*, writes to the Pope in behalf of the Calvinists, 352.
- Klites*, an Account of their Tenets, 279.
- Kibla*, a Mahometan Term, 290.
- Knife*, Lance, or Spear, an Instrument made use by the Greeks in the Administration of their Holy Communion, 97. N. (b).
- L.
- Lalis*, or Spoon, used by the Greeks in administering the Bread and Wine to the Laity, 150. N. (n).
- Ladislaus*, King of Hungary, is defeated by Amurath, Emperor of the Turks, at Varna, 20.
- Lafsal-jemin*, a Festival observed in Commemoration of the Penitent Thief, 197.
- Laillier*, (John) an inveterate Enemy to the Pope and Romish Clergy, 326.
- Laity*, go to Confession but once a Year, 129.
- Lamf*, the Name of an Unction used by the Maronites for their Sick, 273.
- Lampadary*, an Office belonging to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92.
- Lance*, see Knife.
- Lanziez*, the Jesuit, treats the Protestants with opprobrious Language, 352.
- Laskynates*, Officers to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. their proper Offices, ibid.
- Laskaris*, (Theodore) constituted Emperor of Nice, 14.
- Latins*, opposed by Michael Cerularius with respect to their making use of unleavened Bread in the Lord's-Supper, and some other Ceremonies therein, being in communion with the Jews, 9. the Massacre of them in 1182. 12. lose the City of Constantinople after the Possession of it 57 Years, 15.
- Laudes*, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
- Laurentius*, a Franciscan Fryar, advises Pope Innocent the XIth, to send John of Parma as Legate into Greece, 14.
- Laurentius* and Olaus Petri, introduce Lutheranism into Swedeland, 420. are encouraged by Gustavus King of that Country, ibid. are opposed by his Successor King John, ibid.
- Le Brun*, his Account of the Armenian Churches, 258 & seq.
- Lecturer*, one of the lowest Order of the Priesthood amongst the Greeks, 145. the Ceremony of his Ordination, 146.
- Leger*, his Character drawn by Bossuet, 369.
- Lent*, called the Soul's Tythe, 116. N. (g).
- Lents*, or stated times for fasting observed by the Greeks, 116.
- Leo*, the Philosopher, turns Photius out of his See, 8.
- Leo* the IXth (Pope) writes an Apology for the Latins, in Answer to the Charge of Cerularius, 9.
- Leo* the Xth, (Pope) endeavours to monopolize the Salvation of all Christians, 326. issues out Plenary Indulgencies to defray the Expences of building St. Peter's Church, 327. receives a Remonstrance from Cardinal Julian, ibid.
- Libations*, how practised by the Mingrelians, 187.
- Ligaridius* (Paisius) his Renunciation of the Doctrines of the Latin Church when installed Archbishop of Gaza, 40 N. (e).
- Lingam*, an Hieroglyphick of the Indians, the Import of it, 213. N. (b).
- Lions*, a Council convened there in May, 1274. 16.
- Liturgies*, the Contents of them, 69. an account of them, 93 & seq. the several Branches thereof, ibid.
- Liturgy* of the Swedish Church printed both in Latin and the Swedish Language, 421. opposed by the Lutheran Ecclesiasticks of Stockholm, ibid.
- Logothetes*, (two of them) one Intendant of the Grecian Patriarchs Household, the other Inspector General of the Church, 92.
- Lollards* renounce the Pope and the Sacraments, Fasts, &c. of the Romish Church, 325.
- Louvain*, the University thereof condemns Luther and his Writings, 330.
- Lubeck*, espouses the new Religion under the Direction of John Bugenhagen, 343.
- Lucar* (Cyril) Patriarch of Constantinople aims at a Reconciliation with the Calvinists 23. draws up a Confession of Faith, ibid. the different Characters given of him, 24. an Abstract of his History, 56 & seq. is strangled by order of the Grand Signior, 58. the Title he assumed, 82. N. (d).
- Luke* the Evangelist, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 18th of October, 121.
- Luther*, the Reasons for his acting in the Character of a Reformer, 324. his severe Invectives against the Pope, &c. ibid. his Advice to his Followers, 325. openly opposes the Indulgencies of Pope Leo the Xth, 327. his Tenets, 328. are opposed by the Pope's Advocates, ibid. his Cause to be tried in Germany, ibid. Cardinal Cajetan sent thither to be his Judge, ibid. Luther writes a submissive Letter to the Cardinal, ibid. appeals afterwards to the Pope himself, 329. challenges his Antagonists to dispute with him, ibid. applies to Erasmus for his Interest, ibid. has a Conference with one Eckius, ibid. is condemned by the Universities of Cologne and Louvain, 330. maintains the Necessity of receiving the Eucharist in both Kinds, ibid. denies his Holiness to be any more than a temporal Prince, ibid. dedicates a Dissertation to him, ibid. publishes another Dissertation, ibid. the Pope's Supremacy therein termed the Kingdom of Babylon, ibid. is encouraged by the University of Wittemberg, ibid. appeals to the Council again; and justifies the Articles condemned by Pope Leo's Bull, ibid. assumes the Character of Preacher and

I N D E X.

and Divine of Wittemberg, ibid. exhorts the Saxons to shake off the Papal Yoke, ibid. he attends the Diet of Worms by order of the Emperor, 332. boldly maintains his Principles before the whole Assembly, ibid. an Edict is published against him by the Emperor, ibid. that Condemnation opposed by Melanchthon, ibid. Character at large of Luther is excommunicated by the Pope, 333. Luther's Bull in Answer thereto, ibid. he retires for nine Months to a Castle belonging to the Elector of Saxony, ibid. Luther publishes a Translation of the New Testament with Annotations, ibid. the use of it prohibited, ibid. prescribes a new Formulary in the Church of Wittemberg, ibid. an Account of what he set aside and retained, 333 and 334. he opposes the Anabaptists of Wittemberg, 335. his Version of the New Testament translated into the Swedish Language, ibid. his Works prohibited to be read by an Edict of Sigismund, King of Poland, 335. his Works consigned to the Flames by the Parliament of Paris, ibid. Luther and Carlostad quarrel at Wittemberg, 336. marries Katharine Borra, a Nun, 337. writes against Erasmus, ibid. attempts to make Proselytes of George Duke of Saxony and Henry the VIIIth King of England, ibid. is smartly answered by the latter, 338. Luther replies, ibid. notwithstanding Henry's Opposition proceeds, and causes the New Testament to be translated into English, ibid. dies during the Conference held at Ratisbon, 345. his Conduct justified by Claude, 346. N. (g); censured by Bayle, &c. ibid. Luther is applied to by the Bohemians, his contemptible Character of them, 384. a Correspondence between them revived, ibid. reforms the Bohemian Confession made in 1504. by which they acknowledge seven Sacraments, 385. reduces them to two, ibid. publishes the Smalcaldian Articles, 398, which are approved by the Smalcaldian Assembly, ibid. publishes likewise a small and large Catechism, 399. the Honours paid him on the Jubilee of his Reformation, 416.

Lutherans maintain boldly the Doctrine of the Ubiquity, 338. opposed by the Zwinglians as an absolute Contradiction, ibid. persecuted with the utmost Rigour by Henry the II. King of France, 351. refuse the Hand of Brotherhood to Beza, 354. Lutherans and Zwinglians unite with the Bohemians at the Synod of Scudomir, 386. a Dissertation on their Religion and Ceremonies, 395. an account of their Creed, 398. their Confession presented to Charles the Vth. looked upon as the most compleat, 399. acknowledge but four Oecumenical Councils, 400. their Tenets with respect to Election, Predestination, and Free-will, ibid. are Advocates for the real Presence in the Sacrament, ibid. N. (t); reject the Adoration of Saints, 402. the Manner of the Consecration of their Churches, ibid. their Form of Ordination, 406. their Consistory described, 408. the Ceremonies observed in their publick Worship, 409. their circular Predications, 411. the Bells rung at Noon, 412. Organs used in their Divine Worship, ibid. the Censure of some Devotees thereupon, ibid. have several religious Houses which bear a near Affinity to Convents, 413. their superstitious Notions relating to their Paschal Water, 415. erect May-Poles on Ascension Day, and at Whitsuntide, ibid. observe several Jubilees, particularly those of the Reformation and Confession of Augsbourg, 417. an account of their Liturgies, 418. an account of their Communion, 423. of the private Communion, 428. have their extraordinary Days of Penance, 431. their Form of Excommunication, 432. their Form of Baptism, 433. the Custom of Confirmation introduc'd amongst them, 433. their Form of Exorcisms, 434. their religious Discipline with respect to Matrimony, 436. their Civil Ceremonies very regular, 437. their Silver and Golden Nuptials when solemnized, 439. their Funeral Solemnities, 445. their Monuments, &c. 447.

Lutheranism established in 1523. both in Denmark and Sweden, 335. meets with a favourable Reception in France and Flanders, ibid. countenanced in Strasbourg and Francfort, 337. and by the Princes of Saxony, Hesse, and Brunswick, ibid. and by Albert Grand Master of the Teutonic Order, ibid. gains Ground in England, 338. it gets footing in Poland and the Republick of Venice, 348.

M.

Magdeburg, espouses the new Religion, 344.

Magi, who paid their Adoration to Christ, supposed to be Ethiopians, 234. and their respective Names, 415. N. (d).

Maichel, his Description of the Custom observed by the Lutherans in the Confession of their Sins, 429.

Mahomet shews a particular Regard for Genadius, after his Conquest of Constantinople, 83. is incensed at the Conduct of the Greeks 84. he assumes the Character of God's Ambassador, 288. and pretends to be the Paraclete, ibid. is miraculously assisted in the Composition of the Alcoran, ibid.

Mahometans, their Form of Confession, 100. their Tenets and religious Customs, 288. acknowledge the Unity of the Godhead, but deny the Trinity, 289. their Notions concerning God, the Angels, and the particular Offices of Gabriel, &c. ibid. concerning the Resurrection of the Dead, &c. ibid. their Romantic account of Paradise and Hell, 291. imagine all Sins but Atheism and Idolatry will be forgiven, 292. erect Monuments for their Dead, ibid. their Notions of Confession, and Penance, ibid. testify an entire Resignation to the Divine Will, ibid. pay a religious Veneration to some particular Appellations, 293. Pupils pay great Respect to their Tutors, ibid. the different Postures observed by them at their Devotions, 295. several Prohibitions relating to their Prayers, ibid. an account of their Ablutions, 296. are divided into several Sects, yet agree in the Fundamental Articles of their Belief, ibid. a Summary of their Creed, ibid.

Malabar, the Christians of that Place particularly described, 211. their superstitious Customs before they were reconciled to the Church of Rome, 212. their religious Ceremonies, 213.

I N D E X.

- Mandyum*, what, 146.
Manifesto, published by Luther, wherein he files the Pope Tyrant, &c. 331.
Maniples, sacerdotal Ornaments of the Greeks, 97. N. (d).
Mantelum Monasticum, what, 146. N. (z).
Marbachius, a Lutheran, his shocking Expressions with relation to the Eucharist, 396.
March the 9th observed by the Greeks as a Festival in Commemoration of the forty Martyrs who were starved to Death, 123.
Mare, taught to play Tricks, taken into Custody for a Witch, by Order of the Inquisition, 299. N. (q).
Margaret de Valois, Queen of Navarre, encourages the new Opinions in France, 342. causes the Horæ to be published with Castrations, ibid. which contributed towards promoting the Doctrines of Calvin, ibid.
Margareta Maria a la Coque, remarkable Extracts from her Life, written by the Bishop of Soissons, 125. N. (a).
Margarites, the Signification of the Term, 109. N. (l).
Mart, the Evangelist, a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 25th of April, 123.
Mar-Joseph Bishop of the Indians of St. Thomas, instructs the Portuguese in the Nestorian Principles, 199. is seiz'd by the Archbishop and Viceroy, and sent to Rome, ibid.
Maro, an Abbot in the 5th Century, the Founder of the Maronites, 269.
Maronites, an Account of their Tenets, publicly recant their Errors, ibid. have a Patriarch, ibid. the Manner of his Election, 270. a monastic Life much in vogue amongst the Maronites, ibid. their Monks are of the Order of St. Anthony, ibid. the Celebration of their Mass, 271. are strict Observers of their Fasts, 272. their Festival Days for Ordination, ibid. practise Confession, 273. their Neglect of the Eucharist before their Reformation, ibid. their Marriage Rites, ibid. their Use of a particular Unction for their Sick, ibid. Father Besfor's Miracle produc'd as a Demonstration of the Orthodoxy of the Maronites, ibid. a general Character of them, ibid. their Nuns are of the Order of St. Anthony, ibid. a particular Relation of the Tenets of the antient Maronites, 277. they retain a Veneration for their Cedars, 278. the Manner of their Priests performing Mass, ibid. their Funeral Solemnities, 279.
Marriages of the Greeks, 132. & seq.
Mar-Thomas, the common Parent of the Christians of St. Thomas, 210.
Martin the IVth, (Pope) condemns Photius 8. refuses to give the Emperor Michael's Ambassadors any Audience, and excommunicates him, 17.
Martin the Vth, (Pope) sends a Legate to Constantinople, 20. and receives Proposals from Michael and John Palæologus, ibid.
Martin (St.) Custom observed on the Night of that Festival, 116. N. (f).
Martyrdom of St. John the Baptist, a solemn Fast observed by the Greeks in Commemoration thereof, 116.
Mass of the Greeks, 96. & seq.
Mass for the Dead, the Price of it, 142.
Mass abolish'd at Strasbourg and Basil, 339. and at Heidelberg, 346. the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper administred there in the vulgar Tongue, ibid.
Masses (private) abolish'd first at Wittenberg, then all over Saxony, 333.
Massacre of the Latins at Constantinople, 12. the causes thereof, ibid.
Matins, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
Matthew the Apostle, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
Maunday-Thursdai, 137.
Meaux and Metz, the Churches thereof embrace Lutheranism, 335.
Mecca, a holy Place to which the Mahometans go in Pilgrimage, 296.
Meiron of the Abyssines, what, 236.
Melanchibon, made a Profelyte to the Protestant Religion by Luther, 329. his Name in the German Language, what, ibid. N. (w). his Defence of Luther's Tenets, 332. his Confession at Ausbourg, confuted by the Catholic Divines, and altered by the Lutherans, 339. sends Proposals to Francis the 1st, for a Reconciliation, 343. which are rejected, ibid. publishes the Saxon Confession, 339.
Melchites, Greek Schismatics, 171. their Notions of Purgatory, and the Pope's Supremacy, 172. are charged by the Jacobites with corrupting the Canons of the Council of Nice, ibid. their Mass in the Arabian Language, 173.
Meletius, Archbishop of Ephesus denies the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, &c. 59.
Mendai-Jabia, Christians of St. John, 283.
Mendicant-Fryars, a Description of them, 153.
Menejes, (Alexis) Archbishop of Gna, endeavours to bring about a Reconciliation of the Christians of St. Thomas, with the Romish Church, 199. his Charge of erroneous Tenets maintained by the Christians, drawn up in 16 Articles, 202. convenes a Council at Diamper in the Kingdom of Cochin to deliberate on their Ecclesiastical Affairs, 205. an Apology for the Christians, 206 & seq. attempts to bring about a Reconciliation of the Abyssines with the Romish Church, 230.
Mercurius the Martyr, a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
Mesgewand, its Signification, 423. N. (c).
Mesgret, 14 Articles of a Treatise of his condemned by the Faculty of Paris, 337. N. (w).
Mesrop, a Hermit, Inventor of the Armenian Characters, 252.
Metagnia, the Signification of the Term, 157. N. (k).
Methodius, deposed by the Factions of Parthenius in 1675. — 84. N. (m).
Michael the IIIrd. through the Persuasions of Bardas advances Photius to the See of Constantinople, 4. is murdered, 7.
Michael and Gabriel, (Sts.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
Milletiere renounces his Religion, 358. his Excommunication accomplished by the Divines of Charenton, ibid.
Milo, a particular Description of the Burial of a Woman there, 141.
Mingrelians, an Account of their Principles, 173 & seq. their Form of Baptism, 178. their little Regard for the Sacrament of the blessed Eucharist, 179. their Veneration for Images, 180. their Zeal proportioned to the Dress in which

I N D E X.

- which they appear, ibid. N. (w); their Oblations accompanied with heavy Imprecations on their Enemies, ibid. an Account of their Monks and their Nuns, 180. of their Mass, 181, 182. Mingrelians fond of fabulous History, ibid. their Mourning, 184. their barbarous Custom, where they imagine the Sick past Recovery, ibid. their Festivals, 185. their Epiphany distinguished by a Benediction of their Waters, ibid. St. Agnes remarkable for her Cure of sore Eyes, ibid. their Festival of forty Martyrs how solemnized, ibid. the 1st Monday after Easter, the 1st in every Year, and the 1st in every Month, are particularly distinguished by them, ibid. their Customs on Festivals, 186. their Libations, 187. their Observance of the Sign of the Cross, 188.
- Minister*, the Derivation of the Term, 458. N. (x).
- Ministers*, or Assistants to the Grecian Patriarchs, the Order in which they attend them, 90.
- Molbedites*, the Druses of Mount Libanus, 281. whose Sovereigns are distinguished by the Title of Kings of the Assassins, ibid.
- Monachism* in vogue with the Armenians, 252. two Orders amongst them, viz. St. Basil and St. Dominic, ibid.
- Monkey*, taken into Custody by the Russian Clergy, and condemned for a Wizard, 299. N. (q).
- Monks* (Grecian) their Manner of Life, 73. two Orders of them called Cenobites and Anchorets, ibid. N. (d). some distinguished by the Name of Monks of the Angelical Habit, 74. others by that of the lesser Habit, others are called ἰδιόπουτοι, ibid. their Veneration for Images, 77.
- Monks of Monte Santo*, Vagabonds that wander over Greece and Muscovy, 36.
- Monks*, the Difference between the modern ones, and the ancient Philosophers, 151.
- Monks of the Order of St. Basil*, 152.
- Monks of Mount Athos*, 154.
- Monks of the Order of St. Anthony*, 196.
- Monks of the Copti*, Objects of Contempt, 224.
- Monks of the Druses*, strict Observers of their Fasts, reside in Deserts, 282.
- Monophysites* of the Levant, maintain the Unity of the Nature and Person of Jesus Christ, 216.
- Montluc* (John) Bishop of Valence, prevails on Catherine de Medicis, to write to the Pope in Favour of the Calvinists, 352.
- Montpelier*, a Conference held there, 354.
- Moraguary*, what, 174.
- Morel* (Francis) President of the Synod held in 1559. by the Protestants at Paris, 351.
- Morgengab*, the Signification of the Term, 438.
- Moscow*, a religious Ceremony formerly observed there on Palm-Sunday, 82. N. (d).
- Mount Athos*, resorted to by Greek Pilgrims, 155. the Number of Caloyers residing there, 156.
- Mulbrun*, a Conference held there between the Lutherans and Calvinists, 396.
- Muncer* (Thomas) a principal Leader of the Anabaptists at Wittemberg, 335.
- Munzir*, a superior Angel, according to the Mahometans, 290.
- Musa*, a Corporal, or Linnen Cloth with which the Greek Priests wipe their Patens, in the Office of the Holy Communion, 107. N. (e).
- Muscovites*, See Russians.
- Mycone*, the Description of a Wedding there, 134. and of a Funeral Solemnity, 144.
- Myrone*, the Signification of the Term, 178. 1
- N.
- Nenia*, the Elogiums of the Dead, 141. N. (l).
- Nasseris*, an Account of their Tenets, 279. addicted to stealing, ibid. the Courtesy of their Virgins towards Travellers, 280. their Aversion to the Mahometans, ibid. believe the Doctrine of the Trinity, ibid. abstain from Female Animals and Swines Flesh, ibid. swear by St. Matthew and St. Simon, ibid. pray for the coming of the Christians, ibid.
- Nativity* of the blessed Virgin, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 120.
- Naxos*, a religious Custom observed there on the Festival of Corpus Christi, 160.
- Nazarenes*, their Notion of the Deity, 279.
- Nekir*, a superior Angel, according to the Mahometans, his Province, 290.
- Nestorius*, revered by his Sect, 188.
- Nestorians* called Christians of the Girdle, 173. by whom their wearing Girdles was introduced, ibid. accomplish a Reconciliation with the Church of Rome, 189. their Sect very numerous, ibid. acknowledged no Patriarch but that of Babylon, till the Reign of Julius, ibid. but afterwards acknowledged Julacha, and after his Decease one Abjesu, ibid. their Confession of Faith sent to the Pope by Elias of Babylon, 190. their manner of justifying the Articles of their Faith, 195 & seq. a great Number of them are converted, ibid. an Account of the Nestorian Clergy, 196. their Ceremony of bathing in the River Jordan, their Nuptial Ceremonies, ibid. their Funeral Solemnities, 198.
- New-Years-Day*, the first solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, 118.
- Nicaria*, the Custom of the Inhabitants in the Disposal of their Daughters in Marriage, 160.
- Nicene* Council, Advocates for Image Worship, gain a Conquest over the Iconoclasts, 77.
- Nicephorus* publishes the Celebration of the Holy Mysteries in Latin, 9.
- Nicephorus*, (Botaniatus) is excommunicated for usurping the Throne of Michael Parapinacius, 11.
- Nicetas*, (Pectoratus) charges the Latins with erroneous Tenets, 9. is answered by Humbertus, and Nicetas afterwards recants, ibid.
- Nicholas* the 1st (Pope) notwithstanding all the artful Pleadings and Letters of Photius Patriarch of Constantinople wrote against Ignatius, is displeased with his Legates, and confutes the Proceedings of Photius and his Council, 5. he declares the Deposition of Ignatius and the Ordination of Photius null and void, ibid. and afterwards not only deposes him, but excommunicates both him and his Adherents, ibid.
- Nicholas*, (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks on the 6th of December, 121.
- Nicon*, (St.) attempts a Reconciliation of the Armenian Church with that of Rome at the Expence of his Repose, 245. N. (b).
- Nocturns*, or Night Service, a Part or Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.

I N D E X.

- Nomophylax*, a Minister, or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. his Office, ibid.
None, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
North Holland, a Custom observed there, 416.
Nuptial Ceremonies of the Greeks, 152. of the Georgians, 182. of the Nestorians, 197. of the Copti, 228. of the Armenians, 265. of the Maronites, 273. and of the Russians, 310.
Nymphæa, a Council held there, ibid, 14.
- O
- Obstinacy*, the Result of religious Debates, 2.
Oblation, the Loaf made use of by the Greeks, in the Holy Communion, 97. N.(g).
Oecumenius, first Minister of Basil, his Notions with Relation to the Sacrament of the Eucharist, 337. dies 1531. 341.
Oecumenical Divines, viz. St. Basil, St. Gregory, and St. Chrysostom, a Festival, 123.
Office of the Greeks, 93.
Olaus Petri publishes the New Testament in the Swedish Language, 335.
Opus Operatum, the great Stress laid on it by Christians of most Denominations, 409.
Oquamiri, Sacrifices of the Mingrelians, 187.
Orarium, a sacred Vestment, 96. N.(a).
Order of Holy Angels, a Festival, 121.
Ordination of the Grecian Priesthood, 145. the Ordination of a Bishop, 148.
Organs, prohibited at Zurich, 335. and restored where Catechism prevailed, ibid. N. (n).
Orilibenfes, their erroneous Tenets, 377.
Osjander introduces Confirmation after Baptism, 433. disputes against Beza, and others, 354.
Ostriches Eggs, why hung up in Churches, 225.
Oil of Unction consecrated on Wednesday in the Holy Week for the Service of the whole Year, 137.
- P.
- Pagans*, their Freedom in communicating their Sentiments to each other, 2. their Charity for those who differ from them, ibid. exclude none out of the Elysian Fields but the most profligate Wretches, ibid. prohibit the use of Bells, 213.
Palamites, a select Body of Quietists on Mount Athos, 18. N. (r).
Palatinate, Protestant Ministers established all over it, 345.
Paleologus (Michael) retakes Constantinople, 15. is Governor thereof, 15. N.(c). is excommunicated by the Patriarch of Arsenes, ibid. writes to Pope Urban the IVth, and sues for Peace, 15. his Holiness in a Letter to him extols the Power of the Holy See, 15. his Scheme disapproved of by the Greek Clergy, ibid. dies in Communion with the Church of Rome, 17.
Paleologus (Constantine) acts the Hypocrite with respect to the Reconciliation agreed to at the Council of Florence, 22. N. (f).
Pallium, a rich Present made by Mahomet to Gennadius, 83. what it alludes to, ibid. N.(b).
Palm-Sunday, a religious Ceremony performed on that Festival at Moscow, 82. N. (d). a Festival observed by the Armenians, 257.
Panagia, a Church at Corsou, 139.
Papadia, the Title of an Armenian Priest's Spouse, 255.
Papas, secular Priests, 146.
Papists, general Argument made use of by the Protestants against them, 64. N. (z).
Paramandya, what, 152.
Paranymphs, what, 133. N. (n).
Parasceva, (St.) and St. Pantaleon, Martyrs under Dioclesian, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123.
Parentalia, Funeral Collations of the Ancients, 143. N. (p).
Pareus, a Protestant Divine Labours to bring about a Reconciliation, 354.
Paris, the Establishment of the first Protestant Church there, 345.
Parliament of France consigns Luther's Works to the Flames, 335.
Parfopa, a Term used by the Nestorians, 192.
Parthenius, President of the Council at Constantinople, confirms the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 53. and condemns the Words of Cyril's Confession as heretical, ibid. procures the Deposition of Methodius, 84. N. (m).
Passagians, inveterate Enemies to the Roman Church, 377.
Passaw the Treaty there concludes the War entered into by the Confederate Protestants against Charles the Vth, 348.
Passion Week, the Notion of the Greeks with respect to the Sympathy of the Birds on that Day with our Lord's suffering, 161.
Pastoral-Staff Bearer, an Officer belonging to the Grecian Patriarchs, 92.
Patin, a Vessel made use of by the Greeks, 97.
Patken gelt, what, 435.
Patriarch, of Constantinople, his Title, 72. the Signification of the Term, 81. N. (b). of Russia, his Power, 82. Peter Alexiowitz, (late Czar) assumed that Title, ibid. N. (d).
Patriarchs, the Number of them acknowledged by the ancient Christian Church, 81. the Ceremony observed at their Election, 88.
Patriarchates of Greece dependent on the Favour of the Grand Signior, 71.
Patriarchate of Constantinople, stripped of all its Privileges by Mahomet, 84. that of Jerusalem the richest next to Constantinople, 87. Antioch the poorest, ibid.
Pecherie, what, 85.
Penance, always follows Confession amongst the Greeks, 129. Absolution the Consequence, ibid.
Periodeutes, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarch, 93. his Office, ibid.
Peristera, what, 148.
Peskos or Peskesi, its Etymology, 85.
Perry, his Character of the Muscovites, 299.
Peter and Paul, Apostles, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123.
Peter the Fuller, his Addition to the Trisagium of the Armenians, 261.
Peter of Bruys, an inveterate Enemy to the Romish Church, and why, 325.
Peter D' Aurada, Bishop of Calaborra, his Invectives against the Romish Church, 326.
Petit, forms a Plan for a Reconciliation, 358.
Peter (Olaus) publishes the New Testament, in the Swedish Language, 335.
Peucer, Articles drawn up against him, 396.
Phelonium, a sacerdotal Vestment, 97.
Phenolium, what, 146.
Philip the Apostle, a solemn Festival, 121.
Philip King of Spain, a merciless Prince, 350. erects an Inquisition in the Low Countries, ibid. his Treatment of some Lutherans in the Mountains of Naples, 351.

I N D E X.

- Philistines*, the manner of their performing their solemn Vows, 138.
- Photius*, Patriarch of Constantinople, Author of the Schism of the Greeks from the Latins, 4. the Character of him, ibid. see Nicholas the Ist.
- Pic*, (Francis) of Mirandola, reads a Dissertation at the last Sessions of the Lateran Council full of Invectives against the Romish Clergy, 326. N. (n).
- Picards*, Fore-runners of the Sacramentarians, 382. their Notion of the Eucharist, ibid. N. (n).
- Pilgrims* imprint Marks on their Arms, and produce them as Certificates of their Travels to Jerusalem, 163.
- Pilnitz*, the Ceremony observed there in the Consecration of a Church, 403.
- Pisan Council*, the Declaration therein made with respect to a Reformation, 324.
- Planet*, a sacerdotal Vestment of the Greeks, what, ibid. N. (e).
- Poirot*, an Advocate for a Reconciliation, 359.
- Poissy*, a Conference held there, 351.
- Pola*, a Vestment of the Greeks, 96. N. (a).
- Poland*, begins to favour Lutheranism, 348.
- Polygamy*, the odd Notions the Greeks entertain of it, 133.
- Polystaurium*, a sacerdotal Vestment, 97.
- Pomeranus*, the Reformer of Lubeck, &c. 343.
- Pope*, the Title not peculiar to the Patriarch of Rome only in the Primitive Ages, but to Archbishops, Bishops, &c. 81.
- Posel*, (William) his Imposition on one Joanna a Nun, to induce her to be his Benefactress, 58.
- Postures* practised by the Greeks, 95.
- Pouent*, (Mr.) Several Propositions of his condemned by the Faculty of Paris, 337. N. (w).
- Pragmatic Sanction*, dissolved by the Treaty of the King of France with the Pope, &c. 326. N. (q.)
- Preaching*, seldom practised by the Greeks, 95.
- Preſect* of the Churches, an Officer belonging to the Greek Patriarchs, 91.
- Prejudices* in Points of Religion, 3.
- Presentation* of the blessed Virgin, a Festival, 121.
- Presentation* of Jesus Christ, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 123. as also of the Armenians, 25.
- Priests* the last Order of the Grecian Priesthood, 146.
- Prime*, A Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
- Priscillianists*, Hereticks of the 4th Century, 95. N. (r).
- Procession* of the Holy Ghost, the Articles allowed to be the principal Cause of the Schism of the Greeks from the Latins, 4.
- Proſtor*, an Assistant to the Patriarchs, 92.
- Proegumenos*, his particular Office, 151.
- Prognosticks* of the Cophti, what, 227.
- Profelytes*, Lay-Brothers of Convents, 153.
- Proſphora*, what, 98. N. (n).
- Protecdice*, an Assistant to the Patriarchs, 91.
- Protestants*, their Arguments against the Papists, 64. N. (z) their Principles and Customs, 319.
- Prothefis*, what, 97. N. (f).
- Protopapas*, Assistants to the Patriarchs, 91.
- Protopaltes*, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91.
- Protosyncellus*, an Officer of the Patriarchs, 92.
- Prudentius*, his peculiar Notion with respect to the State of Souls after Death, 42. N. (k).
- Puffendorf* approves of Mr. Huet's Evangelical Demonstration, 357.
- Q.
- Quecoué*, what, 260.
- Quietists* of Mount Athos, 18. N. (r).
- R.
- Rabelais* his Remark on the Notice given by the Monks of their publick Devotions, 94. N. (o), his Concern for the Loss of his Wife, 142.
- Ramazan*, a Fast observed by the Mahometans, 296.
- Ratisbone*, a Conference held there, 345.
- Real Presence*, when first introduced, 62.
- Reformation* of the Church, the Result of Policy, 324. its slow Progress, ibid. an Abstract of the History of it, 325. established in 1523. 335.
- Regale*, the Signification of the Term, 85.
- Religious* Debates, the ill Consequences that attend them, 2.
- Relicks*, some Reflections upon them, 115. N. (d).
- Relicks*, of St. Chrysostome, a Festival, 122.
- Rbinfield*, a Conference held there by seven Divines, 355.
- Ricaut*, his Account of the Greek Churches, 29. his Explication of the Eulogium, III. his Account of the Ceremony observed at laying the Foundation of any Structure, 112. their Method of their venting their Malice, 113. his Account of the Nuptial Ceremonies of the Greeks, 136. his Description of the Habit of their Caloyers, 152. of their Lay-Brothers, 153. and Mendicant Fryars, ibid. of their Nuns, 854. of the Monks of Mount Athos, 155. of their Customs, 158. his Account of the Armenian Confession of Faith, 253.
- Richard* (Francis) ascribes several erroneous Tenets to the Greeks, 25. N. (r).
- Richlieu* (Cardinal) proposes to dispute with the Protestant Divines, 356, but dies, ibid. Mazarine is prest to resume it, ibid. De Maria and De Goudrin propose to revive Richlieu's Method and bring it to Perfection, ibid.
- Ritual*, a Church Book, entrusted to the Care of the Hieromnemon, 91. and ibid. N. (t).
- Rivere*, Minister of the first reformed Church at Paris, 345.
- Rocking*, a Ceremony observed by the Greeks, 136.
- Roderick* the Jesuit is sent by the Pope to the Cophti, 221. is treated in a fallacious Manner by their Patriarch, ibid.
- Rome*, the Time when Bulls and Dispensations were first put up to Sale there, 83.
- Rose* of Jericho, the Vertues of it, 163. owing to the Virgin Mary, of whom it is the Figure, 164.
- Roschild*, the Convent of Nuns there described, 413.
- Rouſſe* of the Cophti, what, 227.
- Runcairs*, their erroneous Tenets, 377.
- Russians*, the Veneration which the Greeks have for them, 86. their Principles, 297. their Conversion to the Christian Faith to whom ascribed, ibid. their Attachment to the Communion

I N D E X.

- munion of the Greeks, ibid. maintain the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 297. N. (f). a Reconciliation proposed between them and the Romish Church, 297. they believe that all who are without the Pale of their Church are in a State of Reprobation, 298. rebaptize their Profelytes, ibid. the Russians are fond of wearing long Beards, ibid. N. (n); the Czar look'd upon as a Tyrant for obliging them to cut off their Beards, ibid. Peter the Great first Reformer, 299. his first Step towards it, is the Establishment of Schools, ibid. prints Books for their Improvement, ibid. the Ignorance of their Clergy, ibid. their Ecclesiasticks treated with Respect, 300. their Priests seldom preach, ibid. are fond of erecting Churches, &c. ibid. the Multiplicity of their Priests and Monks, 301. the Bible never carried into their Churches, ibid. the Contents of a Muscovite Ritual, ibid. an Account of the Consecration of the Czar's Palace in 1702. 303. N. (b). Houses consecrated with Salt, ibid. Hay and Bread left in such Habitations as are quitted, ibid. their Veneration for Relicks, &c. ibid. the Picture of the blessed Virgin drawn by St. Luke, look'd upon as the Palladium of the State, ibid. invoke particularly St. Nicholas, 304. their Procession for the Celebration of the New-year, ibid. a Description of the Coronation of the Czar, 306. their Veneration for the Sign of the Cross, 307. their Form of Baptism described, ibid. Divorces frequent, but Polygamy is prohibited, 308. Czar Peter, makes a Reformation in their Matrimonial Concerns, 309. their Nuptial Ceremonies, 310. their Funeral Solemnities, 313. their Annual Commemoration of their Dead, ibid.
- S.
- Sabba*, (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
Sabi, Christians of St. John, 283.
Sacraments of the Greek Church, 126 & seq.
Sacramentarians, their Confession presented to the Diet held at Ausbourg, 340.
Sacred Sepulchre, the Ceremony of the Greeks, with respect to the sacred Fire descending into it on Easter Eve, 161.
Sagavara, what, 260.
Samerand, a Lake, the Power of its Waters, 113.
Santons, Priests of the Nasseris, 280.
Sanuto, a Reconciliation set on Foot by him, 17.
Saracens, their Form of Confession, 101.
Savage Quietists, Grecian Devotees, 152.
Savanarola (Jerom) burnt for speaking too freely on the Necessity of a Reformation, 326.
Saunier, (Mr.) Several Propositions of his condemned, 337. N. (w).
Saxon Confession, published in 1551. — 399.
Saxony private Masses abolished throughout the Country, 333. the Princes thereof declare in favour of the Reformation, 337. the Elector one of the principal Engines of the Protestant War in Germany, 347.
Scapulary, what, 152. N. (q).
Scenophylax, a Minister or Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 90. N. (o).
Schism, canvassed in the 6th Century, but became more important in the 9th, ibid.
- Schlecht*, a severe Pamphlet wrote against him by Erafinus, 385.
Schmidlin, an Advocate for the Doctrine of the Ubiquity, 346. N. (g). his Character, 354. N. (x).
Secondary Deacon, or a Minister Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91.
Seelforgor, the Signification of the Term, 423. N. (c).
Sedomir in Poland, a general Synod held there, 354. another held there, 386.
Sennan, (St.) and St. Abdon, a Festival of the Maronites, 274.
Sens, the Archbishop of, holds a Council, 339.
Separation between Man and Wife, easily procured amongst the Greeks, 136.
Seysfel, (Claude) sets up for a Reformer, 364. and exclaims against the Vaudois, 366.
Sexte, a Branch in the Grecian Office, 93.
Shaving of Monks in the Form of a Crown, instituted by the Emperor Justinian, 152.
Siciditus, a Monk, his extravagant Notions relating to the Eucharist, 63.
Sickness, the Ceremonies observed by the Greeks therein, 138.
Sigismund, King of Poland, publishes a severe Edict against the Lutheran Tenets, 335.
Silver Nuptials, when solemnized amongst the Lutherans, 439.
Simeon of Theffalonica maintains two kinds of Adoration of the Eucharist, 66. his Works published at the Expence of the Vawod, ibid. N. (e). his Ambition, 84. N. (b).
Simon, (Father) publishes Dandini's Travels to Mount Libanus, with Notes, 31. N. (i); also the Works of Gabriel Archbishop of Philadelphia, with Annotations, ibid. demonstrates that the Greeks acknowledge seven Sacraments, 37. an Abridgment of his account of the Ecclesiastical Discipline of the Greeks, 7 & seq. his account of the Revenues of the Patriarch of Constantinople, 86.
Simon Dente, Patriarch of the Nestorians, in the room of Abathalla, 190. is unable to withstand the Power of the Patriarch of Babylon, and flies into Persia, ibid.
Smith, (Dr.) his Catalogue of the Churches dependent on the Patriarch of Constantinople, 29. allows that the Greeks maintain the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 46. his Ignorance with respect to his Greek Theology, 61.
Smirwar, a Species of Birds, influenced in a supernatural Manner, by the Waters of the Lake Samarand, 113.
Solemn Vows, how the Greeks perform them, 138.
Spear, See Knife.
Sperna, funeral Presents, 141.
Spinola forms a Project for a Reconciliation, 359.
Spires, a Diet held there for the Regulation of Differences in Religion, 338.
Spiridion, (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
Spon, a Physician, his account of the Fasts observed by the Greeks, 118. and of several Marriage Ceremonies, 135.
Sponsors, made use of in the Nuptial Ceremonies of the Greeks, 134.
Spoon, See Labis.

Staupitz

I N D E X.

- Staupitz, (John)* protects Luther in his Opposition of the Indulgencies issued out by Pope Leo the Xth, 327.
- Stauropegium*, an Office peculiar to the Prefect, one of the Attendants on the Grecian Patriarchs, 92. N. (z). the Explication of the Term, 112.
- Stephen* (St.) a Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
- Stephen*, a Bishop of Bobemia burnt at Vienna, 382.
- Sticharium*, what, 146.
- Stoecharium* of the Greeks, a sacred Vestment like the Albe of the Latins, 96. N. (z).
- Stork (Nicholas)* a principal Leader of the Anabaptists in Wittenberg, 335.
- Strasbourg*, the Priests there testify their Approbation of the Abolition of Celibacy, 335. the Inhabitants favour Lutheranism, 337. Mass abolished there, 339.
- Stroza*, his Account of the Nestorians, 189.
- Snachus*, Agents for the Russians, 310.
- Sub Deacons*, a particular Order of the Grecian Priesthood, 145.
- Super-altare*, a portable Altar entrusted to the Care of the Prefect, 92. N. (y).
- Supergenual*, what, 91.
- Super-humerale*, what, 152. N. (q).
- Super-Intendant*, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91. his Office, ibid.
- Superstitious* Customs of the Greeks, 58.
- Surrats*, what, 292.
- Suseit*, a Term used by the Mingrelian Priests, 182.
- Swedeland*, the States thereof assembled in order to receive the Lutheran Religion, 335.
- Sylvester de Prierio*, Enemy to Luther, 328. N. (t).
- Synaxarium*, what, 125.
- Synaxe*, the Signification of the Term, 93. N. (e).
- Syncelli*, Officers under the Protosyncellus, an Attendant on the Grecian Patriarchs, 92.
- Synods*, held against Cyril Lucar, 52. their Anathema declared to be Antichristian, ibid. N. (q); Synod, held at Jerusalem, 53. the Reason why it was convened, 54. favours the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 55. Synod of the Greeks, what, 93. Synod convened, in order to a Reconciliation of the Armenian Church with that of Rome, 249. N. (k); Synod held at Paris by the Protestants, 351. Synod held by the Reformers in Poland, 358. Synods, both National and Provincial formerly held in France, 459. Synod held at Teur in the Netherlands, 461.
- Syrigus, Meletius*, composes a Treatise against Cyril Lucar's Confession of Faith, 49.
- Syropulus*, Author of the History of the Council of Florence, 40.
- T.
- Tabarites*, who they were, 381. Ziska their Head, ibid. their Tenets confuted, ibid.
- Talismanus*, made use of by the Greeks, 113.
- Talismanic Waters*, their Virtue, 113. the Ceremony of conveying them into Aleppo, ibid.
- Talmud*, a Book held in great Veneration, 288.
- Ta Sperna*, Presents made by the Greeks to their Friends at their funeral Solemnities, 141.
- Tavaiole*, the mystical Design of it, ibid.
- Tavernier*, his Account of the Christians of St. John, 283.
- Tau*, the Greek Letter, an Hieroglyphick, 213. N. (b).
- Theodoret* denies that Angels behold the divine Essence in Heaven, 43.
- Theodorus*, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 122.
- Theodosius Canobiarchus*, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 122.
- Theologal*, an Attendant on the Grecian Patriarchs, 91. N. (x).
- Theophilus* the Iconoclast, his Salvation supposed to be owing to his Unction after his Death, 137.
- Thevenot*, his Description of the sacred Fire of the Greeks, 161.
- Thomas* (St.) a solemn Festival observed by the Greeks, 121.
- Thuringen* espouses Lutheranism, 344.
- Thuroferary*, an Assistant to the Grecian Patriarchs, 91.
- Thusia*, the Signification of the Term, 113.
- Tierce*, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
- Timotheus* and Anastasiu, (Sts.) a Festival observed by the Greeks, 122.
- Tina*, the Greeks there made use of their own Liturgy and Ceremonies, 70.
- Tokens* of Virginity exposed to public View, 266.
- Torgan*, a Formulary drawn up by the Lutherans in 1574, another in 1576. wherein the Canonization of the Ubiquity was accomplish'd, 398.
- Trajan*, his Salvation supposed to be owing to his Unction after his Death, 137.
- Transfiguration*, a Festival observed by the Greeks, 116. and by the Armenians, 257.
- Transubstantiation* acknowledged by the Greeks, 46. confirmed by Parthenius, 53. when introduced, 62.
- Trent*, a Council held there, 345. another during the Protestant War in Germany, 346. transferr'd to Bologne, ibid. another assembled under Julius the III'd, 348. the last Session of that Council, 353.
- Trinity*, demonstrated from the Nature of all created Beings, 215. N. (d).
- Triple Immersions*, a Proof of the Greeks maintaining the Doctrine of the Trinity, 127.
- Trisagium*, a part of the Grecian Office, 93. a Song of the Angels, 105. an Account of a Miracle wrought at Constantinople, ibid. N. (a).
- Triteite*, its Signification, 105. N. (y).
- Tropaires*, the Signification thereof, 105. N. (z).
- Tunick*, a sacred Vestment of the Greeks, 96. N. (z).
- Turks* shew a Regard for the Grecian Nuns, 75. their Emperor, properly the supreme Head of the Greek Church, 83. deny the Greeks the Use of Bells in their Churches, 94. the Reason of it, 113. N. (b). their Aversion to Sculpture and Painting, ibid. allow of Polygamy, 136.
- Tympaniticks*, what, 131.
- Typicks*, the Signification of the Term, 93. N. (i). and 104. N. (w).
- V.
- Vabre*, his Reflections on the Greek pontifical, 110. his Account of their Administration of the Sacrament to their Sick, 111.
- Valdo*, an Enemy of the Romish Church, 325. the Founder of the Vaudois, 363. his Conversion, ibid. N. (a). charg'd with keeping Wives in common, 371. with the Practice of Magic, 372.
- Vanflel*, his Account of the Christians of Egypt, 219. their Ceremonies at the Administration of the Sacrament, 220. and of Baptism, ibid.
- Vanfleb*, his Description of the Epiphany, 225. the Apparition of Saints, 226. the Exaltation

I N D E X.

- of the Cross, ibid. of their Rouse and Prognosticks, and nuptial Ceremonies, 228.
- Varma*, a Battle fought there, 21. all the Hopes of Paleologus destroyed by means thereof, ibid.
- Vatadius* (Emperor) sends Deputies to the Pope, to bring about a Reconciliation, 14.
- Vaudois*, unite with the Zwinglians and Calvinists, 344. their Religion, 363. called Eusabates, also Valdenses. or Vallenses, ibid. the Progress of their Religion, 364. their Principles, 365. the Church of Rome by them stiled the Scarlet Whore, &c. and their Doctors, Scribes and Pharisees, 366. their Separation from the Romish Church, specified, 369. a Confession of their Faith, 370. their Discipline, 371. their Barbes follow some manual Occupation, 373. their Notion of Dancing, 375. of Drinking, 379. and of Gaming, ibid.
- Ubiquity*, a favourite Doctrine of Luther's, 338. the Canonization of that Tenet accomplish'd, 398.
- Uccus* (John) Patriarch, sends a Confession of Faith to Pope John the XXIst, 16. is deposed, 17.
- Veils*, made use of by the Greeks, 99.
- Venetian-pences*: See Gazettes.
- Venetians* began to favour Lutheranism, 348.
- Veron*, publishes a Treatise called the general Rule of Catholic Faith, 356.
- Vespers*, a Branch of the Grecian Office, 93.
- Viatum*, what, 111. its Antiquity, 428. N. (m).
- Vigil* of the Epiphany, or the Kings, observed by the Greeks as a Festival, 122. they observe but three throughout the Year, ibid.
- Virap*, resorted to by Armenian Pilgrims, 256.
- Viretus* preaches up the new Religion, 433.
- Vitrie*, a Synod held there in 1583. 354.
- Unction* (Extreme) why so called, 36.
- Unction* of the Dead amongst the Greeks, 137.
- Unction* of all the faithful administred by the Grecian Patriarch, or Bishop, 137.
- Unction-stone* near the Holy Sepulchre, a Custom of the Grecian Women performed there, 163.
- University* of Paris, their Appeal against the Concordate, 326. condemn Luther's Tenets, 332. also one Lewis Berkin, who was afterwards burnt, 338. censure several Pieces of Erasmus, ibid. and some Articles drawn up by Father Bernard, ibid.
- University* of Wittenberg protect Luther under his Prosecution, 238. declare themselves in Favour of Luther, 331.
- Universities* of Cologne and Loeuain, condemn Luther and his Writings, 330.
- University* of France censures the Works of Melanchthon, 335.
- Voetius*, endeavours to have Descartes punished, 130. N. (a).
- Vows*, the Manner of performing them, 138.
- Uroncolacs*, evil Genii, 130. different Sorts of them, 132.
- Urban* the IVth (Pope) sends his Nuncios with a Letter to Paleologus, 15.
- Urban* the VIIIth (Pope) sends Missionaries to the Georgians, or Iberians, 173.
- Urn* of Amorgos, looked upon by the Greeks as the Oracle of the Archipelagus, 159.
- Uscan*, Bishop of Uscavanch, is ordered to print the Bible in Armenian, their Manuscript Bibles being very dear, 244. the Churches dependent on the Patriarch of Armenia, 245. an unlimited Power given him to print what Books he thought proper, 247.
- W.
- Waldenses*, Enemies to the Romish Clergy, 325.
- Washing* of Children observed, 128.
- Washing* of Hands, the Allegorical Sense of it, 147.
- Washing* in the River Jordan, a religious Ceremony observed by the Nestorians, 197.
- Waters* of Jordan, their Virtue, 163.
- Wednesday*, a Fast Day throughout the Year, 117. N. (l).
- Westphalus*, his Character, 348. N. (o).
- Weynacle*, the Signification of the Term, 414. N. (z).
- Wheeler*, his Account of the Ceremonies observed by the Greeks, 119.
- Whit-Sunday*, a Festival of the Armenians, 257.
- Whitsun-Monday*, a Day of Abstinence, 117.
- Wicellius*, endeavours at a general Reconciliation, 356.
- Wickliff*, an inveterate Enemy to the Pope, 326.
- Wittenberg*, the Inhabitants abolish Masses, 333. their Confession, 399.
- Wolfgang Schut*, 31 Articles of his condemned, 337. N. (w).
- Wolodimir*, his Baptism and Marriage, 297.
- Worms*, a Diet held there, 345. dissolved and referred to the Convocation at Ratisbon, ibid.
- Women* in some certain Cases not permitted to enter into a Grecian Church, 96.
- Worldly Gain*, its prevailing Power, 44. N. (q).
- X.
- Xaverius*, (St. Francis) his Discovery of some Demi-Christians, 216.
- Xylo Carabes*, his Ambition, 84. N. (b).
- Z.
- Zampi*, his Account of the Mingrelians, 177. of their Baptism, 178. and of their Monks and Nuns, 180.
- Zante*, the Greeks there, though Enemies to the Romish Church, maintain the Doctrine of Transubstantiation, 70.
- Ziska*, the Head of the Taborites, 381.
- Zonnar*, the double Signification of that Term, 173.
- Zurich*, Conferences held there, 335. N. (m). the use of Organs prohibited, 331.
- Zwinglius*, (Ulrick) a zealous Advocate for the Reformation, 329. the Motive that induced him to renounce the Religion of his Forefathers, 330. his Invectives against the Abuse of Indulgencies, ibid. is convinced of the Validity of his Notions by a Dream, 337. an Account of it; ibid. N. (v). opposes the Notion of Luther with respect to the Ubiquity, 338. presents his Confession held at Ausbourg, in favour of the Protestant Switzers, 340. is killed in an Engagement with the Catholick Cantons, 341. his Confession of Faith, ibid.

20. 12

10. 12

10. 12

10. 12

10. 12

THE CEREMONIES
AND RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS
OF THE
VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD.

VOLUME VI.

T H E
C E R E M O N I E S
A N D

R E L I G I O U S C U S T O M S

Warren O F T H E Hastings.

V A R I O U S N A T I O N S o f t h e K N O W N W O R L D .

Together with

H I S T O R I C A L A N N O T A T I O N S ,

And several

C U R I O U S D I S C O U R S E S

Equally Instructive and Entertaining.

V O L . VI, in T W O P A R T S .

PART I. Containing the DOCTRINE and DISCIPLINE of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND, of the PRESBYTERIANS, INDEPENDENTS, ANABAPTISTS, QUAKERS, &c.

PART II. Containing the VARIOUS SECTS of MAHOMETANS, with an APPENDIX of the Lives of MOHAMMED, OMAR, and ALI.

Written originally in FRENCH, and illustrated with a large Number of Folio COPPER
PLATES, all beautifully Designed

By Mr. BERNARD PICART;
And curiously Engraved by most of the BEST HANDS in EUROPE.

Translated into ENGLISH.

L O N D O N :

Printed for CLAUDE DU BOSQ, Engraver at the Golden Head in Charles-Street, Covent-Garden,

M.DCC.XXXVII.

C. Die Bore Sculp

A

DISSERTATION

ON THE

REFORMED EPISCOPAL CHURCH of ENGLAND.

HIS Dissertation will give the Reader a just Idea of the Rise and Progress of the English Reformation; that is, of one of those extraordinary Revolutions, the Beginnings of which appear contemptible, and wholly unconnected with the wonderful Consequences which flowed from them. A Revolution, the chief Agents of which seemed deprived of their Liberty, and were, in some Measure, forced to follow against their own Inclinations the Dictates of an overruling Providence, infinitely superior to the Power of Man: In short a Revolution, the first Author of which, tho' unwilling, and without even foreseeing it, destroyed a Religion of which he had lately been declared the ^a Defender, and which he endeavoured to maintain by Fire and Sword, even in the height of his Rebellion against the Head of the Church, the Vicar of Christ upon Earth. Such was the Behaviour of Henry the VIIIth, a Prince violent and impetuous in his Desires, carried away beyond all Bounds by his Passions, despotick in his Undertakings, yet wavering and unsettled in his Principles. The many Irregularities he was guilty of, in the deplorable Schism he began, gave the World just Grounds to think he rather followed the unruly Motions of a fiery Temper, than the Direction of a Zeal^b according to Knowledge, for the Good of his Religion.

^a Leo the Xth gave him that Title to reward his Zeal for the Catholick Church, which made him write against Luther. If we believe Burnet in his Preface to the History of the English Reformation, Henry was so vain as to think the Holy Ghost inspired him in the Composition of that Book.

THIS famous Schism, or, to use softer Words and less offensive to Protestant Ears, this eminent Reformation has been an irreparable Loss to the Catholick Church; but let it be said without any Offence to the said Church, that it has been followed by a Freedom of thinking which has and daily does spread its Beams through all Parts of Learning in Europe. It took its Rise from a Scruple of Henry VIII concerning his Marriage with Catharine of Arragon, Widow of Prince Arthur, Henry's Brother. 'Tis needless to examine here whether this Scruple was well grounded or not: Certain it is that this King's violent Passion for Anne Bullen either raised or^c renewed this Scruple: Tho' some pretend that Cardinal Wolsey^d being discontented, persuaded the King that his Marriage was null. However that be, they had recourse to Rome for a Divorce; but to prepare Matters the Bishops of England were first consulted, Ways and Means sought, to secure the Pope's Authority in that nice Point. The Bull of Dispensation for Henry's Marriage was soon found to have been surreptitiously obtained; this Discovery was looked upon as the best way to screen the Pope's Infallibility: Since, by the Canon-Law, if by any false Representation of Facts, or deceitful Pretence the Pope is imposed upon, and Bulls obtained, such Decrees may be reversed without infringing the Pope's Infallibility. Such are the Shifts found out to clear his Holiness from the Defects and Mistakes which are contained in several Bulls, and have startled the timorous Consciences of the Faithful^e.

THESE Measures being taken, Pope Clement the VIIth was applied to, and he granted at first what his politick Views and the ill State of his Affairs required of him. In the first Ages of Christianity plain Sincerity decided all doubtful Cases, no Cunning, no Delays, no Restrictions were made use of: But Christianity was then like Man in his Infancy; and like him, growing in Strength and Experience, has also acquired Cunning and Deceit: By an invincible Strength and a Divine Courage it overcame both Infidels and Hereticks; even the Faithful and Orthodox were kept in Awe. But, beware of Mistakes, Christianity in its Vigour, which one may call its Manhood, proved also subject to human Passions. Policy got the better of Religion; eloquent, subtle, and deceitful Men governed the Religion of the rest, and artfully taught them to serve God, so as to reap the Honour and Profit themselves, and recommended as so many Acts of Piety, what turned chiefly to their Advantage. But ^b Henry had till then been very obsequious to the Popes, and submissive to their Decisions; yet he did not want Learning, having studied very well considering the Time he lived in: And Father Orleans's Hist. of Revol. of Engl. Lib. VIII. says, every one observed in him more Knowledge than is common to those of his Rank even after a Course of Studies.

^c Burnet and other Protestant Historians pretend this Scruple began in the Life time of Henry the VIIth, notwithstanding Julius the II^d his Dispensation, which should have quieted their Consciences. But other Authors give a different Account of this Matter. See Father Orleans above cited, where he asserts Henry's Aversion for Catharine of Arragon to have been the Cause of it.

^d Father Orleans gives a bad Character of Wolsey upon this Account.

^e Witnests the Abuses concerning Indulgences. See what Thiers relates in his Treatise of the Superstitions which have crept into the Administration of the Sacraments.

^f Charles the Vth kept him in Prison, yet Knight who was sent to Rome about the Divorce found means to let him know his Commission; to which the Pope gave a favourable Answer. When out of Prison, he endeavoured to draw out the Affair to some Length, but granted a Dispensation for the Divorce, tho' encumbered with many Restrictions which may be seen in the Historians.

to come back to the Divorce after this short Digression. That Affair seemed at first to take a favourable Turn to the King's Designs, when all on a sudden, after many affected Delays and Subtilties, many ^e Objections, which Fear and Cunning suggested, Clement openly slighted England, and declared for the Emperor^h, who was then absolute Master of Italy. We must own also that the Pope was intimidated by Charles the Vth's Threats, and became very irresolute and wavering in his Designs, promising sometimes they say even upon Oath what was required of him, yet never fulfilling his Engagements, if they in the least endangered his Authority: So true it is that Duty often gives way to Politicks, and that Apostolical Plain-dealing and Singleness of Heart are not Virtues always inherent to their Successors!

THIS Conduct of the Pope was very displeasing to the King, who began to despair of Success with his Holiness, and therefore resolved to have the Cause of his Divorce heard before the Legates Campegius and Wolsey: But the Pope over partial to the Emperor followed the Motions of his Fright and Self-Interest, recalled the Power he had given to his Legates, ordered the Cause of Henry the VIIIth to be judged at Rome, and cited the King and Queen Catharine to appear there before him. Then it was that Anne Bullen was sent for again to Court, from which she had been removed during the Prosecution of the Divorce before the Legates. Cranmer also, who proved afterwards one of the chief Promoters of the English Reformation, began at that time to be known, by the Expedient he found out, which was to consult the Learned and the Universities of Europe about the Divorce. This Fetch proved favourable to Henry. Some Catholick Authors affirm that English Angels (a Piece of Money of those Times) procured many Votes for his Causeⁱ. The German Reformers, says Burnet^k, “declared against him as to the Fact, tho’ they had voted in his “Favour as to the Right . . . because they acted with such an Integrity, Honesty, and “conscientious Plain-dealing, as was not far short of the Apostolical Age.” These Consultations being over, Henry renewed his Treaty with the Court of Rome. A Letter was written to the Pope by his Order in the strongest Terms, to let his Holiness know, that “unless a satisfactory Answer was immediately obtained, the King would “seek a Remedy elsewhere; yet promising not to come to Extremities, as long as “he could entertain any hopes that the Pope would do him Justice.” Clement's Answer did not please; Henry forbid his Subjects to obtain or receive from Rome any Orders contrary to his Authority. Some Writings were also made publick in Favour of the Divorce: But we must refer our Readers to the Historians of both Parties, or to what Burnet^l has mentioned concerning the Reasons alledged for or against it.

THE King laid before the Parliament the Writings and Decisions which were favourable to him. Then he had recourse to the Convocation of the Clergy, which declared his Marriage with Catharine was null, and the Dispensation granted by Julius the II^d of no Force. From that Time the Pope's Authority declined in England:

^e The chief, which began the Breach, was the Refusal to shew the Bull of Dispensation to the King's Council; Campegius the Pope's Legate had Orders not to deliver it, but to burn it as soon as the King and Wolsey should have seen it. This Order was occasioned by the Pope's Negotiations with the Emperor.

^h Rapin in his History of England Lib. XV. says, That Francis the Ist not sending timely Succours to Lautrec, his General in Italy, was the Occasion of this Turn in the Affair of the Divorce, because for want of this Help the Pope was obliged to come over to the Emperor. A noble Field for Reflexions on the narrow Views of Politicians.

ⁱ According to Rapin, the English Universities were brought over with much Difficulty, fearing the Consequences of the Divorce, viz. the Increase of Lutheranism, and the Promotion of Cranmer who was a Lutheran, a Name then given to all Hereticks. Catholicks say the Doctors Votes were obtained by secret Practices, Threats, ill Treatments, and Bribes.

^k Hist. of Reform. Lib. II.

^l See Burnet in the same Place.

The Clergy of the Province of Canterbury paved the Way by acknowledging the King as supreme Head and Protector of the Church and Church-men of England. Not long after the Parliament took off the Annates, (an odious Tribute, levied with the utmost Rigour upon all Church-Livings, to which the Court of Rome would grant no Letters of Provision, till it was fully paid) declaring at the same time, that if the Pope, for want of this Payment, should refuse his Bulls to those who should be named to Bishopricks or Archbishopricks, “ then and in such Case the Bishops should “ be consecrated by an Archbishop, and the latter by two Bishops, whom the King “ should chuse, and such a Consecration be deemed as valid as if the Pope had ordered it.” The same Parliament allowed to the Pope one twentieth of the first Year’s Income of Benefices, with a Proviso, “ that all Censures or Excommunications “ thundered out by the Court of Rome against the King or his Subjects, should be “ looked upon as null, not put in Execution, or any regard paid to them, but Ecclesiastical Functions and Divine Service performed notwithstanding, both in publick and private.”

WE shall omit several particular Facts, which were the Fore-runners of more glaring Attempts against the Papal Power, such as some Letters which passed between the Pope and the King; this Prince’s being cited to appear at Rome, and his Refusal of sending even an Attorney to represent him; Cranmer’s^m Promotion to the See of Canterbury, &c. In February 1533 Appeals to Rome were forbid: Cranmer’ⁿ declared null the King’s Marriage with Catharine of Arragon, and confirmed that which he had contracted with Anne Bullen, who was accordingly crowned Queen a few Days after. So ended that Affair which broke the close Union of so many Ages standing betwixt England and Rome. This Decision was, at least to outward Appearance, grounded on Motives of Conscience and Religion, which the Promoters of the Reformation often employed since with Success. The Pope condemned all these Proceedings, annulled the Archbishop’s Sentence, threatened the King himself with Excommunication, but allowed him Time^p to repent: Instead of which Henry appealed from this Decree of the Court of Rome to a General Council lawfully assembled: Notwithstanding all this publick and open Defiance, there were still some Hopes of a Reconciliation, grounded on the King of England’s wavering Notions and changeable Temper^q. France offered its Mediation betwixt the Pope and King. Henry himself seemed inclined to refer it to the Judgment of the Cardinals, upon Condition that those of the Imperial Faction should be excluded from the Consistory. The Pope on the other Side was disposed to favour Henry. In a word all tended to a Coalition; but the Emperor’s Party diving into the Secret broke all their Measures^r. The Austrian Cardinals urged and encouraged the Pope so far, that he too hastily published that fatal Decree, which confirmed Henry’s Marriage with Catharine, under the Penalty of incurring all the Censures of the Church, unless he conformed to it.

^m The Pope granted the Bulls required in Favour of this Archbishop, concealing his Grief for that Promotion; Cranmer was closely united to the Lutherans, he had furnished the King with Weapons against Rome, and seemed inclined to the Reformation. He was consecrated in March 1533. His Bulls, says Burnet, were the last seen in England.

ⁿ In May 1533.

^o Henry married Anne Bullen at Calais; Roland Lee a Priest performed the Ceremony, being deceived as Catholick Historians relate it by the King’s telling him, “ he had gained his Cause at last, and that the Pope “ had both declared his Marriage with Catharine null, and given him leave to take another Wife, &c.” See the Continuation of Fleury’s History, Vol. XXVII. p. 298.

^p Till September.

^q So Burnet says.

^r Father Orleans says, as cited before, that both Parties were in a favourable Disposition, at least to go on in the Law-suit, if the Imperial Cardinals had not hurried Matters.

This

Reformed CHURCH of ENGLAND. 5

This happened but two Days [†] before the Arrival of a Messenger, who brought with him Henry's Submission obtained by the Mediation of France.

HERE we may, after Burnet's Example, fix the memorable Epocha of the Down-fal of the Pope's Authority in England. Henry finding himself deceived by the Court Rome lost all Regard, and Respect for it; the exorbitant Power of that Court had been very much shaken for some Years by repeated Contests with, or Disputes about it, which made it easier for him to abolish it. In March 1534 England freed itself from the Obedience so long paid to the Holy See, and from that Submission which the Pope required more like an absolute Master from Slaves, than a tender Father from Children. The Church must have a Head, but his Power ought not to be unbounded or despotick, had this Authority been kept within its own Sphere, had it not been often exerted against the known Rules of Gospel Morality, had the common Father of the Faithful given good Example, seasoned his Instructions with Mildness and Compassion towards his Children, instead of punishing their smallest Faults with Fire and Sword, Racking-wheels, and Gibbets; Luther and Calvin would never have found Followers to disturb the Peace of the Church, the Low-Countries would be still subject to it, Henry would not have made a Schism, and the remaining Catholicks would not so often withstand their common Father's Orders, with as much Stubbornness as those who are entirely revolted from him. The Parliament had no sooner resolved to disown the Pope's Authority, any further than that of a private Bishop restrained within the Limits of his own Diocese, and openly declared against his universal Jurisdiction, but Divines wrote on that Subject, and endeavoured to convince the People of the Truth of, and Benefit arising from, this new broached Opinion: Even their Sermons were chiefly employed in exclaiming against the Pope, in representing his Authority as a downright Tyranny; from the heavy Yoke of which, England was at last happily delivered. This Doctrine found easy Access in a Nation always jealous of its Liberty [†] and Property. Add to this the wonderful Authority and persuasive Power of a Preacher who from a Pulpit thunders out in Favour of Liberty, and pretends that what he maintains is agreeable to, what he attacks is expressly against, the infallible Word of God. This Act of Parliament against the Pope and in Favour of the King being passed, the Clergy submitted and owned that the Power of convening them was lodged in the Sovereign, the Ecclesiastical Laws were narrowly looked into, and Hereticks enjoy'd the Privilege granted in England to other Criminals, viz. of being heard in their own Defence, and even being set at Liberty upon Bail, &c.

THE Affair of Elizabeth Barton, which happened much about that Time, was very prejudicial to the Catholick Religion, and made the Clergy still more odious. She was a Nun in Kent, and is commonly known by the Name of the Maid of Kent. Tho' we should not give Credit to the whole History of her pretended Extasies, as related by Protestant Authors, still it plainly appears she was a Cheat, and guilty in the Sight of God and Men. She was, they say, afflicted with Vapours to a high Degree, this Distemper some crafty Monks improv'd to their own Advantage, and pretended she was inspired; her most foolish Words and Actions were cried up as heavenly Revelations, and they helped her to counterfeit the Spirit of Prophecy.

[†] The Messenger had been stop't by the overflowing of Waters. Such Events are above all human Foresight, and generally looked upon Miracles by those who gain their Ends by them.

[†] The new Act of Parliament was an Ease to the People, abolished the buying and selling of Indulgences, &c.

The Fraud went on successfully for some Time, at last it was discovered, and proved very detrimental both to the Nun and to the Monks; who have had the Misfortune to be often accused of such Male Practices. But they are not the only Persons guilty of those Enormities.—We have seen such Tricks play'd " over again in our own Days, and it must be owned, that People who are diffident of the Justice and Strength of their Cause, are apt to endeavour to support it by unlawful Means; which generally raise the Publick's Indignation, and if the People are inclined to a Revolution, make them absolutely resolve upon it. We shall not entertain our Readers with the Clergy's Oppositions to the new Religion, the Disputes which soured the Minds more and more, the burning by the King's Order, or at least with his Connivance, both Books containing, and Authors and Followers maintaining, the new Doctrine. Henry had been told, that the best Way of justifying his Conduct towards Rome, was to shew a great Zeal in Favour of the old Religion; and moreover, 'tis certain, that Prince had not left the other Doctrines of the Catholick Church, when he renounced the Pope's Power. Nevertheless, the reading the Scripture in the Vulgar Tongue having been allow'd, in Spight of all the Oppositions made against that Grant by the Monks and Clergy, the new Religion spread itself throughout the whole Kingdom, with an incredible Swiftnefs; because every one made it his Business to compare the Conduct of Christ's Vicar, with the Morals preached and practised by Christ; the Doctrine of Scripture, with the Actions of the Monks and Ecclesiasticks of those Times. The Reading of the sacred Books being allowed to every one, every one undertook to search into it, and to explain it his own Way. They earnestly looked for the Condemnation of those Doctrines they were resolved to abandon; whatever was not found expressly mentioned in Scripture, was condemned as erroneous: So that Tradition was rejected, with most of the Councils and the Decretals. Thus Henry the VIIIth, led on by Men, who to the pure Word of God join'd much human Policy, and knew how to use all worldly Craft in Fishing of Men", made daily Advances towards a Reformation, no ways intended by him in his Divorce from Queen Catharine.

In the Year 1536, the Convocation of the English Clergy drew up Articles of Religion, which were examined and amended by the King himself, as Head of his Church. This was but a first Draught of the Reformation, which the new Gospel Workmen brought on Step by Step as they could get Ground; they were already bent upon a total Separation from the Catholics, but were forc'd to give Way to the King's Religion: And tho' in many Occasions they may not have followed exactly the Pattern of plain Dealing set them by Christ, tho' several other Defects which we shall pass * over in silence, may have been evident Proofs that their Mission was not from God; it must be confessed at least, that they made a skilful Use of the Situation in which they found Henry, who by overthrowing the Pope's Authority in his Kingdom, did not or would not foresee that he must soon or late act against the solemn Protestation he then made of maintaining Catholick Religion in its full Force and Extent †. Here are some Proofs of what we now advance.

" Not to mention the carnal Quietism of C. every one remembers the French Prophets both in London and in the Cevennes. But of this more hereafter.

* This alludes to Christ's Words to St. Peter and other Apostles.

† See Boffet's History of the Variations of Protestant Churches, Lib. 7.

† Burnet's History of Reform. Lib. 3. relates the various Judgments on those Articles, and on Henry's Situation.

HENRY had appealed from the Pope to a General Council: But who could call it? Was it the Pope? His Authority was disowned in several States of Christendom: And he was Henry's adverse Party. Could so necessary a Meeting be brought about by a general Consent of the whole Church, or of all Christian Princes? The Church was divided, different Parties formed, some were engaged on one Side, some on the other. Kings and Princes took Advantage of the State of Affairs, their Interests were changed; and those Powers which had espoused the new Opinions, thought it absolutely necessary to pull down Popery: Not so much with an Intent to conform to the new System, as out of the political Views which prevailed in the sixteenth Century. Therefore the Appeal to a General Council was eluded in the following Manner. The Clergy declared against the Assembly at Mantua, which was a kind of Preliminary to the Council of Trent, they exclaimed against General Councils as useless and subject to great Inconveniences, and raised such Objections, as were not to be overcome in that Conjunction² of Time. Both Interest and Policy brought on the Dissolution of³ Monasteries: To palliate the Matter, the Disorders of the Monks and Nuns were exposed to publick View, and magnified beyond Measure. This was a plausible Pretence, and it must be owned, that for some Ages before, very few had been exempt from them. To engage the Nobility, and render those Innovations agreeable to it, the Abby Lands were sold at a low Price; and to quiet the People, chiefly the poorer Sort, who were maintained by the charitable Contributions of the Abbots and their Monks, the Purchasers of those Lands were ordered to continue those Alms, and keep up Hospitality. The Dissolution did not become universal till the Year 1539. Whoever is apprised of the blind Obedience which the Monks pay to the Orders of Rome, must be sensible that this Suppression was a necessary Consequence of disowning the Pope's Supremacy. This was followed by new Regulations about Religion, which, says Burnet, " Was the first publick Act of Henry's Supremacy, who till then had always consulted the Clergy " of his Kingdom." But now by his single Authority, he commanded all Priests who had the Care of Souls committed to their Charge, to declare to the People, every Sunday, during three Months from the Publication of this Order, and afterwards twice in every quarter of a Year, that the Pope's Authority was null, abusive, and no ways grounded upon the Word of God, &c. By this same Decree several Holydays were suppressed as unprofitable, the Honour paid to Relicks, Images and Pilgrimages were discountenanced and forbid as superstitious; Alms only, and the keeping of God's Commandments were enjoined. Priests were earnestly exhorted to teach the People to say the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, the Decalogue, &c. in the Vulgar Tongue; to reside in their Diocess or Parish; to comply carefully with all the Duties of true Pastors; to administer the Sacraments with due Reverence; to lead regular Lives; to abstain from going to Taverns, &c. and to share their Income with the Poor. These Regulations occasioned some Tumults, raised and fomented by Priests and Monks, who disliked this Reformation prescribed to them. Henry suppressed them with Ease, and having no further Occasion to shew any Regard to the Priests and others who adhered to the old Religion, and could do no more than fear and hate him, he went on in the Execution of his Projects. He insisted on a Compliance with his Reformation, and pursued it with fresh Vigour, in order to crush all those who maintained the Pope's Authority, who were now become his most inveterate and irreconcilable Enemies. This occasioned the total Suppression of Monasteries, in which, 'tis said, a Discovery was made of an infinite Number of Frauds committed in the Honour paid to Relicks and Images. They mention amongst others, a Crucifix at Bexley, which was called the Statue of Grace. It bent, or raised, or lowered itself, could shake its Head, roll and turn its Eyes or knit its Brows, according to the various Sentiments it was to express. The sly Monks had cunningly contrived in their Cells, the different Springs which were to put in Motion the wonderful Crucifix. This pious Fraud, or rather detestable Contrivance, not only edified some English Bigots, but what was chiefly aimed at, enriched the Monastery. At last a Bishop of the new Stamp found out the Mechanism by which those pretended Miracles were wrought. The Monks of Hales were also discovered in such another, tho' far less ingenious piece of Villany; they kept some Duck's Blood, which they pretended was some of Christ's precious Blood, in a Glass Viol, one Side of which was very thick and not transparent, the other thin and very clear. When any Bigot was to be cheated out of his Money, the thick Side was shewn to him, and he was told the Blood was invisible by reason of his Sins: Fright, and an earnest Desire of seeing the Blood, made him soon redeem his Sins by large Alms to the Convent. We should find much fewer Miracles recorded, had all their secret Springs and Frauds been found out; and the legend Writers might have spared three Parts in four of their voluminous Works, if they had mentioned none of those Tricks as true Miracles, and even added some groundless Fictions of their own; but thank God, neither Christianity nor Catholick Religion, inforces an implicit Faith to legendary Authors. A serious Consideration of all these religious Quackeries oblige us to say with Cicero, Is it possible a South-sayer^b can look at another without laughing? And indeed, how can one Man, who gravely pretends to preach up as pious Practices, what he himself knows to be useless and superstitious; help laughing at another whom he finds guilty of the same Cheat, and recommending other Practices as useless as those he himself extolled. Such Discoveries soon brought Relicks and Images into Contempt. They burnt the Body of that holy Prelate Thomas Becket, Archbishop of Canterbury, who had maintained with so much Zeal, the Privilege claimed by the Popes of governing Kings and Emperors. The Festival and Office of that Martyr for the Pope's Supremacy, was forbid^c to be kept or said: His rich Shrine was beat to Pieces, and his Altars demolished^d. Henry omitted^e no Affronts he could offer to the Memory of that Saint, and vented upon his Ashes the implacable Hatred he had conceived against the Pope.

² These Objections may be seen in Burnet's Hist. of Ref. Lib. 3. A Passage of St. Greg. Naz. against Councils is there cited. Protestants cite the Fathers, when to their Purpose, Catholics do the same against Protestants. Human Frailties are of all Parties.

³ Rapin Thoiras, Lib. 15. says, that " Hope of Gain by their Spoils made Henry push on that Affair " with the utmost Eagerness And that his Design was easily guess'd at by his employing Cromwell, " who was a declared Enemy to the Monks." Had this been a Work truly Evangelical, the Agents should have been Men animated with the Love of Truth, not with a Desire of Revenge.

THIS Behaviour of the King of England rendered him daily more odious to the Court of Rome. He was accused of declaring open War against God and his Saints;

^b Cic. L. 1. de Natura Deorum. Miror quod non rideat bauruspex, cum bauruspitem viderit. I might have put another Word more adapted to Christianity, but I leave it to each Party to put in what Word they like best.

^c Bessuet, L. 7. Hist. of Var. gives an ingenious Parallel betwixt that Saint and Thomas Cranmer; the impartial Catholics and Protestants may examine it.

^d Chevr. who in 1730, printed at Amsterdam a Chronological Compendium of English History, which to his great Loss, was oftener met with in Grocer's Shops, than in the Libraries of the learned, says, that "St. Thomas Becket's Disgrace was a Consequence of the Downfal of that Authority, which having sealed "with his Blood, he obtained the Crown of Martyrdom, and all the Glories of Heaven."

^e Henry was so foolish as to cite that Saint before his Tribunal, and there try and condemn him for High Treason.

he was compared to the most wicked Princes of Antiquity. At last the Pope thundered out against him the dreadful Sentence of Deposition, declaring his Subjects free from their Oath of Allegiance, &c. But these Thunders of the Vatican only irritated Henry the more against the Pope: He required of the English Bishops a new Declaration against him, as a Tyrant and an Usurper of the Kingly Power in Temporals: He gave a general Leave to read the Scripture, and ordered Bibles to be placed in all Churches, and that the Priests should exhort their Parishioners to read them; and to conform their Lives to the divine Precepts therein contained. Pilgrimages, Relicks, Images, saying Beads and the Rosary, &c. were also enveigh'd against as useles and superstitious Customs. Cromwell had a new Dignity conferred upon him; which placed him at the Head of the Reformation ^f. He ordered Images to be pulled down, and forbad to honour them with lighted Tapers or Candles. But this was allowed before the blessed Eucharist or a Crucifix. Parish Priests had also Orders given them, to leave out the Ora pro nobis, or, Pray for us, as Burnet expresses it, which brought on a Disuse and Contempt of calling upon the Saints for their Intercession ^g. Yet Henry persecuted other Hereticks, and chiefly the Sacramentarians; whom he hated.

In 1539, or 1540, six new Articles of Religion, very opposite ^h to the Reformation, were proposed and passed into an Act of Parliament, with Henry's Approbation. They are known in the English History by the Name of A Statute to prevent Diversity of Opinions on certain Articles of the Christian Religion. By this Law, which was intended, as is said in the Preamble, to re-establish Union, and prevent the evil Consequences of Division, it was enjoined to believe and to teach, 1. That after the Consecration of the Bread and Wine, no Part of the Substance of this Bread and Wine remains in the Sacrament, but only the Body and Blood of Christ, under those Appearances.

2. THAT Scripture does not enjoin receiving the Communion under both Kinds; as absolutely necessary, and that one might be saved without believing it, since the Body and Blood of Christ are both under each Kind.

3. THAT the Law of God did not allow those to marry, who had been ordain'd Priests.

4. THAT the same Law obliged those who had vowed Chastity to keep it.

5. THAT the Use of private Masses should be observed, it being grounded upon Scripture, &c.

6. THAT Confession should be kept up in the Church as useful and necessary; yet without believing it ⁱ to be of absolute Necessity. All those who should impugn those Articles, chiefly the first, were condemned to Death, Loss of Goods, &c. And great Care was taken to have them punctually comply'd with. This Law terrify'd for some time ^k those who were for carrying on the Reformation, and inspired the Roman Catholicks with new Courage, but it neither hindered the first from making daily Progress, nor the last from frequent Disappointments: The Dissolution of ^f That of Vicar General and Vicegerent. Burnet, Lib. 3.

^g Burnet, ibid.

^h That is opposite to the Reformation which followed, for what had been done already; and those very Articles, were a kind of Reformation. See what Bossuet says of them, Lib. 7. Hist. Var. This Act of Parliament, says Rapin, Lib. 15. was called the Bloody Statute; it had been contrived by Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, but Henry's true Motive was "to make all his Subjects dependent on him, none being exempt from troublesome Enquiries; so, says Rapin, the Pope's Party, and that of the Reformers, were "at his Beck." What was this, but to claim Infallibility, and make himself Pope of England?

ⁱ See Burnet, in his Additions.

^k Henry lost by it the good Graces of the German Protestants, id. ibid.

Abbies and Monasteries went on, the Lands belonging to them were sold, the Order of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem was suppressed in the Year 1540, and Leave was given, or rather renewed, to every particular Person to read the Bible. From all which it appears, that the Reformers did not lose much Ground: But the Death of *Cromwell*¹, who had warmly espoused their Cause, was an irreparable Loss to them. Cranmer was the only Support of the Reformation, against Gardiner, who protected the Catholics, and had Cunning enough to set in a proper Light the Inconstancy of the King, who favoured both the Catholics and Protestants by Turns, and whose former Steadiness was chiefly attributed to Cromwell's superior Genius.

In the Year 1542, we find evident Proofs of the Bible being read in all ^m Churches, and some Time after the Roman ⁿ Catholics endeavoured to cry it down, under Pretence, that it was falsify'd in the Translation. We must also take Notice of a Pastoral Instruction set forth by Bishop Bonner, towards the latter End of 1542, or Beginning of 1543. It earnestly recommended to Priests and Churchmen the reading of Scripture, and contained several Points of Discipline of very great Importance, concerning the Instructions to be given to the People, Education of Children, edifying Lives of Priests, and a Decency of Behaviour in religious Ceremonies, either of old standing, or newly established; but chiefly about Sermons, and a bad Custom which had crept in of representing ludicrous Farces or Plays in the Churches. Strange and almost innumerable Abuses were daily committed in their Manner of Preaching, in which it is very difficult to determine, whether Ignorance, Superstition, or a bad Taste, prevailed most in the Age we mention and some of the precedent. Commonly they were but so many ridiculous Representations ^o of the Incarnation, Birth, and Passion of Christ, and other Passages of his Life, contrived, according to all Appearance, rather to procure a clownish Recreation for our Ancestors ^p, than to imprint in their Minds the heavenly Truths of the Gospel. But the Plays which Bonner condemned in his Pastoral Instruction were of another Kind. Burnet assures us, “ that, “ at the Beginning of the Reformation, there was a Design set on foot, to represent in a ludicrous Manner the loose and disorderly Lives of the Monks and “ Priests who followed the old Religion. These Writings were in Prose, “ somewhat like Ballads The Action of the Players was as bad as the Subject When the Vices of Monks and Disorders of Convents had sufficiently “ entertained the Publick; some of the superstitious Ceremonies of the old Religion were brought upon the Stage, and this Show pleased the common People, who, “ remembering the bad Lives of, and cruel Usage they had received from some “ Churchmen, diverted themselves at their Cost, and were delighted to see their Su-

¹ He had been Henry's Vicegerent. His Death, says Burnet, was a great Remora to the Progress of the Reformation. Yet he died a Catholic, and owned upon the Scaffold, that he had been seduced. Nevertheless Burnet pretends, he died out of the Communion of Rome; because, says he, at that Time the Word Catholic was a distinguishing Mark for those who disliked the Innovations of the Court of Rome. But how can that agree with the said Recantation?

ⁿ See Burnet, as above cited.

^o We desire that no body should take Offence at this Distinction; 'tis employ'd only for Clearness sake, because the Church of England calls itself Catholic also.

^p The Authors of the History of the French Stage, p. xi. and xvi. of their Pref. of the Amsterdam Edition in 1735, refuse the Name of Comedy to those Poetical Dialogues on the Mysteries of Religion, which were publicly spoken upon a Stage by a Company of Bigots of those Days, who called themselves Brethren of the Passion. But since they own them to be Dramatick Poems, we can find no Difference between them and other Comedies, except the want of Unity of Action, and their being divided into different Days, by which they become so many Comedies, instead of being only one. Let the Readers be Judges.

^r And to make them shed Tears from the Bottom of their Hearts; if we give Credit to the same Authors, p. xx. who pretend, that the ludicrous Episodes which accompanied those venerable Mysteries did not interrupt, but rather encrease, Devotion: If the comical Speeches of the Devils caused Laughter, the Punishments of the Wicked terrify'd the Spectators.

“ perstition

“ perſtition turned to publick Ridicule The Clergy [†] on t’other Side exclaim“ ed againſt this Practice, as paving the Way to Impiety and Atheiſm The “ wiſeſt Reformers condemned it alſo, as not conformable to the true Spirit “ of the Chriſtian Religion. As for the Politicians, they encouraged it with all “ their Might” And to be ſure theſe laſt, joined to Women, Children, the Mobility and indiſcreet Bigots, made up a powerful Body. Burnet takes Notice likewise of the Defects with which Sermons were accompanied in England, and indeed they were common to all other Countries. “ Before the Reformation, ſays “ he, few Sermons were preached, except in Lent. The Diſcourſes pronounced on “ Holydays were Panegyricks, rather than inſtructive But in Lent, the Mendi“ cant Fryers put themſelves forward in that Time of Faſting and Abſtinence, em“ ploy’d all their Eloquence to make Impreſſions on their Hearers; they ſpoke with “ a good deal of Vehemence, but with as much Affectation . . . wholly bent “ upon extolling ſome Church Ordinance and drawing to their reſpective “ Convents the Alms and Offerings of the People Indulgences and Pilgrimages “ were highly commended, and the Shrines and Relicks of Saints magnificently “ adorned. But little or no Care was taken, to repreſent in all its Beauty the “ Excellency of Holineſs So many Fables and human Inventions were inter“ mixed with the Truths of our Holy Religion, that thoſe Inſtructions became a “ meer Jeſt and a ridiculous Farce.” The firſt Engliſh Reformers endeavoured to remedy thoſe Defects, and to inſtil into the Minds of the faithful a true Knowledge of the Principles and Grounds of Chriſtianity. They ſent Preachers of their own to all Parts of the Kingdom, without fixing their Reſidence at any particular Church.
 “ They went (ſays Burnet) and inſtructed the People, ſometimes in one Place, ſome“ times in another; being authorized ſo to do by the King’s Permiſſion But “ as Party Differences about the Points to be believed ran very high the King “ pitched upon two Expedients to remedy this Evil. 1. He commanded that no “ Eccleſiaſtick ſhould preach without his Licence, or that of the Ordinary of the “ Dioceſs. 2. He cauſed a Book of Homilies to be printed, in which, the Epistles “ and Gospels of every Sunday and Holiday were contained, and explained. This “ was a Paraphraſe of thoſe Parts of Scripture in which the moſt neceſſary “ Inſtructions for the good Conduct of our Lives are delivered: Various Exhorta“ tions, and ſhort Explanations of the moſt common Difficulties were added to
 “ it as were alſo ſome ſet Diſcourſes for particular Occaſions, as Weddings, “ Chriſtenings, and Burials, &c. all which were read at proper Times by “ Priests who had not Power to preach. But as even thoſe who were licensed “ often ran into, and were ſoon accused of ſcandalous Heats and Paſſions the “ King tired with the many Complaints daily made to him againſt both Par“ ties, ordered that all Sermons ſhould be written and read. This gave Riſe to “ the Cuſtom ſtill generally followed in England, of the Preacher’s reading their Com-“ poſitions.” Burnet highly commends that Practice, and it muſt be owned, that it is very advantageous on ſeveral Accounts. The Diſcourſes which are intended to be read in Churches, and which we call Lectures, are more ſolid and elaborate, as to ſound Judgment, Strength of Reaſoning, and Purity of Style, than ordinary Sermons; as may evidently be ſeen in Tillotſon’s and Clark’s, &c. Performances:
 But they are often apt to ſoar above the Reach of the common People’s Underſtand-[†] Catholick Clergy: For the Proteſtants were certainly of another Mind.

ing, even of those, who tho' they have had a more liberal Education, yet have not a natural Capacity to follow the Thread of a long Argument, and are not used to judge of its Strength. Eloquence on the contrary adapts itself to all Capacities, and makes Impression on the Ignorant as well as on the Learned : Its nicest Art is not incompatible with Christian Simplicity, its Figures being drawn from Nature, and well applied, soften the most obdurate Consciences, and bring them back to the Knowledge and Practice of religious Duties. Thus the Prophets and Apostles made Use of them as Occasion served; and the only and chief Aim of true Eloquence, is to instruct, persuade and reform. If some, not to say most Preachers, employ it to evil Purposes, such as raising Disputes, bitter and injurious Reproaches, sharp Invectives against their Adversaries, false and unconvulsive Arguments, endeavouring from a particular Instance to render the generality of such and such Christian Communion odious; this is downright Sophistry, and the very reverse of the Pattern, set to them by the Apostles and Prophets, who never made Use of Eloquence, but in order to bring their Hearers to the Knowledge of Truth.

THE War of 1542, between the Scots and English, and the Victory obtained by the latter, occasioned some Beginning of a Reformation^r in Scotland: The Scots Prisoners, when in England, took Notice of the Changes which the King had brought about both in Religion and in the Clergy: They approved of them, as we are told, and carried back into their Country some Notions and Seeds of the new Doctrine. About the same Time the Parliament of England made an Act in favour of the true Religion^s, and to abolish that which was contrary to it; and approved the Law concerning the abovementioned six Articles. This Law was a kind of Profession of Faith, which was then looked upon as conformable to the Doctrine of the Apostles: But we shall find by what follow'd, that it was not long in Fashion. The Preamble of this Act complained, that Differences about Religion encouraged some seditious Persons to wrest the Sense of Scripture^t, to alter it in Sermons^u and in Books, to prophane it in their Plays^w and Songs; in order to remedy those Abuses, 'twas thought necessary to draw up a Formulary of Faith, conformable to the Doctrine of the Apostles. To this End, a Translation of the Bible, made by Tindal, was forbid, and condemn'd as false, pernicious and erroneous. All Books likewise which contained any Tenet contrary to the six Articles published in 1540, were prohibited, and whoever kept them was liable to Fines and Imprisonment: But other Translations were allowed, yet, says Burnet, without Notes or Prefaces. The King's Orders were confirmed, as were also the Catechisms and Books of Instruction, which had been printed in England before the Year 1540. Moreover the Parliament forbid the Printing any Book about Religion without Licence, and the explaining Scripture Passages in Plays and expounding the Bible publickly, without the King's, or the Ord^r See more of this hereafter.

^s Meaning the Religion of the then governing Party.

^t This Abuse was occasioned by People of all Ages and Conditions, and we might say of both Sexes, who pretended to preach, and being guided only by a blind Zeal, without any other Knowledge, expounded the Scripture each of them according to their own Fancies, yet thought they preached like Apostles, tho' their only Eloquence consisted in exclaiming against Rome and the Pope, under the injurious Characters of Antichrist and Babylon. Then indeed they never wanted Words or Reasons; and the French Reformers of those Times were endow'd with the same wonderful Facility of speaking.

^u The Books were like the Sermons, the Authors, though ignorant, pretended to be Judges of Religion, and the Bitterness of their Zeal shew'd itself in the very Title Pages of their Books; such as A Shrine for the Roman Beast, and the Downfall of Popish Idolatry, &c.

^w Several such Songs are still to be found in old Books; the French Protestants were guilty of the same Excess; in Henry the IVth of France his Days a very injurious one was said to have been made by Beza himself. The Roman Catholics have not been remiss in that Sport against Protestants, or against one another. See Mem. Hist. & Crit. for 1722.

nary's Permission. Lords, Gentlemen, their Wives, even Tradesmen who were Housekeepers, were allowed to read the Bible, which was forbid to all others; but yet they had leave to keep the Psalter, the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Hail Mary, in English: All Churchmen who happened to teach any thing contrary to this Act, were obliged, for the first Time, only to a Recantation; for the second, to an Abjuration, and to carry a Faggot upon their Shoulders, as a Mark that they had deserved to be burnt, which they were actually condemned to, if they refused to abjure, or to make publick Satisfaction; but the third Offence was always without Mercy punished with Fire. As to the Laity, their second Offence was followed by the Loss of all their Goods and Chattels, and Imprisonment for Life. Burnet says, that this Law, tho' it might allay the Fears of those who were liable to Prosecutions, upon account of the new Opinions, yet it did not entirely remove them; because the King still had it in his Power to recal it when he pleased, so they were left to his Discretion, or rather had nothing to trust to but his inconstant Humour. Accordingly they were persecuted in 1543, and some Protestants were burnt at Windfor; because Henry being reconciled to the Emperor, and having entered into an offensive and defensive League with him against France, began to hearken to the Friends of the old Religion. If we may credit Burnet, Cranmer himself *, who was the Chief of the Professors of the new Science, (this was the Name then given, in Derision, to the Protestants) narrowly escaped † being ruined by the secret Practices of his Enemies. Nevertheless Henry favoured the Protestants in one Point, he prevailed on the Parliament to ordain, "That the Prayers and Litanies used in Processions should be translated into English: And this Decree was sent to Cranmer, with an absolute Command to publish it in his Province." Not long after some of the principal Dignities of the new Church of England were bestowed on several Abettors of the Reformation; but on other Occasions the old Catholics maintained their Ground, and successfully opposed those Reformers. Henry ‡, in one of his Speeches to the Parliament, gives us a lively Description of the Faults committed by both Parties in religious Matters; and how far Disorders and Licentiousness prevailed under the Cloak of a Gospel-Reformation: And it must be owned, that all great Revolutions are never exempt from such Disorders, except those only which are truly brought about by the immediate Hand and Power of God; in these, and in no other, Men are kept constant to all their Duties.

SOME Authors positively affirm, that in the Peace concluded between France and England it was stipulated, that Mass should be changed in both Kingdoms § into a plain Communion Service. Henry however went on in his sudden Fits of Heat and Fury ¶ against the Reformers and their Adherents; several of them were burnt; the Plots against the Archbishop of Canterbury were carried on with new Vigour, and Endeavours were used to ruin the Queen (Catharine Parr) who protected the Reformers; both these Designs failed, and brought the King's Anger, says Burnet, on those who maintained the old Religion: But if he had lived longer, he might have taken them again into Favour. Protestant Authors, and Burnet in particular §, employ all their Skill to justify this Prince's Conduct, or to palliate his Faults: Ca-

* Burnet, Hist. of Ref.

† The same.

‡ In 1545.

§ Rapin Thoiras, Lib. XV. proves this Story to be without any Grounds, and against all Probability.

¶ Burnet, Hist. of Ref.

§ See Burnet's Hist. of Ref.

tholicks, on the contrary, paint him in the worst Colours, to render him odious^d. But may we not question the Impartiality of both Sides? Very few Writers, if any, can entirely lay aside the Spirit of Party, which prevails most in religious Disputes, where Custom, Education, and temporal Interest are so deeply concerned. Certain it is, that Henry the VIIIth his violent and hasty Temper, his inconstant Humour, the various Circumstances of his Life, chiefly his claiming the Supremacy in Ecclesiastical Affairs, has procured many Martyrs to both the old and new Religions. Some gave it out, that after his Death his Body burst, and that the Dogs lickt up what came from it. This Event was so remarkable, that it could not escape the most severe Reflections from the zealous Catholicks. They looked upon it as the Accomplishment of the Prophecy of one Payton a Monk, who had threatened Henry^e, That the Dogs should lick his Blood, as they had done that of Ahab. A Protestant in the same Circumstances^f would have made the same Use of the pretended Prophecy against a Catholick who should have persecuted him.

DURING the Minority of Edward the VIth the Earl of Hertford, his Uncle, of the Family of Seymour, antiently St. Maur, was raised to the Dignity of Protector of the Kingdom. He headed that Party which was for a thorough Reformation, and the Lord Chancellor favoured those of the old Religion^g. The Bishops were commanded to take new Commissions from the King. The Reason of this Order was, that most of them, as 'tis said, were so strenuous in maintaining the old Opinions, that 'twas thought necessary to conquer them by arbitrary Power, which dealt with them as meer Delegates, who held their Dignities only during Pleasure. But afterwards the antient Custom of bestowing Bishopricks for Life was revived. Disputes for and against the Use of Images were renewed and carried on with great Heats and Animosities by the Controversy Writers of both Parties; but it was decreed that the Reformers should get the better. Luther had^h tolerated those Monuments of Religion, which serve to fix the rambling Imagination of the common People in their pious Exercises, and supply the Want of Spirituality in which they are so notoriously deficient: But Luther's Example was not followed in England.

HENRY's Funeral Service occasioned an Enquiry to be made into Masses and Obits: Which took their Rise, according to *Burnet*ⁱ, from the Commemoration of the Dead, antiently made in the Communion Service, and was only, as he pretends, a bare Ceremony, in Memory of those who departed from this World in the true Faith. He says further, that the Opinion of the Millenarians, (who believed ^d Some say, that at the Hour of Death he shewed some Tokens of Despair, whilst others pretend he died a Catholick. Burnet himself is of this last Opinion, but in a Sense very different from that of the Catholicks; for that Prince, says he, always believed the Tenets of the Roman Church, even the most absurd, (as he is pleased to call them) such as Transubstantiation, &c. All Authors agree, that his whole Conduct was much to be blamed, yet with this Difference, that Protestants, as we said before, excuse his Faults as much as they can. His Cruelty was none of the least, he unmercifully put to Death his chief Ministers, Sir Thomas More in particular, whose Death was not much lamented by Protestants, because he was not one of their Martyrs: Even Catholick Authors do not spare him upon Account of his Cruelty. They are as severe against his Supremacy, which he was so fond of; and which the Reformers owned with too much Compliance, to gain their Ends. Beffuet, Hist. Variat. omits no Occasion to censure and ridicule the Reformation.

^e In 1534, Payton preaching before the King had taken those Words for the Text of his Sermon. See Burnet, Hist. of Ref. Lib. 2.

^f Witness the Stories of Persecutors being punished by God, which are carefully set forth by Jurieu and several other Protestant Authors.

^g The Chancellor was soon turned out, and the Pope's Adherents had a great Loss of him. See Burnet, Lib. 4.

Queen Elizabeth shewed some Inclination to favour the Use of Images; which was probably occasioned by "her Love for State and Magnificence in the Church, says Burnet, as well as in every thing else; "she thought that in her Brother's Reign they had stript it too much of exterior Ornaments, &c."

^h Burnet's Hist. of Ref. Lib. 4.

that Christ was to reign upon Earth a thousand Years, and that the Saints were to rise from the Dead to be Partakers of his Temporal Kingdom) gave a Handle to pray for their Rest and speedy Resurrection. This Millenarian System was at last rejected, but the Custom of praying for the Dead was kept up, as being absolutely necessary for their Happiness and Comfort ; from a Belief, that though they had served God faithfully, to the best of their Power, as far as human Frailty would permit ; still they were punished after their Death for some Sins for which they had not done worthy Fruits of Penance in their Life-time. This is the Substance of what Burnet says on this Subject. Even the most zealous and learned Catholics have frankly owned, that some Superstitions crept in amongst the numerous Foundations for Masses ; that the Avarice of Churchmen introduced several Abuses, which led the ignorant and weak into Errors : And that such Bargains have often been made about those Foundations, as gave to the Protestants a specious Pretence of applying to them a famous Passage of Cicero ^k.

'Tis needless to enter into all Particulars, and to transcribe like Slaves what both Parties wrote concerning those Changes in Religion ; we shall only glance at, and slightly mention the daily Encroachments against the Commandments of the Church, and some doctrinal Points of less Importance. Some exclaimed against the exterior Pomp and Magnificence of the Ceremonies of the Church, at which the Innovators took so great a Disgust, that they could not bear to hear the Word of God, when preached with such worldly Splendor. Others found Fault with Prayers to Saints to obtain their Intercession : All Honour paid to them was not condemned ; but Calvin's Doctrine, concerning their Power, began to be in Vogue. A Preacher named Glasser publicly inveighed against Lent in a Sermon at St. Paul's. Three Bishops, Gardiner, Bonner and Tonstal, assisted and protected by Princess Mary, used their utmost Endeavours to maintain a declining Religion, whose total Subversion and Downfall Cranmer was resolved, and hoped to compass, supported by the Protector, and with the Authority of a young King brought up in all the Sentiments of the Reformers. But what hindered most the Progress of the Reformation, was, says Burnet, the profound Ignorance of the Clergy, and their mean and base Avarice, which made them favour Abuses, for the sake of the filthy Lucre they reaped from them. Thus it happens in some bigotted Countries, (we do not intend here to make any odious Applications) that Superstition, grounded at first upon the Ignorance and over Credulity of the People, becomes afterwards the chief Support of Ecclesiastical Tyranny. If this Reflection is solid and true, no Wonder the English Clergy, which opposed the Reformation, and still made up then the greatest Part of the Clergy in this Kingdom, struggled so hard to keep up the Abuses. Had they been so complying as to yield up at first some Points which were not of absolute Necessity in Religion ; had they quietly submitted to the lessening of an Authority and temporal Power, no ways essential to Christianity, and without which the Church of Christ had prospered and flourished for many Ages, they might probably have prevented a Schism ; and Religion would have been more respected and better practised, instead of being rent and torn into Parties and Factions, industriously promoted and increased by the Avarice and Ambition of some particular Men. In order therefore to guard against what was apprehended from that ignorant and superstitious Clergy, the Heads of the Reformation, that is, Edward the VIth his Council, appointed an Ecclesiastical Visitation throughout the whole Kingdom, during which all ordinary Jurisdiction of Bishops was suspended : And as the Disputes of those Times made the People wavering and unsettled in their Belief, the Pulpit being made Use of by Churchmen, only to attack and confute each other : “ It was enjoined “ that Bishops should preach only in their Cathedrals, and all other Pastors in their “ own Churches only a sure and infallible Way, says Burnet, to find out “ what Preachers were favourable to the Reformation, who endeavoured to op- “ pose it, &c.” Moreover, a new Book of Homilies, on different Subjects, was published¹ chiefly about Salvation, “ to instruct the People about the Manner by “ which we are saved, according to the Doctrine delivered in the Gospel,” and to diminish that extravagant Trust they reposed in Priests, and in the outward Ceremonies prescribed by them for obtaining the Kingdom of Heaven. This is another Abuse into which Churchmen have inconsiderately run, by minding too much their worldly Interest ; and which has given a Handle to the Broachers or Followers of new Opinions, to brand the Clergy with the Name of Quacks, who^m brag of mighty Secrets to cure the most stubborn Diseases, provided their Drugs are dearly bought. Most of the Orders and Changes made under Henry VIII in religious Worship, and in favour of the Reformers Notions, were then confirmed. Imagesⁿ, Crucifixes in Churches, sprinkling holy Water in private Houses or upon Beds, lighting and setting up of blest Candles, ringing of Bells to be delivered from the Devil’s Attacks, to cast him out, and send him down to his own place of Abode, Vows and Pilgrimages, in a word, all the religious Customs which had been discountenanced in Henry’s Reign, were now quite abolished under Edward the VIth. But some were still allowed, which they either would not, or did not dare to abrogate, or which did not appear evil or disagreeable to the Reformation : Such as Prayers for the Dead with Restriction. In which^o “ God was pray’d to that those Souls, and those who “ should pray for them, might at the Day of Judgment obtain all together eternal “ Rest, their Bodies and Souls being reunited.”

^k Tota res est inventa fallaciis aut ad quæstum, aut ad superstitionem, aut ad errorem. Cicero, lib. de Divinatione.

By Order of the same Council, the greatest Part of which was entirely devoted to all the Measures of those who promoted the Reformation, Bishops were commanded to preach at least four Times in a Year in their own Diocese, which was still infinitely short of the primitive Practice : It was also strictly enjoined and recommended to them by those Ordinances of the King’s Council, to admit none to the Pastoral Office and Cure of Souls, but those of a virtuous Life and Conversation, and such whose sufficient Abilities to preach were well known : And to confer holy Orders on those only whose Piety and Learning might edify and instruct the People committed to their Charge : But this last Article, as well as many others, has been since very much neglected amongst the Reformed ; they have had vicious Ministers, subject to all disorderly Passions, ignorant, and whose unedifying Lives were as scandalous, as those with which they have so often and still do reproach the

¹ Gardiner and Banner opposed with all their Might the Book of Homilies, and the Orders of the Visitors. Burnet, Lib. 4.

^m See Burnet, Lib. 4. whose Sense we represent.

ⁿ Some of the Superstitious amongst the Reformers took Notice, that on that very Day in which Images were pulled down in London the English won the Battle of Pinkey against the Scots ; it was fought the 10th of September 1547. Most of the Scots were then zealous Catholics, whereas the English were daily deviating from the Tenets and Customs of that Communion ; a Proof, said those superstitious Reformers, that God espoused their Cause, and fought for them. But, as Burnet himself wisely observes. “ it is common to all Men to magnify great Events, when they make for them, but if they are against them, they “ turn it off by this, that God’s Ways are not to be found out.”

^o Burnet says, that before this new Order, they pray’d for the Souls of the Dead who expect the Mercy of God, and that God would admit them to his Presence on Account of those Prayers.

Catholicks. A true Knowledge of ^p God's interior Call to the Ministry is now very much wanting ; this was a Privilege reserved to the Apostles, given them by Christ : But to supply this Defect, and to remedy this Evil in all Christian Commu- nions, the only Way left is to make Choice of those who are the best qualified, and seem called to serve the Church ; to inspect narrowly the Attestations and Re- commendations with which they are furnished, and which are often too easily grant- ed to the Candidates ^q out of Respect to their Friends and Relations ; to trust with this Enquiry, and the Examen of those who present themselves, Men of Probity, Prudence, and Learning ; to hinder the Pastoral Office from being degraded into a Battery, if I may so call it, to attack and beat down the most inoffensive Opinions of their adverse Party : Lastly, this great Dignity of Priesthood should not be con- ferred as a Livelihood to Men of the lowest Extraction, and if possible a worse Edu- cation, whose Learning consists only in putting together, without Sense or Choice, a Number of insignificant, empty Sounds, mixt with some awkwardly adapted Fi- gures of Rhetorick, with which they chatter for an Hour or two before a numerous Audience, which stupidly mistakes all this senseless Rhapsody for the pure Word of God. But we now return to the Customs amended or brought on by the Reformation. Edward's Council order'd general Prayers should be said before Sermon. Burnet as- sures us this was practised under the Reign of the Popes, and in Henry the Seventh's Days. “ The Preacher, says he, having read his Text, and given the different Parts “ of his Discourse, exhorted the Audience to kneel down, to say their Prayers, and “ put them in Mind of what they were to beg of Almighty God ; either addressing “ themselves immediately to him, or by the Intercession of the Saints. Then all “ said their Beads, both Priests and Laymen Henry blotted out of the Pre- “ amble to the Prayer the Names of the Pope and of the Cardinals instead of “ which he put in his own, with his new assumed Dignity of supreme Head, to the “ End that the People might accustom themselves to it, and still respect him the “ more upon Account of a Title daily preached up by their spiritual Leaders.” Cranmer, who had already obtained a Revocation of the six Articles abovementioned, ^r and of the Laws in Force against the Lollards, who were but the Fore-runners of the new Reformation, which adopted most of their Opinions ; Cranmer, I say, oc- casioned the Downfal of private Masses, which, as many other Customs, had degene- rated into Superstition, by the Avarice of some, and the scandalous Poverty and Want of most Priests in those Ages. Burnet being a Protestant, gives us an Account of the Origin of those Masses truly becoming one of his Persuasion ^t. However the Act of Parliament made towards the Close of the Year 1547, (which ordained that Communion should be administered under both Kinds, and that the Priests should receive together with the People, to whom they were obliged to give the Commu- nion when they desired it with a suitable Devotion :) put an End to the Celebration of private Masses. The same Parliament obliged all Curates to preach to their Pa- rishioners, on the Eve of their performing that Office, and instruct them concerning the great Happiness of worthily receiving the Sacrament, and the Danger to which they exposed themselves, by partaking of it without worthy Fruits of Repentance. This Practice also prevailed amongst the Calvinists ; and accordingly they hear a Ser-

^p See Burnet, Lib. 4.

^q The Name of Candidates is made Use of in this Place, because many Protestants give it to those who present themselves to be admitted to the Ministry.

^r See above.

^t Burnet's Hist. of Ref. Lib. 4.

mon on the Saturday before any Sunday on which they receive; and they call it a Preparation Sermon.

ABOUT the same Time, the Marquis of Northampton took Occasion from Henry the VIIIth's late Behaviour, to espouse in the Face of the whole World a second Wife, having first divorced himself under Pretence of Adultery from his first Wife, who was still living. This Affair had been canvassed in Henry's Reign; but not being then decided, it was again examined under Edward the VIth. Before any Decree about it, the impatient Marquis married; and that Step being once taken, he endeavoured to find out Reasons to justify that it was not against the strictest Rules of conjugal Chastity. The chief Reason he alledged was Incontinency, an unruly ungovernable Passion, common to all Religions, as all other human Frailties are, and which burns as fiercely in Catholick as in Protestant Breasts. But to be serious, this Reason, which, if alone, likely might not have met with the Approbation of the Reformers, being backed with some Proofs from ancient History, which were thought favourable to second Marriages, he obtained a Verdict in his Favour. We ought not to be surpris'd at a Decision so apt to quiet disturbed Consciences, or rather so agreeable to the most industrious and most impetuous of all human Passions; if we consider this was an Age in which Priests, Monks and Nuns ran hastily into Matrimony, to rid themselves of what they called the grievous and intolerable Burthen of a forced Chastity. Now could the Reformers, who were so conscious of their own Wants, be so hard hearted as not to compassionate the Wants of their Neighbours, and decide in their Favour? After all, a much harder Case had been judged before, by allowing a German Prince * to have two Wives at one and the same Time.

IN the Year 1548, the Ceremonies, usually practis'd on Candlemas-Day, Ashwednesday, Palm-Sunday, and in Lent and Holy Week, were brought by the Reformers to a severe Examen, the Result of which was, that Candles, Ashes, and Palms, were forbid on the three first-mentioned Days; that the Honour paid to the Cross on Good-Friday was condemned, and that Images were entirely abolished and pulled down. As the chief Design of these Dissertations is to represent the various Customs and Ceremonies of all Religions, we cannot omit Burnet's Description of the Honour paid to Images, and other such Rites, which as he represents them were certainly superstitious, to say nothing worse. “ No question, says he, but some Images occasioned great Scandal, as, for Example, that of the Holy Trinity. On Holy Innocents Day, a Child, chosen by his Play-fellows to personate a Bishop, burnt Frankincense before that Image: From which Custom it may be concluded, that this Incense-Offering was performed on other Days in a more serious Manner, and even by the Bishop himself, if he happened to be present. ’Twas a gross Abuse, to pretend to a Representation of a Mystery so much above all human Comprehension: But the Manner was no less to be found Fault with if we are to judge of it by the Prints still to be seen. God the Father was represented in the Shape of an old Man, with a triple Crown upon, and Rays about his Head: The Son, in another Part of the Picture, looked like a young Man, with a single Crown on his Head, and a radiant Countenance. The Blessed Virgin Mary was between them, in a fitting Posture; and the Holy Ghost, under the Appearance of a Dove, spread its Wings over her. This Picture is still to be seen in a Prayer-Book, printed in the Year 1526, according to the Ceremonial of Salisbury—

* The Landgrave of Hesse.

“ Such a Place given to the Blessed Virgin amongst the Persons of the Most Holy Trinity, seemed intended to call to Mind her Assumption to the Divine Nature, which was heretofore believed by some Heretical Monks The Church had not approved that horrid Abuse; but the Clergy and Laity were accustomed to it by a long Use ” It must be owned, that such Abuses, though they are always condemned, when the Church, after due Examen, has thought fit to deliver her Sentiments and Doctrine by the Mouth and Pens of the Doctors; yet as they are countenanced, or permitted, or tolerated by private Churchmen, they still furnish the Innovators with a specious Pretence of cutting Religion to the Quick; though in Reality the Church of England has not gone such Lengths, in that Particular, as other Protestant Communion. The above-specified Retrenchments were followed by an Order from Edward's Privy Council, to preach the pure Word of God, and to exhort the People to renounce all Superstitions, though of the oldest Standing. We need not repeat here, that amongst those old Superstitions the most ancient and universally approved Customs of the primitive Church were involved in the same Condemnation, with those which the temporal Interest of Churchmen had brought into the Church in those dark Ages of Ignorance, when the most essential Duty of the Christian Religion was supposed to consist only in the Deference and Respect paid to its Ministers. The publick Office of the Church was looked into next, and some Doctors were intrusted with that Examen. That of the Blessed Eucharist came first under Consideration, and some Alterations were made in it, tho' much fewer than afterwards. In the preparatory Exhortation to Communion, they spared as yet auricular Confession: The Mystery of Transubstantiation was likewise used with much Tendernefs, for Priests were ordered “ to teach their Parishioners, “ not to be concerned whether they received a larger or a less Share of the consecrated “ Bread, because the Body of the Lord was contained in each Piece.” Nevertheless the Elevation of the Sacrament was forbid: This Office so reformed was approved by a Declaration of the Parliament and the King's Authority; and proper Measures were taken in order to have the Celebration of the Eucharist kept after the same Fashion through the whole Kingdom on Easter Day following. The Circumstances of those Times were such, that this more than half Protestant Office was generally conformed to, without much Difficulty, in all the Provinces subject to the King of England: At least, such is the Account given by Burnet, who yet excepts Gardiner; he it seems was not so compliant, or wanted Faith, and his untimely Steadiness was punished with Imprisonment, to cast a Terror into all those who might have been prompted, by his Example, to disobey the new Laws.

Cranmer's Zeal daily encreasing, he composed a Catechism which contained the chief Tenets and Principles of the Christian Religion (according to the Reformers, or thereabout, for many Alterations were still intended to be made.) But we must go back to the Reformation of the Offices. The various Blessings, of Water, of Salt, of Bread, of Incense, of Candles, of Bells, of Altars, of Images, &c. were looked upon as full of superstitious Practices; and were accordingly suppressed. 'Tis likely those Reformers gave the Epithet of superstitious “ to many trifling Ceremonies, to many useless Actions which bore a Resemblance to Piety, and yet, to be plain, seem, in Religion, to be too close an Imitation of the Contrivances and senseless Words used by Mountebanks. Catholicks, we hope, will excuse this Parallel: It does not touch the Essentials of Religion, nor its Doctrine, and the best Catholics need not trouble themselves to know, whether Bells are blessed according to every particular Rubrick of the Ritual, or whether Incense has been blessed with so nice and exact an Observation of every nice Ceremony prescribed in the said Book, to make the Devil fly from those Places wherein it is consumed. Besides all these Retrenchments, the Absolution usually given by Priests to the Penitents after Confession was also suppressed: We shall set it down, as being somewhat extraordinary. “ “ I “ absolve you (said the Priest to his Penitent) in the Name of the Father, and of “ the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: And grant to you, that all the Indulgences which “ you have or shall obtain from any Bishop whatever, all the Blessings accruing from “ thence, your Devotion in taking Holy Water, or beating your Breast, the Contri- “ tion of your Heart, your present devout Confession, and all those you shall make, “ your Fasts, Abstinences, Alms, Watchings, taking Disciplines, your Pilgrimages, “ and all the good Actions you have done or shall do, all the Afflictions you have “ borne, or shall bear, the Sufferings and Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Me- “ rits of the glorious and blessed Virgin Mary, and of all other Saints, and the Pray- “ ers of the whole Catholick Church, may be available to you, for obtaining the “ Remission of all those Sins which you have confessed, and of all your other Sins, “ for the increase of your Merits, and for the Enjoyment of eternal Rewards.” The Prayers used at giving the Extreme-Unction and the Absolution given to the Dead at their Interment were also taken away. “ These Customs had fully persuaded com- “ mon People (says Burnet) that besides the plain and obvious Way, set down in the “ Gospel, to obtain Salvation, there was some hidden Path which led Mankind “ thither, and was known by the Priests only; so that by purchasing their Friend- “ ship one might be sure of going to Heaven, without submitting during the whole “ Course of this Life to the Yoke of the Gospel.” The new Office-Book, out of which several Holydays had been retrenched, their Number having been, they say, prodigious before, was put into the Hands of the Laity in the vulgar Tongue. The Prayers and Litanies were entirely altered, yet one Prayer was left in it, by which, making at the same Time several Signs of the Cross, Almighty God was desired to give his Blessing to the Creatures of Bread and Wine, that they might afterwards become to the Receivers the Body and Blood of Jesus Christ. But in Process of Time the Prayer and the Signs of the Cross, which accompanied it, were both left out. Several Ceremonies used at Baptism, Confirmation, the Communion of the Sick, and the Office for the Dead, &c. were likewise abolished. The Church Office, so mangled and castrated, was called the English Liturgy, from which we shall represent the Ceremonies of the Church which bears the same Name. Yet this Liturgy, published under Edward the VIth, was new modelled in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.

“ See the Religious Ceremonies of Jews and Catholicks, Vol. I.

WE must not omit mentioning in this Place, that Cranmer had invited into England Peter Martyr, a noted Reformer, being desirous to be helped by his Learning, and to take his Advice about the Plan of his intended Reformation: Calvin was also consulted, who proposed what he thought fit. And as he had squared, if I may use that Expression, the Severity of his Doctrine and Reformation, to the Moroseness of his own Temper, his Letter to the Protector of England is full of Invectives against the English Reformation, as being too slow in its Progress, and still over loaded with “ Burnet's Hist. of Ref. Lib. 4.

Ceremonies which he thought deserved Condemnation, and were only spared out of too much Regard for human Policy. This first Contriver of the rigid Reformation, named Calvinism in France, had some great Endowments, but gave many Proofs of an impatient and despotick Humour, mixed with that Sourness in controversial Disputes, and that fretful Peevishness which imperceptibly leads to what may be called Theological Hatred. His Adherents and Successors have inherited this Moroseness, and without intending any odious Application, we may say, that those who came after him copied his Faults much more than his commendable Qualities. However 'twas not for want of his earnest Endeavours, that the English Reformation was not modelled according to his Notions.

CELIBACY was brought on the Anvil in the Parliament; after some Deliberations on that Subject, Priests were allowed to marry, and the Laws against it were repealed: The chief Reason on which this Decision was grounded was their Incontinency, which had led them into enormous Sins: It was much easier to find evident and legal Proofs of those Disorders, than to settle the Belief of the controverted Points of Doctrine. All Europe, and the Court of Rome itself, could not disown the Justice of those Reproaches, and not to rehearse here what Historians and even great Doctors in the Church have left in their Writings concerning it; the Poetical Works of the Mantuan, of Sannazarius, and of Buchanan are full of undeniable Proofs of it.

An important Remark had almost escaped us: In the Act of Parliament made to approve, and enjoin the Use of the New Liturgy, it is said, that the Commissioners appointed by the King to draw up a Form of divine Service, which should be used throughout the whole Kingdom, and in which the pure Doctrine established in Scripture might be preserved, &c. had finished their Work with an unanimous Consent, and by the Assistance of the Holy Ghost. But as this Holy Spirit is not subject to Change, and that nevertheless the Compilers of that Liturgy might think it necessary to make some further Alterations in it, to prevent the Objection which might be raised, it was added, that this Assistance was not supposed to have been a supernatural Inspiration, but it was meant, that “all our good Thoughts and holy Resolutions were produced and “strengthened by a secret Influence of the Spirit of God, which often helps the “Faithful even in those Actions which are mixed with some Imperfection; and “that then, what is good in them is, with Justice, attributed to the Grace of God.” By the Help of this nice Distinction they were enabled, 1. To justify all the Alterations then made, or hereafter to be made, in their proper Order, and as Time should serve the Reformers. 2. To excuse all the human Policy and personal Faults they were guilty of. 3. To persuade themselves, that many Actions, though done out of very equivocal Views, were just, and those sinister Intentions rectify'd by the secret Influence of the Holy Ghost. By the same favourable Turn, all the secret Cabals and Intrigues of ecclesiastical Assemblies will infallibly be said to be accompanied by the Grace of God; and it will be boldly asserted, that it helps them in their Imperfections, and is the Origin and Mover of what is good in them.

A NEW Visit made in the Year 1549, occasion'd further Reformations, in Things, which, it must be owned, were of little or no Importance; but, after what had been done in regard of other religious Observances, could not but be look'd upon as superstitious. The Rites here meant are, Kissing the Altar, the Priest's making so many Signs of the Cross, moving the Book from one Side of the Altar to the other at Mass, or, as they called it, at the Communion Service, saying Beads, and the frequent Repetitions of the Lord's Prayer, and Hail Mary in Latin. But something more essential happened. There were hot Disputes * about the Manner of Christ's being in the Sacrament. The Corporeal Presence was warmly attacked, and defended with so much Strength, that it withstood for that Time, all the Endeavours of the Reformers, and the Divines they had called in to their Help. The Anabaptists, and their fanatical Opinions, were also vigorously assaulted, and found no Mercy † from the Protestants, who condemned them to be burnt, when they found that they could not either convince them ‡ or persuade them to a feigned Abjuration of their erroneous Opinions. The Reformation, that fruitful Parent of all Sorts of Sects, produced also in this Age some rigid Predestinarians, who commonly became Libertines, or ended their Lives in Despair, a natural Consequence of the eternal Decree, which was ‡ Calvin's favourite Opinion, and of his Sectaries: The dangerous and dreadful Conclusions drawn from it, made no Impression on his inflexible Temper; on the contrary, he alledged, in order to justify it, a Reason which is very much in Favour of all Mysteries, and of whatever Opinions Men can give no rational Account. “ He was so cautious, says Burnet, as to admonish his Followers, “ to abstain from thinking much on that Subject, because it was a Secret which “ the Shallowness of human Understanding could not comprehend: But, continues “ the same Historian, he himself did not clearly prove, that those Consequences “ did not flow from that System.”

In the Beginning of the Year 1550, an Order came out, to give up into the King's Commissioners Hands, all the Books made Use of in the publick Service of the old Religion, Antiphonals, Missals, Graduals, Processionals, &c. as likewise those which contained the Ordinations of Bishops, and other Ministers of the Church, because a Resolution had been taken, to alter the Form of conferring Orders, and to make it as plain as possible, that is to reduce it to the sole Imposition of Hands, accompanied by Prayer. The other Ceremonies were looked upon only as so much dazzling Imbroidery, fit only to raise the Vanity of those who wear it, but which adds nothing to the Dignity of Religion, or to the Worth of its Ministers: It may be too true, that the Pomp with which they are admitted to that Office, contributes to the high Idea they have of themselves. Some have also taken Notice, that the anointing Priests was not used till such Times, when they resolved in earnest to shake off, and free themselves from the Power of temporal Princes; endeavouring to prove by that Ceremony, that their Persons were as sacred and inviolable as those of Kings, whom they affected by it to resemble. They also apply'd to themselves literally all the Places of Scripture in which the Faithful are called a Royal Priesthood. The Change of the Rites brought none in the Dress, only one Hooper, a reforming Bishop, would

* Though such Controversies ought to be debated with the utmost Gravity and serious Deportment, they became too often ludicrous. Cranmer, Archbishop of Canterbury, disputing about the corporeal Presence of Jesus Christ in the Sacrament, against Bonner, Bishop of London, asked of the latter, whether he believed that Christ in the Eucharist had a Face, a Mouth, Eyes, a Nose, &c. One may easily guess how far such a Detail might be carried.

† The English Protestants of those Days were no ways inclined to Toleration: Besides burning the Anabaptists, was it not a great Want of it which occasioned the many Prosecutions set on Foot against those who did not come to the Churches of the new Reform, or who heard Mass? All these Facts may be seen in Burnet. But human Policy required it, and who knows but those Protestants thought that a secret Influence of the Holy Ghost inspired them, and was accompanying what was imperfect in that Conduct, and claimed as its own what might be good in it.

‡ Edward refused at first to sign the Condemnation of one J. Kent, to be burnt, and shed Tears when he was at last prevailed upon to do it by the repeated pressing Sollicitations of zealous Cranmer. Rapin Thoiras owns, that was a Blemish in the Archbishop's Character, Lib. 16. and Chevr. . . . his Abbreviator, ends his Flourishes on that Passage of Rapin with a seemingly contradictory Saying, that Cranmer committed that Excess, without being inclined to Cruelty. See Tom. 3.

▪ This Word Sect and Sectaries is used without any Intention to give Offence.

never consent to be consecrated with the Pontifical Robes, saying they were too gaudy, and repugnant to Christian Simplicity: He never would yield up that Point, and all the Arguments urged to him to convince him that such a Practice was not an Error in Religion, were fruitless. Probably Hooper^b was of an obstinate inflexible Humour, which never foresees the Evil Tendency of their Stubbornness: When such Men are punished, or suffer for their Opinions, Bigots are always ready to honour them as Martyrs.

TOWARDS the close of the Year 1550, as Burnet informs us, the Reformers reviewed and amended their new Liturgy. Bucer, who gave a helping Hand to these Corrections by his Advice, was of Opinion, that the Dress of Bishops and Priests should be altered, in order to prevent those Divisions, of which Hooper had so lately given an Example; that the blessed Eucharist should be put in the Hand, and not in the Mouth of the Communicants; that a Prayer, which seemed to be for the Dead, should be left out, and that of the Communion changed^c, as smelling too rank of the Doctrine of Transubstantiation; that the Ceremonies of Chrism, Holy Water, and the white Garment, should be omitted in Baptism, and alter the Exorcisms into plain Prayers; that the Anointing the Sick with Oil, the offering a Candle by Women newly delivered, when they came to Church to give God Thanks, should be left off, &c. not to mention several other Remarks of Bucer, who wrote at that Time a Book for the young King's Use, in which he proposed a much larger Plan of Reformation and Discipline, which Project the young Monarch would probably have put in Execution, if he had lived longer^d. Bucer himself died at Cambridge in the Month of January.

THE Profession of Faith of the English Reformers was drawn up by the new Doctors; it was begun in 1551, and ended in January 1552. Burnet relates it at length in forty two Articles: Of which the most remarkable are the third, which owns the Truth of Christ's descending into Hell: The fifth, accepting Scripture as the only Rule of Faith: The seventh, enforcing the Belief of the three Creeds, that of the Apostles, that of Nice or Constantinople, and that of St. Athanasius: The ninth, which denies Free Will: The thirteenth, against Works of Supererogation: The fifteenth, which says, that after receiving Grace, Christians may happen to commit Sins, in which Case, they must recover their Loss by Repentance: The sixteenth, gives this Definition of the Sin against the Holy Ghost, an inveterate Malice, and an invincible Stubbornness in opposing, wresting, and persecuting the Word of God, even when fully convinced of its Truth: The seventeenth, about Predestination: The twentieth, concerns the characteristical Marks of the Church, and taxes with Error the Church of Rome: The twenty-first declares, that in Points of Faith, the Church has not Power to add any Thing to the Scripture: The twenty-second, rejects the Infallibility of Councils, &c. The twenty-third, against Purgatory, Indulgences, Images, Relicks, &c. The twenty-fifth, enforces the Necessity of performing the publick Service, in a Language understood by the People: The twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh reduce the Number of the Sacraments to two, reject the Opus operatum, and yet maintain that they have their full Force and Efficacy independently of the Disposition and Intention of the Ministers who confer them, &c. The twenty-ninth, against Transubstantiation, &c. The thirtieth is but a Sequel of the former: The thirty-first, against the Celibacy of Priests: The thirty-fifth confirms the new Liturgy: The thirty-sixth condemns the Pope's Supremacy, and asserts to the Kings of England, the Quality of Head of the Church: The fortieth regards the Condition of departed Souls, which are said not to be in a State of Sleep, nor deprived of all Sentiments till the General Judgment: The forty-first condemns the Millenarians: The forty-second says, the Pains of the Damned are not limited to a certain Time. But to return to the Review of the Liturgy; several Parts of it had been kept only for a Time, as 'tis said, and were afterwards put out. Extreme Unction, therefore, the Use of Chrism at Confirmation, whatever in the Consecration of the Eucharist seemed still to favour the corporeal Presence of Christ, and the Signs of the Cross in the Communion Service, and at Confirmation, all this was abolished; yet the kneeling^e when they received, was preserved. "In the daily Office both for the Morning and Night a general Confession of Sins was inserted . . . and they joined to it a general Absolution, by which the Priest published from God a Remission of their Sins to all those who were deeply touched with true Sentiments of Repentance . . . This was thought more profitable than an indeterminate, unfined Absolution, such as had before been given by Priests at Confession." To inspire with more Devotion all those who should approach the Table^f to receive: The ten Commandments were ordered to be read aloud at the Beginning of the Communion Service, and that after each a small Pause should be made to help the Devotion of the Audience, and give them an Opportunity during that Interval to beg Pardon of God for their Disobedience to the Precept, and Grace to do better hereafter." Such were the most material Alterations. "And, except a few insignificant Particulars changed, or rather amended, since, (all this is taken from Burnet) with no other Design, but to explain some equivocal and obscure Passages of the Liturgy, it was then the same as we read it now."

^b "He consented afterwards to put them on at his Consecration and whenever he should preach either before the King or in his Cathedral Church, &c. Upon these Conditions he was dispensed from wearing episcopal Robes at other Times." Hooper then may be considered as the Head of the Non-Conformists, or Puritans. See Neal in his History of Puritans.

^c See Neal above.

^d At the same Time Bishop Ridley forbade the dressing up of Altars in his Diocese, changed them into plain Tables (which are still called Altars by the Episcopal Reformed Church of England) and abolished some Abuses and Ceremonies which had escaped the Downfall of the old Religion, as washing of Hands at the Altar, Elevation of the Host, cleaning the Chalice with the Tongue, &c.

THE Reformers having thus purged, as they term it, both the Doctrine and publick Service, apply'd their Study to reform the Discipline of the Church; to draw up ecclesiastical Constitutions, to set Limits to its Jurisdiction, to regulate the Proceedings of Spiritual Courts, and the various Duties of those who were to bear the Sway. The Year 1552 was spent therein. As to Particulars, they may be found in English Authors, chiefly in Burnet.

THE new Way of making Bishops, which, joined to the curtailing the Ceremonies of the Roman Pontifical, gave a Pretence to call in question the Validity of the English Ordinations, must be referred to the Reign of Edward. "Bishops in his Time were created by the King's Letters Patent. They first declared how such a See became vacant by Death, Deposition, Translation, or Demission. The King then added, that being informed of the good Qualifications of N he named him to that Bishoprick for the Time of his natural Life, or whilst he behaved well. After which the King gave him Power to ordain or depose Ministers, to name proper Subjects to the Benefices of his Diocese, &c. in a Word, to exercise all the Functions of the Pastoral Office, as far as the Word of ^e See in Burnet, Lib. 4. why it was kept up.

^f Thus Protestants express the very Act of Receiving.

“ God puts it in the Bishop’s Power : But all this was to be done in the King’s Name,
 “ and by his Authority. . . . The Day following the Expedition of those Letters,
 “ an Attestation of their Validity was sent to the Archbishop under the Broad-Seal, “ with an Order to consecrate the new Bishop Barlow, Bishop of St. David’s,
 “ and translated since to Bath and Wells, was the first so created by the King
 “ in the second Year of his Reign yet from this Way of constituting Bishops
 “ it may be concluded, that the Ministers of State acknowledged some divine Au“ thority residing in the episcopal Character ; and that the King named whom he “ judged proper to vacant Bishopricks, only in the same Manner as other lay Patrons “ name to Livings. These Letters only gave to the Person therein named Power to “ exercise the Functions of a Bishop, which Dignity he was to be invested “ with by the Imposition of Hands so far were they from thinking, as some “ have pretended, that the Ecclesiasticks, thus promoted to episcopal Dignity, were “ not true Bishops, or only the King’s Bishops, and not of the Church of Christ.”
 This is taken out of Burnet ; more of it will be said hereafter.

Edward died in 1553, not above sixteen Years old. The Reformers were very sensible of their Loss, in being deprived of a Prince, who, though so very young, gave such early Proofs of a solid Piety. For if we consider him only as a Christian, it must be owned, his Devotion was sincere, and by the free and open Ingenuity which accompanied it, rather added to, than borrowed Lustre from, the high Station he was in. Again if we behold him in the same View of a Christian, it may be asserted boldly, that he was endowed with all the Virtues^e essential to Religion. Queen Mary succeeded him, and pulled down the whole Fabrick of the Reformation. We shall not entertain our Readers with the Disputes of both Parties in the Beginning of her Reign, nor with the capital Punishments which followed those Controversies, according to the Answer which one Weston made to a Protestant^h. But we must take Notice here of what Burnet says, that those who had been ordained according to Edward’s Ceremonial, were not re-ordained under Mary’s Government ; ’twas thought sufficient to reconcile them to the Church, and to add to the English Form of Ordinations the Ceremonies prescribed in the Roman Pontifical, which had been omitted. Yet the same Burnet relates, that in burning the Protestant Bishops, the English Catholics “ followed the old Maxim, that Ordination given in Schism is not “ valid. Hooper and Ridley, not being owned as Bishops, were only degraded from “ Priesthood, yet, says Burnet, both had been ordained according to the old Rite, “ except taking the Oath of Fidelity to the Pope : As for the others, who had been “ ordained by the new Ceremonial, they were not at all degraded, and the Reason “ alledged was, that they were not truly in Orders.”

MARY’s Persecution rather inflamed the Zeal of the Protestants, than served to cool it : And ’tis the common Fate, of all those who are against Toleration, to be thus deceived : Heathens indeed might exercise all manner of Cruelty against the first ^e No more to be alledged against him than the Prejudices which the Reformers instilled into his tender Mind against what they called Papery. He often shewed Tokens of an implacable Hatred for the Roman Catholic Religion, and might, in Time, with such Dispositions, have commenced a Persecutor and a Bigot. This appears farther by his refusing, though against the Opinion of his Council, to give his Sister, Princess Mary, the free Exercise of her Religion. He looked upon it as his indispensable Duty to extirpate Idolatry ; this he, with other Protestants, thought the Religion of his Fathers was guilty of, though the Catholics always disown it. In any other but a religious Dispute such a Denial would quiet it, and calm their Fury. But Edward was fully and sincerely persuaded, that Roman Catholics made Images to the Likeness of the Divine Majesty, and then paid Adoration to them. See Bossuet’s Hist. Var. Lib. 7. about a Collection of Passages and common Places against Images, gathered by that Prince.

^h A very low Pun, You have the Word, (said Weston) we have the Sword.

Christians, and be almost forgiven: But how can the Meekness of the Gospel be reconciled to Christians persecuting one the other? This is a plain Contradiction, which no Minister of any Church, or Christian Communion, can justify, without arrogating to himself a Power which belongs only to God. 'Tis strange, after all this, that no Sect whatever has acted upon Principles of Toleration; that all those who have been at the Head, and the Managers of any Party, have always found it, or thought it, advantageous to persecute their Adversaries; even those who have not the Power in their Hands, 'tis to be feared, hate not only the Heresy, but Hereticks likewise, and mentally burn them.

CRANMER, who may justly be deemed the Apostle of the Reformation of England, was degraded and burnt with some other English Prelates. He had solemnly and publicly ^k recanted, and by that Recantation might probably have saved his Life, had Queen Mary considered him only as a Broacher of Heresies; but she looked upon Cranmer, though become a Convert, as the Man who had authorised Henry the VIIIth's Divorce from Catharine of Aragon, her Mother. So necessary it is to distinguish the Zeal of devout People for the Glory of God, from the human Passions to which they give Way: These latter however were screened in this Case by the specious Pretence of punishing an Heresiarch, who had poisoned all England with his erroneous Doctrine. Burnet gives us the extract of a Sermon, preached by one Cole, who was present at this heretical Archbishop's Execution; which, if true, shews that the Spirit of Contradiction, and ecclesiastical Hypocrisy ^l, had an equal Share in that Catastrophe. 'Tis a Shame that Religion should be justify'd by Reasons so unworthy of Christian Sincerity and Uprightness.

We may date, from this Time, according to Burnet's Account, the Beginnings of the English Presbyterians. Mary's Persecution drove many Reformers into foreign Countries, especially towards Frankfort. "These, says Burnet, found the Ceremonies of the Country in which they then lived agreeable to their Way of thinking: So laying aside the Liturgy of Edward, they compiled another, according to the Plan of Geneva and of the French reformed Churches. This Step highly displeased the rest of the English, who thought that leaving off a Form of Divine Worship, whilst the Authors of it were maintaining the Truth of it, and sealing their Testimony with their own Blood, was a Mark of Contempt for their Persons, and too little Concern for their Sufferings." This short Narrative introduces two Reflections of some Moment; the first is, in all Sects whatever, the Generality are less concerned for the Doctrine which should unite them, than for those who cement that Union by Formularies and Liturgies, to which, in process of Time, an infinite Deference is paid: No Wonder then, that most Men hate Novelties; that the clearing up even the most indifferent Point, which no ways endanger Salvation, becomes an odious Task; and that the profound Veneration paid to Formularies, soon or late, ⁱ Some Sort of Persecution may be thought necessary to prevent Libertinism in Religion; Dissenters, for Example, from the standing Worship of any Country, may be hindered from the publick Exercise of their Religion, from publick Offices of Trust and Profit; still without forcing their Consciences, by depriving them of Life, or Liberty, or Possessions, or Birth-Rights. No Sect could then justly complain; as for Atheists and Fanaticks (if it is evidently proved that they are Disturbers of Civil Society by Dogmatizing) let them be dealt with as State Criminals.

^k This Weakness, says Father Orleans, was a Dishonour to Protestants . . . He became a Catholick to save his Life, and died a Protestant to be revenged on those who put him to Death: This is witty; but Cranmer's Character in Bossuet, Lib. 7. is far more solid.

^l This Hypocrisy appeared also in the Trials of Bucer and Fagius. They were cited, though dead, or any body to appear for them: They could not; it was not safe for any one else: They were condemned, their Bodies burnt, and a Bishop said in his Discourse on that Occasion, that the Judges were unwilling to come to such Extremities.

bring on a kind of Tradition, and that Respect for Antiquity, with which the Christians of the first Ages reproached the Pagans, with so much more Grounds, that one of the greatest Men amongst the Heathens, writing to an intimate Friend, made no Difficulty to recommend to him a Veneration^m even for Fables. The second Remark is, that this pretended Contempt for those Persons who had changed the Liturgy, was, of itself, capable to produce in Time the most inveterate Animosities. “ Disputes ran daily higher and higher, (says our Historian of the Reformation, “ Cox went to Francfort and obtained an Order from the Magistrates, “ That the English Church of that Place should make Use of no other Form of “ divine Service than that of England. This did not end the Quarrel, it went further “ than was thought at first. Those who were inclined to follow the Discipline of “ Geneva began to censure and find Fault with several Parts of the English “ Liturgy. One Knox ⁿ, a violent and turbulent Man, carried on the Controversy “ with all possible Heat, engaged Calvin in the Quarrel, and made him write upon “ that Subject in such a Manner as was most likely to exasperate both Parties “ Several other Occurrences widened the Breach. They disputed warmly about “ ecclesiastical Censures and the Debates at last were so irritated on both “ Sides, that a Paper War ensued, in which all the Bitterness which the rankest “ Animosity could suggest was display’d and that about Subjects “ no ways essential to Christianity, and of no Importance, as to Conscience “ Such were the Seeds^o of those Divisions which have, and still do, embroil the Re- “ formers of England.”

Something must be mentioned likewise of the Treatment which the Bible, translated into English, met with. It was burnt, not as heretical, for no Christians would entertain such Thoughts of Scripture: ’Tis likely therefore that it was condemned to the Flames, as being falsely translated, or as useless, and even dangerous, to the Laity, or as a Snare made Use of to lead the People head-long into Heresy. Those who burnt it were, to be sure, persuaded it was obnoxious to those three Accusations; but the two last were judged ill-grounded in France, where it has been translated, interpreted, paraphrased, and commented upon several times in the vulgar Language of that Country, to be used universally by the Laity; and though there are not wanting those who disapprove this Conduct towards a Book which, in their Opinion, seems to favour Heresy; chiefly amongst the Italians, who have as great a Respect for their Holy Land of Italy, as Pliny ^p would have inspired into his Friend for Greece: ’Tis likely the Bible will maintain its Ground to the End of the World, and that no Fault will be found with it, except that external one of being read^q without reaping any Advantage by it.

QUEEN

^m Sit apud te honor . . . : Fabulis quoque. So Pliny, Lib. 8. Ep. 24. writes to a Friend who was going to Greece in Quality of a Magistrate. And as most Men are Slaves to the Forms, Order, and System of their Religion, good or bad they do not enquire, there are but few who act otherwise than Pliny advises; they leave to others the Trouble of enquiring and examining for them.

ⁿ He may also be called a Fanatick. He called Edward’s English Liturgy a superstitious Model borrowed from the Papists. From this his Character flowed the seditious Opinions he broached, and which at last brought Charles the First to the Block. He also feigned himself a Prophet. This Man began the Scots Reformation, and certainly was no Apostle, unless a hot, fiery, and bitter Zeal, so often condemned by Christ, should be thought a necessary Qualification of an Apostle. See Knox’s Life, in a Book printed at London in 1644, under the Title of An History of the Reformation of Scotland. It breathes nothing but Fanaticism, and accordingly was made publick under Cromwel.

^o See Neal’s History of the Puritans, printed in 1732.

^p Habe ante oculos, hanc esse terram, quæ nobis miserit jura, quæ leges vieta non acceperit, sed . . . dederit, &c. says Pliny, Lib. 8. Ep. 24.

^q The Author of Occasional Thoughts in Reference to a virtuous or Christian Life, printed in 1705, says, that this is occasioned by its being read with a Mind prejudiced in Favour of the Opinions of their Masters or

QUEEN Mary's Death, if the Expression may be allowed, proved mortal to the Catholick Religion in England, and brought again the Reformed to Life. Elizabeth, who succeeded Mary, had been brought up with the utmost Antipathy against the Pope and the Religion of which he is the Head. But on the other Side, she loved Ceremonies and Spondor in the religious Worship: This was the Reason for which the outward and the ceremonious Part of the English Reformation was settled, as we now see it in that Part of the Protestant Communion which is called the Church of England, or High Church. She no sooner came to the Crown, but the Protestants shewed as much Zeal in pulling down Images, affronting Priests, abolishing the Mass, &c. as the Roman Catholicks had done in repairing the Breaches made in their Religion. The new Queen ordered first, that the Epistles and Gospels, the Lord's Prayer, the Creed, and the Decalogue, should be read in English. The Litanies were sung in the same Language, and the Priests omitted the Elevation of the blessed Sacrament. The first Parliament convened in her Reign granted to the Crown the Tythes and First-fruits, bestowed on the Queen the Title of 'Head of the Church, and gave to the People leave to have Divine Service performed in the vulgar Tongue, and to receive under both Kinds, &c.

Some Conferences about Religion had been held between the Catholicks and Protestants, the Result of which was, that each Side persisted in its own Opinions, they were displeased one with the other, and according to Custom reciprocally bestowed on their Adversaries the Appellation of Shufflers, Calumniators, Tricksters, &c. However that be, the Protestant Party was victorious in the End; for the Parliament made an Act to establish Uniformity in the Church Service, and appointed Protestant Divines to review Edward's Liturgy. Burnet, whom we follow, assures us, that " the only considerable Alteration made by those Commissioners was in the Article " of the Eucharist. They intended to draw up an Office for the Communion
 " couched in such nice Terms as to avoid declaring against a corporeal Presence, and
 " by that Means unite all the English into one and the same Church, most of them " being possessed with that Opinion. On this Account the Divines were ordered " to say nothing against it, and to leave it undecided, as a speculative Notion, which " was left to every one's Choice, either to believe or reject it. In Order to compass
 " this Design, the Rubrick of Edward's Liturgy (which explained upon what Con" sideration the Communion was received kneeling in the Church of England) was " expunged. The said Rubrick said, that it was not intended by that Ceremony to pay " any Adoration to a corporeal Presence of the Body and Blood of Christ, which were in " Heaven, and no where else. They made likewise another Amendment of the same " Nature. In Edward's first Liturgy, the Priest giving the Communion, said to or Doctors; so that every one finds in it the Tenets of his Sect only, &c. See Pag. 134. But how can this be helped: Is every Christian capable of examining every Point of Controversy? Or shall we say, it must be read only to learn the Moral Duties, and only relying on the Authority of God who inspired it, doctrinal Controversies laid aside. But then a Man who loves religious Disputes will pretend, Cicero's Book of Offices is as good for that as the Bible.

^r See Burnet, Lib. VI. and Bossuet, Lib. X.

^r See Bossuet, as above cited, about Elizabeth's being unwilling to accept of that Title. But Mr. Chevr. . . . who, to be sure, knew more of the Matter than Bossuet or Burnet, very cunningly explains this Scrupulosity of Elizabeth. " Two Motives, says he, engaged her to reject the Title of Supreme Head: First, that the Catholicks might be more easily prevailed upon to own her ecclesiastical Supremacy, couched in softer Terms, and more apt to quiet their tender Consciences: Secondly, that this Title was due to the Founder of the Christian Religion, and to him only." See Abridg. of the Hist of Eng. Tom. 4. What Pity 'tis all the World is not acquainted with that Writer's Penetration into the inmost Recesses of scrupulous and tender Consciences?

^r See Bossuet, as above-cited.

“ the Receivers, May the Body or Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ keep your Body and your Soul unto Life everlasting. At the second publishing of Edward's Liturgy those Words were left out as too favourable to the Belief of a corporeal Presence, instead of which, the following were inserted. Take this and eat, remembering that Christ died for you, feed on him in your Heart by Faith, and with Thanksgiving. Or, in taking the Chalice, Drink this in remembrance that the Blood of Jesus Christ was spilt for you, and give him Thanks. The Turn of both these Expressions answering the Intention of the Commissioners, they resolved to blend them together; and they altered likewise some Prayers.” The Catholicks strongly opposed the new Corrections of the Liturgy, and one of them said openly in Parliament, “ that the new Religion had admitted of, and suffered, Revolutions every two Years, of which he brought as a palpable Evidence the Doctrine concerning the Presence of Jesus Christ in the Eucharist.” The same Party were also violently bent against the other Alterations, chiefly against the Queen's ecclesiastical Supremacy, which Repugnance occasioned the Deprivation of all the Catholick Bishops who lost their Bishopricks. After this Elizabeth went on, and entirely re-established the Reformation; she even added some new Regulations to what had been done by Edward. She withstood, for a considerable Time, all Petitions to pull down Images, but could not overcome the repeated Intreaties of the Protestant Bishops of those Days against Images: And their Successors shewed as much Severity against Pictures, both which are infinitely less dangerous than the unbounded Liberty which is daily taken of writing and publishing scandalous Libels against the Christian Religion; which we do not find that Protestants endeavour much to restrain. Could not the Use of Images have been kept up in Churches, either as being barely ornamental, or as a Subject of Edification to the common People; and these kept within such narrow and due Bounds by Pastoral Instructions against the superstitious Use of them, to which they are naturally inclined? However Elizabeth's new Regulations, as far as they concern the Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of England, are as follow.

“ To prevent the indecent and scandalous manner in which several Priests had contracted Marriages, she ordered that no Priest or Deacon should marry without the Consent of the Bishop of the Diocese, the Knowledge of two Justices of the Peace, and the Approbation of the Woman's Relations and Friends. Churchmen were commanded to use the same Dress “ as at the two Universities (Oxford and Cambridge) according to the different Degrees they should have taken there Tavern-keepers and other publick Houses were forbid selling . . . during the Time of divine Service . . . No Preachers were allowed to exercise that Function without first obtaining Leave from the Ordinaries of those Places in which they resided She gave Power to the Bishops to name in each Parish some discreet and prudent Persons, who should oblige all the Parishioners to go to Church every Sunday and Holiday And whoever, after due Admonition and Exhortation, should be found deficient in that Duty, was to be prosecuted “ according to the utmost Seve-

“ She was convinced that Decency and good Order required that Ministers should be distinguished by their Dress. See Burnet, Lib. VI.

“ Mr. Chevr. Tom. 4. inveighs bitterly against the Roman Catholicks, his ancient Brethren; but, at last, speaks with much Equity and Judgment of this Conduct of Elizabeth. “ The Parliament, says he, imposed grievous Penalties on all English Subjects who should refuse being present at the Divine Service, as by Law established. This Statute excepted no one; all Sects, even of Protestants, were obliged to comply with it. Thus was renewed that Constraint so much detested and complained of under the despotick Government of Henry the VIIIth. Elizabeth exceeded even her Father in the absolute Dominion over Men's Consciences, &c.” This Behaviour, as it suited the political Views of those Times, so it becomes a new Proof, that the Reformation is only stamp'd with the Seal of human Nature.

“ rity of the Law. She further commanded, that the Prayers appointed for the com“ mon Service, and the Litanies should be read on all Wednesdays and Fridays; that “ they should be severely punished * who should reproach others with the odious “ Names of Papist, Heretick, Schismatick, &c. that no Book should be printed “ without being licensed by one of the Archbishops, or the Bishop of London, or “ one of the Chancellors of the two Universities, or the Bishop of the Diocese, or “ Archdeacon of the Place: That Prayers should be said kneeling, and that they “ should bow at the Name of Jesus :.” As to the Bread which was to serve for the Communion, she ordered it to be “ plain Bread, of a round Figure, somewhat larger “ and thicker than Wafers, without any Representation stampd upon it: Moreover “ she altered the Prayer which is said immediately before the Sermon, in which men“ tion was made of the Saints in these Words: That they with us, and we with them,
 “ may be able, all of us, to rise again unto Glory; the three first, they with us, were “ left out, as being too favourable to praying for the Dead.” This new Liturgy was read, for the first Time, throughout the whole Kingdom, on the Feast of St. John the Baptist, in the Year 1559.

PARKER, as strenuous and zealous a Promoter of the Reformation, as his Predecessor Cranmer, was consecrated Archbishop of Canterbury towards the End of the same Year: This was performed, says Burnet, according to the Ritual for Ordinations made under Edward the VIth. Parker after this consecrated fourteen Bishops: This Fact is here mentioned because it occasioned a great Dispute, renewed in our Days ^a, about the Validity of English Ordinations. Parker’s Consecration is said to be null ^b because the essential Form of Order was omitted, and because Bar- low, who is said to have been his Consecrator, had not been consecrated ^c himself.
 Another Story has been published, that Parker was made Bishop at a Tavern called the Nag’s Head. “ At this Place, they say, the Bishops, appointed for that Cere“ mony, met; the Bishop of Landaff, not daring to perform that Function, after “ Bonner’s forbidding it, the other Bishops named, (Barlow, named to be Bishop of “ Clickester, Scory, named to the See of Hereford, with Coverdale, who was Bishop “ of Exeter under Edward the VIth, and Hodgkins, Suffragan of Bedford) being fur“ prized and stunned with that Prohibition, withdrew into a Room of the said “ Tavern. There Scory bad them kneel, and put the Bible on their Heads or “ Shoulders. . . . When he had pronounced these Words, Receive the Power to “ preach

* This Regulation was worthy to come from a Christian Princess, such odious Names do not become truly religious Persons; yet it must be owned, they are too common, and only serve to ease for that Moment the bitter Zeal of a few Bigots, either Catholics or Protestants, who against all the Rules of Christianity hate one another heartily.

^a To pay the Honour due to Christ’s divine Nature and Person.

^b Cardinal Peele was Archbishop of Canterbury, between Cranmer and Parker.

^c See Courayer’s Preface to his Dissertation on the Validity of the English Ordinations, wherein he says, that long before, viz. in 1606. Mason, Archdeacon of Norfolk, had wrote to maintain them, that Champney, another Englishman, answered him, and was confuted, and that he (Courayer) undertook to search further upon account of Abbé Renaudet’s Memorial, published by Mr. Gould in 1720, on the true Belief of the Catholic Church.

^d Dec. 17. 1559. Parker’s Consecration was thus. First the Morning Prayers were said, then Scory preached a Sermon suitable to the Occasion, Parker was presented to Barlow, and having taken the Oath of Supremacy, and several Prayers prescribed in the new Ritual being said, then he received the Imposition of Hands with these Words: Receive the Holy Ghost, and remember to raise in you the Grace which has been given you by the Imposition of Hands. Then the Gospel was put into his Hands, with these Words: Be mindful to teach and exhort (the People agreeably to this Book) and continually meditate on the Precepts it contains. They all received the Communion: But the giving him the Pastoral Staff and other Ceremonies were omitted.

^e See Courayer, Chap. 3. of Dissertation, and in Tom. 2. the Proofs of Barlow’s being a Bishop.

^f See p. 21. and following of Courayer’s Dissertation, Vol. I. how this Nag’s Head Story is confuted.

^g Father Courayer’s Argument, Vol. I. p. 111. runs thus: “ Imposition of Hands and Prayer, that is the “ calling upon the Holy Ghost, to obtain for the Bishop elect Grace to perform worthily the Functions of “ hi;

“ preach the Word of God in its Purity, they all rose up as if they had been truly ordained and consecrated Bishops.” This Account Burnet finds Fault with, as a Story invented forty Years after, and at a Time when probably all the Witnesses who had been present might be dead; and proves the Validity^f of Parker’s Ordination. As to those who question Parker’s Consecration “ because all the Bishops of the Province of Canterbury were not present at the Consecration of their Primate, and that of the four Bishops who supply’d their Place, three had no Bishopricks, and the fourth was but a Suffragan; ” Burnet endeavours to prove the Legitimacy of it, and its being canonical, by several Histories which happened in the Arians Time, and by other Reasons which may be seen in his History of the Reformation of England.

Now to go on with the Account of this great Revolution, the Bishops of Queen Elizabeth published a new Profession of Faith, or at least added to and altered some Points in that, which had been drawn up in Edward’s Reign. The chief Amendments are these. 1. They leave it undecided how Christ descended into Hell. 2. To the Article concerning the Authority of the Church, they add, that it has Power to appoint Rites and Ceremonies, and is the Judge of Controversies, yet subordinate to Scripture. 3.^e As to the Eucharist, they say, that the Body of our Lord Jesus Christ is given and received in a spiritual Manner, and that Faith is the Means by which we receive it. We shall not enter into Particulars about the Translation of the Bible, and several other circumstantial Facts of less Moment. But we cannot end this Subject without letting our Readers know, that Charles the Second, soon after the Restauration, ordered some Bishops and Divines to review the English Liturgy, and the Form of Ordination, which had been laid aside with Episcopacy by Cromwell. This Liturgy, with the Form of Ordination altered, were approved by the Parliament of 1662; and this is the last Change with which the Church of England has been reproached on that Subject.^h

THE short Account hitherto given, would prove still more deficient, if we did not mention the Scots Reformation. Its Motives were the same, which other Reformers alledged; if you believe them, the Salvation of Souls is their only Concern: So the publick Welfare of Civil Society is the only Aim of those who promote Revolutions in the State. Accordingly all the Protestant Writers of those Days, all those who approved of the Reformation in Scotland, unanimously assure us, that the Scots Churchmen were guilty of as many and as great Irregularities, as those of England, or of any other Country in Europe; that those Disorders being arrived to the highest Pitch, and become unsufferable, People began to enquire into the Causes of them, and to compare the Actions of those Ecclesiasticks, with the Pattern set them by Christ and his Apostles; that from this Enquiry into their Morals, follow-

“ his Ministry, are the only essential Matter and Form of Order. (Which, says he, is proved by the ancient Greek and Latin Rituals and Pontificals now in Being.) But these two were used in the new Form of English Ordination, therefore nothing essential, either in Matter or Form, was wanting in Parker’s Ordination.” This Courayer endeavours to prove; and we have mentioned it, as impartial Writers, only to let the Readers see how this learned Monk defends the Form of Parker’s Consecration, &c. as above related, Note^b in the foregoing Page.

^f See Burnet, Lib. VI.

^e Burnet, Lib. VI. says, great Caution was used not to speak too plain on this nice Point, and Bossuet, Lib. X. answers Burnet’s Reasons.

^h Within a few Years Mr. Whiston published a strange sort of a Map, which he called, The Rule of Christian Faith. ’Twas a Table divided into 22 Columns, which contained as many Professions of Faith, drawn up in the three first Ages, concerning the fundamental Points of the Christian Religion: It was so disposed, that whatever concerned the same Subject, was within two parallel Lines drawn cross the Map; which, if read from Top to Bottom of each Column, you have each Creed by itself: But if read from left to right, you see the various Ways of wording the same Article of Faith. Such a Table would be very useful, to contain all the Professions of Faith made since the Reformation, that the Variations, Differences, and affected Obscurity of them, might be more plainly perceived, by all Christian Churches.

ed a more important Search into the Doctrine, which may well be said to be the Ground of Morality, and the Rule of our Conduct: That, finding here many Changes and Additions, they conceived they had a Right to reform it, to instruct the Faithful, to invite them to this Reformation, and thus to separate from a corrupted Church, a Body of Christians, worthy to be called the Church of Christ. Such was the Plea of the Scots Reformers: Such will ever be, to the End of the World, the Pretence of all Reformers. But God only, and those whom he is pleased to authorise, to direct, and to enlighten, by his own immediate Grace, can accomplish such an Undertaking, without Weakness, without human Policy, without Variations, without any of those Shifts which worldly Prudence inspires: No Wonder then if we meet with the same Blemishes in the Scots Reformation, as in the fore-mentioned, that of England, and other Countries. We need not mention here over again, that Wicliff and the Lollards had paved the Way for the Scots Reformers, as for those of England; and that their Foot-steps were still visible, when the Lutherans and other Protestants began their Schism. 'Tis likewise universally known that the new Opinions of the latter had reached Scotland, long before Henry the VIIIth's Death: Patrick Hamilton, a Gentleman of a noble Descent, had lost his Life with several others, because they would not abjure them: But neither those Executions, nor all the Endeavours of the Clergy, were able to stop the Progress of the Protestant Religion: On the contrary, the People were desirous to be instructed in a Doctrine for the Sake of which its Followers were willing to be burnt; such is the ordinary Consequence of Persecutions, which yet seldom leave Men at Liberty to try and judge: But as we are naturally inclined to favour the weakest Party, it is not to be wonder'd, that Compassion, without any further Examen, forcibly persuades us, that Truth is on the Side of those who suffer Persecution. This is one of those strong Bents of Men's Hearts, which by its Activity, has been the Occasion of believing that those who embraced the Reformation did it by the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost. The Scots being in such Dispositions gave a willing Ear to the Reformers, and the new Opinions were followed with the same Rapidity, which had so lately carried away England, with a great Part of France and Germany. The first Demand of the Reformers was to have the Bible in the vulgar Language, and the Parliament of 1543 was forced to grant that Leave. This Desire, abstracted from its Consequences, was just and reasonable. Complying with it freed the Scots from a heavy Yoke of many Abuses, too favourable to the exorbitant Power of the Clergy, and no less opposite to the Laws delivered in that divine Book: But on the other Side, the giving up that Book into every one's Hands without any Restriction, exposed them to the Danger of arguing too boldly, and without End, about its Contents, and of wresting it from its natural Sense, to reconcile it to all their Whims. However it was granted to the Scots, as it had been to others, without any Limitation: Accordingly it produced the same Effects in Scotland, as in England and Germany; every particular Person took the Liberty of upholding, by its Authority, the several Opinions they had resolved to maintain, or to espouse: Every particular Person thought himself able to distinguish, by its Light, Tares from good Corn; and at last this private Examen and private Spirit caused the Downfal of Church Authority in Scotland, as every where else. Though Patrick Hamilton, Seton, a Dominican Fryar, and several others, are generally looked upon as the first Authors of the Scots Reformation; yet the Puritans of that Country are not willing to own any other first Reformer than Knox, that sworn Enemy of the English Liturgy, as is said before. This John Knox received his Call to the Ministry, such as it was, in 1547, from another *Scots Predicant*ⁱ, whose Name was John^k Rough. The next following Sunday Knox preached publicly against the Pope in the Parish Church of St. Andrew. His Example encouraged many other Predicants to inveigh against the Church^l of Rome. Knox, being protected by some Scots Lords, went afterwards to preach in divers Parts of the Kingdom; and celebrated the Lord's Supper, according to the Protestant Rite, at several Gentlemen's Houses. In the Year 1556, having before published his Sentiments openly at Edinburgh, he wrote to Queen Mary, Regent of Scotland,^m an apologetical Letter in Defence of his Opinion, but so much wanting in the Regards due to a Crown'd Head, so stuff'd with bitter Invectives against the Roman Church, that Mary called it a Libel, when she gave it to be perused by Beton, Bishop of Glasgow. Some Timeⁿ before this, the English of Geneva, who conformed^o to Calvin's Liturgy, had invited Knox to come over to be with them: As soon as he went, he was burnt in Effigy at Edinburgh: But the Scots Brethren, and amongst them several of the best Families, wrote to him, from Sterling, so pressing a Letter, in March 1556, that, having first consulted Calvin, the Oracle of the Reform'd, and the other Brethren of Geneva, who all unanimously declared, that resisting this Call would be a Rebellion against God, he could not withstand their earnest Solicitations. He set out upon this Journey in the Month of September following, to go back to his Brethren in Scotland; but he was stopt at Dieppe by two Letters^p, no ways agreeable to the Flesh, which he received from two Faithful of Scotland. Those Letters mentioned some Disappointments, which the Reformation had met with. The angry Apostle of the Puritans wrote to the Brethren, to complain of those Disappointments, and to encourage them to free themselves from Oppression: "For you must venture your Lives, says he, even against Kings and Emperors, to deliver the Oppressed. For this you are called Princes of the People . . . you receive Homage and Respect from your Brethren, only upon Account of the Duties of your Office . . . and this Duty consists in re- venging and freeing your Brethren and Subjects from Violence and Oppression." This Letter made a deep Impression on the Minds of the Nobility and Commonalty, who were, as is said before, very much inclined to the Reformation. The Congregation, (for that was the Name given then to these new^q Converts) entered into an Association^r to defend themselves, and promised, in the Presence of the Divine Majesty, that they would maintain, even with the Loss of their Lives, the Reformation and its Ministers, against Satan and every tyrannick Power which should oppose it. This Declaration, and the extraordinary Increase of the Protestant Party intimidated the Queen Regent; she slackened the Prosecutions against them: Policy and a superior Force overcame her Zeal for the Catholics; and as the Protestants were of some Service to her, the same political Views made her promise she would give them no Disturbance about Religion: But the Deference she paid to the Remonstrances of her ⁱ We mean no Injury or Contempt by this Word; 'tis only used to denote those who preach without having received Ordination, as it is the Custom among the Puritans.

^k Burnet, Lib. 3. says, he was burnt in England under Queen Mary.

^l The Catholick Church, is here called the Church of Rome, as Protestants call it.

^m Knox reprinted it with explanatory Additions, 1558.

ⁿ In July 1555.

^o Who had separated themselves (says Neal) from the superstitious and contentious Assembly at Francfort, which conformed to Edward's Liturgy.

^p This Account is taken out of Knox's Letter.

^q See Hist. of Ref. abovesited.

^r This Association was made in December 1557, and was signed by several Scots Lords. Knox's Letter is dated from Dieppe October 27. 1557: See the above-mentioned History.

Brother, the Cardinal of Lorrain, the Credit of the Archbishop of St. Andrew's and other Catholick Bishops of Scotland, prevailed upon her to 'break her Promise, or at least not to oppose the pretended Steadiness of the Clergy, or rather that invincible Obstinacy of theirs, which has so often, and still does daily bring the Church 'into the utmost Danger. But we must not charge the Church with this Excess, 'tis not her Spirit, but that of Churchmen, to make Religion consist in destroying all, without having any Regard to Circumstances, or to the Inclinations of the People. This same Spirit too often occasions the Breach of publick Faith, which Christ himself commands us to keep even to Infidels. The Catholicks of Scotland were inspir'd with that Spirit, they took no Warning from the Revolutions of which other Countries furnished so many sad Examples; they unmercifully burnt in St. Andrew's an old Priest named " Walter Mill, who had embraced the Reformation: And this Execution exasperated to the highest Pitch the Scots Protestants.

THESE last, far from being terrify'd, preached publickly in the Churches of St. Johnstown, and when the Queen ordered my Lord Ruthwen, who was Mayor of that Town, to force those Rebels to return to their Duty, this Nobleman answered, that he could bring their Bodies to Subjection, or even destroy them, as her Majesty pleased, but that he had no Power over Consciences. She then replied, both he and they should repent it. Several other Towns declared in Favour of the Reformation; their Ministers were cited to appear at Sterling; they accordingly began their Journey thither, but were so well attended, that she thought fit to countermand them, and to assure them, that this Citation should not be prosecuted: And yet 'tis said they were proclaimed Traitors for not complying with the Summons. This Treachery, in which the Character of the Guises appears so plain, increased the Protestant Party, which was also joined by some who were dissatisfy'd. At St. Johnstown the People broke the Images to pieces, endeavoured to stone to Death a Priest who was saying Mass, under Pretence, " that God having forbid Idolatry, they could not bear to see it publickly practised, in their own Presence, in spite of that Command; got in by Force, and plundered the Convents; demolished that of the Carthusians; and Rebellion spread itself so far, that in a short Time they were in a Condition to bring a considerable Army into the Field. The Queen proposed a general Pardon, and consented to leave to the Parliament the Judgment of all Disputes concerning Religion: But, to be short, we are told, that these Promises also were broke, and the Queen, being upbraided with it, answered, that Princes are not obliged to perform what they promise to Hereticks: " My Conscience, says she, requires me to extirpate all Sectaries." After this the Scots would not trust her any more. All engaged in the Party of the Reformers, and began in earnest both to abolish the ancient Customs which the Protestants esteem to be Abuses, and to approve of and confirm the Alterations which were made in the Doctrine: The Queen, in Consequence of this Change of Religion, lost all her Authority, and the Scots Nobility declared, she had forfeited her Right of governing ^r The Scots Puritans say, the Queen deceived them for a considerable Time by false Promises, and Dissimulation, till she had agreed with the Cardinal of Lorrain; then she openly declared against them, and told them, Though your Ministers should preach as much Truth as St. Paul, they shall be all of them banished out of the Kingdom.

^s One Example will prove the Truth of this Observation: In 1561, the French petitioned Pius the IV. by their Ambassador, for the Communion under both Kinds; this Favour was denied; and Cardinal Saint Ange voting against it said, Sooner than give such Poison to the French, let them all die. This happened at a Time when the Wounds, caused by the Schism of one Party, and the inflexible Obstinacy of the other, were still bleeding.

^t 'Tis related, that no body in that Town being willing to sell a Rope to tie Mill to the Stake, the Archbishop charitably offered his Bed-ropes for that Purpose.

^u See History, above-cited, Lib. 2.

the Kingdom. She died some Time after, and shew'd some Marks of Sorrow for what she had done, at least if we credit Protestant Writers, who even add * " that " her Regency was accompanied with Wisdom, Justice and Meekness, as long as she " followed the Motions of her own Heart." Upon her Death the Parliament met, and made four Acts in Favour of the Reformation. Their Purport was, the Down-fal of the Pope's Authority, the Destruction of Superstition, inflicting Penalties on those who said or heard Mass, lastly, to ratify and accept a Profession of Faith drawn up by Knox upon the ^y Model of that which Calvin had published.

THE foregoing Account of this Change of Religion shews plainly, that if the Catholick Churchmen and the Court Party were guilty of want of Toleration and Honesty, the Scots Protestants and their Teachers were equally guilty of taking violent Measures^z, of furious Passion, of Principles which were seditious, entirely opposite to the Gospel, which they pretend to follow exactly and without the least Alteration; and far different from the Conduct of that Apostolical Church which they endeavoured to re-establish in their own Country. Several Passages of this History shew the true Character of Knox, their chief Predicant. The Spirit of the whole Party may fully appear by the following Facts. In 1559, the Congregation in a Motion of a Saint-like Anger against the Roman Clergy (which last, to be sure, imitated the Pattern set them by Christ, when to the best of their Power they piled up the Fire and blew the Coles which were to burn the Scots Protestants) directed a Letter to the said Clergy, with this Inscription: To the Generation of Anti-Christ, to the pestilentious Prelates, and to all their Adherents, &c. The same Year, the same Congregation of Jesus Christ^a, in an Address presented to the Scots Nobility, having first insisted on the Necessity of a publick Conference, to decide whether the therein mentioned Abominations, which the pestilentious Papists call Religion, are really the true Religion of Jesus Christ, proceed further, and instruct the said Nobility in their Duty, which, according to the Address, consists in restraining^b and curbing the Madnes and

* See Barnet, Lib. 6.

^y In 1560, the 21st Article is remarkable by the many Words used, to explain how the Faithful spiritually eat the Body of Jesus Christ. The Original runs thus: " Notwithstanding the far Distance of Place, which " is betwixt his Body now glorified in Heaven, and us now mortal on this Earth; yet we most assuredly " believe, that the Bread that we break, is the Communion of Christ's Body, and the Cup which we bless " is the Communion of his Blood: So that we confess, and undoubtedly believe, that the Faithful, in the " right Use of the Lord's Table, so do eat the Body and drink the Blood of the Lord Jesus, that he re- " mains in them, and they in him. Yea that they are so made Flesh of his Flesh and Bones of his Bones, " that as the eternal God-head has given to the Flesh of Christ Jesus . . . Life and Immortality; so " does Christ Jesus . . . give to us the same Prerogatives, &c." Calvin's Profession says, that " tho' " Jesus Christ be in Heaven . . . yet we believe, that by the secret and incomprehensible Virtue of his " Spirit, he nourishes and enlivens us with the Substance of his Body and Blood, &c." That of the low Countries says, that " we receive by Faith the true Body and the true Blood of Christ our Saviour into " our Souls for our spiritual Life . . . yet the manner in which we eat it . . . is not the Mouth, " but the Spirit, by Faith." See the Volume of this Work which mentions the Greeks and Protestants, p. 382. By these various Forms it is evident, that the Reformers of Scotland, France, and the low Coun- tries, are as obscure in their Expressions, as the Catholicks and Lutherans; after so many fruitless Endeavours, why might they not bear with one another? But the Protestants will not suffer a Priest to adore Jesus Christ under the Appearances of Bread and Wine, which are no more such, nor the Priest bear with a Protestant, who says, the Eucharist consists in eating Christ spiritually: And so both neglect and lose the true Spirit of Communion, which is Charity.

^z The Catholicks of France reproach the Protestants of the same Country with the like Excesses and outrageous Behaviour, as in the Murder of the Duke of Guise, seditious Sermons, Libels and Papers posted up in publick Places against the Roman Church, &c. The Protestants either deny the Facts, or lay them at the Doors of particular Persons not owned nor countenanced by the rest; others say, Policy had the greatest Share in those Enormities, and that Religion was only the Pretence: Certainly the Reproaches on both Sides ought to be diminished; but what has been done by publick Assemblies, or by People authorized by the whole Party, cannot meet with so favourable an Interpretation; and of this we shall produce more Examples in the following Notes.

^a This Address to the Nobility was so subscribed.

^b See the same Principle in the above-cited History, &c. Knox uses Expressions much stronger, in the same Address, concerning Mary Queen of England.

Fury of the Wicked, tho' Kings and Emperors. Such are the seditious Principles which have inspired Subjects with such unheard of Boldness as to depose ^c and murder their King: But the Catholicks were not deficient in the same rebellious Spirit, for not to run back to those Times when Emperors were deposed, and their Subjects absolved from their Oaths of Fidelity to them, have we not had amongst us zealous Preachers in Favour of the League ^d, have we not seen Apologies ^e publickly printed in Defence of the Murderers of their Kings.

THE Reformation of Scotland must be fixed to the Year 1560, because, as we observed before, the Parliament approved in that Year Knox's Profession of Faith. This Scots Apostle, with the Doctrine and Principles of Calvin, brought likewise into his own Country the Manners and Discipline of Geneva; besides ordinary Ministers, they chose a Superintendent, as in the Lutheran Churches, at whose Reception Knox preached and said Prayers: They also elected Elders and Deacons. The Articles of ecclesiastical Policy, as contrived by the said Knox, were proposed to the Assembly which met in January 1561. The Imposition of Hands was reserved to be performed by the Ministers, but not as being absolutely necessary ^f. But these Articles were not accepted, and the new Discipline was established in Scotland, by the sole Power of their Ministers. In 1572, the Discipline was set upon a more fixed Foundation, but the Bishops had more Authority given them than the Puritans liked. Those Bishops, to whose Authority they were not used, did not last long, they were only tolerated three or four Years; and the Congregation never would positively approve that Discipline. Father Courayer ^g says, “ it plainly appears by the Book of Discipline presented to the Parliament of Scotland in 1578, that the Scots, though they kept up the Name of Bishops, were nevertheless true Presbyterians It was ordered, that Bishops should be subject to the Presbytery, and should exercise no other Functions but those which the Church should require of them.” This Discipline was fully settled at Edinburgh in 1581, when the first ^h Presbytery met there under the Protection of the Law. “ This Establishment occasioned the further spreading of the Opinion which looked on the Imposition of Hands to be useless towards being admitted to the Ministry Robert Bruce, who had preached at Edinburgh several Years, being chosen a Minister of that Town in 1598, and being

^c John Knox at an Audience he had of Mary Stuart Queen of Scotland, in order to maintain this Principle, that Subjects may draw their Swords against their Princes, chiefly in Defence of their Religion, and to obtain the free Exercise of it, made Use of this sophistical Comparison: “ Do you believe, said the Queen to him, that Subjects, having the Power in their Hands, may lawfully resist their Princes? Yes, Madam, he reply'd, if Princes exceed the Bounds of their Power, and command what ought not to obey'd, 'tis lawful to resist them. Are Princes to be honoured and obeyed farther than God requires those Duties to be paid to Father and Mother? Suppose a Father runs mad, and intends to kill his Children; they unite in their own Defence, they lay hold of their Father, disarm him, tie him, and keep him in Prison, till his Madness is over; do you believe, Madam, that those Children are criminal, or God offended by their Action? Even so when Princes put to Death their Subjects, who are Children of God, their blind Zeal is a Madness, during which, the Sword is to be taken from them, their Hands tied, and they themselves be confined, till they come to their Senses. This is true Obedience, which agrees with the Word of God.” Such were the Gospel Rules preached by the Apostle of the Puritans, which were only adapted to the Subversion of all States and Governments. See the above-cited Hist. of Ref. of Scot. Lib. 4. To what has been before alledged, to prove the French Protestants guilty of the same Crimes, add the 47 Art. of the Synod of Lyon, in 1563, and the seditious Libels and Sermons of the French Refugees, these fifty Years last past.

^d Sermons of Boucher and others.

^e Apol. pro Joan. Castell. in 8vo.

^f Whiston has put out a Pamphlet, in which he maintains, that all those who are solemnly named or employed in the Ministry, though in an irregular Manner, are nevertheless true Pastors, and may exercise all the Functions of that Office: Without which, he pretends, there would be no true Clergy, nor true Christians in the World. Could this be proved, it would end many Disputes about Mission and Validity of Orders.

^g Dissert. valid. Ordin. Tom. 1. p. 6.

^h Courayer seems by this Word to mean Presbyterian Consistories, or those Meetings in which they frame their ecclesiastical Ordinances.

“ desired to receive the Imposition of Hands, refused it, because (said he) the Ap“ probation of the Assembly supply’d the Place of Ordination : Yet he was prevailed “ upon to receive it, by the pressing Instances of many, still declaring that “ he look’d upon this Imposition of Hands only as a Commission to “ take Care of a particular Flock. James the First, who united in his Person the “ Kingdoms of England and Scotland, undertook to restore Episcopacy in Scot- “ land He sent for three Ministers into England, who received Episcopal “ Consecration in the Year 1610, at the Hands of the Bishops of London, Ely, “ Rochester, and Worcester : And these three consecrated afterwards other Bishops in “ Scotland During the Rebellion which brought Charles the First to the “ Scaffold, Episcopacy was abolished again in the Assemblies of Glasgow and of Edin- “ burgh, to settle Presbytery upon its Ruins : And so it remained till King Charles
 “ the Second’s Restauration, who thought it his Duty to give back to the Bishops “ their Authority, and to get them consecrated. For this End in 1664 he sent “ for four Presbyterian Ministers up to London, who were consecrated “ Bishops by the Bishop of Winchester, assisted by two others The Re“ volution in the State, which happened in 1688, caused a Change in the Govern“ ment of that Church likewise. The Scots Bishops were very affectionate to King “ James the Second ; upon the first Notice they received of the Prince of Orange’s “ Undertaking against his Father-in-Law they wrote to the King to assure him of “ their Fidelity. This Letter proved fatal to Episcopacy
 “ The Presbyterians took the Advantage of King William’s Inclination to their “ Party They ordered Matters so that the States of Scotland in 1689 “ solemnly petitioned for the Abolition of Episcopacy ; which they at last obtained,
 “ in 1695.

THIS is the true Account of the two Reformations of Great Britain : The one called Episcopal, predominant in England; the other Presbyterian, bearing the Sway in Scotland, and very powerful even amongst the English. We have set before our Readers the Reasons and chief Motives of the Conduct of the Reformers, and without taking upon us either to approve or condemn their Schism, we have not been ashamed to own, that the Disorders of the Religious and of the Clergy, the false and empty Devotions they introduced for their own temporal Interest, the exorbitant Power they assumed to themselves over the Consciences of the Faithful, furnished a specious Pretence for a Separation, into which the People, tired with Vexations, were easily drawn, and strengthened the Schism. Agreeable to these Notions we have freely and boldly judged the Actions of both Catholics and Protestants, as Occasion required; and if we have sometimes sharply reflected on the Conduct of each Party, we flatter ourselves ’twas deservedly, when human Passions, the Interest of particular Persons, Prejudices of Education, strengthened by inveterate Habits, and the political Views of some Princes, used Religion only as a Cloak to their evil Designs, and made Sport with Truth. The Expression is not too strong; Truth has been sported with on both Sides, and no Wonder. The Reform bears no such Marks of a Divine Work, as the Establishment of Christianity, or Foundation of Christ’s Church.
 No Reformer can prove that he received his Mission or Authority to reform from God ; no Apparition of Angels, no Miracles have been the Fore-runners of the Reformers; their Designs in Discipline have been uncertain, weak, subject to Variations, and generally followed too slavishly the Will of Princes. Their Doctrine has not been more steady, one Decision has often been contradictory to another. From all this we can only conclude, that those Reformations were only the Worksⁱ of Men, in which all Passions display'd themselves openly, as evidently appears from the History of the reforming Age. As to the Catholick Church, which must now come under Consideration, its publick Worship and Doctrine is every where, and at all Times, the same; the People are tractable, and keep within Bounds; the exterior Order and Discipline commands Fear and Veneration, which maintains the lawful Authority of the Church, and prevents every Upstart from framing to himself a Religion to his own Fancy, or venting his new-fangled Notions publicly, to some hundreds of Followers, as the Case has often been, in reformed Countries, in spight of all their Consistories, or Convocations.

MOREOVER the Submission and Docility required by the Catholick Church are no Hindrance to the Practice of moral Duties, or to the most exact Observance of Gospel Precepts. What else is necessary, to become a Christian? Nothing more, will a moderate Protestant say, till the Ignorance of the Faithful favoured too much the Excesses of those who governed the Church. This Ignorance increased by degrees, the Abuses went Hand in Hand with it; and when both were become almost universal, the Authority of the Church was not distinguished as it ought, from the unjust Power of the prevailing Party in the Church, which countenanced those Abuses; as in a civil Society, Usurpation supports itself by Laws obtained by Force. But may we not justly reply to this, that this Usurpation is the Beginning of this Work of Men? 'Tis freely owned, that the Excesses of those who sat at the Helm of the Christian Church were not supported by Revelation, nor by the Word of God, nor by Apostolical Tradition; they could not be justify'd, unless by the false and deceitful Tradition of latter Ages, which is certainly the Work of Men^k. But what have particular private Men to do with Abuses, which do not hinder them from serving God in the Purity of their Hearts, according to the Doctrine of Christ? What Authority has put into their Hands the Ax to cut down the Tree? What Right have they to raise Disturbances, under Pretence that Usurpation has made Laws in its ⁱ Yet, as such, they have been useful; the Clergy is more prudent; Abuses have been left off, Superstition is not so common, and the Faithful not so apt to follow blindly blind Guides: Learning has been improved in both Communions; and the Church of England's Learning and Toleration have been commendable.

^k We must here shew the Beginning of this false Tradition, and trace out the Time when primitive Doctrine was wrested to prove the indispensible Necessity of burning Men: Remonstrances, Censures, Excommunications, were Apostolical, as to Spirituals, being natural Appendixes to Truth. The Clergy, some Ages after, made use of their Credit to get Hereticks banished, deprived of their Goods and of the Rights of Citizens: This might be lawful for Emperors, not to shew Favour to those of a different Religion; but to take away their Property, was a beginning of Persecution: Tradition being once corrupted, and employed only for the Honour and Profit of Churchmen, then Hereticks were punished with Death; which yet was not inflicted, unless they publicly taught their Errors against the Law. Some Ages after, in order to unite the Interest of Truth with this false Tradition, which was to be upheld and justified, Hereticks were condemned to the Flames: But Faith was blended with useless Observances, and what attacked either was deemed Heresy. No Error was thought little, even they who favoured the least Error found no Mercy. All underwent the same Punishment; and the same Fire, which was a lively Representation of God's avenging Justice against Sinners, and of eternal Fire prepared in Hell for the Wicked, became also an Emblem of the little Charity and Mercy of Churchmen; who by the Laws of the Church ought not to spill Blood, nor to give their Vote for it. They went further, they judged and condemned not only the Errors which being made publick might give Scandal to weak Souls, Severity in that Case might have been just: But Errors were industriously sought for, where less expected, even in single Letters and Comma's. Lastly, to get an absolute Dominion over Consciences, by which, as they pretend, nothing was aimed at but the Love and Glory of God, poor Christians were pressed on all Sides to declare their Sentiments; which once gained, to save their Souls, they had no Chance or Choice left them, but Abjuration or Burning. Now, to conclude, we justly abominate the barbarous Custom of some Heathen Nations, who sacrifice Men to their Gods: Is not burning of Hereticks as much to be abhorred? Is not the burning of Men the same as sacrificing them to God?

own Favour, since they may keep a respectuous Silence, and live unmolested, without taking any Share in the Crimes of those who govern? If Divines dispute about such Points of Doctrine which human Reason cannot fathom, if they stigmatise one the other, as Idolaters, Prophane, or Libertines, let them dispute and scold on; what need we be frightened at the Excesses of some, or Consequences pretended to be drawn by others? Christ is God, we adore him, believe his Doctrine, and endeavour to imitate his Virtue and Patience. Religious Disputes are but the Works of Men, who sport themselves at the Expence of Truth, either as misled, or as Deceivers: The People attentively look on the Players, but cannot penetrate the Nicety of the Game: The Deceivers will meet with their deserved Doom: Those who are misled may be excused upon Account of their Sincerity; but even that often helps to deceive others.

DISSERTATION
CONCERNING THE CUSTOMS
AND CEREMONIES
OF THE CHURCH of ENGLAND.

DISSERTATION

Concerning the Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of ENGLAND.

THE foregoing Dissertation contained the Establishment of the English Liturgy under Edward the VIth, and Queen Elizabeth. James the First made some slight ^a Alterations in it. Some Troubles and Disputes were occasioned by it under Cromwell, when the Power of the Puritans almost abolished it: But in 1660 Charles the Second restored it, and ordered that it should be review'd and corrected; which being done, the King and Parliament published a Decree to have the publick Service conformable to it throughout the Kingdom ^b, that it might be the same in every Church. The Preface of that Liturgy then printed ^c gives an Account of the Re-establishment of it, and of the Alterations made in it ^d. Father Le Brun cites a Passage of the Dedicatory Epistle to a Latin Translation of this Liturgy of Charles the Second, in which it is called præstantissima, most excellent, and the Reason given there for this Encomium is, ^e that every Christian ought to be content with it, whatever Opinion he may hold concerning the Eucharist.

THREE Prefaces are set before this Liturgy, which we shall follow in the Description of the Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of England; one has been cited before; the other two explain the Publick Service and the Ceremonies either retained or left out. One of them insinuates, that the religious Office had been corrupted, ^f by planting in uncertain Stories, Legends, Responses, Verses, vain Repetitions, &c. To which it is added, that before the English Reformation, divine Service being performed in a Language not understood by the common People, 'twas an empty Sound which only affected the Ear, without reaching to the Heart; that several Books of

§.

^a See the Proclamation at the Beginning of the French Edition of 1616. Those Alterations were made after the Conferences at Hampton Court in 1603, in order to reconcile the Disputes about it. The same Year a Pamphlet was published, intitled, The most humble Petition of the Ministers of the Church of England for the Reformation of some Ceremonies, and some Abuses, &c. The Complaints ran upon four Points; the Form of the Service, the Ministers of the Church, the Life led by them, and Discipline. As the Petition contained several Articles which might draw on bad Consequences, the King endeavoured by a Proclamation to calm the Minds of his Subjects; he promised a Conference, which was accordingly held at Hampton Court, but without Success.

^b In August 1662.

^c See the Preface to the Liturgy printed in French in 1663. This Translation was made by Durel: So 'tis not the old French one of the foregoing Reigns; yet the French is not very elegant: However this is the Version which has ever been printed since 1663.

^d Those Alterations, according to Father Le Brun, Tom. 4. of his Liturgies are, 1. In the Litany we find this Petition: Deliver us, O Lord, from Seditions, secret Conspiracies, all false Doctrine, and Schism. The Word Schismi was then added, on which Father Le Brun takes Notice, that Henry VIII. Edward VI. and Queen Elizabeth, were so plainly Authors of Schism, that they certainly did not think it an Evil from which we should desire to be delivered; so this Word alluded only to the Disorders committed by the Puritans in the preceding Reign. 2. "The leaving out (says Le Brun) Prayers for the Dead, had so often been found Fault with, that it was not thought fit to omit it quite; but it is so worded, that it is not easy to know whether it is a Prayer or no: At the End of the Prayer for all the Church Militant upon Earth, in the Edition of 1663, and those which followed, are these Words (We bless also your holy Name for all your Servants who are departed in your Faith and Fear, beseeching you to grant us Grace so well to follow their Example, &c.)" 3. In the Office for the Communion, Edward's Rubrick, to give a Reason for kneeling, was put in again. Elizabeth, who, says Le Brun, would leave that Point undecided, had left it out, as inclining too much to Zuinglianism, and as being too odious to Catholics.

^e Especially Catholics, in ea ipsi Pontificii nil desiderare possunt, in ea nihil culpæ Reformati cujuscunque Confessionis, adeo est a partium studio aliena. Le Brun justly censures and ridicules this Way of reconciling Differences, and says, that neither Catholics approve it, nor even some of the High-Church are pleased with it.

^f They are the very Words of the Preface.

Scripture were began to be read, without going through, because numberless unprofitable Additions interrupted the Reading; that as to the Psalms divided by the ancient Fathers into seven Nocturns and other Hours for each Day in the Week, some were too often repeated and others omitted; and that the Rules ^z prescribed for some Ages for the Variations of Offices occasioned much Loss of Time in turning over the Leaves; so that Part of the Time appointed for reciting the Office was spent in finding out what was to be read. In the new Liturgy, say they, besides leaving out those forementioned useless Things, and the whole being easily understood by all the Faithful, the entire divine Service is contained in one Book, the Rules or Rubricks are plainer and more convenient to keep up the Order of Reading more easily, and more agreeably to the Majesty of divine Worship. At the Beginning a Calendar is placed, to shew that Order, in which the whole Series of Lessons for all Sundays, Holidays and Anniversaries, &c. may be seen at once.

IN the other Preface mention is made of the due Choice of Ceremonies. Some which were established with a good Intention are by Length of Time become trifling and superstitious; others were introduced into the Church by a mistaken Zeal, and an indiscreet Devotion: The easy Compliance of Christians with these latter has increased the Abuses: As they are detrimental to Religion, and serve only to blind Christians, there is no need of a long Deliberation, say the Authors of that Preface, they deserve to be entirely rejected: As for the first Sort, they may be retained, when purged of all Superstition, in which Case they are useful, both for the decent Order and Majesty of divine Worship, and to help and increase the Devotion of the Faithful. Religion indeed does not essentially require such or such Ceremonies, which, considered in themselves, are of no great Importance: But ^h the wilful and contemptuous Transgression and breaking of a common Order and Discipline is no small Offence before God: And as no private Man has sufficient Power to establish this Order and Discipline, neither does it belong to him to alter or abolish them, unless a lawful Call from God should give him ⁱ that Authority. Now, say the Authors of that Preface, all the Ceremonies kept up in the English Church are instructive, and easily understood. The Christian Religion is not a Law of Ceremonies, like that published by Moses, and therefore ought not to be kept in Obscurity under the Vail of numberless figurative and mysterious Ceremonies, under which Christians now groan, as under a heavy Yoke, an insufferable Burthen. The Gospel is spiritual, and wants no outward ceremonial Worship as being essential, only in order to make some Impression on the Minds of the common People, by some publick and exterior Customs, which are but a necessary Consequence of the good Order and Decency kept in Christian Churches: But these are not to be put in Comparison with Religion itself, or be thought of an equal Value, or any ways so blended with it, as to shew no Distinction between both. This prevents, for the future, all the Abuses heretofore committed in so many Ceremonies, established and kept up by Superstition, Avarice, or a mistaken Devotion. This is said in Defence of the Ceremonial Worship of the English Liturgy, without any Intention to condemn those Nations who have not thought fit to embrace it; each national Church may use in their divine Service those Ceremonies

^z The Words of the Preface are, the Number and Hardness of the Rules, called the PYE, and the manifold Changings of the Service, &c. This Word Pye signifies the set Order of Lessons and Prayers used in the Church, from the Greek Word Pinax, a Table, whence by Abbreviation is derived the barbarous Word Pica; the first Letter of each Order of Prayer was called, Littera Picata.

^h Those are the very Words of the Preface.

ⁱ A remarkable Clause or Exception!

which appear most necessary and useful to Religion, still avoiding all Abuses and Superstitions. So far is we think a faithful Abstract of the said Preface.

WE must take some further Notice of this Uniformity, which the Church of England has so earnestly endeavoured to compass ever since its Separation from Rome. This could not be attained to, without uniting the People in an exterior Form of Worship, as well as in the inward Belief: So a common Liturgy for the whole Kingdom was requisite. It is very proper, we are told, the same Order and Discipline should be observed in a Religion, which owns one Lord, one Faith, &c. Moreover by the Form that is kept in the outward Worship of God, Men commonly judge of Religion ^k. They Fancy that different Customs and Ceremonies are a certain Proof of a Difference in Doctrine; we find it by Experience; the Generality of Protestants will not be convinced that a Presbyterian Parson in a Cloak, and a Minister of the Church of England in his Gown and Surplice, can both preach the same Doctrine; and People of a certain Turn of Thought imagine themselves to be much better Christians, if they inviolably stick to one exterior Form of Worship, sooner than conform to another. But if a small Difference in outward Rites is apt to cause such Prejudices, and breed such Aversion, to what is only the Shadow of Religion, as if it attacked its essential Parts; can it be thought wonderful, there should be so great a Distance between Catholics and Protestants, since, except a few, yet fundamental, Articles of Christianity, they differ in most doctrinal Points, and look on one another as so many Anti-Christians: And the Names of Papists and Huguenots ^l are reckoned as injurious as those of Atheists and Pagans. We must drop this odious and so often mentioned Subject, yet, we say it with Grief, of so desperate a Nature, that all Remedies prove ineffectual: All the strongest Reasons are lost upon the different Parties divided about the various Systems of Religion: And it so seldom happens that any Impression can be made on the Hearts of those who have been born, or brought up, in such or such Religion, that 'tis, if not better, at least more likely to please both Sides, if we only endeavour to amuse and divert them by an Account of Customs and Ceremonies, which is the Aim of this Work.

Religious Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of ENGLAND.

WE should begin with the Dedication of Churches, where the Faithful meet to offer up their Prayers to God; but the whole of that Function is very plain. 'Tis very convenient, as we are told, ^m to consecrate those publick Buildings to God, and by that Means to free them, by religious Ceremonies, from sacrilegious Usurpations. But what is here called Ceremonies is nothing like what is done by Roman Catholics on the like Occasions. The Dedication of English Churches is only a bare Offering of them to God by Prayer, accompanied with an Exhortation or a Sermon. Such Consecrations seem necessary, to separate what is for holy Uses from those Things which are to serve for common or profane Uses; and the primitive Church has accordingly employ'd them for that End. Christians were then convinced, that exterior Solemnity raises and feeds in the Heart of Man the Love and Reverence due to the ^k Words of the above-mentioned Preface.

^l Reproachful Names used by Catholics and Protestants.

^m See the Rationale or practical, &c. by Sparrow, Land. 1722.

House of the Lord: Nothing was omitted that could distinguish to the best Advantage those sacred Buildings; and the Faithful were no sooner freed from the Pagan Yoke, but all Hearts and Hands were employ'd in repairing, with Splendor, the Churches ruined or profaned during the Persecutions. The English Bishop, here cited, might have added to this Account, that the Christians went on so heartily with that Work, that for several subsequent Ages, Churches, Chapels, and other Places for Prayer, were more common than ^a good Christians. The reformed Churches of England have but two Parts, the Nave and the Presbytery^o, whereas those of the Grecians or Catholicks have three, the Nave, the Choir, and the Presbytery: For so we call, with the English, that Part which is between the Nave and the Altar. The same Author ^p tells us, that by the Word Nave, which is derived from the Latin, Navis, we are to remember, that we are in this World, as upon a stormy Sea, always exposed to be tossed and over-whelmed by the Fury of our Passions: This Part is also compared to the visible Heaven with which we are surrounded, and to many other Things, wittily found out by After-thoughts. We may also find some Likeness between the Nave of the Church, and the Ark, either of Noah, or of the Covenant, and suppose them both to be a Type of the Salvation of Mankind.

WHAT is called Presbytery being that Part of the Church allotted to Priests and other Churchmen; some Mysticks have thought fit to consider it as a Figure of the invisible Heaven, and the Clergy as that of the Angels giving Glory to God with Hymns and Canticles. We need not say any thing more on this Subject, nor concerning the Communion Tables, which the English still call Altars: Only we must take Notice, that Queen Elizabeth ordered they should be placed again where the Altars were before.

THE Transition is easy from Churches to Churchmen. Two Archbishops are at the Head of the English Hierarchy, those of Canterbury and of York, both stile themselves Primates. And to reconcile the Difference, we are told, it was decided, that the Archbishop of Canterbury should be called Primate of all England, and the Archbishop of York only Primate of England. We must repeat here that the Oath of Supremacy is taken to the King as Head of the Church, and that as such on the Day of his Coronation he puts on a Surplice, a Stole, and a Dalmatick ^q. When a Bishoprick becomes vacant, the Canons of the Cathedral give Notice of it to the King, and desire his Leave to chuse another. His Majesty at the same Time that he sends the Congé d'élire lets them know whom he will have them elect; and then the Dean and Chapter choose the Person so named: The Bishop so chosen is consecrated, installed, renders Homage to the King, takes the Oath, and pays the First-Fruits. The other Prerogatives which the King enjoys, as Head of the Church, are, to make Ordinances about Ceremonies and exterior Rites^r, with the Advice of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, or of the Metropolitan; to call or prorogue^s the Convocation;

^a That is, those who follow only the Rules and Precepts of the Gospel.

^o Or the Chancel.

^p Bishop Sparrow in his Rationale, &c.

^q The other Ceremonies of the Coronation are, 1. The blunt Sword, an Emblem of Mercy. 2. A Cruet of Oil to anoint the new King. 3. St. Edward's Staff carried by one of the Peers. 4. His Crown born by the high Seneschal. 5. The Paten and Chalice for the Communion of the King, and the Bible carried by the Bishops. 6. Prayers for the King and the Offerings he makes. 7. The Regalia, or Marks of his Dignity which are placed upon the Altar before which he kneels to pray. 8. The King's Sword offered at the Altar and redeemed, &c.

^r Princeps novas leges condere potest circa ceremonias & ritus, cum consilio, in ea parte, vel Commissarium in causis Ecclesiasticis, vel Metropolitanis. &c.

^s Synodus provincialis, vel nationalis convocari non debet absque principis rescripto ad Metropolitanos directo.

and to enact the Decrees of Synods into Laws †, &c. But all this still leaves him in the State and Condition of a Lay Head, and it would be wrong to call him on these Accounts the first Bishop or Pope of the Church of England, as some Catholicks have done. The Profession of Faith says, “ that the supreme governing all the States of “ the Kingdom, whether Ecclesiastical or Spiritual, in all Causes whatever belongs “ to him yet so that he is not invested with a Power to preach the Word “ of God, or administer the Sacraments.” But this Lay Head has been accused of pretending to decide “ about dogmatical Points, of changing, amending, and settling the Doctrine according to his own Fancy; which certainly belongs only to the Pope or the Church. We have already mentioned this in the foregoing Dissertation, and as it is a controverted Article, we must refer our Readers to the Authors of both Parties.

THE Bishop is superior to a Priest, and a Priest above a Deacon. The English Rubrick informs us, that the essential Office of a Deacon is to see that the Wants of the Poor be supplied, to help the Priest (or Minister) at the Communion Service, to bless those who present themselves to be married, to baptise, to bury the Dead, to preach, and to read to the People the Holy Scripture, or the Homilies. Their Ordination consists first in a Sermon or Exhortation preached to them, which being ended, the Archdeacon, or whoever officiates in his Stead, presents them to the Bishop, who enquires of the said Archdeacon, whether he has examined them and found them deserving; then directs his Speech to the Faithful present, both to know if any Impediment can be objected to the Election, and to recommend the Candidates to the Prayers of the Congregation. After some Prayers and Litanies, the third Chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle to Timothy, from Verse 8 to the End of that Chapter, is read to the Deacons, or Chapter vi. of the Acts of the Apostles, from Ver. 2. to the 8. Then they take the Oath of Supremacy, and amongst several Questions put to them, too many to be here mentioned, the Bishop asks them, whether they have in them an interior Call “ from the Holy Ghost to take upon them the Office of a Deacon. The Answer to this Question, is always readily made in the affirmative, and there is no Example of a Candidate's ever saying No, because they come there to be ordained, and the Holy Ghost is always supposed to favour their Views and Intentions. Then the Bishop puts the New Testament into their Hands, and gives them Authority to read and preach the Word of God to the Faithful. He receives the Communion himself, and gives it to all whom he has ordained: The whole Ceremony is concluded with a Prayer suitable to the Occasion and the Blessing.

As to what is most remarkable in the Ordination of Priests; we cannot but take Notice first, that they partake of those Powers which the Ministers of Calvinist Protestant Churches have, and of those likewise of Catholick Priests: They do not offer Sacrifice according to the Sense of that Word in the Roman Church, but Bishop Sparrow tells us, they are Ministers of the Gospel ‡, and as such offer Sacrifices of Prayers, and Praise, and Thanksgiving: As those are only spiritual and metaphorical Sacrifices, the Calvinist Ministers would be sacrificing Priests, as well

† Nihil habet vim legis, priusquam Regius assensus fuerit adhibitus iis quæ Synodus decernenda consuevit, &c.

“ The Parliament has given that Power to the King. See Statute of 1535. in which Henry VIII. was declared Head of the Church. “ Our said Sovereign Lord, his Heirs and Successors, Kings of this Realm, “ shall have full Power, from Time to Time, to visit, repress, reform, &c. all such Errors, Heresies, “ Abuses, &c.”

“ Num credat se interno Spiritus Sancti instinctu vocatum, &c.

‡ Sparrow's Rationale, &c. p. 251. Edit. of 1722.

as the Ministers of the Church of England: But, says the same Author, there is another unbloody Sacrifice which the Church of England's Priests offer in Memory of the Death of our Saviour, and for the sake of that Sacrifice, those Ministers of the Gospel who administer the Sacraments, and preach the Word of God, &c. amongst the English, are called Priests. The Rubrick mentions what goes before the Ordination, viz. Testimonies, Attestations about the Birth, Quality, Studies, and Education of the Candidates. Much might be said concerning all these Points, which tho' essential to the Examen, are not to our present Purpose: For though we may charitably suppose, that the utmost Endeavours are used to get sure and exact Inquiries, yet all Men are either deceived or Deceivers; Views are false, and Cabals and Underhand-dealings are apt to interfere with those Examens and Testimonies. The Gentlemen also who are ordained may grow remiss, and look upon their Duty as a Trade; numberless unforeseen Accidents happen, and it is quite useless for us to pretend to inspect into the Particulars of every different Situation or Circumstance. A witty Author^y says, the Lives of the English Clergy are more orderly than those of the French Clergy. One of the Reasons which he gives for this Difference is, that they have their Education in the University of Oxford or of Cambridge, at a good Distance from the Corruption of the capital City, and of the Court. They are not guilty of Gallantry. "The Priests are most of them married, their Clownishness contracted
 " in the Colleges, the Difficulty of conversing with Women in England, are a Kind
 " of Force upon them to be content^z with, or stick to, their own Wives
 " Their Churchmen are of a close, reserved Humour, and mostly Pedants"

The said Voltaire enters into Particulars, and draws a lively and genteel Representation of French Petits Maitres belonging to the Church, and ends with supposing, that the English Churchmen thank God for being Protestants. To this one may return for Answer, that the Defects of each must be counterbalanced; the French are of a light, airy Temper, and wanton in their Diversions, apt to run into Excesses, which, as they please their Imagination, appear also greater to others; the English are more wary, and like a mysterious Secrecy in some Sorts of Pleasures; they do not love losing Time in light, apish Tricks, and are not satisfy'd with bare Ideas and French Love-Talk; their Bodies are well fed, robust, and strong, their Desires impetuous and fierce; so are only pleased with substantial Pleasures. Solidity is what they aim at, and they sink as deep in their Pleasures as into Sciences; but this forsooth seems to the French a dull Diversion. This Disposition may require and admit of some sort of Mistresses, of a certain Value, and of a different sort of Gallantry from what is agreeable to the French. As to Wine, the same Author tells us, that Ministers of the Church of England go sometimes to Taverns (he might have said, they do it frequently, and so openly, that Strangers are offended at it) but Custom allows it; and if they happen to get drunk, still it is with Gravity, and in a kind of deep Meditation: Nothing is more real, and at the same Time more remarkable, than the serious, grave, and recollected Countenance of English Churchmen in Taverns; and 'tis not easy to determine, which is most to be wondered at, by those who are Strangers to the English Way of Living, either their Seriousness in their Debauches, or their constant Steadiness in the Pursuit of them. Coffee-Houses also furnish them with Opportunities of Diversion and Amusement. As they are not ashamed of appearing in their Canonical Dress at Taverns, they are still less afraid of being seen in Coffee-Houses: There they can and do discuss all the Affairs of the Universe, from the greatest Mysteries of Divinity to the least Concerns of the lowest Lay Man of their Parish: And as every one is welcome for their Money, both to Taverns and Coffee-Houses, a Priest of the English Church is upon the level with other Customers. We do not mean by this Digression to give our Readers an ill Opinion of the English Clergy; for though this Character suits the Generality of them, the whole Body must not be censured or despised; 'tis well known, that amongst the English Churchmen, many are eminent for Learning and Virtue: Even the forementioned Customs, though they may seem contrary to good Order and Decency, yet they are not inconsistent with true Merit, neither do they appear so ridiculous when countenanced as they are by the general Practice of a whole Nation, which is no ways offended by them. But we must give a Description of the Ordinations of Priests. It consists of Prayers, Exhortations and Imposition of Hands. By the Constitutions of the Year 1603, the Time appointed for giving Orders is on those ^a Sundays which follow the Ember Weeks during the Service, in the Cathedral or Parochial Churches where the Bishops reside, in the Presence of the Archdeacon, the Dean, and two Prebendaries, or at least of four grave Persons, who must be Masters of Arts, and have lawful Power to preach: They are only as Witnesses to the Ordination, which belongs solely to the Bishop; he alone has Authority to say to those who are ordained, Receive the Holy Ghost; the other four only pray with the Bishops, and lay their Hands upon the ordained, with this Difference, that, amongst the English, as with the Catholics, the Imposition of the Bishop's Hands denotes his Power and Authority to ordain, whereas that of the Witnesses is only a Mark of their Approbation and Consent to their being admitted to the Brotherhood, if we may use that Expression. To become a Priest, 'tis necessary to be made first a Deacon; but both Orders may be received on one and the same Day. After the Examen, and the Exhortation which is immediately before the Communion Service, the Epistle is read, Acts Chap. xx. from Ver. 17. to 36. and, if both Orders are given on the same Day, the 3d Chap. of the 1st Epistle to Timothy is added. The Reading of the Gospel follows, out of the last Chapter of St. Matthew, from Ver. 18. to the End of that Chapter; or out of St. John Chap. xx. from Ver. 19, to 24. Then the Veni Creator is sung or read. The rest is but little different from the Deacon's Ordination. The Congregation is desired to join in mental Prayer for the happy Success of this Ceremony; Silence is ^b kept for some short Time; then the Bishop prays aloud, and immediately lays his Hands, and the Priests present lay theirs upon those who are ordained, and who are kneeling. The Bishop uses at the same Time this Form so much found Fault with by the Puritans ^c. "Receive the Holy Ghost. "Sins shall be forgiven to all those to whom you forgive them, &c. Be faithful "Dispensers of the Word of God and of the Sacraments, &c." This being said, he puts the Bible into their Hands.

^y Voltaire, Letter V.

^z The Author says Bishops, but we suppose he means the whole Hierarchy.

Now we must give an Account of the Ordination of Archbishops and Bishops. Is it convenient we should take Notice of their Duties? The Bishop is, under Christ, (according to the Church of England's ^d Doctrine) the first Pastor of the Church: Inferior Ministers are only his Deputies; when he is absent, the Priest may bless the

^a In Diebus Dominicis immediatè sequentibus jejunia quatuor temporum in Ecclesia Cathedrali aut Parochiali, &c.

^b To give them Time to pray.

^c See Calderwood, Altare Damasc. Chap. x. p. 432. and fol. Edit. Ludg. Bat. 1703.

^d Sparrow, above-cited, p. 56.

Faithful, but whenever he is present at the divine Service, it belongs to him to pronounce the Blessing: For since St. Paul, Chap. vii. Ver. 7. of his Epistle to the Hebrews, assures us, that the lesser is blessed by the greater, it would be indecent to see a Bishop blessed by an inferior Priest: The Bishop then must bless the Priest, that is according to order. This is one of those favourite Passages of Scripture which the Clergy have always present to their Mind, and who knows but some of them are convinced, that the New Testament is the Word of God, and divinely inspired, chiefly by such Places. However the Bishop's Blessing is highly valued in England, and 'tis very common to desire it of them, and to receive it kneeling; and it must be owned, that the English, who so scrupulously pretend to follow the Rules and Practices of the Primitive Church, have in this Particular kept up a very ancient Custom.

It is well known, and we have often repeated it, that the English Hierarchy is not of divine Right, but by Law established, yet the Episcopal Clergy think this is not literally true as to what concerns Religion, but only as to the Manner of being invested with their Authority. According to the Author of the * Philosophical Letters, "they are not a little mortified in being obliged to own, that they hold all by a Law made by prophane Lay-Men." Yet by this Law the Clergy are Members of the Commonwealth †, whereas this Notion of divine Right would only make so many Tyrants in Surplices. There are two Archbishops and twenty-four Bishops in England; they enjoy the Dignity of Barons, and take Place before those of the Laity; so the Bishop of London ‡ being the first Bishop, is likewise the first Baron; all are Peers of the Realm, and sit in the House of Lords, except the Bishop of the Isle of Man, who is named by and holds of a Subject. "The Canon Law, says the same Author, does not allow Bishops to give their Vote in the House of Lords in criminal Cases, or when they condemn any body to Death, or to the Loss of any Member, because the Church does not love Blood." He enlarges upon this Saying, and cites one Exception which may be seen in his Book. The Archbishops are called your Grace, which Title is also bestowed on Dukes. The Bishops are stiled Right Reverend Fathers in God: This may be seen in every Book dedicated to any of them. The Scots Presbyterians inveigh bitterly against their Pride, their Vanity, ^h their Table, their Effeminacy, the Richness of their Furniture, and their Palaces: Even in these Days they pretend every Part of the Bishop's Conduct should be regulated according to Apostolical Simplicity: They also reproach English Episcopacy with being the same as that of Catholics, the same Policy, the same Way of Government, the same Synods, the same Causes brought before them, the same Tribunals, the same Ecclesiastical Officers, &c. and this particular Account is season'd with charitable Railings and Invectives.

At the Consecration of Bishops or Archbishops, the third Chapter of St. Paul's first Epistle to Timothy, from the first Verse to the eighth is read; then some Verses

* In the primitive Ages of Christianity they never went out of the Church without the Bishop or Priest's Blessing. It was received kneeling, and the Deacon prepared the Congregation for it by saying, Bow or kneel for the Blessing.

* Voltaire.

† They are the Words of an English Nobleman, mentioned by Voltaire, and denoted by Lord B.

‡ See Memoires & Observations faites par un Voyageur en Angleterre. Printed at the Hague in 1698.

^h Nothing to what English Histories mention. Nevil, Archbishop of York, the Day of his Consecration entertained at Dinner eight or ten thousand People. An Abbot of Canterbury, when installed, feasted five thousand.

ⁱ Calderwood, Chap. V. an Italian Author, tells us gravely, that the Apostles governed only a small Boat, and that the Church of Christ was then but a Cabin: but their Successors, says he, took the Spoils of Egypt to adorn the Sanctuary. A notable Way of expounding Scripture!

out of Chap. x. or xxi. of St. John's Gospel ; the Creed is said ; the Bishop elected is presented by two other Bishops to the Archbishop of the Province, or to another Bishop officiating for him ; “ Right Reverend Father in Christ, say they, we present “ to you this pious and learned Man, to be consecrated Bishop.” The King's Order for his Consecration is produced and read openly : The Bishop elect takes the Oath of Supremacy, and that of Obedience to his Metropolitan, which last is omitted at the Consecration of an Archbishop. The Consecrator moves the Congregation to pray, saying to them, “ Brethren, it is written in the Gospel of St. Luke, that our Saviour “ Christ continued the whole Night in Prayer, before he did choose and send forth “ his twelve Apostles. It is written also in the Acts of the Apostles, that the Dis- “ ciples did fast and pray before they laid Hands on Paul and Barnabas and “ sent them forth. Let us therefore following the Example of our Saviour Christ and “ his Apostles, first fall to Prayer, &c. Then the Litany is said ; and after this Place, that it may please thee to illuminate all Bishops, &c. the following Prayer is inserted : “ That it may please thee to bless this our Brother elected, and to send thy “ Grace upon him, that he may duly execute the Office whereunto he is called, to “ the edifying of thy Church, &c.” The People answer, We beseech thee to hear us, &c. The Litany ends with a Prayer, after which the Archbishop, sitting in his Chair, says to him that is to be consecrated, “ Brother, forasmuch as the Holy “ Scripture and the ancient Canons command, that we should not be hasty in lay- “ ing on Hands, and admitting any Person to Government in the Church of Christ, “ which he has purchased with no less Price than the Effusion of his own Blood ; “ before I admit you to this Administration, I will examine you, &c.” The Questions end with a Prayer, which is followed by the Hymn ^k of the Holy Ghost said or sung, at the End of which the Archbishop says another long Prayer. Then the Archbishop and Bishops present lay their Hands upon the Head of the elected Bishop, the Archbishop saying, “ Receive the Holy Ghost and remember “ that thou stir up the Grace of God which is given thee by this Imposition of our “ Hands, &c.” Still keeping one Hand on the Head of the Bishop elect, with the other delivers him the Bible, saying, “ give Heed unto Reading, Exhortation, and “ Doctrine, think upon the Things contained in this Book, &c. Be to the Flock of “ Christ a Shepherd, not a Wolf hold up the weak be so mer- “ ciful so minister Discipline” Then the Archbishop and the new Bishops, with others, receive the Communion : And the whole Ceremony concludes with a Prayer by Way of Collect to desire Almighty God to pour down his Blessing on the new Bishop, &c.

We must take Notice in this Place, that some Alterations were made in the Form of these Ordinations under the Reign of Charles the Second ; the Subject is dry and unpleasing, but cannot be omitted in such a Work as this. 1. In the Ordination of Priests heretofore the Ceremony began by reading the Epistle and Gospel ; the Veni Creator was said next, then the Candidates were presented to the Bishop by the Archdeacon, the Congregation was advertised of it, and a Collect said. But this Order is inverted, in the new Ritual, as reformed under Charles the Second : They now begin with presenting the Candidates, which the Bishop notifies to the People, the Collect follows, then the Epistle and Gospel, different from those in the first Ritual. 2. The Exhortations and Questions are the same in both Rituals, these are followed in the new by the Veni Creator, which in the old was sung after the Gospel. Then the Prayer is said, which answers to the Preface in the Roman Pontifical, then comes the Imposition of Hands with a form which has been altered. It was, "Receive the Holy Ghost, Sins shall be remitted (or forgiven) to those¹ to whom you shall forgive them, and they shall be tied (or retained or imputed) to those to whom you shall tie them. Be therefore a faithful Dispenser of the Word of God &c." Now it is thus, "Receive the Holy Ghost for the Office and Work of a Priest in the Church of God now committed unto thee by the Imposition of our Hands; whose Sins &c." 3. In the first Editions of Edward's Liturgy, it is ordered that, after delivering the Gospel to those who are ordained, the Creed shall be sung without mentioning determinately which Creed; but in that of Charles the Second it is expressly set down that it must be the Nicene Creed². This in the first Editions of Edward's Liturgy, is followed by a Prayer with which the whole Ceremony ends, but in the new one after this Prayer another is said and the Blessing pronounced.

^k The Veni Creator.

THE Alterations in the Consecration of Bishops are these. 1. The Office begins with a Collect which is not to be found in Edward's Liturgy. 2. After the reading of the Gospel, Charles the Second's Ritual expressly mentions the Nicene Creed, which was left undetermined in Edward's; which last makes no mention of either a Sermon or of a Rochet, as does Charles's Liturgy. 3. A new Question is put to the Bishop elect, which was not asked in the first Ritual, viz. Will you be faithful in ordaining, sending, or laying hands upon others? The Form of Words which is used with the Imposition of Hands has likewise been very much altered in the Ritual of Charles the Second³. 4. The old Ritual does not mention the Posture in which the new Bishop is to be, when this Form is pronounced upon him, whereas the new says he must be kneeling. Lastly, the same Prayer and Blessing, added, as we said before, in the Ordination of Priests, is also added, in the Consecration of Bishops, after that Collect, with which the Ceremony concluded in the old Liturgy.

THE Presbyterians laugh at, and despise those Ceremonies⁴ which Denote any difference between a Priest and a Bishop; the Ordination of both, say they, is the same, Consecration only raises the Bishop above the Priest: But does this Consecration give other spiritual Keys to the Bishop? By no means: He only receives a Dignity, which in these Days is joined to much exterior Pomp and Pride, but in the primitive Church was very plain and without Ornaments, and was conferred accordingly. The Bishop was no more amongst other Priests than the Archdeacon amongst other Deacons. These, and such like Disputes, we leave them to decide, if they can, amongst themselves, to enquire into the particular Privileges enjoyed by Bishops, according to the Rubrick, in the Government in the Church. They have the sole Right of ordaining Deacons and Priests according to the⁵ Ordinal; of dedicating⁶ Churches newly built, of blef-

¹ Accipito Spiritum Sanctum, cujus remiseras peccata erunt ei remissa &c.

² Accipe Spiritum Sanctum ad officium & opus Presbyterii in Ecclesia Dei, quod tibi committitur per impositionem manuum nostrarum, &c.

³ His peractis symbolum Nicenum cantabitur aut recitabitur.

⁴ Num fidelis eris in ordinandis & mittendis aliis, iisque manus inponendo?

⁵ The Ritual of Edward says, Accipe Spiritum Sanctum & excitate memineris gratiam Dei quæ in te est, per manuum impositionem &c. But that of Charles the Second adds to it thus, Accipe Spiritum Sanctum ad officium & opus Episcopi in ecclesia Dei, quod jam tibi &c. as in⁶ Ac memento ut exsuscites gratiam Dei quæ data est tibi per hanc manuum nostrarum impositionem, &c.

⁶ They nickname them Ludicra Sacramentalia.

⁷ The Book of Ordinations is so called.

⁸ The Bishop lays the first Stone, or deposes another to that Function. See Calderwood above cited chap. V. p. 248.

sing Church-yards, and giving Confirmation to the Faithful. We must take notice here that the English have a great respect for Churches, and it is expressly forbid, by the Constitutions of Canterbury in 1604, to hold in them any ' Secular Court or other prophane meeting. They also carefully avoid carrying any Burthen when they go into a Cathedral, understanding literally, say the Presbyterians^v, the Passage of St. Mark's Gospel, chap. xi. ver. 16. They take off their Hats when they go into a Church, and either make a half Genuflexion or a Bow when they pass before the Altar. This last mentioned Ceremony is still more displeasing to the Presbyterians, though they are so charitable as to give it an Interpretation relative to the Communion: But it must be owned, and it seems likely, that the Dedication and Consecration of Churches, by giving Sanction to such ceremonial Observances, have also increased the Privileges of the Clergy, been the occasion of Immunities, and restored the " Right of Refuge, so detrimental to civil Society in some Christian Countries, chiefly in Portugal, where it is carried to an enormous Excess. The Blessings of Church-yards seem equally absurd to the Presbyterians. Burying-places are, they say, of their own nature sacred and religious. And indeed such always have been the Notion of Antiquity, Pagan, Jewish, or Christian, and it would be useless to bring long Citations in Proof of what may be seen in almost every Greek or Latin Author. One Remark is necessary in this Place, viz. that the Custom of having Church-yards about or near the Churches, was established among the Pagans, and that Lycurgus some Ages before Christianity had ordered that the Dead should be buried in the Towns or about their Temples. Christians have only sanctified this Custom by religious Motives, as several others have been, which the Heathens followed long before us. We need not mention here several Prerogatives, grounded on the Canon Law, which the Bishops enjoy, such as to publish Censures, to interdict from Ecclesiastical Functions, to degrade, to depose, to Anathematise, to excommunicate, to require and receive Tithes, to give Leave and Approbation to teach, and confer Livings and Benefices^x.

MR. Des Maizeaux, in his Preface to Melanges curieux des pieces attribuees a St. Evremond, Edition 1726. speaking of Collier, whom Father Courbeville had mentioned with the Title of an English Bishop, makes the following curious Remark. " The " Nonjurors, says he, having made a Separation from the Church of England since
" the Revolution, made Archbishops and Bishops of their own; The Catholics
" have also their own Bishops: So that there are in England two Sorts of Heterodox
" Bishops, or to use a more civil Expression, two Sorts of Bishops in partibus, who ⁱ Lets or Lett Courts. See Calderwood p. 250.

^v See the same Author in the same Place.

^w I say restore, for it was in use both amongst the Jews and the Pagans.

^x To obtain a Benefice, first one must be presented by a lawful Patron without making with him any Bargain directly or indirectly for Money or Money-worth. They are reckoned Patrons who have either founded the Livings or have acquired by Purchase or Inheritance the Right of presenting a proper Person to the Bishop of the Diocese. The Presentation being signed and sealed in due Form, is brought to the Bishop or to his Vicar-General, with the testimonial Letters of Ordination. The Candidate is examined, and if found capable must declare, that he will conform to the Church of England by Law established. This Declaration he must sign, and have the Bishop or his Delegate's Attestation of it. Moreover he must take the Oath against Simony, that he knows of no direct or indirect Simoniacal Contract made with the Patron, and that if any has been made, without his Knowledge, he renounces it. Then he receives the Investiture from the Bishop or his Delegate in these Words, Instituo te Rectorem Ecclesiæ parochialis de . . . & habeto curam animarum, accipe curam tuam & meam. The Bishop's Mandate is sent sealed to the Archdeacon of the Place, who by himself or his Substitute puts the Candidate in Possession, by putting the Bell-rope into his Hand to ring the Bell. He is left alone in the Church, rings the Bell and so takes Possession, this Ceremony is called Induction.

The first two Months after his Induction he must read every Sunday the 39 Articles, and openly declare his consenting thereunto sincerely and truly. He must also during that Space of Time read the whole Morning and Evening Service, and give a formal and publick Assent to all that is contained and prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer, and to the Administration of the Sacraments according to the English Liturgy.

He must also read on a Sunday the Attestation of his subscribing to the beforementioned Declarations.

“ exercise their Functions The Government tolerates them tho’ they “ are Enemies to it &c.”

ENGLISH Bishops have their own Vicars, and Officials in each Diocese, but the Officials are more known in England by the Name of Chancellors. These are the true and chief Officials, but there are some Commissioners who are often^y mistaken for them. So Archdeacons, who in ancient Times were only the first amongst Deacons, are now in the English Church above Priests. Bishops, says a Presbyterian^z, are called reverend, Archbishops most reverend, Archdeacons venerable: Common Priests have no Title bestowed upon them. The Archdeacon’s chief Function is to visit the Diocese by Procuration in default of the Bishop or Vicar. Those Visitors enter into so many Particulars^a that ’tis no wonder the Bishops stand in need of Officers to help them. The Archdeacon must make his Visit at least once in three Years, and this Dignity is not more agreeable to the Presbyterians than other Church-Officers: They think it intolerable^b that two Functions, which, in the Apostles Time, were distinguished, should now be united in one Person; and that the Archdeacon should take place before other Priests; which, they say, is still more irregular, when it happens, as it does sometimes, that he himself is no Priest^c. As to those whom we have mentioned as being^d Commissioners, they are Judges subject to the Bishops and Archdeacons, mostly Laymen^e and only Doctors of Law. We shall say nothing of Canons, Deans, Readers, Singing-boys, what they are and their Functions being well known, but must add some further Remarks on the English Clergy.

UPON comparing this Description of the English Ordinations with what we have extracted^f out of the best Rituals, to give an Account of the same Ordinations amongst Catholics, it is evident that the English Ceremonies are all in the Roman Pontifical, out of which they have left out only those which seemed to them superstitious or useless. The candid Reader may likewise observe, that, from the Slipper to the Mitre, every Part of their Ornaments is figurative; even some of them have no less than half a dozen Significations, so that which way soever they are considered, they have a Shew of Holiness and Religion, draw Respect and Veneration from the Laity, and add Splendor, Strength, and Virtue to those who are cloathed in them. Types also and mysterious Significations are applyed to the few Ceremonies appointed in the English Ordinal. The Church of England believes, as does the Catholic, that religious Worship becomes more venerable by the Ceremonies, and the ornamental Decency of Robes. Why then, says one of their Authors^g, should Religion be deprived of that Pomp and Splendor, which always accompanies the solemn and publick Actions of Kings and temporal Judges, and makes them to be more revered? The outward Ceremonies contribute as much to inspire a due Respect for it, and as

^y Officiales foranei.

^z See Calderwood citing Cartwright Chap. VI. p. 341. “Dedignantur (Archidiaconi) pastores probatissimos Ecclesiæ agnoscere sibi æquales. Archiepiscopi Reverendissimi, Episcopi Reverendi, Archidiaconi venerabilis elogio cohonestantur. Presbyterorum turba nullo ornatur honoris cognomento.”

^a See Calderwood Chap. V. p. 317. these Visits are, 1. to hinder the Priests from being guilty of any Excess, Defect, or Negligence, in Preaching, Visiting the Sick, and instructing the Faithful. 2. To enquire whether the Church-wardens do their Duty, in seeing, that the Parishioners keep the Sundays, that the Church be in due Repair, that Disorders and Scandals be suppressd, and the Money well disbursed. 3. To examine whether School-Masters instruct the Children &c. 4. To put a stop to false Opinions, to Impiety, Contempt of Discipline, and to unlawful Meetings.

^b Calderwood Chap. VI. p. 342.

^c Archidiacono Presbytero existente vel non existente. See Const. of 1597.

^d Officiales foranei.

^e Plerique Doctores juris Civilis in nullo ordine sacro constituti.

^f See Catholic Cerem. Tom. II. of this Work.

^g Sparrow in his Rationale or Exposition, p. 249.

this Respect ought never to be separated from religious Worship, it is by consequence necessary that there should be Distinction of Ranks in the Church, and Habits to denote that Difference: Such decent Customs excite Sentiments of Fear and Respect, and we find by woful Experience that when these are wanting, Religion also decays. These are the Arguments of an illustrious Bishop of the Church of England, whose Book and Page we have cited: what can be said more to the Purpose, in Favour of typical Ceremonies, and allegorical Habits in the publick Service?

THE chief Ornament, by which Churchmen are distinguished from the Laity, is the Surplice: Ministers of the Church of England are to put it on whenever they administer any Sacrament, and on ^h several other Occasions, the Particulars of which we need not mention. We are told there are several Members of the English Communion, so devoted to, or superstitious in the Use of a Surplice, that they would not partake of the Lord's Supper, if administered by any Parson without it; and on t'other side several bigotted Presbyterians who look upon it ⁱas the Badge of Antichrist. Bishops, Deans, Canons in Cathedral Churches wear a Cope besides the Surplice, and are to put it on ^k at the Communion Service, Administration of Sacraments or any other religious Function, which is to be performed with Solemnity. The Whiteness of the Surplice denotes the Innocency of Life with which Priests are, or ought to be endowed; no Habit then could be pitched upon either more decent in itself, or more adapted to faithful Servants of God, who by their Office are to appear before ^lthe supreme Being, with the Purity of ^mAngels to intercede for Men. But if white Surplices are an Emblem of Purity and Innocency of Life, are there not as good Ground, to say, that the black Clothes which the Churchmen wear are likewise a Type or Figure of their modest and plain Behaviour; that the black is also a Symbol of their Mortification, and being dead to the World; and lastly that it may signify their Grief and inward Mourning, which their Office requires them to express for the disorderly and sinful Lives of Men whom he calls to Conversion and Repentance? This Remark may, however, convince our Readers, that it is an easy thing to find out typical and figurative Explanations for any outward Ceremony.

NONE can be made a Deacon before twenty three, nor a Priest before twenty four, nor a Bishop before thirty. Orders are given as we said before on the Sundays after Ember Weeks according to this ecclesiastical Constitution of 1603. "Forasmuch as the ancient Fathers of the Church, led by Example of the Apostles, appointed Prayers and Fasts to be used at the solemn Ordering of Ministers; and to that Purpose allotted certain Times, in which only sacred Orders might be given or conferred: We following their holy and religious Example, do constitute and decree, that no Deacons or Ministers be made and ordained but only on the Sundays immediately following jejunia quatuor temporum commonly called Ember Weeks, appointed in ancient Times for Prayer and Fasting (purposely for this Cause at their first Institution) and so continued at this Day in the Church of England." As the Ceremonies of their Ordinations are but few, according to the Description of them

^h See Canons and Constitutions ecclesiastical, an. 1603.

ⁱ Examples of this, are daily to be met with in all Protestant Countries, especially in England: The Author of Memoirs and Observations p. 119. wittily ridicules the Folly of this Mechanism, which looks upon the Institutions of indifferent Customs, as a Heresy, a Profanation of holy Things, and a downright Impiety.

^k See Canons and Constitutions, an. 1603.

^l Sparrow in his Rationale, p. 249.

^m Calderwood Chap. X. p. 657. says, one might as well have given Wings to Churchmen to testify their ready and quick Obedience to God's Commands, as Surplices to denote their Purity.

ⁿ Bishop Sparrow, p. 96. of his Rationale.

before given, the English pretend it is ° more conformable to the Practice of the Primitive Church.

SOME Pastors (Priests or Ministers) have the Title of Rectors, as belonging to such Churches, which, at the Reformation, were independent from any Monastery. Others are only Vicars, but for Life. Lastly, some are barely Curates, without any Benefice, and, if we may say so, only receive Wages † from the Rectors or Bishops. These are often very poor; even some Livings are of so small an Income, says a French Author‡, as not to suffice for their wearing Apparel, which forces them to have Recourse to other Methods, even the most † abject, of getting a Livelihood.

THE Convocation of the Clergy is a kind of Parliament, the Archbishops and Bishops are the upper House; the lower is composed of the inferior Clergy, viz. twenty-six Deans, sixty Archdeacons, five hundred and seventy six Canons, besides Curates and Deacons. They meet upon the Concerns of the Church, Tithes, raising Taxes, ecclesiastical Laws, which must afterwards be approved by the King and Parliament. They hold likewise national Synods, who keep an exact Correspondence in all their Deliberations, and make no absolute Definition, but with an unanimous Consent.

UNIVERSITIES are so closely united to Religion, that we must not omit giving some Account of them. They send † Deputies to Parliament. At Cambridge a Master of Arts must study eleven Years before he can obtain the Degree of Doctor in Divinity, or in Physick; viz. seven Years for the Degree of Batchelor, and four more for that of Doctor; such a long Apprenticeship seems intended to produce learned Men only. At Oxford the Regulation is still more severe; seven Years are required before one may be Master of Arts, seven more to be Batchelor in Divinity, and four more to become Doctor. They assure us also that the Severity and Strictness of the Examens are proportionable to the Length of the Apprenticeship, and yet some are made Doctors, as well as in other Universities, who are not learned; though it may not happen so often there as in other Countries, in which some Brightness of Genius, with a superficial Knowledge, joined to some Favour and Intrigue, easily obtains the Doctorship without Learning. We shall not entertain our Readers with an Enumeration of the Rights and Privileges enjoy'd by those two Universities. That does not concern our Subject, not being religious Customs or Ceremonies. Yet there is one we cannot omit, as having some Relation to it, viz. on the Feast of S. Scholastica, the Citizens of Oxford pay a Penny a Head to their University, as a Tribute, or a Token of their Submission. Probably the Memory of that Saint is chiefly, if not only, kept up upon Account of that Ceremony.

WE must now mention another Custom, which deserves the Reader's Notice, and is not known in foreign Countries; it is the Benefit of the Clergy. “ About six “ hundred Years ago, says our Author, under William the Second, Ignorance was “ spread far and wide to so great a Degree, that even some Priests in England could “ scarce read. To remedy this Evil, and set Things upon a better Footing, the King “ ordered, that in certain Cafes, as Manlaughter, &c. . . . the Criminal convicted “ should have his Life given him, and only be burnt in the Hand with a red-hot

° The same Author, p. 141.

† Curatus Presbyter vel Diaconus stipendiarius absque titulo perpetuo beneficii.

‡ Memoires & Observations faites par un Voyageur, p. 59.

† I have, saith he, seen one beg at Temple-Bar.

† At least Oxford does.

“ Iron, if he could read ; though at present there are but few even of the lowest Rank who cannot read, this Law is still in Force †. The Criminal is asked what he has to say in his own Defence, that Sentence of Death may not pass upon him : “ To which he answers, that he demand the Benefit of the Clergy.” This heretofore was not granted without the guilty Person actually read some Lines in a Book of an old Gothick † Letter ; in which Case the Ordinary of Newgate certify’d, that he read like a Clerk †. But as some Ministers made a Handle of this Custom to get Money, without having any Regard to the Abilities of those who claimed this Benefit, it is now granted to every Body, without their demanding it, or reading what was commonly called the Neck Verse *. Lords were always allowed the same Benefit, it being supposed they could read, and are not burnt in the Hand.

THE King’s Chapel presents itself next under Consideration ; take this short Description of it. The Dean is generally a Bishop, who receives no Command but immediately from the King, he has a Sub-dean and twelve other Ministers under him, to perform divine Service ; twenty Lay Cantors, who are called Clerks of the Chapel ; one of them teaches twelve singing Boys, two are appointed to play upon the Organ. Prayers are said thrice every Day in the King’s Chapel, and two Sermons preached on Sundays and Holidays. The Clerk of the Closet is a Churchman who takes Care of the King’s Oratory, who, with two more to officiate in his Absence, always attends the King. Forty eight Chaplains preach also in their Turn every Sunday and Holiday. To avoid Jealousy betwixt the two Universities, we are told, that twenty four of these Chaplains are from Oxford, and twenty four from Cambridge. We need not mention the Grand-Almoner, Sub-Almoner, Keeper of the Chapel, &c.

THE Customs established in the Performance of divine Service, and appointed by the English Liturgy are ; that all Priests and Deacons are required to say daily the Morning and Evening Prayers. The Order of both is the same. They begin with several Passages of Scripture, which the Minister says aloud. ’Tis not without very good Grounds that the English set a great Value on those publick Prayers, and look upon them as an Offering or Dedication which we make to God of all the Actions of the Day. All Religions agree, and will ever agree in those Sentiments. The Jews and Pagans, long before Christianity, were convinced of the Usefulness of such early Devotions. The Mahometans never allow of any Dispensation from that Duty. Christians have still greater Advantages in this Practice, and stronger Motives to excite them to it ; the Certainty of Revelation, and Grounds of Hope and Confidence in God, which was not in Pagans ; rational and solid Truths, whereas Mahometans have only an inconsistent chymical System of Religion ; lastly, plain and clear Principles, which were only shew’d at a Distance to the Jews, under dark Emblems and Figures : But they are apt to admit as many Pharisaical Niceties as other Religions :

† See Memoirs and Observations, above-cited. See likewise Calderwood, p. 309.

“ This Character is well known in England, most of the publick Acts being in that sort of Letters.

“ To read like a Clerk was heretofore an high Praise ; but now many of them in all Countries are very illiterate and imprudent. Hence comes the French Proverb, faire un pas de Clerc. In old French the Word Clerc signified an unmarried young Man, as that of Bachelor is now given to them in England.

* The Mention of this Benefit of the Clergy seems to require some Account of those judicial Proceedings in which it is claimed ; but as they are universally known to every Englishman, and no ways belong to the Subject treated of in these Sheets, we shall only refer Foreigners to the so often cited Memoires and Observations, Pages 273, and following to 355. Only we must beg Leave to take Notice of the Clemency, Justice and impartiality of English Laws, in allowing so many of the Jury to be excepted ; half of the Jury to be Foreigners, on the Trial of Strangers ; the said Jury to be of the same State and Condition with the accused ; even those who are pressed to Death, for not pleading, to avoid the Confiscation of their Goods ; and lastly, all the Proceedings to be viva voce, and in open Court. Such are some of the Privileges of Englishmen !

How many are proud of, and value themselves upon, their regular Observance of this Devotion, as very meritorious in the Sight of God, whereas but too often this Regularity is the only Proof of their faithful complying with the Duties of Christianity. However we must go on with the Order of those Prayers in the English Liturgy. The above-mentioned Passages are followed by an Exhortation, to prepare for the general Confession of Sins, which is said kneeling, by the Minister and the whole Congregation: This * Ceremony is as ancient as St. Basil, and was not then peculiar to his Diocese, but universally practised in the whole Church. The Absolution is pronounced by the Priest standing, the People still kneeling; for receiving Forgiveness requires an humble Posture, but forgiving shews Authority. Here we must observe, that the Church of England uses three different Forms of Absolution, the one here mentioned in the Morning and Evening Prayer, another at the Visitation of the Sick, and a third at the Communion Service. After the Absolution, the Priest and Congregation, all kneeling, say the Lord's Prayer, which is followed by some Responses, the saying a Psalm, some Lesson out of the Old Testament, as set down in the Calendar at the Beginning of the Liturgy, the singing or reciting the Te Deum ^y or Benedicite omnia; another Lesson out of the New Testament, a Hymn, or a Psalm; the Creed said or sung, to which the People stand; the Lord's Prayer a second time; several Responses, three Collects, a Prayer for the King and Queen, another for the Royal Family, a third for the Clergy, St. Chrysostome's Prayer, and the Blessing. In this Order are the Morning and Evening Prayers said: Now those who have endeavoured to explain the Liturgy, take Notice, 1. That the Doxology is often omitted by the English, as it always is by Catholicks; because these Words, for thine is the Kingdom, &c. are no Part of the Prayer, and are thought to be an Addition made to it by the Grecian Church. 2. On this Response, Lord open my Lips, that our Mouths were shut by Sin, are to be opened by God, and that the following Words, hasten to come to our Help ^z are a most excellent Defence against all IncurSIONS of the Devil, &c. By which we may perceive, that in the Church of England, as well as in other Christian Communions, the Devil, who is said by St. Peter (1 Pet. c. 5.) to seek whom he may devour, is thought to be the Author of all the Evils which Men do to, or suffer from, one another. 3. That the Lessons being taken from the Old and New Testament, is agreeable to the Practice of the Churches of Egypt (he might have said of all Christian Churches) to shew the Harmony of both Covenants, the first of which is the Gospel shewed and foreseen at a Distance, the other is, the Gospel fulfilled. The Rubrick says, that the Minister must stand when he reads the Lessons, and turn himself towards the Congregation, that he may be heard the better: This is very rational, for those Lessons, the Decalogue, &c. are an Instruction to the People; but when he addresses himself to God by Prayer, by saying or singing a Psalm, or by Confession, he must then turn from the People and look ^a towards the upper end of the Chancel, which is the chief and most to be revered Part of the Church ^b, by reason of the mysterious Presence of God (at the Communion) not to mention other allegorical Explanations of this Ceremony. Hymns and Psalms are sung or said in a standing Posture, as an evident Token that the Hearts ^c of the

* L'Estrange, Alliance of Divine Offices, London 1690, and Sparrow, &c.

^y The Te Deum is commonly thought to be the Work of St. Ambrose and St. Augustin; but some give it to Nicetius, a Bishop who lived in the Beginning of the sixth Century. The Benedicite is in St. Jerom's Translation of Daniel. It is also mentioned in the 4. Counc. of Toledo in 634.

^z Bishop Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 19.

^a Rationale, p. 29.

^b The same in the same Place.

^c The same, p. 34.

People are raised to God with Joy: The same Situation is kept at the singing or saying the Creed, to shew how ready they are to make an open Profession of their Faith, to give an Account of it, to justify and defend it. Betwixt the Creed and the Lord's Prayer repeated a second time, the Priest says, The Lord be with you. The People answer, and with your Spirit. An excellent Proof of the Communion of Saints, who, being all Members of one mystical Body, pray for one another. We shall not trouble our Readers with the various Expositions of the Oremus, the short Litany, and the Responses; but we cannot omit, that the Collects are said to be so named because the Priest said them ^d when the whole Assembly was met, or because the Devotion of all the Faithful was collected or joined to offer that Prayer to ^e God, or because the Priest unites several Petitions into one ^f, or lastly, because it is a Collection of several short Sentences of Scripture.

THE Prayers, Collects and Lessons often vary, on some Days, as Christmas, Epiphany, &c. The Athanasian Creed is said or sung instead of that of the Apostles or of Nice. Sunday Morning, Wednesday, and Friday, the long Litany is said or sung. Particular Prayers are said likewise on special Occasions, as for Rain, for fair Weather, for a Time of Famine, or great Dearth, for success in War, against popular Comotions, epidemick or contagious Distempers; every Day also in Ember Weeks, for those who are to be ordained, for the Parliament whilst it sits; which Prayers are all either to obtain Mercy from God, or to give him Thanks for Favours received.

SUNDAY is a Day which all Christians keep with great Solemnity; but none more than the English; and upon considering the Gravity, Decency, Regularity, and outward Devotion, which is apparent throughout the Kingdom on that Day, one would be inclined to think, that it is a Day of Light ^g only to the English. In Holland it is prophaned by servile Works, even publicly, with the Leave of the Magistrates; in France Comedies and other publick Diversions are allowed; in other Countries open Disorders and Excesses are committed, and those of the blackest Dye in the Sight of God and Men. But in England, playing and singing Songs is forbid, even in private Families; and though some Persons of Distinction, as the Author of the ^h Philosophical Letters observes, take the Liberty to play, they keep it a Secret even from their Servants, for fear the Sight of Cards should be an Occasion of Scandal. As there is no Medium between praying, and working or playing, the two last being discountenanced, People accustom themselves to Piety, at least outwardly, though there is nothing in England like the Inquisition, by which, at Geneva ⁱ and other Places of Switzerland, People are forced to go to Church. The Presbyterians are remarkably rigid and severe Observers of the Sunday, and the exterior Sanctification of that Day is, they say, chiefly owing to them. Laws bring on habitual Actions, and those Habits often hinder those very Actions from being done with due Reflection, and raising our Thoughts to God; such is human Frailty; but after all, it must be owned, that there is an indispensable Necessity of Laws, of a settled Form of Govern-

^d Super collectam populi.

^e Rationale, p. 50.

^f L'Estrange, Alliance of divine Offices, p. 83.

^g Ecclesiastical History informs us, that heretofore the Sunday was called a Day of Bread and of Light, by reason of the two Sacraments, of Baptism and the Eucharist, administered on that Day. At least 'tis certain, the primitive Christians called Baptism Light, or Illumination.

^h Letter VI.

ⁱ At Geneva a Civil Magistrate, called Auditor, goes about the Town, and takes Notice of all he meets not going to the Sermon, and they are censured: But what follows? When they have been forced to appear religious, during the Time of publick Service on Sundays, that is no sooner over, but they give themselves up to their Pleasures lawful or unlawful.

ment in Church as well as State, of Leaders and Directors^k, as long as there are People to be governed, led and directed. There is a singular Scruple, much taken Notice of by Foreigners, which is, that most Criminals, condemned to Death, begin their Confession by owning, they have been wanting to the due Observance of the Lord's Day; "though they have killed their Father or Mother, says an Author often cited in these Sheets^l, still the first Article of their Confession is, breaking the Sabbath." (He and they mean the Sunday.) Yet, in spite of Laws, of Customs, of Scruples, which are a Consequence of not conforming to the two first, human Passions play their Parts in England, as well as in other Countries, and get the better of all three. The Sunday is kept holy, by publick and regular Devotions; but, says the same^m Author, they feast and eat well, and to Excess; they even get drunk, if they please, at home, on the same Sunday; and after edifying their Neighbours, by hearing a good Sermon, they nevertheless spend the Evening at Taverns, or in Houses of ill Repute.

As to Holidays, those Solemnities, which the rigid Puritans look upon as a superstitious Worship, have not been reformed according to the severe Model of Calvin. The English Calendar contains many Saints, besides the Apostles, the Evangelists, St. Steven, St. John Baptist, and St. Barnaby, who are thought, by some, to be the only Saints whose Feasts should be solemnized. The Prayers on those Days are adapted to the Subject, in suitable Collects, Lessons, and Meditations, and an Enumeration of the Virtues of the Saint of the Day. Yet Shops are open, and every one is at Liberty to follow his Occupation or Diversions, as usual. If the Practice is different at Christmas, Easter, &c. 'tis chiefly out of Custom, for Decency, and because, as 'tis pretended, most of the Faithful are willing to be Partakers of the Devotion of those Festivals. The Puritans hate the very Name of Feasts of Saints, as founding like Idolatry; and when they are told, that nothing more is intended by that Denomination, only that such Lessons of Scripture are read on those Days, which bear the Name of such or such a Saint, without any Mixture of Superstition, they perty, and with some Colour of Reason, answer, that the common People do not take it so, but literally as the Words import: But to this it must be replied, that the People must be instructed to understand it as they ought; and that if this Reason was good, not only the Feasts of Saints must be suppressed, but most Part of religious Ceremonies, all the rhetorical and figurative Expressions of the inspired Authors, and the noble and sublime Descriptions of God, &c. lest the People, whose Notions are not very refined, but fixed on corporal or material Objects, should take them also literally.

SEVERAL of those Feasts are preceded by Vigils, to prepare the Faithful by Prayer and Fasting for the following Solemnity. The Puritans are not sparing of their Sarcasms on those Vigils and other Fasts of the Church of England. "One Day is a Fast, say they, to mortify the Flesh, and tame or repel its furious Assaults, but the next Day Amends are made with Usury, for what was taken from it the Day ^k As ill as we may think of the Clergy, they are necessary in a religious Society. They have usurped temporal Power, they have plaid the Tyrant, suppose it; but take away the Clergy, and see what will become of Religion. There are necessary Evils, which have ever been, and ever will be exclaimed against: Or rather, keep up the Clergy, expose their Faults, instruct the Laity. Some endeavour to prove, that the Clergy are not necessary, out of Minucius Felix, p. 262. Edit. in 8vo. Lugd. Bat. 1709. But what he says amounts to no more than finding Fault with the Heathen Priests, and saying the Empire of Affrica stood long, though they had no Priests. But how fared Religion? There he is silent.

^l Memoires & Observat. &c. p. 95.

^m Memoires, &c. p. 96.

“ before, and it becomes more rampant and rebellious to the Spirit than it was.”
 On the other Side, let us hear a Bishop of the Church of England ° enumerating the Advantages which are to be reaped from those Festivals. 1. They give a new Splendor, and enhance the Dignity of Religion. 2. They are forcible Witnesses of ancient Truths. 3. They excite the Faithful to Piety. 4. They are a Shadow and Foretaste of the eternal Happiness we hope to enjoy in Heaven. 5. And teach us demonstratively, by all our Senses, what we are to believe and practise. “ All our “ Holidays, says the same Bishop, are referr’d to one only Head, who is Jesus Christ, “ &c. And for this Reason our ecclesiastical Year begins at the glorious Annuncia- “ tion of his Birth (made to the Blessed Virgin) . . . And as Jesus Christ . . . “ has likewise manifested his Greatness and high Dignity in his Saints; as the Day “ of their going out of this World ought to be as much celebrated in the Christian “ Church, as the Birth or Coronation of Emperors or Kings of this World; some “ have been so far distinguished as yearly to solemnize their Festivals, in order to imi- “ tate their Example, and glorify Jesus Christ in their Persons. Thus in him we “ consider the Martyrdom of the holy Innocents, who suffered Death for his sake, “ even before they had attained to an Age fit to know him. We commemorate on “ the same Account the Death of St. Steven, who, knowing Christ, suffered for “ him, and had the Happiness, even whilst alive, to see the Heavens opened, and the “ Glory of God; the Preaching of St. John the Baptist, who was the Forerunner of “ Christ, and a second Elias; the Feast of St. Michael and all the holy Angels, and “ that of All-Saints and happy Souls, to give due Glory to God P.”

AFTER these Remarks, which we thought necessary; as also to observe, that in England the Year begins on the twenty-fifth of March ¶, which is thought to be the Day of the Incarnation of the Word, we shall present our Readers with a Table of all Feasts, Vigils, Fasts, and Days of Abstinence, observed in the Church of England, throughout the Year; and then give an Account of the Customs peculiar to certain Festivals.

FEASTS.

THE four Sundays of Advent, and all Sundays in the Year. The Nativity of Jesus Christ. St. Stephen’s Martyrdom. St. John the Evangelist. Holy Innocents. The Circumcision of our Lord; which is also called New-Year’s Day. The Epiphany. Conversion of St. Paul. King Charles the First his Martyrdom. Purification of the blessed Virgin. St. Matthias the Apostle. Annunciation of the blessed Virgin. Easter Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday. St. Mark the Evangelist. St. Philip and James the Apostles. The Ascension of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Birth and Restoration of King Charles the Second. Whitsunday, Monday, and Tuesday. St. Barnabas. The Nativity of St. John the Baptist. St. Peter the Apostle. St. James the Apostle. St. Bartholomew the Apostle. St. Matthew the Apostle. St. Michael and all Angels. St. Luke the Evangelist. St. Simon and Jude the Apostles. All Saints. Gunpowder. Treason. St. Andrew the Apostle. St. Thomas the Apostle.

° Hodie jejunant ad domandam carnis ferociam, ut ajunt, cras quod à carne detraxerant reddunt, & eandem ferociorem quam prius efficiunt. See hereafter two other notable Passages on Feasts.

° Bishop Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 66.

¶ This and other Passages of English Authors are translated out of the French, we not having the English Books by us.

¶ See Memoires, &c. and in this Work above, the Inconveniences arising from that Custom.

VIGILS.

THE Days before the Nativity of Christ ; Purification ; St. Matthias ; Annunciation ; Easter ; Ascension ; Whitsunday ; Nativity of St. John the Baptist ; St. Peter ; St. James ; St. Bartholomew ; St. Matthew ; St. Simon and Jude , All-Saints ; St. Andrew ; St. Thomas.

Other Days of FASTING or ABSTINENCE.

I. THE forty Days of Lent.

II. THE Ember-Days, being the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday after

{ The first Sunday in Lent.
 { The Feast of Pentecost, or Whitsunday.
 { The 14th of September.
 { The 13th of December.

III. THE three Rogation Days, being the Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday before Holy Thursday, or the Ascension.

IV. ALL Fridays in the Year, except Christmas Day.

ADVENT is so called, says Bishop Sparrow, whom we have so often cited, because it is a Time of Preparation, to celebrate the Commemoration of Christ's Coming in the Flesh. " The Sundays of Advent are to the Feast of Christmas, what " St. John the Baptist is to our blessed Saviour." Another Author says, that many Predictions foretold the Incarnation of Christ, which his Church has thought fit to commemorate by the four Sundays of Advent, which " are as so many Heralds to proclaim the approaching of the Feast."

THE Antiquity of the Feast of Christmas is uncertain, according to the Criticks ; but 'tis generally thought it was not fixed to the 25th of December till about the Year 500. That Festival, as the English keep it, is a Medley of Devotion and Diversions, which last till the Epiphany, or Twelfth Day. In France Presents are given only on New-Year's Day, in England that Custom begins at Christmas, when even those who keep Taverns, or other Publick Houses, give gratis to their Customers Part of what they eat or drink in their Houses, on that and the following Holidays. They require the Wine to be paid for, but the Victuals are given, especially Bread and Cheese¹, dressed in such a Way as invites agreeably both Clergy and Laity to drink many Bumpers of heavy Port or Xeres Wines. " In private " Families, says the Author of Memoires & Observations, &c. " a famous Pie is " made, which from the Festival borrows its Name of Christmas Pie ; an artful " Composition, and elegant Jumble or Hash of Neat's Tongues, white Meat, Eggs, " Sugar, Currants, Lemmon-Peel, and other Sweetmeats, Spices, Wine, &c. &c."

THE Feasts of St. Steven, St. John, and the Holy Innocents, which immediately follow Christmas Day, bring to Mind a Passage of an old Author on those Holidays which are so close to one another. " Festivals come on apace ; the Servant is " honoured immediately after his Master's Theophany." That Name, which signifies

¹ L'Estrange, Chap. v. p. 134.

² Toasted Bread and Cheese.

³ Pag. 322.

the Appearing or Manifestation of God, was heretofore given to the Nativity of our Lord. But why are those Holidays observed immediately after it? 'Tis owned, the Holy Innocents ought to be commemorated very near Christmas; why St. Stephen, whose Martyrdom is believed to have happened about August? Why St. John? An ingenious Mystagogical Author has happily found out some Reasons, upon which that Practice may have been grounded^u. "Those three Solemnities represent to us three " sorts of Martyrdom. The first in Will and Deed, St. Stephen's; the second in " Will, but not in Deed, St. John the Apostle's^w; the third in Deed, but not in
" Will, of the Innocents;" who in that tender Age could not know either him for whose Sake they were put to Death, or the Merit of suffering Martyrdom. What a noble Discovery, how full of spiritual Comfort^x! An English Divine gives other Reasons, which may have their Weight: " St. Stephen, says he, follows Jesus Christ, " that is his Nativity, because he was the first Martyr. St. John the Evangelist comes next, because his Feast could not be kept the Day on which he died^y, which is the Birth of St. John the Baptist." All agree, that the Feast of the Holy Innocents is in its proper Place. Such particular and minute Circumstances are not wholly useless, they are, if not instructive, at least diverting to our Readers; however they certainly will appear new to most of them.

WHAT we have to say about the Circumcision of our Lord, or New-Year's-Day, is only, that the first Name was not given to it, till the eleventh Age; though, above four hundred Years before, it is mentioned, by several Ecclesiastical Authors, as being the Octave of the Nativity; and the Reason why it was not kept sooner is, because it occurs on the same Day with the Feast of the New Year, which was celebrated by the Heathens, in all sorts of Excesses and Profanations; on which Account^z the sixth General Council expressly forbid the keeping of that Feast, which St. Chrysostome had called a Diabolical Feast above two hundred Years before. We must own nevertheless, that it being still the first Day of the new Year, even Christians prophane it, by some Disorders borrowed from Paganism, and like the Heathens begin the Year, with a Renewal of Vices and Lewdness. But as this Subject is proper for the Pulpit, so we leave it, and shall only take Notice, that good Wishes, Presents, Feasting were in Use amongst the Romans, as well as they now are with us; they also began the Year with Prayers^a and Sacrifices. Moreover they were very careful to do some Work on that Day, superstitiously believing, as some Christians do still, that the giving then any Proof of Cunning or Industry was a good Omen for the whole subsequent Year.

THE Epiphany, which is also called Twelfth Day, reckoning from Christmas Day, is kept on the 6th of January. By ancient Custom the Kings of England offer at the Altar Gold in one Purse, Mirrh in another, and Frankincense in a third, on that Day and on New-Year's-Day. They offer likewise a Piece of Gold at Christmas, ^u Durandus in Rational. This Author and several others, invent wittily mystical Reasons of the Customs and Ceremonies of the Church.

^w 'Tis recorded in ecclesiastical History that he was thrown into boiling Oil, and came out of it safe and sound.

^x Bishop Sparrow in his Rationale &c. p. 78. thought those Reasons so strong, that he alledged them, without doing to Durandus the Justice of citing him.

^y Who told him so! a very uncertain historical Tradition. But let it be granted, could not his Feast have been assigned to the 26 or 27 of June as well as to the 27 of December? No, says our Author, "no Day could be assigned to this John (the beloved Disciple) more proper than he might be nigh his Master &c."

^z L'Esrange Alliance &c. p. 138.

^a See Ovid. Lib. I. ver. 75. Fest. on Jan. 1.

Candlemas, Easter, Pentecost, on Trinity Sunday, and the Feasts of St. John the Baptist, St. Michael, and All-Saints. A French Writer ^b is very severe on the Custom of the King of the Bean, and pretends it is derived from the Heathen Solemnity called Saturnalia, and so far is true, that then a King was chosen by Lot, as is now done; this is evident by what Tacitus ^c relates.

By St. Paul's Conversion, a furious Wolf is changed into a meek Lamb; this is a Miracle of God's infinitely powerful Grace; 'tis wonderful in itself, and in the foregoing Apparition: We are taught by this Example, that the greatest Sinners ought never to despair of finding Mercy, and being reconciled to God. The Church therefore justly celebrates this Feast as a publick Acknowledgment of this Truth, and for so miraculous a Conversion ^d.

THE Feast, or rather Fast, appointed by the Church of England, in Memory of Charles the First, is a publick Reparation of the scandalous spilling of that unhappy Prince's Blood by his own Subjects, who pretended to judge him, and actually condemned him, and executed their barbarous Sentence. An incredible and unheard of Crime, as a French Poet deservedly calls it ^e! Which however must not be charged upon the whole Nation, but chiefly, if not solely, upon the most audacious of all Traitors, who boldly usurped, after this Murther, a more despotick and dangerous Authority than that which had been overthrown. There is a peculiar Form of Prayers, Lessons and Collects, suitable to the Occasion, set down for that Solemnity, in which Charles is called a Martyr. It is kept on the 30th of January; or if that falls on a Sunday, it is deferr'd to the Monday following.

CANDLEMAS, or the Purification of the blessed Virgin, is so well known, that we need not enlarge upon it. But it furnishes us with an Opportunity of introducing the Ceremony of the Churching of Women, which is a kind of Purification, and, according to the Presbyterians, a Remnant of false Judaical Zeal ^f. Women, after their Lying-in, come to Church modestly clad, with their Faces covered ^g: What! say the same Enemies of, and Carpers at, all the Ceremonies of the Church of England, is it out of Shame they hide themselves, as if they had committed a Crime of Impurity? 'Tis answered, that this is done out of Modesty, and is very decent; whereas it would be wrong if it was done after Lying-in by an unlawful Commerce. However, they kneel at the Choir Door, or near the Communion Table, and in that Posture recite with the Priest a Psalm agreeable to their Circumstances; the Priest blesses them, and recommends them to Almighty God by Prayer: Thanks are rendered to the Lord, and an Offering made. But, say still the Presbyterians, why such solemn Thanksgiving on this Occasion ^h? Is a Lying-in of a more dangerous Nature than Fire, Water, other Sickness, and so many perillous Hazards we are daily exposed to? For many Reasons deduced in an English Book ⁱ which shews, that God himself has taken particular Notice of this State of Lying-in Women; that being with Child is accompanied with many Infirmities and Sufferings, not ex-

^b See Pasquier in his Recherches, and Marville Tom. III. of his Melanges pag. 467. Edit. of 1725. who mentions also after Belet and Durand, another Custom borrowed from the Saturnals. "The Bishop, Canons, and inferior Clergy, meet in the Cloysters of their Churches, and there Play, Dance, and sing &c."

^c Tacitus, Annal. Lib. XIII.

^d Sparrow, p. 147.

^e Benferade, in a Ballad.

^f Calderwood, p. 651.

^g The covering of the Face is now left off.

^h Calderwood, p. 651.

ⁱ L'Estrange, p. 326.

pected to proceed from such Preliminaries; that being brought to Bed is not without great Pains and Danger, nor the Lying-in without Fatigue, Care and Labour. Such are the dismal Consequences of original Sin. Add to this the Anxiety of Mind, the numberless Pains to be taken in the feeding, bringing up, and instructing Children in their Duty: Which made a Poet ^k say, though somewhat prophanely, that it is not worth the Trouble to be born. But God may change those Thorns into Roses, and therefore it is just, and even necessary, to give him Thanks for a safe Delivery, and beg his Help for the good Education of Children, before the whole Church, and in a solemn Manner.

THE English keep Lent; but either do not, or even will not, know the disorderly Recreations of the Carnival. We need not mention in this Place the Antiquity of Lent, or its Value, that it is an humble Imitation of the Fast of Jesus Christ, and an excellent Preparation to the Communion of Easter, which therefore no Christian should neglect: The mystical Signification of it is, that as Christ's Sufferings in this World ended, and he entered into his Glory at Easter ^l, the Church has also thought fit to appoint our spiritual Afflictions, and Works of Repentance, should likewise end at that Festival. Several other such typical Expositions of that Practice, and equally well grounded, might be, and have been, by divers Authors alledged, concerning the Fast of Lent; one shall suffice for the present. Lent is an Emblem of the Storms, Persecutions and Troubles we meet with in this Life. Easter is a Figure of the eternal Repose and Happiness we hope to enjoy in Heaven. Now if any one should wonder that a Fast instituted in Imitation of that of Christ should not be kept at the same Time in which he fasted, which was about the Epiphany; one Reason of it, besides many others which might be assigned, is, that our Time of fasting is fixed to the Beginning of Spring, a Time when there is a general Revolution of Humours in human Bodies, when our Blood ferments, our Passions are stirred up, and the Flesh is apt to rebel against the Spirit: These Difficulties are best overcome by Fasting and Prayer: Therefore, says St. Jerom, as cited by Sparrow in his Rationale on the Common Prayer, the Time in which we fast is the most convenient.

THIS prodigious Change which is perceived in Spring, not only in human Bodies, but likewise in all sublunary Beings, introduces very patly a small Digression concerning a ludicrous Ceremony observed on the Eve of St. Valentine's Day, mentioned in the English Calendar February the 14th. “ Young People of both Sexes, says the “ Author of Memoires & Observations, &c. ^m celebrate, by an ancient Custom in “ England and Scotland, a small kind of Festival, (which ⁿ is a Representation of the “ Revival of Nature, and of that inborn Desire of all Animals to encrease and multiply their own Species.) An equal Number of each Sex meet, every one writes “ their own or borrowed Names on a separate Piece of Paper, they roll up those “ Papers, and the Boys take by Lot one of the Girls Names, and the Girls take in “ the same Manner one of the Boys Names, so that each young Woman has a young “ Man whom she calls her Valentine, and each young Man has also a young Wo- “ man whom he likewise calls his Valentine; it often happens, that each has two “ Valentines, viz. the Person whose Name they have drawn, and that which has “ drawn their Name. The whole Company being thus coupled, the young Men ^k Regnier Des marais. See likewise Manilius, Lib. IV. Astron. But a serious Divine will think all those Sayings are prophane.

^l Sparrow in his Rationale, p. 92.

^m Memoires & Observations faites par un Voyageur, p. 410.

ⁿ The Words within the Parenthesis are not of the Author we cite.

“ give Balls and Treats to their Valentines, and wear their Names pinn’d either to “ their Sleeves, or near their Heart These Ceremonies vary in the different “ Provinces, or accordingly as the young Ladies require more or less from their “ Valentines. There is another sort of Valentines, that is, the first Woman or Girl “ which a Man or Boy meets by chance in the Street, or elsewhere on the Day of “ the Feast.”

ON the first Day of Lent^o, or Ashwednesday, the English Liturgy appoints the Commination to be read, that is, a publick Denunciation or Threatning of God’s Judgments upon Sinners. After the Morning Prayer, and the saying or singing of the Litany, as usual, the Priest says, “ Brethren, in the primitive Church there was “ a godly Discipline, that at the Beginning of Lent, such Persons as stood convicted “ of notorious Sins, were put to open Penance, and punished in this World, that “ their Souls might be saved in the Day of the Lord; and that others, admonished “ by their Example, might be the more afraid to offend. Instead whereof, (until “ the said Discipline may be restored again^r, which is much to be wished) it is “ thought good, that at this time, and in the Presence of you all, should be read
 “ the general Sentences of God’s Cursing against impenitent Sinners, &c.” This short Preface being pronounced by the Priest at the reading Pew, the Curses are recited aloud, at each of which the whole Congregation says Amen. Then the Priest exhorts the People to Repentance, and recites some Prayers. A Presbyterian Writer, considering that the Curses are read in the Pulpit, and the Litanies and Prayers at the Reading-Pew, fancies that this is done in Imitation of the Order given to Moses by God, to pronounce the Blessings on Mount Gerizim^q, and the Curses on Mount Hebal: But this Conjecture has no Foundation, for as an Author of the Church of England relates the Affair, there is no mysterious Meaning in that Custom which was introduced, as we may say, by meer Chance, and the Reason of it unknown^r to most People.

THE Mention of Lent requires our giving an Account of the Ember Weeks. The Reader, by what has been said, knows at what Times they are kept, and for what Reason^r; as to their English Name of Ember Weeks, it was given to them, “ because “ our Forefathers, says Bacon, as cited by Sparrow, did eat on those Days Cakes “ baked under the Ashes or Embers, to put them in Mind, that they themselves “ were but Dust and Ashes.

AGAIN, the Account we have given of the Commination obliges us not to forget the various Sorts of Excommunications made use of in the Church of England. The lesser cuts off from the Communion, those who being duly cited, neglect to give in their Appearance before the Ecclesiastical Courts. This Power of Excommunication may be delegated by the Bishop to any Priest of the Church of England, joined to the Chancellor of the Diocess, who is the first Official of the Bishop. The greater Excommunication not only deprives of the Communion, but likewise of the civil Rights of suing, or being sued in any Court, Civil or Ecclesiastical: And if they who are subjected to it, remain obstinate during the Space of forty Days, the Court ^o This Day is called Caput jejunii by ancient Writers. It is also named Ashwednesday, from the Ceremony of putting Ashes on the Head of the Faithful, to put them in mind of Mortality, &c. See Sparrow, p. 93.

^p See Sparrow, p. 233.

^q Calderwood Chap. X. p. 524.

^r L’Estrange, Chap. XI. There was, says he, no reading Pew, till 1603, which was since introduced, that the Prayers might be easier heard by the Congregation in large Churches.

^s See Vol. II. of this Work, about the Ceremonies of Jews and Catholics.

of Chancery issues out a Writ to seize and put in Prison the excommunicated Person. The Bishop only can inflict the greater Excommunication, but he does not, or ought not, except on those who are convicted of the greatest Crimes, as Heresy, Adultery, Incest, &c. The Anathema is the most dreadful of all, as it declares those who are under it, to be Enemies of God, and delivered up to everlasting Perdition. This likewise is done by the Bishop, in the Presence of the Dean and Chapter, or of twelve other Ministers. None of those Censures are pronounced in publick, nor the Absolution from them, but in the Bishop's Court.

ON Maundy Thursday, anciently known, at least in the Western Churches, and still called at Rome by the Name of Cæna Domini, the Kings of England distribute Alms to as many poor People as they are Years old. They are brought into the banqueting House at Whitehall, where a Table is set out, and each of them has a Dish of Fish, six small Loaves of Bread, one Bottle of Wine, some Beer, Cloth for a suit of Clothes, or a Gown, Linnen for two Shirts, Stockings, Shoes, and two small Purfes of red Leather, one of which contains as many small Pieces of Silver, the other as many Shillings, as the King is Years old. Heretofore the Feet of those poor People were washed, and if the King did not perform himself that humble Ceremony, by which some other Monarchs in Catholick Countries proudly imitate that Pattern of Humility set by Christ, the Grand Almoner was appointed to do it, as he now distributes to them the fore-mentioned Gifts.

THE Account of one Ceremony draws on that of another, so we shall introduce in this Place the Custom of Curing the King's Evil, which the Kings and Queens of England have practised, though the French Authors pretend, the Kings of France only have that Power. The high Dignity of Kings raises them much above the rest of Mankind; yet as we unhappily find by Experience, that they are not always endowed with the heavenly Virtues which ought to shine in their whole Conduct, it is somewhat strange they should pretend to one of the greatest of the Divine Prerogatives, that of working Miracles, or curing Distempers by a supernatural Power. Accordingly this wonderful Privilege is generally attributed to their Coronation, and not to their Person. However the Protestants cry it down, and there are but few Christians in this Age, of any Communion, who give more Credit to those Cures, or believe them more real, than such as ancient Authors have asserted to have been performed by the Hand or Foot of Vespasian, or by Pyrrhus's great Toe, which was said to cure those whose Spleen was distemper'd. This Gift of curing the King's Evil has likewise been allowed to the Kings of Arragon; and Favin^u thinks it belongs also to the Kings of Navarre. We find moreover that the Kings of England cured the Leprosy; that the Kings of Spain and Princes of the House of Austria could cast out the Devil; make those speak plain who used to stutter; and heal those who were Throat-bursten. Du May^w, who relates those Prodigies, says, the whole was done without much Ceremony. To take off the Wen under the Throat, they only give, with their own Hand, to the Patient a Glass of Water; and kiss the Stammerer, to loosen his Tongue. Be that as it will, the following Account of the Kings

^t See Tacitus, Histor. Lib. IV.

^u Hist. of Navarre. We find also in Marville's Melange's, &c. Tom. 3. p. 205. Edit. of 1725. that at Dalat, a Village in Auvergne, "there is a Confraternity of the blessed Sacrament, in which they yearly chuse a Child to be the King. The Father of him fasts on certain Days every Week from Easter to the Feast of Corpus Christi, and does some other good Works; on that Feast, the Father goes to his Devotions, and the Son touches for the Evil. But this Custom is now left off."

^w Etat de l'Empire d'Allemagne.

of England curing the King's Evil is given by the Author of Memoires & Observations, &c.^x “ King Edward the Confessor, says he, who was canonised by Alexander the Third, was the first who pretended^y to cure the King's Evil, by touching those who were afflicted with it This Opinion was held, probably without any Intermission, till the Reign of William the Third The English had, and may still have, great Faith in this Anodyne Remedy. Towards the End of King James the Second's Reign a great Number came from all Parts of the Kingdom in order to be touched. The King hearing of it, was so good as to say he would perform that Ceremony oftner, and to set the Days on which he was to touch. I was present at the last. His Majesty was seated in an Arm Chair, raised two or three Steps in one of the Rooms at Whitehall. Father Peters in a Band and long Cloak stood at his Right-Hand. Some Prayers being first said, the Yeomen of the Guard made the sick, or pretending to be so, file off one by one (the Author says in the Margin that there were about three hundred) through a narrow Passage railed in, which led to the King. Each sick Person knelt in his Turn before the King, who with both his Hands stretch'd out, touched their Cheeks. The Jesuit, at the same Time, put upon their Neck a String of white Tape, to which hung a gold Medal, and said some Words, equivalent, I suppose, to those said in France, The King touches, let God heal you. This was done in an Instant, and to prevent the same Person from coming twice, and getting another Medal^z by that Cheat, other Guards led them away and watched them till the Ceremony was over. When the King was tired with stretching out his Arms, and touching their Cheek or Chin, Father Peters presented only the String to be touched by his Majesty; in which Case the healing Power passed from the Hand to the String, from the String to the Clothes, from the Clothes to the Skin, and from thence to the Root of the Evil. Those who had been touched, and were really diseased were put into the Hands of Physicians; those who only came for the Medal wanted no Remedies.”

GOOD FRIDAY is appointed, in the English Liturgy, as a Fast, to be kept most strictly, for the Love of Jesus Christ, crucify'd on that Day. The following Saturday is likewise a Day of Humiliation and Abstinence. The Devotion of Easter Day brings with it great Comfort to the Faithful, and even Joy. The Gospel, the Epistle, Collects, and Anthems contain all the Motives which ought to inspire with it a true Member of the Church of England, which desires, says Sparrow^a, that the Faithful after the Tears and Fasts of Good Friday and Easter Eve for the Death of our Saviour, should be refreshed on that Festival, and filled with Joy. The same Author tells us, that Monday and Tuesday are joined to Easter Sunday, as Part of that Solemnity, and in order to its being kept with more Splendor: He adds, that it was heretofore called the Queen of Feasts; and the Passage which he cites out of St. Ambrose seems to mean, that all the Time betwixt Easter and Whitsuntide ought to be a continual Feast. This must not be understood so literally as to conclude, that it ought to be spent in Mirth and Diversion: True Christians are all well apprised that there are two Sorts of Joy: But we cannot help finding Fault with a Passage of Tertullian, cited by Sparrow in the same Place, as being very insignificant, viz. That all the Feasts of ^x P. 116.

^y It should be, who they pretend has cured.

^z Each Medal, says the Author, is worth about two Crowns, or ten Shillings, it was then called an Angel. King William the Third converted to other pious Uses the Fund settled for those Medals.

^a Rationale, p. 105.

the Heathens put together did not come up to that of Easter, that great and solemn Festival of the Christians. All that this Bombast amounts to is only, that Worship paid to the Devil, is not so good as that which is paid to God. How can this be seriously said to prejudiced or obstinate Heathens, who to be sure would never grant that they worshipped the Devil? The same Bishop Sparrow^b takes Notice, that in the fifty Days of Joy, from Easter to Whitsunday, the Faithful are not to kneel, that Posture denoting Affliction; but must pray standing, as on Sundays, to shew their Joy. The Ancients have handed down to us many such important Reflections. But it will appear more essential, to such of our Readers, who are desirous to know the true Reasons of Church Ceremonies, to let them know, that the Time of giving Baptism to those of riper Years, (which in the Primitive Church was very common, by Reason of the numerous Conversions from Paganism to Christianity) being fixed to the Eves of Easter and Pentecost, those Feasts and the following Days were spent by the Faithful in Joy, in Prayers, and Thanksgivings, and the newly baptized all that Time came to Church in white^c Clothes, lighted Tapers being carried before them. In subsequent Ages, few were baptized, except Infants, but the above-mentioned Solemnities were still kept up, though the Occasion had in some Measure ceased.

By the wording of the Collect for the third Sunday after Easter, in which God's Grace is desired for those who are admitted into the Fellowship of Christ's Religion, &c. The Church of England seems to commemorate that ancient Custom of Baptism; whereas the Collect for the fifth Sunday is a Preparation towards receiving the Comforts of the Holy Ghost: This Sunday is called Rogation Sunday in the Church of England, by reason of the three following Days, in which some fast; though it be not expressly commanded in their Church. The Litanies and Prayers said on those Rogation Days are to draw down God's Blessing on the Fruits of the Earth. A great Enemy to all the religious Customs of the Church of England^d relates a Fact which we cannot say is generally true, viz. that in the Country they go in Procession about the Fields, not with so much Ceremony as is done in Catholick Countries, yet in such a Manner, that this Author calls it a Remainder of Popery and Paganism. The Church of England, says he, makes a Lustration or Purification of their Fields, by singing Psalms, the great Litany, and suitable Prayers. The Priest, who goes at the Head of the Procession, is accompanied, as with the Catholicks, by a great Throng of Country People, and other devout Persons, who either out of Zeal, or out of the Interest they have in a good Crop, are willing to take Part in this Country Devotion.

WE shall say nothing of the Ascension, only that, according to Sparrow^e, the Collects, Prayers and Lessons are excellently adapted to the Subject, and include many Figures and Allegories^f on which we must repeat what has been said before^g in this Work (without thinking ourselves wanting in the profound Respect due to our sacred Religion) that if the Indians were to judge of our Understanding by our typical and mystical Expressions, they would think some of our Notions as absurd as we take theirs to be; because we are resolved to take in a literal Sense what they would certainly pretend is only said allegorically of their Gods, their familiar Spirits, or other pretended Mysteries of their Religion.

^b Rationale, p. 111. and 113.

^c The Sunday which we call Low Sunday in Opposition to Easter Sunday, which is the High or Great Sunday, is called in Latin, Dominica in Albis, because those white Clothes were left off on that Day.

^d Calderwood, above-cited, p. 523.

^e Rationale, p. 125.

^f The same, p. 120, and following.

^g Vol. I. towards the End of the Supplement in the second Part.

THE Sunday after the Ascension, and the following Days, are called Expectation Week, because the Apostles expected the fulfilling of our Lord's Promise, to send them a Comforter. The Day of Pentecost is called Whitsunday; either from white, because the new baptized wore white Garments, as an Emblem of that heavenly Light which the Holy Ghost infuses into the Hearts of the Faithful; or rather as L'Estrange explains it Chap. v. p. 146. from the French Word buit, corruptly pronounced, because that is the eighth Sunday after Easter.

THE 23d of April is the Feast of St. George the Martyr, (who was honoured in Catholick Times as Patron of England) and is remarkable for the Procession of the Knights of the Garter. We must therefore give our Readers some Account of that Order. The Origin of it is too well known to need any further Mention of it, we shall only relate what is said of that Knighthood, by the Author of ^h Memoires & Observations, &c. "Edward the Third was the Founder of it, he put it under the Protection of St. George Patron of England. The Number of Knights is fixed to twenty five, reckoning the King, or Sovereign, for one. They wear from the left Shoulder to the right Side a large, deep blue Ribband, to which hangs the Figure of St. George fighting with the Dragon; the Garter is wore on the left Leg under the Knee, and has these Words embroidered on it: Honi soit qui mal y pense The Chapter of the Order is usually held at Windsor, and the Knights are installed in the Chapel belonging to that Castle That Dignity is conferr'd on those of the prime Nobility. Yet if any private Gentleman becomes illustrious by some great Atchievements, or is in high Favour with the King, he may, without being made a Peer of the Realm, have that Title bestowed upon him When the King makes a Knight; the Person to be made kneels, the Prince touches his left Shoulder with a naked Sword, and says, or rather used heretofore to say to him, Be a Knight, in the Name of God. Advance, Knight." We must take Notice by the by, as the same Author does, that the Word Noble is used in a much more limited Sense in England, than in France; the Proofs of which may be seen in his Book under the Title Nobility; as also on the Difference between Knight Baronet, Knight Banneret, Knight Batchelor, and Esquires, under the Title Knights. There is also a much inferior Class of Knights, called Knights of the Bath, instituted by Henry the Fourth, and are forty six in Number. They were called of the Bath, because the Eve before their Admission they put on the Habit of an Hermit, watch'd all Night, and bathed themselves. This Order was extinct, but King George the First renewed it, and raised it to a much higher Rank than it used to be. The Ribband which they wear is red.

THE greatest Exploit attributed to St. George, Patron of England, and his most valiant Deed; is his overcoming the Dragon. The English Legends, which are as numerous, as voluminous, and as full of extraordinary Events, as those of any other Nation, give an Account of this Saint, of which the Author of *Memoires, &c.*ⁱ has made an Abstract: Even that is too long to be inserted in this Place, and we should, no doubt, spoil it if we pretended to abridge it. No Romance equals it; and we may boldly say, that the Dragon, which next to St. George, is the Hero of it, excels by far all the Dragons, which have made any Figure in ancient Chronicles, either Christian, or Heathen. Some Dragons have been mentioned in France, but they were more easily defeated, and with less Ceremony, than was required to overcome ⁱ P. 214. and following.

^h P. 54. and following.

this Lybian^k Dragon; or any other killed in Greece, or in the East. St. Romanus, for Example, from whom the Archbishops of Roan in Normandy have received the Privilege known there by the Name of the Fierte, made Use only of his Stole, to get the better of the Dragon which infested^l the Country adjacent. The Saint put it about the Serpent's Neck, ordered a Malefactor condemned to Death, whom he had taken as a Witness of that bold Undertaking, to lead it into the Town, where it was burnt in the Presence of all the Inhabitants. The Dragon's Death saved the Criminal's Life, who obtained a Pardon: And in Order to keep up the Memory of this Deliverance, every Year on Ascension Day a Criminal, condemned to Death for what Crime soever, is delivered, on Condition that he lends a helping Hand to carry in Procession the Shrine, which they call the Fierte^m of St. Romanus. The Particulars of this Ceremony may be seen in the following Noteⁿ.

TRINITY

^k The English Legend says, this Victory was obtained by St. George in Lybia.

^l Known by the Name of Gargouille.

^m Fierte, from the Latin Word Feretrum, a Coffin.

ⁿ An old Book, which is very scarce, printed at Paris 1611, under the Title of Plaidoyers & Responses concernant le Privilege de la Fierte Saint Romain, gives the following Account, p. 20, and following. " St. Owen, Chancellor of France, succeeded St. Romanus in the See of Roan, and to perpetuate the Remembrance of this miraculous Deliverance (from the Dragon) and put the Faithful in Mind yearly to renew their Acknowledgments for so great a Benefit, by Prayers and Thanksgivings, obtained of King Dagobert, in favour of the Archbishop, Dean, Canons, and Chapter of Roan, Leave and Power to chuse yearly in their Chapter, on the Day of the Ascension of our Lord, what Prisoner soever, and for whatsoever Cause he might be detained, and to deliver him from Goal, and obtain his being intirely acquitted, and never prosecuted for any Crime committed before. This Privilege has often been confirmed by the Kings of France, and has been enjoy'd by the Archbishop, Dean, Canons, and Chapter of Roan, fully, peaceably, and without any Opposition. Since not one Year passed without their delivering a Criminal out of Prison (p. 23.) except in Cases of High Treason: And as no Prisoner had been delivered by them, whilst Richard King of England and Duke of Normandy was himself detained, they got Leave to set two at Liberty the Year following. So inviolably has that Privilege been kept, that no Accident whatever could interrupt this Prerogative of the Chapter, not even the Captivity of a King, who was their Duke and Lord (p. 25.) The Criminal is always delivered in publick; in the Presence of all the Town, and with great Solemnity. Thirteen Days before the Feast of the Ascension, four Canons and four Chaplains wearing their Surplices and Amiffes, their Ufber, or Verger, going before them, proceed to the Great Chamber of the Parliament, and to the Bailiff's Court, and Court of Aids, where they summon and charge the King's Officers to stop, and cause to be stop'd, all further Proceedings against any Criminals detained in the King's Prisons, till their Privilege has had its full Effect. On Rogation Monday two Canons in Priestly Orders go to the Prisons, accompanied by two Chaplains, the Verger of the Chapter, and a Notary, who is also a Priest; they receive there the Depositions of those who lay claim to partake in the Privilege; this they are employ'd in till the Day of the Ascension; on which the Prisoners are re-examined, and asked whether they persist in their Confessions, or have a mind to add any thing to them: This being done, about seven in the Morning of the same Day, all the Canons who are Priests meet in the Chapter-House, call on the Holy Ghost to direct them in their Choice, and solemnly swear, that they will not reveal any Part of the Depositions of the Criminals The Depositions are read, they pitch upon the Prisoner to be delivered, write his Name on a Paper sealed with the Chapter's Seal, and send it by a Chaplain in his Surplice and Amisse to the Parliament, which is met to expect their Nomination, and having received it, form a Decree, which orders, that the Prisoner chose by the Chapter shall be delivered up, to enjoy the Privilege of St. Romanus's Shrine, he and his Accomplices they are accordingly set free and out of Prison, the Depositions of all the other Criminals are burnt upon an Altar in Sight of all the People. Then the Procession begins, in which the Dragon, under St. Romanus's Feet, is carried on a long Pole (P. 36. of the Defence de la Fierte.) The Shrine of the Saint is also carried. The Prisoner newly delivered, bare-headed, bears the first Supporter; and those who have been set at Liberty the seven preceding Years help to carry it, each holding a lighted Taper in his Hand. The Procession ended, Mass begins, during which the Prisoner kneels before each Canon, begs Pardon for his Crime, and is exhorted by them to Repentance and Amendment of Life After Mass the delivered Criminal is brought to the House of the Master of St. Romanus's Confraternity, where, though he should be never so poor, he is feasted with the utmost Magnificence. Next Morning he appears before the Chapter, and, kneeling in the Presence of the whole Congregation, he is reprimanded according to the Heinousness of his Crime, by one of the Canons deputed for that Purpose, and put in mind of giving Thanks to God, to St. Romanus, and to the Chapter: Finally, having engaged himself by a solemn Promise, to come himself, or send another, each of the seven following Years, with a lighted Taper, to the Procession, he goes to Confession to the Penitentiary of the Cathedral, and receives the Absolution of his Sins." This Ceremony is blamed by many, as abusive, whilst others pretend to justify it by old Customs practised in Antiquity, and chiefly by that mentioned in the Gospel, of delivering a Prisoner at the Feast of the Passover. However it certainly is not so much against the Honour of our Religion, as that dangerous Privilege of Places of Refuge, which in some Countries screen from Justice an infinite Number of profligate Criminals, to the everlasting Shame of the Clergy, who by condemning and punishing the Violation of such Immunities, as the worst of Crimes, authorize, in some Measure, even those Disorders which are most prejudicial to civil Society, and encourage them by the Hopes of Impunity. One of the Authors of the Collection out of which this

TRINITY Sunday, and the Feasts consecrated to the Memory of St. Barnabas, St. John the Baptist, and of the Apostles, furnish us with no particular Ceremony worth Notice. The Birth and Restauration of Charles the Second, and other such Days, though they have proper Offices appointed to be then performed in Churches, yet the Devotion on those Days, as we have said before, does not consist so much in Acts of Piety, as in Excess of Jollity: 'Twould therefore be quite foreign to our Purpose, to give an exact Description of the various Irregularities committed on those Anniversaries; of which it may truly be said, that the Character and Genius^o of every Nation appears then in its proper Colours. The impetuous and head-strong English drown their natural Melancholy in large Glasses of Rum or Brandy Punch, of strong Ale or Beer of their own Growth, or thick heavy Port: The heavy Germans give Way to the natural Pleasure they find in swallowing excessive Quantities of Wine, and are apt to take Fire on the least Suspicion of an Affront: The Dutch with a cold Indifference are bare Witnesses of the Diversions of others, or with a Pipe in their Mouths, sullenly think on their own Interest, about which they are as much concerned, on the Holiday, as in the most nice Circumstances of their Dealings. The Frenchman, lively and gay, is more delighted with a sudden Flash of Mirth, than with good Success in the most serious Affair; with the Levity and Fickleness of a Butterfly, leaves one Diversion to pursue another, and is as little serious and attentive in his Pleasures as in his greatest Concerns. The English Liturgy has appointed a Feast to be kept in Honour of St. Michael and all the Angels (for it is not appropriated to St. Michael only) because they are God's Ministers on Earth^p, fight for us against Satan, and represent our unhappy State before the Throne of Grace: It has the Name of St. Michael, because that holy Archangel was the tutelar Angel of the Jewish Church, and performs now the same Function in Regard to the Christian Church: By which last Words the Author whom we cite means to be sure chiefly, if not only, the Church of England, being himself of that Communion. The Presbyterians pretend that such a Feast opens the Way to a superstitious Worship of the Angels: Besides, who has told them, says Calderwood^q, that St. Michael is not Jesus Christ himself? The Collect for that Day begs of God to grant that the holy Angels may succour and defend us on Earth; the Epistle contains the Account, historically or allegorically related in the

Note is taken, speaking of this Procession, says, "that it presents to the View of the People a greater Monster than the Dragon himself a Man loaded with Crimes, rescued out of the Hands of Justice, to procure him an Impunity, by which the People present are told, as one may say that if any of them has a Mind to commit such Enormities, he may freely put them in Execution, without Fear, &c." The last mentioned Author (p. 63, and following) attacks boldly this Miracle, and the Time which is assigned to the Saint who wrought it. The Reasons he alledges are strong, at least they appeared convincing to the Great Council, as may be seen in their Register (p. 132, and following.) The Defence produced by the Chapter of Roan, to uphold the Privilege of St. Romanus's Shrine, is weak, and wholly made up of those sophistical Arguments, which Bigots are apt to mistake for solid Reasons: It contains but one Thing worth Notice, taken from Durandus's Rationale, where speaking of the Rogations, he says, that in his Time a Dragon was carried in Procession, the Tail of which on the two first Days was very much swelled, and the End of it raised high, as an Emblem of the proud and despotick Power of the Devil over Mankind under the Law of Nature, and that of Moses; but on the third Day the Swelling was gone, and the Tail hung down, to shew that the Devil had lost most of his Power under the Law of Grace, of which the third Day of Rogations is a Representation. The curious Reader may find more Particulars concerning this Shrine and Dragon in the Recherches de la France, by Pasquier, Lib. IX. Chap. XLII. To this Story of the Dragon overcome so happily by St. Romanus, we must add, by way of Amusement and Diversion, that St. Quirinus defeated another, with no other Arms than the Stole of St. Nicasius; and that St. Donatus a Bishop in Epirus killed one also by the Sign of the Cross; but this last Dragon, to which no other Dragon mentioned by Christians and Pagans, no not even Hercules's Hydra, can be compared, was of such a prodigious Weight and Size, that no less than sixteen Oxen were required to drag it to the Place of Execution, for it was actually burnt with all due Formalities; and sure it was no more than it justly deserved, having done so much Mischief.

^o See Apuleius de Deo Socratis.

^p Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 153.

^q Calderwood, p. 479, cites several Passages of the Fathers to that Purpose.

Apocalypse, or Revelation, of the Battle fought by St. Michaël and his Angels against the Dragon (called the Devil and Satan) and his Angels.

THE fifth of November is too well known by the Names of Gun-Powder-Treason, and of The Popish Conspiracy, to need any further Mention in this Place. The Collect of St. Andrew does not speak of his Martyrdom, which according to an ancient Tradition, witnessed by several Martyrologies, he suffered on a Cross. As to the Feast of All-Saints, every one knows 'tis only a Commemoration of them all together, lest some should be forgot, and deprived of their due Honour. "We should find it too
" painful and laborious a Task, says Sparrow^r, if we were obliged to celebrate the " Memory of each particular Saint, upon whom God has bestowed his Grace; yet as
" in these particular Feasts we may justly be thought to have omitted some of our " Duty, the Church has appointed a Day for them all at once, to repair our former " Neglect."

AT the Beginning of the Reformation, the Church of England celebrated the Feast of St. Mary Magdalene on the 22d of July; but the last Reformers have left it out with the Collect, under Pretence, that it was uncertain whether Mary Magdalene was the same as the Sister of Lazarus, or which of the two was honoured on that Day. But a zealous Asserter of Festivals would have found no Difficulty of honouring both on one and the same Day: However many other Saints are in the English Calendar, without any proper Office in the Liturgy.

To the foregoing Account of the Festivals we must beg Leave to add a few Remarks. Religious Worship ought to be publicly performed, but if Churches are wanting, the Rubrick, and common Sense informs us, it must be done in private, rather than omitted. We have already mentioned another Rubrick, by which the Priest or Minister is ordered to be in a Surplice when he officiates, and in a Cope at the Communion Service in Cathedral^r or Collegiate Churches: "There is another " Charge given to the Rectors of Parishes, or their Vicars, to instruct all the Chil" dren of their District, and to examine them about the Catechism, every Sunday
" and Holiday, at least for the Space of half an Hour before the Evening Prayer." The Divines of the Synod of Dordrecht say, that Heresies are broached for Want of due Instruction: But, as Heresy is one of the most equivocal Words used in religious Disputes; and often has no other Meaning, but the not approving some Explanations which the strongest Party has embraced; the said Divines might have said as truly, that Heresy is a Want of Submission to the most authorized System of Divinity: One may proceed still further; there are in all Communions some People hard to please, they take Notice that all the Works of Men are liable to many Imperfections; they do not esteem the various Systems of Religion to be so many Oracles of the Holy Ghost; they are of Opinion, old Notions, and Doctrines established by a long Prescription, may be rectify'd, or set in a clearer Light; they often, by Consequence, endeavour to explain what they imagin ought to be cleared up: And, as what was once new, has taken a deep Root, and is grown venerable by Antiquity, their new Tenets or Explications seldom fail to meet with Contempt, to become odious, and to be looked upon as a wicked Attempt upon Religion. A Man so disposed, of what Sect soever he be, may easily be induced to think, that Instructions, and clearing up of Difficulties, occasion Heresies. However an Author of the

^r Sparrow in his Rationale, p. 153.

^r Sparrow in his Rationale, p. 248.

Church of England finds Fault with the Presbyterians[†] for destroying all the Advantages of Catechisms, and pulling down the Authority of Instruction, by their Sermons; and it must be owned, that Sermons are to this Day, as they were then, the chief Act of Calvinistical or Presbyterian Devotion; no doubt, because it is less difficult or troublesome than any other, both to the Preacher and to his Hearers. The Auditory is agreeably entertained with the Ornaments and rhetorical Figures of the Sermon; and the Minister is delighted to be thought an Apostle, by some Bigots, for the exact Disposition of the Parts and Graces of his Discourse. This pleasing Piece of Godliness becomes habitual, and inspires those Persons with that presumptuous Confidence, with which Christ so often reproaches the Pharisees: A Presbyterian, or Calvinist, who has been present at five or six Sermons in a Week, is so proud of his Merits in the Sight of God, that he thinks himself qualified and commissioned to decide without Appeal to the Religion of any Man, who has heard but one Sermon on a Sunday: This Self-Conceit entitles him, he fancies, to speak ill of all those he has seen at Church, and whose every Gesture he has pry'd into with a Saintly Curiosity. After all, this holy Exercise is not always perform'd with outward Regularity and Decency; the Faults which a Roman Author[‡] of bright Parts finds with those who went in his Time to hear the famous Orators plead at the Bar, are exactly the same which are daily committed in our Churches.

BUT we must give to the Preachers of the Church of England the Praise which they deserve. Their Discourses are instructive and edifying, they neither make Use of those bold Strokes of Rhetorick which stunn the Auditory without persuading it, nor of those light delightful Flourishes, which amuse, without drawing the Attention. They enforce Gospel Truths with an Evangelical Simplicity, as being in themselves so bright and full of Light, as to want no borrowed Gloss, no foreign Lustre. The present Custom of banishing from Christian Sermons what may justly be called Religious Quackery, which is in Vogue amongst the Ministers of the Church of England, is so commendable, that we cannot but wish it may be lasting, and spread itself through all Christendom. We have likewise mentioned before, as worthy of Notice, that the Preachers in England are allowed to read in the Pulpit their Sermons, (and even those composed by others). Other Countries are not sensible of the Convenience of this Practice, and there are many Places where the Calvinist Inhabitants constantly and unanimously prefer to it nonsensical Bombast, pronounced with a bold Air, and a peremptory Tone; mystical canting Gibberidge sounds to them as St. Paul's heavenly Doctrine; they are quite ravished by contradictory and self-belying Speeches, and mistake for the Effect of an Apostolical Zeal, the Trouble and Labour in collecting so many Absurdities, and the Delivery of them. The Presbyterians are not backward in retorting such Compliments upon the Church of England's Ceremonies[‡].

Religious

[†] L'Estrange in his Alliance, &c. Chap. iv. p. 97.

[‡] Pliny, Lib. I. Epist. XIII.

[‡] Calderwood, in his Alta. Damasc. Chap. x. p. 455. and following, loudly complains, that Preaching, which he pretends should be the most essential Part of the Liturgy, is but the least Part of the English Service: But he injuriously asserts, that few of the Church of England Ministers are able to preach (imò nec plerisque locis magis aptus est sacerdos Anglicanus ad concionandum quam asinus ad Lyram.) But if it was so in his Time, the Case is much altered since. He proves at large that Preaching is the essential Duty of a Bishop, that 'tis as necessary, as Food to those who are starved with Hunger: A Child of ten Years old may perform the whole Liturgy; it is only an Abstract of the Papists Mass-Books and Breviaries, freed from many Superstitions, but with no other Merit but that of being less tiresome: The reading of Homilies is not a right Method of dispensing the Word of God. Nen est illud verbum Dei rite secare, homiliam legere. He goes on, and condemns the Repetition of the same Prayers by the People after the Priest; sometimes aloud, sometimes in a low Voice; now kneeling, then standing. The Litanies he calls a superstitious Tautology, and says they Religious Customs of the Church of ENGLAND, in the Administration of Sacraments.

WE shall begin with the Communion; and, without entering into the particular Meaning of the Word, or the Idea which it imprints in the Mind, give a plain Account of the Manner in which it is given. “ So many as intend to be Partakers of the Holy Communion shall signifie it to the Curate the Day before. And if any of them be an open and notorious Ill-Liver, or have done any Wrong so that the Congregation be thereby offended, the Curate shall advertise him, that he presume not to come to the Lord’s Table, until he has openly declared himself to have truly repented and amended his Life and that he has recompensed the Parties to whom he has done Wrong Those between whom he perceives Malice or Hatred to reign, must be reconciled: Or if one be content to forgive and the other will not the Minister ought to admit the Penitent and not him that is obstinate but give an Account to the Ordinary who shall proceed against the offending Person.” Such are the present Times, that an outward Profession of Faith or Repentance must be admitted as a sufficient Proof, and that in all Christian Countries; the Ministers of the Church are not Apostles, or able to dive into the Secrets of the Heart; and the Church is not freed from bad Members by the Trial of Persecutions: These Preliminaries are commendable, and not a meer Ceremony, unless Hypocrisy, which often disguises most Acts of Religion, should make it such.

THE Altar (for this Name is often given by those of the Church of England to the Communion Table) ought to have a fair white Linnen Cloth upon it; (we use the very Words of the Book of Common-Prayer) and to stand in the Body of the Church, or in the Chancel, where Morning and Evening Prayers are appointed to be said. At all other Times the said Table is covered with a Silk Carpet and set in a decent Place Altar wise. This Order of the English Church is very offensive to the Presbyterians^{*}; but it would no doubt seem tiresome to the Reader, if we set forth their Objections against it. The Priest, standing at the North Side[†] of the Table, says the Lord’s Prayer with a Collect, then rehearses distinctly the ten Commandments, after each the People kneeling say, Lord have Mercy upon us, and incline our Hearts to keep this Law. This is followed by a Collect for the King, which the Priest says standing[‡], the Collect of the Day, the Epistle[§] and Gospel^{||}, at which last the People stand, as they do likewise at the singing or reciting the Nicene or Constantinopolitan Creed, which is done immediately after the Gospel. Then the Curate declares unto are against the Institution of Christ; the saying of various Collects at certain Distances, are not equivalent to a continued Prayer; the appointing set Days for the Litanies, standing at the Gospel, sitting at the Epistle, bowing to the Name of Jesus, kneeling at the Communion; in a Word, all the Ceremonies of the English Church are criticised and turned into Ridicule.

^{*} Calderwood, p. 529.

[†] Why at the North, and not at West or South? says Calderwood, in the same Page. L’Estrange, p. 166. says, it is by Way of Opposition to the Catholicks, who turn to the East. We hope the Reader will be satisfied with this Reason; at least L’Estrange gives no other.

[‡] Standing is a Mark of Authority: The Priest has God’s Mission to declare his Will, to publish Peace and Reconciliation to the Faithful. Sparrow, p. 16.

[§] The Epistle, says L’Estrange in Alliance, p. 167. represents the old Law; therefore it ought to be said before the Gospel.

^{||} At the mentioning the Word Gospel the People and Clergy sing Glory be to God, &c.

the People what Holidays and Fasting-Days are in the Week following to be observed; and, if Occasion be, publishes the Bans of Matrimony, reads Briefs, Citations, and Excommunications, and nothing is proclaimed or published in the Church during the Time of divine Service but by the Minister, nor by him any thing but what is prescribed in the Rules, or enjoin'd by the King, or by the Ordinary of the Place.

THEN follows the Sermon, concerning which we shall only take Notice, that by a Canon or Constitution^c published by Queen Elizabeth, the Preacher is ordered to say no more than what is conformable to the Holy Scriptures, and what Catholick and Orthodox Fathers and Bishops of ancient Times have published in their Writings, agreeable to the Doctrine contained in that divine Book. But Christians, whose Faith is over-burthened with Controversies, and different Systems of Divinity, may well ask, where this Conformity with Holy Writ may be found, or in what it consists? This is therefore one of those arbitrary and equivocal Notions, of which we must hope Christ himself will one Day, by his sole Authority, determine the true and genuine Sense. The Sermon or Homily being ended, the Priest returns to the Table, and begins the second Part of the Communion Service, which is called Offertory, saying one or more Sentences of Scripture, all adapted (says^d Calderwood, with a malicious Sneer, so common to all Parties) to excite the Faithful to give liberally to the Poor. The same Author seems inclined to censure also the Alms which are for the Support of the Ministers themselves, and by the Regulation made in 1536 are given four times a Year^e. Whilst these Sentences are read, the Deacons, Church-wardens, and other fit Persons, appointed for that Purpose, receive the Alms for the Poor or other Devotions of the People in a decent Bason, to be provided by the Parish, and reverently bring it to the Priest, who humbly presents it, and places it upon the Holy Table. “And when there is a Communion, says the Rubrick, “the Priest shall then place upon the Table so much Bread and Wine as he shall “think sufficient.” This seems to signify, that there may be a Communion Service without Communicants: We shall enquire into this hereafter. The Offertory being over, the Priest prays for the whole State of the Church Militant here on Earth. This Prayer is different at this Time from that which was in use under^f Edward the Sixth, and contained a Commemoration of the blessed Virgin, and of the Saints, with a kind of Prayer for the Dead; all which are now left out. “When the Minister “gives Warning for the Celebration of the holy Communion (which he shall always “do upon the Sunday or some Holiday immediately preceding) after the Sermon or “Homily is ended, he shall read an Exhortation (to prepare those who intend to “receive) or in Case he shall see the People negligent to come to the holy Com- “munion, instead of the former he shall use another Exhortation,” earnestly intreating the Faithful to become Partakers of that most heavenly Food; and by another short Discourse represents to them both the spiritual Benefits accruing from the Sacrament worthily received, and the Wickedness, and the great Danger, if it is received without due Repentance, &c. Then the Priest, not questioning their being rightly disposed, invites them to a general Confession, which is made by him and all the People kneeling humbly upon their Knees: This being ended, the Minister (or the Bishop, if present) stands up, and turning himself to the People, pronounces the

^c Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 163.

^d Chap. X. p. 530.

^e Christmas, Easter, St. John the Baptist's Feast, and that of St. Michael.

^f See L'Estrange, Chap. VI. p. 158. and the Historical Account, &c. p. 159. at the Beginning of Sparrow's Rationale, &c.

Abolution, reads some comfortable Passages of the New Testament, and in order to fix the Attention of the Communicants to this Act of Religion, says, Lift up your Hearts (sursum corda) &c. as in the Liturgy. The Preface, which immediately follows, is not always the same; for the festivals of Christmas, Easter, Ascension, Whit Sunday and Trinity, have each their proper Preface: After which, the Trisagium or Holy, Holy, Holy, is said. Then the Priest, kneeling down at the Lord's Table, prays in the Name of all those who are to receive the Communion; this being over, he stands up before the Table, and having so ordered the Bread and Wine "That he " may with the more Readiness and Decency break the Bread before the People,
 " and take the Cup into his Hands, says the Prayer of Consecration," which begins the third Part of the Communion Service; the wording of it is very remarkable, and runs thus: "Hear us, O merciful Father and grant that we
 " receiving these thy Creatures of Bread and Wine according to Jesus
 " Christ's holy Institution, in Remembrance of his Death and Passion, may be " Partakers of his most blessed Body and Blood; who in the same Night that he " was betray'd ^e took Bread, and when he had given Thanks, ^h he brake it, and " gave it to his Disciples, saying, Take, eat, ⁱ this is my Body which is given for " you, do this in Remembrance of me. Likewise after Supper, ^k he took the Cup,
 " and when he had given Thanks, he gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of this,
 " for this ^l is my Blood of the New Testament, which is shed for you for the " Remission of Sins: Do this as oft as ye shall drink it in Remembrance of me." What must be the Opinion of the Church of England in thus receiving the Sacrament of the Eucharist? The Prayer before the Consecration has these Words: Grant us so to eat the Flesh of Jesus Christ, and to drink his Blood, that our sinful Bodies may be made clean by his Body, &c. Another Prayer after Communion says, We are fed with the spiritual Food of the most precious Body and Blood of Jesus Christ. Certainly the Church of England does not believe the real Presence, in the same Sense with the Roman Catholicks; " ^m that is a physical Pre" sence, by which the Body of Christ, under foreign Appearances, still preserves all
 " the essential Properties of Bodies But the English Church admits a real,
 " though invisible Presence; it rejects a natural, sensible, physical and local Pre" sence, and is willing to own ⁿ an invisible, spiritual, and sacramental one,
 " such as seems convenient ^o to the Design of Jesus Christ." A Body spiritually present! This seems to Catholicks no less absurd, than to the English, a naturally extended human Body contained within the narrow Compass of a Wafer. But to avoid Controversy, in a Subject liable to so many Difficulties, and which is one of the most incomprehensible Mysteries of Christian Religion; might not every good Christian say the Prayer of Montluc Bishop of Valence ^p in Dauphiné, without pretending to search to the Bottom this impenetrable Mystery: We beg Leave to conclude this short Digression by asking one Question: Would any intelligent Reader

^e Here the Priest is to take the Paten into his Hands.

^h And here to break the Bread.

ⁱ And here to lay his Hand upon all the Bread.

^k Here he is to take the Cup into his Hand.

^l And here to lay his Hand upon every Vessel (be it Chalice or Flagon) in which there is any Wine to be consecrated.

^m Relat. Apolog. des sentimens du P. le Courayer. Vol. I. p. 109.

ⁿ The short Catechism says, The Body and Blood of Christ . . . are verily and indeed taken and received by the Faithful in the Lord's Supper.

^o See L'Estrange in his Alliance, &c. Chap. VII. p. 210.

^p Lord, give me Grace so to receive you, as you gave yourself to your Apostles. See Conf. Cath. of Sancy, in the Remarks on Henry the Third's Journal.

look upon it as a Paradox, if we should say, that the Heathens so often reproached the primitive Christians with eating human Flesh in their Feasts, chiefly, if not only, upon Account of some confused Notion they had of the Sacrament of the Eucharist, and of the Passages of St. John's Gospel and other inspired Books concerning it?

“ THE Priest first receives the Communion in both Kinds himself, then proceeds to deliver the same to the Bishops, Priests, and Deacons . . . (if any be present) and after that to the People also in Order ‘ into their Hands, all meekly kneeling.” They receive it in their Hands, because, says an English Author ‘, the Custom of receiving it in their Mouths from the Priest’s Hand favours too much of Transubstantiation. We shall not pretend to give our Opinion, whether this Reason alledged has any Solidity, or whether there was any Occasion to fear the People should have at one and the same Time two such seemingly unconnected Ideas: But we must take Notice, that some Ages before Disputes arose in the Western Church about the Nature of this Sacrament; a much greater sort of outward Respect was paid to this Mystery by the Faithful, than had been done in primitive Times. St. Cyprian ‘ and Eusebius are quoted for the Custom of putting the Eucharist into the Hands of the Communicants: But to convince us that a scrupulous Nicety introduced itself in the Devotion toward this Sacrament, we are told that about three hundred Years after, the Christians of Greece durst not touch these holy Mysteries, but carried them to their Mouths on a small Paten of Gold or Silver; which Custom was condemned and abolished in the sixth Council of Constantinople “, though it was only an outward Mark of the Respect of those timorous Christians. The kneeling Posture is certainly becoming the Dignity of this Mystery, which deserves a profound Veneration. A Subject ought not “ to make himself too familiar with his Lord and Master, and how durst we receive the Mystery of our eternal Redemption in any other than the most submissive Posture? This Use, indeed, was not universal in the first Ages; because the Faithful met chiefly on Sundays, when kneeling was not allowed, and for that Reason they received the Sacrament standing; but they were directed to bow by way of Adoration *. In spite of all these Reasons, and notwithstanding the English aver, that the “ Fear of reverting to Popish Idolatry is altogether vain, the Presbyterians dislike kneeling more than any other Situation of the Body. Kneeling, they say, is against the Institution of Christ, “ ’tis an Invention of Antichrist “, and though it may seem indifferent in itself, it ought to be rejected, as having been polluted and corrupted by Antichrist’s superstitious Idolatry. According to those fiery Orthodox Zealots, sitting round a Table is more conformable to the Institution of Christ. They even do alledge several figurative Reasons for their receiving the Communion in that Manner. Sitting, say the Puritans, shews to what high Dignity we are raised by God, and how familiarly he invites us “; sitting is a Type of the spiritual Rest “ which the Faithful find in Christ. A happy Invention this of mystical Explications! All Parties, all Customs, may and ever will find the Usefulness of them, and be justified by them.

‘ See the Rubrick, in the Common Prayer Book.

“ The double Print here annexed represents the English Communion.

‘ L’Estrange in his Alliance, &c. p. 209.

“ The Grecians look upon it as a General Council; ’tis called Quinti-sexium, being as a Supplement to the fifth and sixth, which had made no Canons about Discipline.

“ “ L’Estrange, in the same Page 209.

“ “ Calderwood, p. 541, 574, 553.

J. J. Smith del et fecit 1756

La COMMUNION des ANGLICANS à SAINT PAUL.

THE Priest says a Prayer when he gives the Bread, and another when the Cup is given to any one ^d. If the consecrated Bread or Wine be all spent before all have communicated, the Priest is to consecrate more If, on the contrary, there remains any when all have communicated, the Minister returns to the Lord's Table, and reverently places upon it what remains of the consecrated Elements, ^e covering the same with a fair Linen Cloth. Here begins the fourth and last Part of the Communion Service. The Lord's Prayer is said by the Minister, the People repeating after him every Petition; then follows another Form of Thanksgiving, after which the Glory be to God on high, a Hymn to which Antiquity has given the Appellation of Angelical. But why, says a Doctor of the Church of England, why is that Hymn sung in the Administration of the Sacrament of Christ's Body, which the Angels did sing at his Birth? ^f because, says he, this Thanksgiving is as convenient when Christ is made one with us in the Sacrament, as it was when he became one of us by his Nativity: Another Reason for singing this holy Canticle, is, that by Communion we are raised to the Dignity of Angels; finally, this is done in Imitation of Christ, who after the last Supper, in which the Eucharist was instituted, said likewise an Hymn. Such ceremonial Imitations very often occur in Christian Worship, and no Wonder, this is the easiest Way of following Christ. The whole Service is concluded, by the Priest, (or Bishop, if he be present) dismissing the Congregation with a Blessing.

“ EVERY Parishioner is ordered by the Rubrick to communicate at the least three “ times in the Year, of which Easter to be one: And then shall reckon with the “ Parson, Vicar, or Curate, or his or their Deputy or Deputies, and pay
“ all ecclesiastical Dues After the divine Service is ended the Money given “ at the Offertory shall be disposed of to such pious and charitable Uses as the Mini“ ster and Churchwardens shall think fit In Cathedral and Collegiate “ Churches and Colleges, where there are many Priests and Deacons, they shall all “ receive the Communion every Sunday except they have a “ reasonable Cause to the contrary. There must be no Celebration of the Lord's “ Supper, unless there be a convenient Number to communicate with the Priest, “ according to his Discretion. And if there be not above twenty Persons in the Pa“ rish of Discretion to receive, yet there shall be no Communion, except four (or “ three at the least) communicate with the Priest.” The Presbyterians find Fault with this last Clause, as too much resembling Private Masses ^g. Some Collects are appointed to be said, one or more after the Offertory, when there is no Communion.
What! say the Puritans, an Offertory when no body offers any thing? And who offers when there is no Communion? Again “ upon the Sundays and other Holi“ days, says the Rubrick, (if there be no Communion) shall be said all that is ap“ pointed at the Communion, to the End of the general Prayer (for the good “ Estate of the Catholick Church of Christ).” This likewise seems shocking to the Puritans: Here is, say they, a dry Mass, a Shadow without a Body! ^h

WE now proceed to give an Account of Baptism. The Rubrick says, “ that it “ is most convenient, Baptism should not be administered, but upon Sundays and ^d If another Minister or Deacon happens to be present, he helps the officiating Priest, and gives the Cup to the Laity.

What remains “ is not to be carried out of the Church, says the Rubrick, but the Priest, and such other
“ of the Communicants as he shall then call unto him, shall immediately after the Blessing reverently eat
“ and drink the same.” This Word reverently does not escape Censure from the Presbyterians.

^f Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 181. the Gingle of made one with us, and became one of us, pleased the good Dr. Sparrow.

^{g h} See Calderwood, p. 534. and 535.

“ other Holidays, when the greatest Number of People come together; as well for
 “ that the Congregation there present may testify the receiving of them that be new“ ly baptised into the Number of Christ’s Church; as also because in the Baptism “ of Infants, every Man present may be put in Remembrance of his own Profession “ made to God in his Baptism (or that made for them by their Godfathers or God-“ mothers) Nevertheless (if Necessity so require) Children may be bap“ tized upon any other Day Every male Child must have two Godfathers
 “ and one Godmother; and every Female one Godfather and two Godmothers “ who with the Children must be ready at the Font, immediately after the last “ Lesson of the Morning or Evening Prayer The “ Priest coming to the Fontⁱ, which is then to be filled with pure Water, and “ standing there, asks the usual Question, exhorts the People to pray, says two “ Prayers for the Child, reads a Gospel (Mark x. 13. and following) explains it, “ gives God Thanks, tells the Godfathers and Godmothers their Duty, receives their “ renouncing the Devil and repeats with them the Profession of Faith; after which,
 “ and a few more Prayers^k, he takes the Child into his Hands, desires the God“ fathers and Godmothers to name the Child; and then naming it after them, (if they “ certify him that the Child may endure it) he dips it in the Water discreetly and “ warily or if the Child is weak, he pours Water upon it, “ saying, N. I baptize thee, &c.” The Ceremony ends with the Minister’s signing the Child with the Cross^l, saying the Lord’s Prayer, giving Thanks to God, and a second Charge to the Godfathers and Godmothers.

ACCORDING to the Presbyterians, Baptism ought never to be administered but in publick, and they will not allow of its being given in private Houses; but the Church of England has an express Rubrick, to prescribe how this is to be performed, when ^m Necessity compels to do it, so that nothing essential may be omitted. If a Child so baptized does afterwards live, it is to be brought into the Church, and the Minister, in the Presence of the Congregation, enquires of the Godfathers or Godmothers, by whom, and in what Manner, the Child has been baptized? If he finds every thing has been done as it ought, he publickly declares the Baptism valid; receives the Child into the Church, and supplies the Prayers and Ceremonies omitted. If by the uncertain Answers to the Priest’s Questions, or otherwise, it appears that the Child has not been baptized, or not in a regular Manner, then the Minister baptizeth it “ in “ the Form before appointed for publick Baptism, saving that at the dipping of the “ Child in the Font he uses this Form of Words: If thou art not already baptized, “ N. I baptize thee in the Name of the Father, &c.”

As to the Ministration of Baptism to such as are of riper Years, and able to answer for themselves; first they are examined, whether they be sufficiently instructed in the Principles of Christian Religion; then they are exhorted to prepare themselves with Prayers and Fastings for the receiving of this holy Sacrament. If they are found fit, the Godfathers and Godmothers present them at the Font on the Day and at the ⁱ The Font is near the Entrance into the Church, and the Godfathers and Godmothers with the Child stand by it on the Side towards the Door, to which Ceremony the Presbyterians give a malicious Turn. See Calderwood, p. 605.

^k One of those Prayers is called the Blessing of the Water, but is not thought essential, and is omitted in domestick Baptism. See Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 184.

^l The Use of the Sign of the Cross is explained in the XXX Canon published in 1604. But all the Reasons there alledged do not appear satisfactory to the Presbyterians.

^m Sparrow, in his Rationale, p. 199. The Print here annexed represents Baptism administered in private Houses.

Le BAPTÊME domestique.

Le SERMENT de la FILLE qui se trouve enceinte.

CONVOI Funèbre des ANGLAIS.

Time appointed. The Godfathers and Godmothers are not to answer, as they did in infant Baptism, for the Persons christened, in quality of their spiritual Fathers or Mothers; they rather are present as Witnesses only. The Priest directs his Discourse and Exhortations to the Persons baptized, prays for them, and with them; they themselves renounce the Devil and all his Works, the vain Pomp and Glory of this World, with all covetous Desires of the same, and the carnal Desires of the Flesh: They make their Profession of Faith: After which, and some few Prayers said by the Minister, “ he takes each Person to be baptized by the right Hand, and placing “ him conveniently by the Font he dips him in the Water, or pours “ Water upon him, saying, N. I baptize thee, &c.” Then he receives them into the Church, signs them with the Cross, gives Thanks to God, and ends with a short Exhortation, first to the Godfathers and Godmothers, then to the Person baptized; recommending it to him “ to be confirmed by the Bishop so soon after his Baptism as “ conveniently may be, that so he may be admitted to the holy Communion.”

CONFIRMATION has been mentioned by us in the foregoing Sheets; in the Church of England, as amongst Catholics, the Bishops are sole Ministers of this religious Ceremony. This is the most respectful Name we can bestow on Confirmation, since the English have degraded it from the Dignity of a Sacrament; yet, such as it is, the Presbyterians blame, despise, and hate itⁿ. The Author, whom we cite, reviles it as an everlasting Source of Ignorance, which is universally spread, where-ever Confirmation is admitted: The Reason he gives for this Assertion is, that those who are confirmed get only by Heart, like so many Parrots, a Ceremonial Catechism, they repeat it when the Bishop comes, and forget it the Moment he is gone, because they do not understand it. He even avers, that in his Time several Priests were not well versed in it themselves, and so grossly ignorant, that they knew not the Difference of a Sheep from a Ship. But we must not depend upon the Truth of this Character; Times are much altered since this severe Censure.

THE short Catechism which every Person is to learn before he is brought to be confirmed by the Bishop, is to be seen in the Book of Common Prayer. The Christian Doctrine and moral Duties are delivered in it with that plain, easy, and familiar Simplicity, which is necessary for Beginners. Experience shews, that those substantial Catechisms, so highly extolled by the Presbyterians, neither explain and put in a clearer Light the Mysteries of Religion, nor instil more solid Piety into the Souls of the Faithful: Far from it; those Countries which are most plentifully stored with these substantial Catechisms are only famous for useless and meerly speculative Disputes about Religion. However the Church of England orders, that, for the Instruction of the Faithful Beginners, “ the Curate of every Parish shall diligently upon “ Sundays and Holidays, after the second Lesson at Evening Prayer, openly in the “ Church instruct and examine so many Children of his Parish sent unto him . . . “ in . . . the Catechism . . . All Fathers, Mothers, Masters, or Mistresses, shall “ cause their Children, Servants, and Prentices (who have not learnt their Catechism) “ to come to the Church at the Time appointed, and obediently to hear, and be or- “ dered by the Curate, until such Time as they have learned all that is “ appointed for them to learn The Children who are sufficiently “ instructed^o shall be brought to the Bishop, and every one shall have a Godfather ⁿ 'Tis needless to copy here what Calderwood writes on this Subject. See his Book, p. 259, 262, 266, and 634.

^o The Rubrick is more circumstantial concerning what they are to learn.

“ or a Godmother, as a Witness of their Confirmation All being placed and “ standing in Order before the Bishop, he (or some other Minister appointed by him) “ shall read” what is called the Preface of Confirmation, which briefly explains the Nature and End of it; then he makes them renew and confirm the Promises which were made for them by their Godfathers and Godmothers at Baptism, and prays for them, that they may receive the Gifts of the Holy Ghost; “ then all of them “ kneeling in Order before the Bishop, he lays his Hand upon the Head of every one “ severally,” says another Prayer, the Lord’s Prayer, and two Collects, and dismisses them by giving his Blessing.

WE must mention here some Changes made by the last Reformers from the more ancient English Liturgy in Baptism and Confirmation. The Ceremony of Baptism began at the Church-Door, ^p and the malicious Interpretation given by the Presbyterians, as mentioned Note ⁱ p. 80. relates to that Custom. The Priest, after the first Collect, asked the Child’s Name, and made the Sign of the Cross upon its Forehead and Breast. The second Collect was followed by the Exorcism; the Child was thrice dipt, on the right, on the left, and then with the Child’s Face downwards, towards the Font. After the Dipping the Minister anointed the Child with Chrism on the Forehead. At the Confirmation the Bishop made the Sign of the Cross on the Forehead of the Children confirmed, and said a Prayer suitable to that Ceremony. We shall omit some Alterations of less Moment.

THE Account of Marriage must be introduced, by taking Notice, that in the Church of England “ the Banns of all that are to be married together must be pub“ lished in the Church three several Sundays or Holidays, in the Time of divine Ser“ vice, immediately before the Sentences for the Offertory.” The Form of asking is too well known to require being set down. “ If the Persons who are to be mar“ ried dwell in divers Parishes the Banns must be asked in both Parishes; and the “ Curate of the one Parish shall not solemnize Matrimony without a Certi“ ficate of the Banns being thrice asked from the Curate of the other Parish “ At the Day and Time appointed for the Solemnization of Matrimony, the Per“ sons to be married shall come into the Body of the Church, with their Friends “ and Neighbours, and there standing together, the Man on the right Hand, and “ the Woman on the left,” the Priest reads an Exhortation on the Duty, Condition, and Chastity of a married State; then another particularly directed to the Persons who are to be married ¹. “ At which Day of Marriage, if any Man do alledge or de“ clare any Impediment, why they may not be coupled together in Matrimony, by “ God’s Law, or the Laws of this Realm, and will be bound, and sufficient Sureties
 “ with him, to the Parties, or else put in a Caution (to the full Value of such Charges, “ as the Persons to be married do thereby sustain) to prove his Allegation; then
 “ the Solemnization must be deferred until such Time as the Truth be tried “ If no Impediment be alledged, then the Curate” asks their mutual Consent; which being declared, they give their Troth to each other (that Troth which is but too often barely a Ceremonial Troth) taking alternately one the other by the right Hand, and saying, “ I N. take thee N. to be my wedded Wife (or Husband) to have and “ to hold, from this Day forward, for better for worse², for richer for poorer, in

^p See the Appendix before Sparrow’s Rationale, p. 164. and following.

¹ He requires and charges them both, if either of them knows any Impediment, why they may not be lawfully joined together in Matrimony, to confess it.

² In a Latin Translation of the Common-Prayer-Book, instead of for better for worse, are the Words præ aliis, which signify, preferably to others, better or worse, &c. Which is best, let the Readers be Judges.

LE MARIAGE CLANDESTIN.

Ceremonies FUNEBRES DOMESTIQUES chez les ANGLOIS.

“ Sicknels and in Health to love and to cherish (the Wife says, to love, cherish, and to obey) till Death us do part, according to God’s holy Ordinance; and there“ to I plight thee my Troth.” These mutual Contracts are absolutely and indispensibly necessary to preserve the Honour and procure the Safety of Mankind; yet we must own, that of all Vows and Promises made in the Sight of God, and the Presence of Men, this is the most difficult to be comply’d with, upon Account of the innumerable grievous Consequences which flow from it; without entering into Particulars, we shall only take Notice, that all Sorts of, even contradictory, Evils are often reunited in that State; vicious Dispositions are always troublesome, in Matrimony they are insufferably perplexing and tormenting; Virtue itself, so amiable in other Circumstances of Life, ‘ often proves troublesome in this: However these domestick Wars are not without their Truces, general Amnesties ‘ are granted, and so the World is peopled. “ Then they again loose their Hands, and the Man shall “ give unto the Woman a Ring, laying the same upon the Book (of Common “ Prayer, we suppose) with the accustomed Dues to the Priest and Clerk. And
 “ the Priest taking the Ring, shall deliver it unto the Man to put it upon the fourth “ Finger of the Woman’s left Hand”, and the Man taught by the Priest “ shall say, With this Ring I thee wed, with my Body I thee worship; &c. Both kneel “ down, the Minister says a Prayer, joins their right Hands together, and adds a “ Blessing then going to the Lord’s Table, say or sing a Psalm which “ being ended, the Man and the Woman kneeling before the Lord’s Table, the “ Priest standing at the Table says a Litany, followed by some Prayers and “ an Instruction concerning the Duties of Man and Wife, and so concludes.” Only the Rubrick adds, that “ it is convenient the new-married Persons should receive the “ holy Communion at the Time of their Marriage, or at the first Opportunity after “ their Marriage.”

BEFORE the last Reformation of the English Liturgy, the Husband having said,
With this Ring I thee wed, added, This Gold and Silver I thee give. The following Collect bore some Allusion to that Ceremony: Moreover the Priest at the Nuptial Blessing made the Sign of the Cross on the married Couple. All this is left out now.

THE Print here annexed represents a Clandestine Marriage. And since we have mentioned a Custom liable to so many Abuses, of so pernicious a Nature, and the

‘ For Example, what is more afflicting, than a Husband or a Wife, who will be at their Prayers, when the one should be abroad about his Affairs, the other keeping the Family in Order at home? Not to mention other more secret Disappointments occasioned by an over-strained Devotion, in either Party. Dryden wittily says of Coquets,

—————In unchaste Wives
There’s yet a kind of recompensing Ease,
Vice keeps them humble, gives ’em Care to please.
 And of Prudes:
A virtuous Woman’s but a cursed Wife.

‘ Now and then small Quarrels will happen, but they ought to be without Rancour. Amongst the Gre- cians, those who were married, offered to Juno, who presided in Marriages, (gomeliæ) a Sacrifice, but they pulled out the Gall of the Victim, and flung it behind the Altar, to shew that all Animosities ought to be laid aside in Matrimony.

“ We are told very gravely, that the Ring is put on that Finger preferably to any other, because, forsooth, say those ignorant Anatomists, there is in that Finger, according to some, a Vein, according to others, a Tendon, which directly reaches the Heart.

“ This means, that the Husband, say they, deprives himself of the Power of delivering his Body to any other Woman. Other Authors explain the Word Worship by that of bowing to, which is taken either seriously, or by way of Jest. The Athenian Laws obliged them to marry but one Woman, and dispensed Bastards from the Duty of maintaining their Parents, as having gotten them only for Pleasure sake. So true it is that Marriage alone can establish upon solid Principles the reciprocal Affection of Man and Wife, Parents and Children!

Consequences of which are both dangerous and dishonourable to good Families ; we must give an Account of what is most remarkable in it. “ In England, says an Author^x who had not been a Refugee in England long enough to approve all the bad Customs of it, a Boy of fourteen, and a Girl of twelve Years of Age, may marry against the Will of Parents or Guardians, without any Possibility of dissolving such Marriages, though one should be a Hog-Driver’s Son, and the other a Duke’s Daughter. This often occasions strange Medleys; and what is still more strange these Children have it not only in their Power thus to dispose of themselves, but may do it with all possible Ease and Secrecy. If it was required for the Validity of a Marriage, that the Banns should be openly published thrice in the Church, and in a full Congregation, Things would be known, and a young Woman inclined to an unfit Match might be dissuaded from it, or a more suitable one provided for her But Marriages are contracted so privately, that a young Woman (who who was thought still a Virgin) is often taken with Labour-Pains and brought to Bed, before any Mention is made of the Father The Law indeed requires a Publication of Banns; but Custom, and a dispensing Power, has made it of no Use: Asking in the Church is seldom done now-a-days; and since for a couple of Crowns a Man may transact such Affairs in private, few, if any, will have them made publick and the Churchmen, who find their Account in it, are far from discountenancing the Practice: A Dispensation is purchased the Couple is married in a Closet . . . (or in a Tavern) before two Friends, who are as Witnesses^y, so the indissoluble Knot is tied^z. What is worse, even Dispensations are not always necessary: There are privileged Places, take the two first Persons you meet^a, though meer Beggars, go with them to such a Place, as early as you please, the Priest will marry the Couple so effectually, that neither King nor Parliament can unmarry them. Half a Guinea does the Business; often less. What follows? Footmen marry young Ladies, Noblemen Oyster-Wenches, the Marriages if known are unhappy, if kept private, and not to be proved, Polygamy becomes easy, and is very common.”

THE same Author^b says, “ many diverting Particulars might be related concerning Weddings; but there would be no End, Customs varying in different Countries, and according to the different Rank and Quality of the contracting Parties. We shall only give an Account of what is practised on these Occasions in and about London. People of Distinction (and many others follow their Example) are married late in the Evening, at their own Houses, or in the Country: (We need not mention the usual Diversions, in eating and drinking, being merry, singing, dancing, gaming) Wedding Favours are distributed to those who are invited; and very often to some Hundreds who were not present at the Marriage; they are wore pinn’d on the Sleeve, Breast, or Hat^c When those of a middling Fortune and State of Life are willing to be married in publick (which seldom happens) they invite their Friends and Relations; all have new ^x Memoires & Observations, p. 295.

^y Witnesses may be bought for this and other Purposes: The best Things are abused: What a Shame! a Nation otherwise very valuable, should so much countenance Perjury.

^z Those who are married in England thus, if Dutch, or of other Countries, when they come home, are obliged to do it over again publickly.

^a One Witness is enough, the Priest’s Clerk or Servant Maid serves instead of a second.

^b Memoires, p. 316.

^c This Custom is of no Moment: But it may be matched with what is called in Holland, The Bride’s Tears; viz. Rhenish Wine and Sugar mixt, and sent to all Neighbours and Friends.

“ Clothes, and richer or neater than usual ; ’tis looked upon as shameful to go to a “ Wedding without a new Dress. The Gentlemen hand the Ladies to their Coaches, “ and go to Church with a great Retinue to be married at Noon-Day Di“ versions succeed in publick sometimes Generally all is done in pri“ vate: The Bridegroom and Bride, led by their Parents, or their Representatives,
 “ and accompanied by two Bridemen and two Bridemaids, go early, with a Dis“ pensation in their Pockets, to make the Parson and his Clerk rise ^d, tell them the “ Reasons they have to be married privately and without Noise ; drop a Gui“ nea to the Parson, a Crown to the Curate or Clerk ; the Ceremony over, one “ goes one Way, the other another meet at a Tavern, or a Friend’s “ House then go to the appointed Place, feast well, then come home with“ out making any Shew (If Fiddlers know any thing of this, they come by “ Day-Break and make an Hurly-Burly and are usually paid) A Glas “ goes round before they go to Bed, and when the Hour is come, the Bride-“ men take off the Bride’s Garters (which she unties before for that Purpose)
 “ and put them to their Hats The Bride-Maids lead the Bride to the “ Bed-Chamber, undress her, and put her to Bed. She must lose or throw away
 “ all her Pins ; woe be to her if she saves one The Bride-Maids likewise must “ not keep any of them, under Pain of not being married till the Easter following,
 “ at soonest. An idle Notion, but so far minded as to lose effectually all the Pins “ used by the Bride. The Women Friends and Relations conduct the Bride to Bed ;
 “ and the Men Friends and Relations accompany the Bridegroom to the same “ Place. The Men take the Bride’s Stockings, and the Women those of the Bride“ groom, all sit at the Bed’s Feet, and throw the Stockings over their Heads, en“ deavouring to hit the Owner of them, which if it happens is a Prognostick, that
 “ the Person who threw it will be married soon ; and such Accidents often occasion
 “ new Matches, though they themselves look upon this Ceremony as meer Play and “ Foolery. Mean while the Posset is got ready, and given to the married Couple ;
 “ they have also a Sack-Posset given to them in the Morning when they awake ; the “ Reason is easily guessed.”

MANY other Customs might find Place on this Occasion, and delight the Reader by their comical Singularity ; but we dare not crowd in too great a Number of those Trifles, as not being properly religious Ceremonies ; which therefore, ’till approved by the Church, or by the Governors of it, prescribed by ecclesiastical Laws, or Formularies, we shall omit, except two or three of the most remarkable. The first is what the Inscription of the Print here annexed calls the Breeding Woman’s Oath. A Custom not to be met with in other Countries, and which is so fantastical or rather unjust, that it would be a Prejudice to the Laws of England, if we were to judge of their Equity by that Practice. Suppose any of those Girls which may be called amphibious (being neither Wives nor Virgins) is found to be with Child : She either does not, or will not pretend to know the Father of this Child ; in order to free herself from the Trouble of maintaining it when born ; she looks out for some rich Man, upon whom she intends to father it. Generally, they say, she pitches upon some good Citizen, though she does not know him, or may be has never seen him : Then she goes before a Justice of the Peace, summons the pretended Father to appear before him, and in his Presence swears upon the Bible, which the Clerk holds to her, that she owns and declares, that such a one, whom she has summoned to appear, is the Father of the Child in her Womb. How far the equivocal Expressions and Restrictions of that Oath may excuse her from Perjury, let a good Casuist be the Judge. However the Man so named and sworn to, by this Formality of Law, is obliged to pay an arbitrary Fine, and to agree upon a Sum of Money for the Maintenance of the Child.

^d Generally the Parson is acquainted with it over Night, that he may be ready.

WE shall now give to our Readers an Account of another great Abuse, in the Words of the so often cited Author of Memoires & Observations, &c. “ Women or “ Girls condemned to Death, seldom fail pretending they are quick with Child, to “ defer their Execution till after they are brought to Bed. They are examined by “ Matrons . . . who often (either for Money, or out of Compassion) declare them “ to be quick with Child. It also happens to be often true . . . for though they “ should be chaste Virgins when they go into Prison, they meet there with Varlets . . .
“ who are careful to let them know . . . that if they are not with Child, they “ must endeavour to be so . . . to drill out Time, in Case they should be condemn’d “ to Death . . . How can they withstand such a Temptation?” There is also a Way of punishing quarrelsome or debauched Women, which we must not omit.
“ An Arm-Chair is fix’d between two Poles about twelve or fifteen Feet long^c, yet
“ so contrived to turn upon a kind of Axle-tree . . . that the Person who sits in it “ is always in a natural Posture, whether the Chair^f be raised or lowered. Then
“ some Posts are fixed near the Water, and the two Poles set upon them in an equal “ Balance in such a Manner that the Chair is directly over the Water, the Woman “ is placed in it, then let down over Head and Ears, as often as is required . . .
“ to cool her immoderate Heat and Passion.” This is done chiefly to common Women, who are always willing and ready to receive any Man, or to let themselves out by the Hour; or to be married for a Night and no longer. At the Hague such Women are put in a Cage, and so made to turn round, till by Giddiness they drop down into a Swoon.

THEY have another Custom in England which we shall also mention merely for its being ridiculous. “ I have often met in London Streets, says the same Author, a “ Woman carrying something in the Shape of a Man crowned with a huge Pair of “ Horns; a Drum went before, and a vast Crowd followed, making a strange Music
“ with Tongs, Gridirons, and Kettles . . . ’Twas it seems a good-natured “ Woman, who by this Burlesque Ceremony vindicated a Neighbour of hers who “ had stoutly beaten her Husband, for being so saucy as to accuse his Wife of being “ unfaithful to his Bed.” Every body conceives without a Comment, that the Figure with Horns represented the Husband. But enough of those matrimonial Fooleries; we now return to more worthy Subjects, and more convenient to the Intent of this Work.

THE Rubrick in the Book of Common-Prayer orders, that “ when any Person is “ sick, Notice shall be given thereof to the Minister of the Parish, who coming “ into the sick Person’s House shall say, Peace be to this House, and to all that dwell
“ in it. When he comes into the sick Man’s Presence, he kneels down, says some “ Prayers, and exhorts him . . . rehearſes the Articles of Faith, to which the sick “ Person answers, All this I stedfastly believe.” Then the Minister examines and ^c Memoires, &c. p. 92.

^f This Chair is called a Cucking Stool, Cuckean is a Whore.

sifts the Conscience of the sick Person; and this is certainly the Duty both of the Priest and the sick Person, this needs no Proof; particularly when there is any imminent Danger of Death: For one may visit the Sick, without praying by and with them, or exhorting them, when there is no apparent Danger; for though Religion teaches us to be always ready, the Rubrick only requires it at the Approach of Death. But on that Occasion “The sick Person shall be moved to make a special Confession of his Sins, if he feel his Conscience troubled with any weighty Matter; after which Confession the Priest shall absolve him.” This Absolution is followed by several Prayers; some for Children, some when their appears small Hope of Recovery, or at the Point of Departure, for Persons troubled in Conscience, &c. Before the last Corrections or Alterations made in the English Liturgy, the Sick were anointed but only on the Forehead and the Breast: At the Time of anointing, the Sign of the Cross was made upon the sick Person, and a Collect was read with relation to that Unction.

THE forementioned Absolution, given by the Priest to the sick Person with a Shew of Authority, is looked upon by the Presbyterians as an intolerable Abuse^e. They blame also several other Things in the said Visitation of the Sick, but they are only trivial Objections. “In Time of Pestilence, or other infectious Sicknes, the Rubrick prescribes the often receiving of the holy Communion When none of the Parish can be got to communicate with the Sick for fear of Infection, upon special Request of the Diseased, the Minister only may communicate with him.” Except that particular Circumstance, the Communion of the Sick is performed as follows: “If the sick Person be not able to come to Church, and yet is desirous to receive the Communion in his House, he must give timely Notice to the Curate, signifying also how many there are to communicate with him . . . and having a convenient Place in the House, with all Things necessary, so prepared that the Curate may reverently minister, he shall there celebrate the holy Communion . . . After a Collect, Epistle and Gospel, he proceeds to the Form of Communion before described . . . At the Distribution of the holy Sacrament, the Priest first receives himself, and after ministers unto them that are appointed to communicate with the Sick, and last of all, the sick Person. But if a Man, either by Reason of Extremity of Sicknes . . . or for any other just Impediment, do not receive the Sacrament . . . the Curate shall instruct him, that if he truly repents of his Sins, and stedfastly believes . . . he does eat and drink the Body and Blood of Christ, profitably to his Soul’s Health, although he does not receive the Sacrament with his Mouth.” The Alteration made by the last Reformers of the Liturgy in the Visitation and Communion of the Sick, is the leaving out the Rubrick, which ordered, that in case a sick Person desired to receive on a Day of publick Communion^h, so much was set apart of the Sacrament of the Lord’s Body and Blood as might serve the Sick and those who were to receive with him: The Priest carried it, after divine Service, to the sick Person, and communicated him: If several Sick wanted the Communion, on a Day in which there was no publick Communion, the Priest set apart at the ministering to the first, as much as would serve the others who were sick, and carried it in the like Manner to them. The Presbyterians are endless in their Objections against this Sort of Communionⁱ; ⁱ Calderwood, p. 643.

^e See Calderwood, p. 643.

^h See Mr. Dowles’s Appendix, placed before Sparrow’s Rationale, p. 171.

what more contradictory, say they, than to order first, that there must be a sufficient Number to communicate with the sick Person^k, and at the same Time to allow the Minister alone to receive with the Sick, in a Time of Plague^l? What more like the Superstition of Private Masses? Besides, do not these domestick Communion withdraw the People from publick ones in Churches? Does not all this Pother make them set too high a Value on Carnal Signs?^m May not Hereticks abuse this Custom, and irregularly administer the Sacrament? But what the Puritans abhor most is, the Resemblance of this sort of Communion, to the Viaticum of the Catholics, which to them is rank Abomination.

AN old Rubrick says (or said heretofore) that when the sick Person is in the Agony the Bell must be rung, and when he is dead, with this Difference, that at the Time of the Agony it must only be toll'd, but after Death it must ring out. At the Toll of the Bell, says a jesting Puritanⁿ, the departing Soul may be recommended to the Mercy of God: But what is the ringing out for? To this Question no Answer is given, unless some mystical one: May be this Tolling and Ringing is left off, or only kept up in some particular Churches. Let that be as it will, we must now introduce the last Religious Ceremony of the English Liturgy, the Burial of the Dead. In the Order for that Service, it is noted first, "that it is not for any that die unbaptized, or excommunicated, or have laid violent Hands upon themselves." This is certainly the least Punishment which can be inflicted for the horrid Crime of Self-murder, tho' a^o modern Author seems to justify it, by attributing to it a great Share of the Courage shewn by the old Romans. All we can say to palliate the Crime and excuse the Guilty, is to look upon it as the Effect of one of those four great and dangerous Distempers, which^p are so common, and make such Havock amongst the English.

"THE Priests and Clerks, meeting the Corps at the Entrance of the Church-yard, and going before it, either into the Church, or towards the Grave, say, I am the Resurrection of the Life (John Chap. xi. Ver. 25.) &c." with some other Sentences of Scripture. In the Church some suitable Psalms are read or sung, with a Lesson adapted to that Ceremony. When they are come to the Grave, and are preparing every thing to put the Body into the Earth, the Priests and his Clerks say or sing, Man that is born of a Woman, &c. Earth is then cast upon the Body, and some Prayers are said, one of which is extremely shocking to the Puritans, because in it God is desired to grant "that we with all those that are departed in the true Faith . . . may have our perfect Consummation^q and Bliss both in Body and Soul in . . . Glory." This they say is praying for the Dead; and to this Sense they turn all the Anthems and Prayers, said before and after the Body is put into the Earth. They wonder the Priest should be the first, or even one of those who throw Earth upon the Corps; is this becoming, say they, a Minister of the Gospel? Why not? Would they bring on again, that part of the Law of Moses, which forbid the Levites being pre-^k To save this Contradiction, it is alledged, that the Neighbours or Friends receiving with the sick Person, is only an Act of Charity, and in order to comfort them; not of Necessity.

^l A Constitution Ecclesiastical, published in 1603, seems to dispence the Priests from visiting, or giving the Communion to the Sick, in a Plague, or even upon a bare Suspicion of it. Calderwood, p. 649.

^m Calderwood, p. 648.

ⁿ Calderwood, p. 649.

^o See Considerations sur la Grandeur & la Décadence des Romains.

^p These four destructive Distempers are, the Scurvy, the Rickets, Consumptions, and hypochondriack Melancholy; Self-Murder is chiefly owing to the last-mentioned. We need not enlarge on the Heinousness of that Crime; even Pagans, and Cicero in particular, inveigh strongly against it.

^q Calderwood, p. 650; where he reads Abolution, instead of Consummation, as it is now read in that Office.

sent at a Funeral? May be they would. In England, as well as in other Countries of Europe, there are Sermons preached, and funeral Orations pronounced in honour of the Dead: This again the Presbyterians condemn, and it is the more blameworthy for not being universal; this Mark of Respect, useless to the Dead, but which so agreeably flatters the Vanity of the Living, is paid to the Rich, seldom if ever to the Poor. Such Discourses, says a Puritan^r, may be purchased for a Crown each, and the mercenary Minister, who to be sure has a good Stock of them ready at hand, for this low Price, gets up into a Pulpit, and instead of preaching the Word of God, runs out into the undeserved Praises of an Usurer, an old Fornicator, or a Libertine, who may be never was in a Church, or heard a Sermon, in his Life. People of common Sense set no greater Value upon, and give no more Credit to, the fulsome Panegyrics of a Funeral Oration, than to those of a Dedictory Epistle. Crosses upon Coffins, eating and drinking, giving Money or Victuals at Burials, granting Absolution after Death to Persons excommunicated, Dedications and Blessings of Church-yards, depriving those who are under Sentence of Excommunication, from being buried in them, are likewise much exclaimed against by the Puritans, who look upon all these Customs as vain Superstitions^r.

IN the old Liturgy^t the Priest, throwing Earth on the Corps, used to say, I recommend your Soul to God, &c. Two Collects were said, in which the Minister seem'd to pray for the Repose of the departed Soul^u; the same was done in the Prayer which followed the short Litany. There was also a Communion Service appointed for Burials, at which some received the Sacrament.

AFTER this Account of the religious Part of Burials, we hope the Reader will allow us to make a short Digression, in favour of what may be called the Civil Rite of Funerals. The Print here annexed represents the Corps laid out, and the Interment: But this does not satisfy every Body's Curiosity. Most People require a Description more particular than can be expected from Prints; we shall endeavour to gratify them, by the Account given by an Eye-Witness, the so often-mentioned Author of Memoires, &c. As he wrote in 1698, it is not improbable, but in forty years, a Nation, which seems to vie with the French in Inconstancy, may have altered some of their Customs in that Point, we hope not many. “ “ As soon as any one has breathed his “ last, says our Observator, the Minister of the Parish, and those who have in “ Charge to visit dead Bodies, must have Notice given them: This was ordered to “ be done, immediately after the great Plague which raged in London in the Year “ 1665, that it might be found out if any Distemper proved contagious, and proper “ Precautions taken to prevent its spreading. This Visit is commonly performed by “ two Women, the Clerk of the Parish receives their Attestation, and an Abstract
“ of it is printed every Week, by which the Publick is informed, how many died “ in the Week, of what Distemper, or by what Accident. An Act of Parliament, “ made for the Encouragement of the Woollen Manufactory, ordains that all Corps “ shall be buried in Flannel without any Allowance for Linnen; but the “ Flannel may be as fine as they think fit. . . . Those Shrowds are either be-“ spoken or bought ready made, and most Linnen-Drapers have some by them of ^r Callierwood, p. 248, 306, 642, and 650. Those Customs are, we believe, left off; or if they are still kept up, they are not so common as in that Presbyterian's Life-time.

^t See Downs's Appendix, before Sparrow's Rationale, p. 172.

^u As by these Words, We recommend to thy Mercy the Soul of our Brother, &c.

^w Memoires & Observations, p. 129.

“ all Sizes and Prices. . . . The Corps being washed very clean, and shaved if it “ is that of a Man, whose Beard is grown in his Sickness, they put on it a Flannel “ Shirt, the Sleeves of which are ruffled and plaited, with another tufted Piece of “ the same Stuff, which covers the Opening of the Shirt upon the Breast
 “ The Shirt must be above half a Foot longer than the Corps when extended at full “ Length, that the Feet of the Deceased may be put into it as in a Bag; which “ when performed, it is tied with Woollen, so as to look like a Tuft: They add to “ this a Cap, with a large Chin-Cloth tied to the Cap, a Cravat and Gloves, all Wool“ len . . . Some put a large Quantity of Bran at the Bottom of the Coffin; instead of a “ Cap, the Women have Head-clothes with a Forehead-cloth. Some Coffins are exceed“ ing fine. When the Corps is in it, they make a second Visit, to see whether it is all in “ Flannel, and no Linnen, or even Thread, except Woollen, employ’d about it. The “ Body lies so three or four Days, and all that Time is allowed to “ get Mourning, and prepare for the Funeral. A List is drawn up of those who “ are to be invited to it, and Tickets are sent to them Before they set out, “ every one may go and look on the Corps, which is set upon two Supporters in a “ Room and a little square Piece of Flannel, which covers the Face, is “ then taken off. On these Occasions the Living are honoured by the rich Ap“ pearance of the Ceremony. The Relations and chief Mourners are in a Room “ apart, the rest of the Company in other Apartments; the Coffin is nailed, or “ screwed, every one is presented with some Rosemary, which they carry to the “ Grave, and throw into it, upon the Coffin. Each drinks three or four “ Glasses of Wine, both before the Funeral Procession begins, and when they come “ back to the House, after the Burial Women, says our Author, seldom go “ to the Burial of a Man, nor Men to that of a Woman

“ Each Parish has Palls * of different Prizes, to let them out to the Under“ takers: Some of black Velvet, some of black Cloth, bordered either with white “ Linnen, or Taffety, about a Foot long. This Pall is white when the Deceased is “ a Batchelor, a Maid, or a Lying-in Woman. It is so large, that it covers not only
 “ the Coffin, but likewise the Men who carry it upon their Shoulders, and still hangs “ low enough to be supported by the Pall-Bearers, either Men or Women, according “ to the Sex of the Person who is to be buried, and they have Gloves, Hat-bands,
 “ and sometimes Scarf- black or white given them: When every thing is ready,
 “ two Men, with long Staves † tipped with a large Head of Silver, go first, then
 “ the Minister of the Parish and the Clerk, who are immediately followed by the “ Corps and Pall-bearers, the chief Mourners and other Persons invited, two and “ two, close the Procession. Generally they go into the Church, in the middle of “ which the Body being placed upon two Trestles, a Sermon or a funeral Oration
 “ is preach’d, in Praise of the Deceased, or the common Instructions and Prayers “ appointed for that Occasion are said: If the Body is not buried in the Church,
 “ they carry it to the Church-yard belonging to it, and put it in the Ground before
 “ the whole Company, which seldom goes off till the Earth is again thrown in.
 “ Then all the Persons invited go back in the same Order and drink again ‡.

“ People

* The Word Pall comes from the Latin, Pallium, a Cloak; and no doubt the French Word Poêle, which heretofore was spelt Pouaille, had the same Origin.

† The Account here given is what the middling sort of People observe, and from them, says our Author, we must learn the Customs of every Country.

‡ This drinking at Funerals bears some Resemblance with the Epulæ Ferales of the Ancients: But waving this Piece of Erudition, we cannot omit the odd Practice, so common in England, of drinking Prosperity to the “ People of Fashion are sometimes embalmed, and are laid for some Days, a Fort“ night or more, on a Bed of State, and are carried in a Herse to the Burying-“ place either belonging to the Family, or of which the deceased has made Choice.

 “ The Herse is attended by several mourning Coaches.”

WE shall conclude this Dissertation, with some superstitious Practices which are mightily in vogue, amongst the vulgar Sort ; there are such in all Countries, and England is not exempt, tho’ it otherwise abounds with many bright Men, who handle all Subjects with a Freedom of Thought, which no other Part of Europe enjoys. This Liberty is universally admired, even in the Fire and Faggot Countries^a ; but as it is apt now and then to dazzle by its Paradoxes, in which it is like a Flash of Lightning ; on the other Side it cannot reach and instruct the ill disposed Minds of the Mob. We shall give an Account of those Customs without any other Order, than as they present themselves.

THE first is, what they relate concerning the Chair of the Kings of Scotland, that fatal Chair, which was looked upon as the Palladium of that Kingdom, and had the same Honours paid to it, as to Relicks. “ An ancient Scots Prophecy, they say, “ foretold, that whenever that Chair, on which the Kings of Scotland sat at their “ Coronation, should be transferred out of Scotland, the Kingdom should also be “ transferred with it.” ’Tis now at Westminster, and is made use of at the Coronation of the Kings of England; what might we not say on this Occasion, of those miraculous Stones which delivered Oracles, established and strengthened Kingdoms, or drew down the choicest Blessings of Heaven upon particular Families or Persons ; if the narrow Bounds we have prescribed to ourselves allowed us to mention all the Wonders of that Kind, related by ancient Historians ? One of these Stones is inclosed in that Chair, it pronounced Oracles in Ireland; the Scots took it from thence, and brought it to Scone, the usual Place where their Kings were crowned : In Process of Time the Scots lost it, and now it is at Westminster. It was, no doubt, a Heathenish Stone in the Times of the Druids, but the Monks made it Christian, or at least Jewish, and raised it to the Dignity of being that very Stone, which the Patriarch Jacob made use of [Gen. xxviii.] for a Pillow. St. Thomas Becket’s Relicks, the Drops of his Blood, still to be seen, the Viol used at the anointing of the King, so exactly Parallel to that other at Rheims, and given by the blessed Virgin to the said St. Thomas Becket, are not much valued by the Church of England; so we shall omit them.

AT Coventry in Warwickshire they celebrate yearly a strange Festival, of which the Author of the Memoires, &c. gives the following Description, p. 72. “ In the Time “ of Edward the Confessor, Godfrey Lord of Coventry being highly displeased with “ the Inhabitants of that Town, took away all their Privileges from them, &c. “ They try’d all possible Means for the Recovery of their lost Liberty ; but with- “ out Success. Happily for them at last, they had Recourse to Lady Godiva, (so “ Godfrey’s Wife was called) and humbly beseeched her to intercede in their Behalf : “ she undertook it ; her first Endeavours were fruitless. . . . However she did not “ give over, and was so pressing with her Husband, that at last he promised to the Church, or to the Memory of the Dead. Such was the whimsical Notion of some Heathens drinking the Health of their Gods. These and such like must be pledged (from the French Word Pleger) cost what will: They run generally upon State Intrigues or Party Business: And an Englishman might as safely declare himself openly a Traitor to the Party he has embraced, as to refuse drinking on these Occasions, even though he should alledge his want of Power to drink.

^a Left our Readers should mistake the Meaning of Faggot Countries, we must let them know, it means those Countries in which Hereticks are condemned to be burnt. They are so called by the Author of Biblioth. Angloise, Tom. 14. Part the Second.

“ grant

“ grant her Request, upon one Condition she was to comply with. By St. Mat-
 “ there, says she, I will do any thing not impossible, to deliver Coventry from the “ Slavery it groans under. Then by St. Thaddæus, answer’d Godfrey, you shall be set “ stark naked upon a white Hackney, and in that Condition you shall go through “ every Street in the Town. Godiva was shock’d at the Proposal, however, as she “ had taken an Oath to do whatever was not impossible, she accepted the Condi“ tion, and having resolved to comply with it, an Order was published by Sound of “ Trumpet, enjoining every Body to keep at Home on such a Day and at such an “ Hour, to shut all their Doors and Windows whilst she pass’d by, under Pain of “ Death to be inflicted on the Offenders. All obey’d except a Baker, who was pu“ nished according to his Deserts. . . . Thus Coventry was freed by Godiva. In “ Memory of which that Lady’s Statue, richly adorn’d, and crown’d with Flowers, “ is yearly carried in a solemn Procession, with lighted Torches, and all the Marks “ of publick Joy and Acknowledgment. The Baker is also represented, at the “ same Window, and in the same Posture, in which he was taken up: The “ Master of the House is obliged to new-paint his Statue every Year, and to find a “ Wig and a Hat for it.”

THIS merry and jocular Feast may be matched with three or four superstitious Customs, which are so low and gross, that we are almost ashamed to mention them: But the Account will divert some of our Readers, and after all, to become agreeable, they only want to be set off by the delightful Style of Abbé de Choisy, that celebrated Writer and Embellisher of Trifles. “ I have often taken Notice, (says
 “ the same Author of Memoires & Observations, &c. p. 192. and 411.) that a “ Horse-shoe was nailed on the Threshold of the Doors of the People of the lowest “ Rank; upon Enquiry into the Meaning of it, they usually answered . . . it was “ to hinder Wizards from coming into their Houses. They commonly laugh when “ they say it, yet are not in Jest; why should they take the Pains to nail this Piece
 “ of Iron at their Door, unless they believed that there is, or at least may be, some “ secret Virtue in this Practice; which brings to my Remembrance another Piece “ of Foily; the common People have a particular Regard for the Money which “ they call Hanpl, that is, the Price of the first Thing they sell, they kiss it, spit “ upon it, and put it in a Pocket by itself: Again, they look upon it as a good “ Omen, to have about ones Face Spots upon which Hair grows, and take great “ Care of what Hair those Excrecences produce.” Some foolish Women and Children entertain also an extravagant Notion that they must eat a Piece of a Goose on Michaelmas Day, without which they imagine they shall be destitute of Money all the Year round: This deserves only Contempt, and it is not impossible, but its being slighted helps to keep up the Custom. The Milk-Women’s Anniversary Feast, (if it may be called so) furnishes us with another Instance of foolish Mirth. On the first of May and some Days following, they go in Ceremony to pay their Respects to all their Customers, they make Use of all the Ornaments which may become country Girls, Flowers, Ribbands, Garlands; they borrow Silver Tankards, Punch-bowls, Salvers, and all Sorts of Plate, this they tie with Ribbands, adorn with Flowers, and put it on their Heads instead of their Milk-pails; thus equipped they go from Door to Door, accompanied by a sorry Bag-piper, or some Fiddle-scraper, and there dance, in order to get some Money. How many religious Rites and Ceremonies have been invented for the same End! The Spectator, Tom. 5. justly complains of the prodigious Numbers of pretended Bobemians and Fortune-tellers which swarm

swarm in England: And the Tatler, Vol. I. has a merry Story of three Women indicted for Witch-craft, and of the Parson's ingenious Explanation of their supposed Crimes.

WE must not omit our Neighbours, the Welsh, Irish, and Scots. On the first of March, dedicated to St. David, Patron of Wales, all the Welshmen wear a real Leek, or some Representation of that Root, in their Hats; because on the same Day their Forefathers, in a Battle against the English, used that Stratagem, to distinguish themselves, and know one the other in the Dark from their Enemies; yet the Kings of England are so obliging and complaisant to the Welsh, as to wear one themselves. As to the Wild-Irish, we have given an Account of their Superstitions in the second Volume of this Work, amongst the Religious Ceremonies of Idolaters. But the Christians of Ireland are remarkable for St. Bridget's Perpetual Fire at Kildare. It was with great Care kept burning in a Monastery of Nuns, called upon that Account the Fire-House. This was in Imitation of the Fire of the Goddess Vesta, who to be sure was represented by St. Bridget and her Christian Vestals. St. Patrick's Purgatory^b is famous likewise. But St. Magnus's Cup is less known (this concerns the Scots) it was heretofore kept with great Respect and Veneration in one of the Orcades, the Inhabitants pretended to have it from St. Magnus, first Bishop of that Island; it was the Standard of the Ability of his Successors, if they could drink up at a Draught what Wine it contained; the poor Country People took it for a sure Sign of a fruitful Year. In the Province of Munster in Ireland there was a dangerous Fountain, which if any one touched with his Hand, there followed incessant rainy Weather, which nothing could put a Stop to, but a Mass said by a Virgin Priest, in a Chapel built near the Fountain. We shall pass over in Silence that Mill near Offory, which could not grind Corn on a Sunday; the hollow Stone, in the Neighbourhood of Cork, which always furnished as much Wine as would serve to say Mass; those Teals which could never be taken, but in the Name of God and of St. Colman; and many other absurd Wonders, which ought to be buried in Oblivion.

^b See a more particular Account of this Purgatory in the second Vol. of Superstitions anc. & modern.

DISSERTATION

Concerning the Ecclesiastical ^a DISCIPLINE of the PRESBYTERIANS.

THE Representations made by the Presbyterians in 1564, against subscribing to the Discipline of the Church of England, submitting to its Liturgy, or conforming to its Ceremonies, brought upon them the odious Appellation of Puritans. We call it an odious Name, it being highly probable, this Nick-Name was bestowed upon them with a malicious Intent, too common in religious Disputes, of comparing them, either to the Manicheans, who in the third Age were called (Cathars) ^b, or to the Albigenses, Hereticks of the twelfth Age, to whom the Orthodox of that Time gave the same Name. Whatever the Intention might be, the Presbyterians, far from taking it as a Reproach, are proud of, and glory in, that Appellation, as being a Proof of their earnest Desire, that the Discipline of the Church, and the religious Worship, may be pure, and without Blemish. “^c When “ Arminianism appeared first, towards the End of King James the First’s Reign, “ those who remained fixed in Calvin’s Sentiments (about Grace and Predestination)
“ were called ^d Doctrinal Puritans: But this Denomination became afterwards odious, “ by being made use of to defame those, whose Life and Conversation was truly Saint- “ like, and who endeavoured in their Devotions to follow with a pure Heart the In“ structions of their Ministers. A Puritan therefore in those Days might have been “ defined: A Christian severe in his Morals, Calvinist in his Doctrine, Non-conforming, as to the Discipline and Ceremonies of the reformed Church of England, but not separated wholly from it, except in those Points.”

THE Presbyterians, who plead most for Toleration, pretend that they are divided from the Church of England, only in outward Appearance (since their fundamental Articles of Doctrine are essentially the same) and that their Division is advantageous to the Church and State. As to the Church and Religion ^e, say they, we keep up a laudable Emulation in the Clergy; we oblige them in some measure to comply, out of Jealousy, with the Duties which Religion and their pastoral Dignity requires from them. Discipline would soon grow remiss, and be neglected, if it was not prevented by our non-conforming Meetings, which if once suppressed, and every one forced to go to his Parish-Church to serve God, Ignorance and Laziness will prevail amongst the Clergy; Superstition, Blasphemy, and Atheism, amongst the Laity. As to the

^{a c d} See Neal’s History of the Puritans, in the Preface. But the Presbyterian Discipline is described at the End of the History.

^b Cathars, or Pure ones, from the Greek Word Katharos, Pure.

^c Neal’s Preface to the Hist. of Purit.

Government of the State, who has more warmly espoused the Defence of the Laws and Liberty of these Kingdoms? Who has more chearfully contributed to bring over King William III. to settle him upon the Throne, and to the Succession of the Crown in the Protestant Line? As long as Non-Conformists are tolerated in England, it will never want good Patriots, and bold Assertors of publick Liberty. Far then from endeavouring to oppress the Presbyterians, or to force them to conform, or comprehending them in the Church; the publick Interest demands that their Complaints should be heard, the Causes of them removed, or at least that Dissenters be tolerated, and allowed the Enjoyment of their civil Rights and Liberties.

SUCH Speeches are common in England: Whereas in other Countries they dare not so much as entertain such Thoughts. What Sect, what Party dares be so bold, as to pretend, that the Welfare of the State, and even of the Religion by Law established, depends on its being protected and maintained? And that out of Policy one ought not to labour for their Re-union to the Church? And lastly, that without this Division Tyranny would enslave the State, and Superstition destroy Religion? In any other Kingdom, such Remonstrances would be thought the very height of Impudence, and the Bigots, if they found it out of their Power to burn effectually such Hereticks, before Men, would do it mentally in the Sight of God, by the most fervent Prayers the Bitterness of their Zeal could suggest.

WE must now present our Readers with a short Account of the Opposition made by the Presbyterians ever since the Year 1564, to the settling the exterior Worship appointed by the English Liturgy. If we give Credit to the English Historian of Puritanism, this religious Dispute was not without some singular and extraordinary Circumstances^f. In the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, the Chancellor of the Bishop of London shewed to the Presbyterians a Priest of the Church of England in his sacerdotal Dress; and from his Judgment Seat gravely directed this Speech to the Non-conforming Ministers: “ Ministers of London, ’tis the Will and Good-Pleasure of the Queen’s Council, that you observe exactly the Unity of the Apparel^g, and that you conform your Dress according to the Pattern set before you of a Priest in his Canonical Habit, viz. a square Cap, a Cassock, a Tippet^h (and a Surplice in his religious Functions) subscribe to this Order by the Word Volo, and you who are against it write Nolo; be brief, and do not argue.” This Discourse stopped the Mouths of the Opponents, the Author pathetically describes the Fright and Distress of these poor Non-Conformists, who thought the Livery of Antichrist and the Mark of the Beast was forcibly pressed upon them. Yet the greater Number were so weak as to consent, the rest would not be corrupted, and were declared unworthy to be Ministers. This shews a great want of Toleration in the Church of England of those Times, and a like Zeal in the cotemporary Presbyterians. In 1565 a Book was published to prove by the Holy Scripturesⁱ that no body could wear the pontifical Robes of the Papish Church without consenting to Idolatry. So worthy a Cause, and so conformable to the Gospel, could not want Martyrs. The Presbyterians reckon as such those who were either deprived of their Livings and Pensions, or thrown into Goal, or forced to go into a voluntary Exile, &c. The Year 1566 was the memorable Epocha of the Presbyterians Separation from the Church of England. Though some Ceremonies, ^f Neal’s History, &c. p. 211. and 215.

^g Who would not think the Essentials of Religion was the Unity aimed at?

^h Now called a Scarf, and wore by Canons, Doctors, and Lords Chaplains the Surplice, and other episcopal Ornaments, happened to be what they most detested, yet many other Parts of the English Worship were offensive to them, and this is the Account which their Historian gives of them. ⁱ They disliked the Superiority which Bishops claimed over Priests, their Power seem'd too great, and their Pride was insufferable. The Distinction of Deans, Archdeacons, &c. displeased them. Discipline they thought too remiss. They could not bear with a Repetition of the same Prayers, not even of the Lord's Prayer; nor with the Lessons being so often interrupted by Responses, reading apocryphal Books, Festivals, the Pomp and Magnificence of the publick Service in Cathedrals, Musick in Churches, the Use of the Sign of the Cross in Baptism, Churching of Women, Godfathers and Godmothers, Confirmation, receiving the Communion kneeling, bowing to the Name of Jesus, nor with the Wedding Ring. We thought it convenient, if not necessary, to give at once a full View of their Complaints, though most of them have been mention'd in the foregoing Dissertation. It must not be forgot in this Place, that the Puritans maintain, with as much Steadiness and Zeal, as the Calvinists or any other Protestants, that inherent Power, which all of them allow to each Christian, of examining his Religion, learning and understanding it himself, and explaining it to others, according to the private Light he receives from God.

THE Presbyterian Meetings were treated as schismatical during the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Conventicles were dispersed and broke up: (This is the Name given then ^k and ever since to all the Assemblies of Fanaticks and dissenting Sectaries) Those who were found present, were threatened, imprisoned or fined: This only served to raise the Presbyterian's Zeal to a higher Pitch; which is the natural Consequence of Persecutions on Account of Religion. They complained louder than before, ^l they mutually, and like Brethren, encouraged one the other, to refrain from hearing the Sermons of the Parish Priests, who, as they said, would not stand up in Defence of the Gospel, against those Remains of Popery, the Surplice, &c. One of them, more moderate in outward Appearance than the rest ^m, openly declared, that *indeed he could not say the Popish Ornaments and Ceremonies were defiled and impure; yet by the Grace of God he was firmly resolved never to wear a four Corner Cap, or Surplice; because he could find no Decency or Edification in that Dress, which on the contrary was an everlasting Source of * Dissention in the Church of Christ.* He further published it to the whole World, that he never would receive the Communion in a kneeling Posture, because it seemed to him too Papistical, and to bear too near a Resemblance with the Adoration of the Host. Such Flights are manifest Proofs of the subtil Evasions which Party Zeal will find out; such nice Scrupulosity which refuses to comply with outward Ceremonies, no ways opposite to sound Doctrine, furnishes us likewise with a convincing Argument to shew, That Orthodoxy which stands upon trifling Exceptions, and down-right Superstition, though they are two extremes, yet they are nearly ally'd, and Equally to be avoided.

In the Year 1572, according to the History of Puritanism ⁿ, whilst the Conformists used the Puritans with the utmost Severity, whilst those Disputes were the hottest, in which (if Credit is to be given to the Puritans) the Conformists gained the Victory, not by dint of Argument and Reason, but by superiour Force and Power; the first ⁱ Neal, p. 235. and following.

^k The more moderate call them Meetings as if by Chance.

^{l m n} Neal, p. 246. 250. 301.

* On whom must the Guilt lye? Certainly on those who separated themselves on such trivial Pretences.

Presbytery, or first Presbyterian Church, was privately established at Wandsworth, about four Miles from London. The same Historian relates, that in 1576, the Ministers of the Puritans, held some Assemblies, in which they drew up a Form of Discipline peculiar to themselves. Cartwright, a zealous and learned Presbyterian, review'd it sometime after, and having^o put it in Order, by and with the Help of some other Ministers, he translated it from the Latin Original, and added a Preface, in 1584. This Work was sent to be printed at Cambridge, but the Archbishop of Canterbury ordered all the Copies to be seized, and condemned it to be burnt as factious and seditious. We shall extract from it what we shall say of the Presbyterian Discipline, but we think it necessary to premise the following Remarks concerning the Puritans.

1. THEIR OWN Historian gives them the Honour of setting the first Example of the Veneration and Respect with which the Sunday is still kept by the English. In 1595, one Bound, a Presbyterian Doctor, published a Treatise on the Sabbath^p, in which he endeavoured to prove, that Christians ought to abstain from all Sort of Work, and rest on Sunday, with as much Exactness and Regularity as the Jews did on the Saturday: As a Consequence of this Principle, he allow'd of no Recreation whatever on Sunday. This Book, says the Historian, was highly applauded by the People, and restored to its ancient Dignity the Lord's Day, which was then generally profaned by the most indecent and shameful Diversions. The Puritans laid all those Disorders to the Charge of the Conformists, pretending they were good for nothing^q, but they themselves were the only Christians in England, who were scrupulously exact in religious Duties; on Sundays in particular, they distinguished themselves by publick and private Marks of Devotion. A Book which brought about such a glorious Change, deserved a better Fate, yet it was censured with great Severity; the Church of England Party accused it of parcing the Way to a judaical Observation of the Sabbath, and of being wrote in direct Opposition to the Laws of the Land: At the last it was suppressed by Order of Whitgift Archbishop of Canterbury, but this Condemnation only enhanced the Price, and made it be read with more Attention, and bought up with more Eagerness, and some few Years after, the Author reprinted it with Additions.

2. THE Doctrine of the English Church about Grace, Predestination, &c. seemed to favour Calvin's Opinions on that Subject, till towards the End of the sixteenth, and beginning of the seventeenth Age, the Divines began to 'soften, and in Process of Time, to lay aside, and overthrow the Opinions which had been established. Arminianism prevailing against the old System, Calvin's Divinity was look'd upon as antiquated and out of Fashion by the Conformists, who derided its Followers by the Appellation of Doctrinal Puritans^r. At the Beginning of these Disputes, the Memory of Calvin was so precious in England, that it would have been safer for any Man to wage War against all the Saints of the Christian Church, than against this single Apostle of the Reformers. But strange Alterations have happened since, and how far the English were sensible of the Blemishes of Calvin's Character, may be plainly perceived by

^o Neal, p. 449.

^p Neal, p. 577.

^q A rigid Presbyterian was so audacious as to say in one of his Books, that all the honest Men were in that Party, and that there was no Medium betwixt abolishing Episcopacy, and calling up the Pope out of Hell. See Bayle's Critical Dictionary, in the Article of Amesius.

^r Neal, p. 579.

^s See one of the foregoing Notes.

the Writings of a Priest^t of the English Communion. Yet most People will own there is some kind of Analogy or Likeness betwixt the Severity of his Principles, and the Sourness of his Temper.

THE Zeal which the University of Cambridge shewed in his Defence, is a convincing Proof of their strict Adherence to his Doctrine. In 1595, notwithstanding the Opposition of the Archbishop of Canterbury, as may be guessed from the History of those Times, the Articles of Lambeth were published. We shall not enter into a Discussion of those knotty Questions^u, but only present our Readers with the first Article, which was this, “ God has from all Eternity predestinated some Men to “ Life, and reprovèd (or condemned) the rest to Death.” If an Arminian was to give a Paraphrase, or loose Explication of this Article, it would run thus: “ God “ has predestinated some Men to be saved, (though they may often in their Life- “ time commit such Sins as may deserve eternal Damnation ^w.) Others he has placed “ upon the Brink of a Precipice, not only without Strength enough to keep them “ from falling in, and by consequence reduced to an Impossibility of escaping the “ Danger; but even with a premeditated Design, to let them fall without afford- “ ing them any Help.” The Puritans were also engaged in a Dispute concerning Christ’s Sufferings, and his descending into Hell.

3. At last, towards the End of Queen Elizabeth’s Reign, Policy, say the Presbyterians, brought on a kind of Truce, between them and the Episcopal Churchmen, who had a Mind to court the Heir Apparent to the Crown, who was, we may say, born and bred a Puritan. The pleasing Prospect of being quite settled in the approaching Reign, and freed from the many Afflictions they had so long endured under Queen Elizabeth, occasioned much Joy amongst the Presbyterians: They little dreamed that James the Sixth of Scotland and First of England, would embrace the Church of England’s Communion, out of Policy, Indifferency or Inconstancy. They presented to him, at his Accession to the Throne, what is called the Millenary Petition. They complained heavily of the insupportable Yoke they groaned under, by being forced to submit to the English Worship and Discipline, to the Ceremonies and Ecclesiastical Customs of Episcopacy. James, say the Assertors of Episcopal Authority^x, was too wise to be imposed upon by the Puritans, who aimed at nothing less than a total Subversion of the Church: But, if we believe the Puritans, James, blind both to his own and the Church’s Welfare, espoused the Episcopal Notions, which, they pretend, are Papery in Disguise; and that King had not Courage to withstand. His Partiality towards Episcopacy was such, that after the Conference at Hampton-Court, wherein he behaved more like a Doctor or School Divine, than as became a King; after hearing the strongest Arguments in Favour of the Presbyterians, he plainly told the latter^y, that if they had no better Reasons to alledge, he was determined, either to make them conform, or to clear the Land of them.

4. To give in few Words a true and full Character of these first Presbyterians, we shall borrow from their Historian the Description he gives of them. He says they bore with all possible Patience and Moderation, the Haughtiness and unjust Treatment of the Ecclesiastical Courts. Tho’ they were so severely dealt with in the long

^t See Mr. Downes’s Appendix, before the Rationale of Dr. Sparrow Bishop of Norwich, p. 177.

^u Some of the Clergy think the Laity ought not to meddle with Controversy; but St. Peter tells them they ought to be ready to give an Account of their Faith.

^w The second Article says, the Will of God alone saves them, and the fifth, that the Spirit of God is never extinguished in the Predestinate.

^{x y} See Mr. Downes’s Appendix, &c. before Sparrow’s Rationale, &c.

Reign of Elizabeth, they preserved an inviolable Fidelity to her ; they used no other Argument to defend their Cause, except Scripture Passages, no Weapons but Prayers and Tears. Their Abhorrence of the religious Customs of the Church of England, was solely founded on their Popish Origin, the least Shadow of which fired their Zeal. This they freely owned. If they had not seen Surplices wore by Popish Priests, they probably would not have expressed, or even conceived so great an Aversion for that Dress : All Things considered, the Puritans were the most courageous Protestants in the Nation, steady Calvinists, vehement and pathetic Preachers, and bold Assertors of the Protestant Cause. So far is said in their Praise. But the same Author blames them likewise, yet sparingly, and with Tenderness. He owns, that whilst they so carefully avoided one Extreme, they run the Risk of falling into the other, that their burning Zeal in Favour of the new Form of Discipline might have betray'd them^z, had it been countenanced by the Laws. He further acknowledges, that the Presbyterians Notions and Tenets were dark and confused, as to what concerned the Rights of Mankind about Religion and Civil Society. Those Ideas, as they were taken up from, and had a near Affinity with the Jewish Theocracy, could not be put in Practice at a Time, and amongst Men, who were so far from being under the immediate Government of God. Besides these Defects, they were guilty of some others very opposite to the Spirit of the World, and rendered them less fit for Society. Their Severity was excessive, they censured too freely and too sharply the disorderly Life and Conduct of Men in the highest Dignities: The least Faults, at what Age soever committed, were looked upon by them as capital Crimes. However, in all their Deportment, they expressed a deep Sense of the Respect and Veneration due to Religion ; their Prayers were continual ; Oaths, and every indecent or too free Discourse were carefully avoided by them ; a strict Observance of the Sunday, going twice on that Day to the Meeting, with a Bible under the Arm, was in those primitive Days of Presbytery, a sure Mark to know a Puritan by. Saturdays also were spent in Prayer, rehearsing Sermons, teaching Children their Catechism ; and every Day of the Week had set Times for Devotion. We shall proceed no further in the Account of their other Perfections summed up by the said Historian, who paints in lively Colours the golden Age of that Sect. All these good Qualities made no Impression upon the Episcopal Churchmen, they never mentioned the Presbyterians, without the odious Epithets of Precisians^a, Schismatics, Enemies to God and to the State.

5. If we again credit the Puritans, all the Vices opposite to the above-mentioned Virtues, were found in the Church of England's Communion. Their Ignorance was little inferior to that of the Romish Clergy : Most of their Priests could scarce read the Books of Common-Prayer and of Homilies. In the Country, and Places distant from London, the People, for want of due Instruction, retained Popish Errors, and were not much better than Heathens^b. Every Ecclesiastick or Lay-man who was remarkable for Piety, for strictly keeping the Sabbath (Sunday) holy, or who openly declared himself an Enemy to Prophanation and Popery, was sure to be branded with the Appellation of Puritan. The Bishop's steady Adherence to, and enforcing of outward Ceremonies, hindered the Progress of the Reformation, and ^z The Meaning is, that probably they would not have tolerated any other Discipline : Scotland is a convincing Proof of it.

^a Precisian was a new coined word to ridicule the Puritanical Scrupulosity, which they so much valued. Neal, p. 597.

^b Neal, p. 600.

Popery not being sufficiently preach'd against, regained Ground : Elizabeth offended also the Puritans by her Toleration of the old Religion : That Princess loved the Stateliness and Splendor of Ceremonies, she would not leave off some Customs^c condemned by the Reform'd. This made the Puritans^d believe, and publicly accuse her of being inclined to Popery, tho' she openly was for a Medium, which might reconcile to her Scheme both Papists and Puritans.

6. THE violent Proceedings against the Presbyterians under Elizabeth, did not produce the desired Effect, nor reunite them to the Established Church ; on the contrary, their Minds were still more alienated from and imbittered against it. At the same time a new Sect appeared amongst them, still more pure and more severe than the rest. Those Refiners on Puritanism were known in 1581 by the Name of Brownists, which they inherited from Robert Brown a Norwich Preacher. An unruly, rough and fiery Temper furnished this pretended Reformer of the Reformation itself, with all the Qualifications requisite to carry religious Disputes to the highest Pitch : His chief Talent consisted in violent and furious Invectives against the Discipline and Ceremonies of the Church of England : He and one Harrison travell'd up and down throughout the Kingdom, inveighing bitterly in their Sermons against Bishops, Ordinations, and Ecclesiastical Courts : They formed a considerable Party, which was soon dispersed by the diligent and watchful Management of the Clergy and Ministers of State. Brown and his Adherents fled to Middlebourg in Zealand ; settled there a new Church : But this rigid Preacher soon grew out of Conceit with this way of Life, came back to England in 1589, forsook the Severity of his Principles, and embraced the other Extreme. The Party kept its ground, notwithstanding this Desertion of their Leader, and the rigorous Prosecutions, by order of the Government, against them and their Ministers, two of which were put to Death in 1583, for publishing Libels^e against the English Liturgy. In the Year 1592 Barrow became their Chief, and from him they had the Name of Barrowists, and their Number so far encreased that it amounted to twenty thousand^f, and amongst them People of Note and high Renown. They were also called Separatists, because they absolutely rejected all Communion with the established Church. They set up to themselves Ministers, Readers, Elders and Deacons, who were all Laymen, except the Ministers. They baptized Children by a slight Asperision, admitted no Godfathers or Godmothers at the Christening. When the Barrowists intended to perform the Communion Service, some white Bread Loaves were brought in, and set upon a Table ; the Minister blessed them by a short Prayer, broke them, distributed part of them to some of the Communicants, and the Deacons went on with giving the Communion to the rest, some of whom received it sitting, some standing ; the same Order was observed in the Distribution of the Cup : The Office concluded with singing a Canticle or a Psalm, and making a Collection for the^g Poor. Whoever desired to be admitted amongst them, was to make the following Declaration in the Presence of the Brethren, the first time he came to their Assembly. " I declare that I will walk with you as long as you walk in the way of the Lord ; " and as far as the Word of God will warrant it to be requisite." These Rules were

^c Images, Crosses, &c.

^d Neal, p. 601.

^e In order to excuse this Act of Severity, it was alledged, that those Libels tended to the Overthrow of the Constitution, denied the Queen's Authority. &c.

^f Neal, p. 543. out of Sir Walter Raleigh's Speech in Parliament.

^g The Calvinists call it a Collect, which being equivocal, we have used the other plain Expression.

agreed upon by them, in a Congregation which they held at London in a Brother's House, in 1592. This was not the only one, several others were formed; but being at last discovered, those who were taken up underwent an Examination, in which they owned, that for several Years they had met together every Sunday: at five in the Morning in the Fields during the Summer Season; at a Brother's House in Winter; that they spent the whole Day in Prayer, and expounding the Scripture; that they dined together like Brethren, and after Dinner assailed themselves; and if any Money remained after paying for their Meal, it was given to relieve the Brethren who were detained in Prison: That they did not say the Lord's Prayer, esteeming it to have been given by Christ, rather as a List of what they were to ask, than as a Form of Prayer to be used. Their Enemies, says the Historian, laid to their Charge many extravagant Opinions concerning Baptism, Marriage, and the Ministerial Functions being performed by Laymen, &c. Such is and will ever be the dismal Consequence of Party-Spirit in Religious Disputes: it never admits of any Toleration, and the poor Barrowists^h were treated accordingly. Barrow their Chief was hanged,ⁱ and with him another Minister of the same Sect. They had desired a Conference with the Episcopal Clergy, which was refused for some Reasons which are only remarkable for being equivocal, and suiting every Party whatever, when it is the strongest,^k and can back them by Violence.

WE must now take a full View of all the Tenets of the Barrowists or Brownists: their Faith was the same with the Church of England, yet they did not own it to be the true Church, nor its Ministry lawful; they called the Discipline of it Popish and Anti-Christian, they denied the Validity of the Sacraments when administer'd by English Priests, and hindered their Adherents from being present at the English Liturgy; they rejected likewise the Communion of any Church, tho' separated from the Church of Rome, which did not conform to theirs. Each of their Congregations was a little Republick, independent from any other, and standing by itself; being of opinion that the Church Government ought to be Democratical or popular. Those who became Proselytes to their Principles, made first a publick Confession of Faith, then signed a kind of Covenant by which they enter'd into an Obligation of conforming to the Gospel according to the Rules and Articles agreed on and expressed in the said Covenant or Confederacy. The whole and sole Power of admitting or excluding the Members of those small Ecclesiastical Democracies, with the Decision of Controversies, resided in the Confraternity (we cannot give a more convenient Name to their Assemblies, since they called one the other Brother, as the Waldenses, Bohemians, &c. had done before.) In these Assemblies they elected their Ministers, Elders, Deacons, &c. with the Imposition or Laying on of Hands, preceded by Fasting and Prayer. Their Priesthood, or rather Ministerial Dignity, required no Ordination, and was not an indelible Character. The Minister received from the Confraternity Authority to preach and administer the Sacraments, &c. and as every thing was decided by Plurality of Votes^l, their Office might be taken from ^h The same Author relates, that one of their Ministers being pressed to conform, and alledging that he could not, without incurring the Guilt of Hypocrisy and Dissimulation, was answered by the Judge, "Go to Church, obey the Queen, and be a Dissembler, a Hypocrite, or a Devil if you will." What Tyranny! what is become of Christian Sincerity and Charity! Party-Spirit minds not the Gospel, yet reigns in every Christian Communion.

ⁱ They suffered, says the Historian, with great Constancy, praying for the Queen.

^k Neal, p. 554. Twelve Reasons are given, one of which is, that a Religion established by Act of Parliament, ought not in Justice to be subject to the Examen of any inferior Authority.

^l A Modern Author of Discourses concerning Religion and Government is of opinion, that to avoid Tyranny, Priests should become Laymen, and Laymen Priests by turns. To prevent Cabals, and false Respect, he is for abolishing the Distinction of Father, Mother, Brother, Sister, &c. Discourse 9 and 10.

them, they might be deposed, and reduced to the State of Laymen, by the same Power and Method by which they had been elected.

WHEN a Congregation was so numerous, that all the Brethren could not meet conveniently in one Place, they divided themselves, or rather from the first, a second issues forth, equally free, equally independent, chuses its own Ministers, becomes Sister to its Mother, of equal Condition and Dignity, and as such they are mutually to assist one the other. For, as we have said before, no Church had any Right over another, and Advice and Remonstrances were the only means left them; unless some one of the Churches happened to swerve from the Rules of Christianity as settled among them, or to neglect and forsake those Tenets which they looked upon as fundamental: In that case, if that Church would not come back to its Duty, and submit to the Remonstrances and Condemnation of the Brotherhood, the other Congregations separated themselves from that particular Assembly, and owned it no more as a Church of Christ.

THE Power of Brownist Ministers was reduced to narrow Bounds. The Minister of one Congregation could not baptize or give the Communion in another; they had no set Form of Prayer; a Brother, tho' a Layman, might prophecy in the open Assembly. The Brownists gave the name of Prophecy to the Exhortations given by word of Mouth. After Sermon it often happened, that a Brother proposed some Question about Religion, and the Reasons he had for doubting; they held Conferences amongst themselves on the Subject which had been handled in the Sermon. Each Assembly was independent in its Censures; the supreme Power being lodged in each of those small Ecclesiastical Commonwealths, they had neither Classes, nor Convocations, nor Ecclesiastical Commissioners, nor Synods nor Councils.

THE Reasons good or bad which they alledged for their separating themselves from every other Church, chiefly from that of England, were these: The Laws of the Kingdom, and the Authority of the Queen, have introduced, they said, many Innovations into the Church, and added to the Religion established by Christ, several Customs which cannot be maintained with any colour of Justice. They moreover insisted, that the Religious Worship was disfigured by palpable and shameful Errors; that those Additions, Innovations and Errors were pressed upon Consciences, as if they were essential and necessary Articles; that Persecution being an infallible Mark of a false Church, that of England could not be true, since it was a persecuting Church. Finally, the whole Hierarchy and Ecclesiastical Government was so corrupt and defiled, that they thought it impossible to reform it, and therefore found it easier to settle a new Form of Government, than to mend the old. In consequence of those Principles, they took up a Resolution to come as nearly as they could to the Administration of the Church under Christ and his Apostles. But all their Endeavours produced only some odious Pharisaical Distinctions, whereas they ought to have tolerated, and supported with Christian Charity and Patience those Churches whose Communion they rejected.

If we followed blindly the Compilers of Catalogues of Sects and Religions, we might without much Difficulty encrease the number of the various Branches which sprouted out of Puritanism. To these Brownists and Barrowists, for example, which, as has been proved, made up but one Sect, we should add, according to the Author of Memoires & Observations sur L'Angleterre^m, the Independents, who afterwards closed in with the Presbyterians; but 'tis evident that the Brownists were hid under that Mask. Another Authorⁿ, not content to distinguish the Puritans from Presbyterians, invents out of his own fertile Brain another Sect of Predestinarians; and again another, whom he calls, by way of Ornament, and to set a Gloss upon it, the Anointed of England. This Sect, says he, was founded by one Wright; the Anointed believed that none were guilty of Sin, except those who would not receive their Doctrine, which they called the Doctrine of Truth. This the Author relates upon the Credit of Saunders a good Man, but a very partial Writer; and 'tis plain this Opinion is but a false Consequence, drawn from the Principles of the Brownists. These Anointed were also called Millenarians, because they believed that Christ would come again upon Earth, and reign a thousand Years. In short, this Fanatical Appellation of Anointed was only another Name of the Millenarians, of whom we must now give the Reader some Account.

^m Memoires, p. 367.

THE Opinion of Christ's reigning a thousand Years upon Earth, took its Rise from the first Ages, it has often been renewed since: But the ingenious Author of The Theory of the Earth, both before and after the Deluge^o, has set it in the clearest Light. The famous French Protestant Divine who published his own Visions and Prophecies in 1686 and 1687, under the Title of Prophecies Accomplished, endeavoured likewise to prove a Fifth Monarchy, and the Reign of a thousand Years. Then, says he^r, and not till then, Christ will truly reign upon Earth; it will begin at the Conversion of all Nations, and of the Jews in particular, to the Faith of Christ, or rather, as the Fall of Antichrist will go before this Conversion, the thousand Years may begin to be computed from his Destruction. Our pretended Prophet adds, that probably God will reckon the thousand Years from the Event. In the Year 1686 he made a Computation of Antichrist's Reign, and 'tho' he found some Difficulty in determining the precise Moment in which it should end, because God in his Prophecies is not an exact Observer of Chronology, and a Prophet does not regard a few Years more or less. At last he settled the Fall of this Antichristian Empire, to happen in the beginning of the eighteenth Century, and according to all Appearance be- ⁿ Jovet, tom. 1 & 2. of his History of all Religions. Jovet is as bad as Ross and Saunders.

^o Thom. Burnet, in his Telluris Theoria Sacra, pretends that before the Deluge the Earth was smooth, without any Hills, that it was hardned by the Sun, and contain'd within its capacious Womb, that great Abyss of Water, which caused the universal Deluge; the Waters bursting the Earth, by the extream Rarefaction of the Fire which was in the Center. This broke the Earth into Pieces, and spoiled the Order and Economy of it. Hills and Mountains, Vallies and deep Caverns, were then formed, and are a lively Representation of the Ruins of a City destroyed by a violent Earthquake. The Air of our Atmosphere suffered by this Dissolution. All Nature was corrupted; the Air lost its Purity, the Earth its first Vigor, the Fruits of the Earth their Strength, by the Decay of Primigenial Juices. Man's Life, which was of such Length before the Deluge, was much shortned. The World being unequally warmed by the Rays of the Sun, the Variety of Seasons which were not necessary in the old World, were established by Almighty God, as being absolutely requisite for the ruinous State of our Earth, &c. Such was the first Revolution by the Deluge: A second will in due time be brought about, by a violent Eruption of the above-mention'd Central Fire, an astonishing Drought will be the Fore-runner of it; the Body of the Earth being dried up, and becoming spongy and porous, the Central Fire will transpire through all its Parts, and set it all at once in a dreadful Blaze. Rivers, Lakes, Fountains, the Seas and the Ocean itself, will be dried up first; and the Places heretofore occupied by them, will then be burning Lakes of Fire and Sulphur. This universal Conflagration will serve to purify the Earth, which will be restored to its Primitive Form, and become smooth and even as at the first; and we ourselves shall be restored to the primigenial Purity of the old World. Burnet proves this Change from the first Verses of the fortieth Chapter of Isaiah, and the 4th and 5th Verses of the third Chapter of St. Luke's Gospel. The Seat of Antichrist will be first consumed, and he himself destroy'd by Christ's fiery Garments: Eclipses and Earthquakes will be the Forerunners of this Revolution, which will crush all the Enemies of Christ, who will reign upon Earth with the Saints; these, according to the repeated Promises of the Divine Spirit, will possess the Earth; whereas in this Life they suffered Afflictions, and by consequence reaped not the Effect of those Promises. The Reign of a thousand Years will be their Sabbath, or Day of Rest; after having work'd (that is been persecuted) during the other six Days of the Week; for our ingenious Author thinks, that this World (or Earth) is to last as many thousand Years, as there are Days in the Week.

^p Jurieu, tom. 2. p. 216 and 217. of Accompl. des Prophet.

^q The same Author. p. 52. and following.

tween 1710 and 1715. This Book inclined most of the French Protestant Refugees to become Millenarians, and great numbers of them flattered themselves with the Hopes of out-living Antichrist, and of enjoying the first Millenarian Pleasures. Before this Author published his Work, Comenius had with no better Success fixed the Beginning of the thousand Years to the Year 1672. These two Prophets died opportunely enough to avoid being ocular Witnesses of the Mistakes in their Computations. Mr. Whiston is as singular in his Notions, and still more unsuccessful in his Apocalyptical System and Computation, than his Brethren and Predecessors; for he has out-lived by many Years the time which he had fixed for the Destruction of Antichrist, and beginning of the thousand Years, viz. the tenth of March Old Style, of the Year 1714.

JURIEU writing in 1686, flattered the Jews; what he says of them in his two first Volumes must not be taken literally, since he has complained himself that his Meaning had been misrepresented; but in the Sequel of his Prophecies, which may be supposed to have been composed to clear up former Objections; he says of them, that they shall all meet again in the Land of Canaan in the eighteenth Age, but not till they are converted to Christianity; not by way of Conquest, but by the voluntary and liberal Concession of other Christian Nations: Then they will rebuild Jerusalem, and become themselves the living Temple of the Lord, and the most glorious and exalted of all the Nations of the fifth Monarchy (of a thousand Years); because the Messiah was born and had his Origin from them, &c. This Superiority is to consist in Order and Rank, not in Power and Command over the rest; the most extraordinary Gifts of Nature and Grace, the most excelling Prophets will be conferred upon, and reside amongst them: In the universal Church, the Jewish will be as the elder Sister, that of the Gentiles as the younger. In this long and happy Reign the Divine Worship and Religion will be uniform, with one Spirit, and a perfect Union (by consequence there will not be found amongst them any passionate or cholerick Controversy, always ready to disturb the publick Peace, by finding out detestable Heresies in the most harmless Opinions of his Brother Divines.) Finally, The Jews are to lay down and cast off that superstitious Contempt for all other Religions, which is so common amongst them; and of which Christians of all Communions and Denominations are so often guilty.

LONG before the above-mentioned millenary Authors, several Protestants had embraced the same Opinions, and it seems there was some Connection betwixt the Notions of the Reformed, and of the Reign of a thousand Years. The Protestants said to one another, and openly preached in their Pulpits, that by the Reformation they separated themselves from Antichrist. Hatred made them wish his Destruction, and the Heat of Dispute raised their Hopes and Expectation of it; they searched the Scriptures to find out some Ground for this; the Prophecies and chiefly the Apocalypse or Book of Revelations, furnished them with what they thought proper Materials. The ancient *Chiliasm*s argued as the modern ones; both had their Antichrists; both flattered themselves with the same sure Prognosticks of his Destruction; some of both, who were more spiritual, pretended that the Pleasures of that glorious State should be only spiritual, whilst the rest, otherwise inclined, expected to enjoy carnal Satisfaction. Of all Protestants, none have more willingly and openly espoused that Opinion, than the Calvinists and Presbyterians^f; the Millenarian System ought therefore in Justice to be attributed to them. On the same account, we must rank in the same Class the Sabbatarians or Seventh-day-Men, whom we have mentioned before[†] in that part of this Work which treats of the Customs and Ceremonies of the Jews. Most of the Millenarian Tenets are laid to the Charge of those Sabbatarians, who are but few, and not much taken notice of; and their Devotion for the Sabbath may without much Difficulty be reconciled with the Reign of a thousand Years. Several Chiliasm Writers have called this Reign in a Mystical Sense, The Great Sabbath; they have searched and found out many notable things in the number Seven, which is that of the Sabbath: Such as God's Praises sung by the Royal Prophet seven times a Day; the just Man's Falling and Rising seven times; the seven mortal Sins mentioned in most Catechisms; the Command of Christ to forgive Injuries seventy times seven; his chusing and sending before him seven times ten Disciples. Lastly, to shorten this Account of the mysterious Significations of this Number, several have thought it a particular Consecration of it, that God himself chose to rest on the seventh Day. What glorious Types might not such Interpreters find in the Number Thousand? The Author cited in the Margin, has racked his Imagination[‡] upon that Subject.

* The thousand Years begin at that Period of Time. See p. 79 and following, of the Sequel of the Accompl. of Proph.

WE do not intend to follow the Example of Ross, Jovet, and other such Authors, who multiplied Sects and Heresies without Number or Reason. Those Writers would probably make a particular Sect of those who were called Congregationists^{*}, who are the same as the Independents, the Brownists or Barrowists, as appears evidently by the Articles which they drew up about Doctrine and Discipline, in the Year 1691. Neither would they leave out the Cameronians, so named from their Ringleader Archibald Cameron, a violent Scots Puritan Country Minister, and an inveterate Enemy to the Royal Family. This Fellow and his Adherents, separated themselves from the other Presbyterians, upon a Difference in Opinion concerning Liberty of Preaching, which Charles the second, after his Restoration, had granted to the Ministers of that Party. The Cameronians insisted that such a Leave granted by the King in an Affair purely Ecclesiastical, strongly proved and established his Supremacy in the ^f There have been, and may be still, many Millenarians amongst the Presbyterians of England. In France Amiraud, Launay and others, did not want Followers in the same Opinion. In Holland Cocceius has explained the Prophecy about Gog and Magog, of Antichrist and Papery, and Christ's Kingdom upon Earth. Witsius, Alting, &c. are reckoned amongst Cocceius's Disciples.

[†] See tom. first, about Jews and Catholicks.

[‡] Bungus of Bergamo wrote a Book, to which he gave the Title of Numerorum Mysteria, wherein he pretends that the number Thousand is the Cube of Eternity, that it is a Figure and Type of Heavenly Perfection, that it denotes the hope of Life Everlasting, represents Heaven, belongs to Christ in a particular manner, as being a most perfect Number. To be sure such refined Allegories could not escape the Authors or Followers of the Millenarian System.

^{*} Once more we must repeat here, that ignorant or deceitful Writers have, under different Names, made three or four distinct Sects of only one in reality. Congregationists, Independents, Brownists, Barrowists, are but one Flock, under various Denominations, which endeavour to keep in the Skeepsfold of the Lord, without pretending to exclude absolutely the other Flocks; provided they are out of the Pale of the Romish Church. Lewis Dumoulin wrote a Book in favour of the Independents, which he entitled, Conformité, &c. printed at London in 1680. He published it as an Instruction to his Brethren the French Refugees, most of whom condemned the Independents without knowing them. That Author pretends, that of all Ecclesiastical Forms of Government, that of the Independents is the most reasonable, "comes the nearest to the Conduct of the Apostles, and their immediate Successors; . . . and is the easiest to be reconciled with Monarchical or any other Civil Government, as no ways interfering with, or usurping any part of their Jurisdiction, &c." Their Name has been, he says, the chief Occasion of their being censured. "The word Independent seems to infer a settled Aversion, and want of Submission to Superiors, which Character they do not deserve, as the 24th Chapter of their Confession of Faith clearly proves. . . . all their Pretensions amount only to this, that the Civil or Ecclesiastical Magistrates, in religious Disputes, have no Power. . . . from the Gospel, to force or deprive of Liberty those who hold the fundamental Articles, and are willing to let others serve God in their own way: In a word, says he, their Name of Independents signifies only that they are separate Congregations, without depending on one another, or on Synods, for Doctrine or Discipline."

Church. They refused to accept of it, and not only made a Schism on that Occasion, but they even rebelled against the King, pretending he had incurred Excommunication, and had lost his Right to the Crown. However the Cameronians were reunited to the Presbyterian Kirk of Scotland in the Year 1690.

THESE are the most remarkable Particulars concerning the Presbyterians, and those who derive their Origin from them. We shall now entertain our Readers with a short Abstract of their Discipline, which we shall call the Puritan's, to conform ourselves exactly to the Appellation given them, and to the Idea imprinted by it on our Minds.

An Abstract of the DISCIPLINE of the PURITANS.

THEY require a Call, or Vocation to the Ministry, as an essential Point : but forbid at the same time to get Admittance into it by Solicitations, Cabals, or violent Methods. When a Brother's Call is determin'd in a lawful Manner, and he is chosen to be Minister for one Congregation, he is not permitted to fly to another. He is tied to that first spiritual Spouse, from whom nevertheless he may be divorced, but not without her previous Consent.

THE Person so called, is obliged above all things to subscribe to the Profession of Faith, to the Doctrine and Discipline of the Church : Before his Election, he must produce an Attestation of a good Life and Conversation, by which it may appear, that he has in all things consented to the Doctrine of the Puritans, has not read Heretical Books, nor employed his Time and Thoughts on vain empty Speculations, Paradoxes, or seeming Contradictions, and fruitless or trifling Enquiries. He must likewise be publicly examined on the chief Articles of Discipline, the most material Points of Divinity, and upon Scripture. The Examiners chuse themselves the Passages which he is to explain, and this they are allowed to do as often as they think fit. The Duties and Charge of the Ministerial Functions are strongly represented to him, and the Obligation he will lie under, to prefer the Glory of God to any human, or temporal and private Interest ; to give Edification to the Church, to adhere stedfastly to sound Doctrine, that is to the received Tenets and Customs of the Congregation for which he is to be chosen, and which prepare themselves for that important Choice by Prayer and Fasting.

THE Minister of one Church or Congregation, is allowed to preach in another ; but not without the Consent of the first, or absolute and urgent Necessity.

THE Order of Presbyterian Service, is much the same with the Calvinistical Method. First a Psalm, or Part of one, is sung ; all the Psalms are sung in order from first to last in the Course of the Year ; then a short Exhortation is made, by which the Faithful are prepared for the Prayer, which follows and ends with the Lord's Prayer. After this a Sermon is preached, both Parts of which are summed up in another Prayer, which tends also to represent to Almighty God the various Wants of the Congregation ; and to draw down his Blessing upon the Church and State, &c. This is likewise ended with the Lord's Prayer, after which the Assembly is dismissed, with a Blessing which concludes the whole Ceremony. The Ornaments which they think most essential to a Sermon, and recommend chiefly to their Preachers, are a clear, solid and pure Doctrine ; convincing Proofs drawn from Scripture alone ; that the Subject be applied suitably to the particular Circumstances of the Times, Places, and State of the Church, &c. They discountenance all Enquiries which are apt to please Curiosity, or to breed Dissentions, &c. All Citations of Texts, from Apocryphal Books, are to be rejected ; and those only admitted which are to be found in the Canon of Scripture, chiefly in the New Testament. The Minister must carefully avoid all Novelties, his Discourse must be plain, proportioned to the Capacity of the Audience, and accompanied with a grave Deportment. The Sound of the Voice and the Action, must not be either too high, or too violent and sudden. There are in our Days some Calvinistical Congregations, in which this limber and pliant Flexibility of the Body may be liked by some high-flown Coquets, who pretend to Devotion ; or by some half Christian, half Libertine Fops, or such-like Persons, who place a Sermon and a Comedy upon a level ; and consider them both as Amusements, which differ one from the other only as to the Subject : But certainly this Agitation of the Body can never be a Proof of the Preacher's Devotion, or that his Soul has acquired such a Share of Spiritual Flexibility, as to receive and feel all the Impressions of those Truths, of which he is to persuade his Audience.

Two Sermons are to be preached on each Sunday, and if possible neither is to last above an Hour. Catechising is also prescribed ; but as all the Faithful are not indow'd with equal Capacities, two sorts of Catechisms are appointed ; the one of a larger Extent, and which enters more into Particulars ; the other shorter, and fit to be made use of when young Catechumens are examined before the Celebration of the Lord's Supper.

THE Sacraments are administer'd after Sermon : The Father of the Child, or another in his Name and Stead, must present him to be baptized ; as to the Name which is given to the Infant, a special Caution is given to avoid all Heathenish or Papish * Names, and to admit only those mentioned in Scripture, chiefly of the Prophets and Saints. No Catechumen is to receive the Communion under fourteen Years of Age, unless the Consistory should think fit to make some Exception in favour of the Candidate, and as a Reward of his extraordinary Merit. Seven Days before the Communion, they are obliged to give in their Names to the Minister, to the end that the Elders may have a convenient Time, to inquire into the Lives and Conversations of the Catechumens. They are, by their Rules of Discipline, to be examined by Ministers and Elders a Month before they receive the Communion. Then all those who are admitted to it for the first Time in Puritan Congregations, must make a Profession of Faith, and declare their Assent to the Discipline of that Church. The Sermons which are preached on the Sunday before the Communion, are to serve as a Preparation to it ; and to treat of the Necessity and Method of making the Examen of Conscience, and of being at Peace, and reconciled with God.

ALL Festivals whatever have been abolished by the Puritans Discipline, and they have only kept an annual Fast, which on certain Occasions may be reiterated twice or thrice every Year.

THEIR Marriages are without any particular Ceremonies : The Calvinist Protestants do not allow them to be too quickly dispatched, and therefore require Espousals to be celebrated before ; yet so that from the Engagement of the Parties to the time of their being actually joined, there must not be above two Months. They hold this Contract to be indissoluble, and not to be broke upon any Account, not even though both Parties should be consenting to, or desirous of a Separation, and freely and mutually make an Offer of it one to the other. Marriages, amongst the Puritans, must be published three Sundays immediately preceding the Ceremony, which may be performed on any Congregation Day, except a Fast.

* An important Caution ! why should a Presbyterian have a Papish Name ?

SCHOOLS are to be erected for the Instruction of Children, to teach them the Catechism, Prayers, and religious Formularies, or Creeds: If any of the Students are found capable of such higher Sciences, as are requisite for the Ministerial Office, they are trained up in the Method of explaining the Holy Scriptures; and when they have gone through what is called a Course of Divinity², they are to propose a Conclusion in an Assembly of several Ministers. The Proposition once made, the Proponent withdraws, to leave the Censors at full Liberty to give their Opinion and Decision; which being agreed upon, the Proponent comes in again, to hear it himself from the Minister, who is the Director or President, or, as he is stiled in Synodical Assemblies, the Moderator of that Exercise.

THE same Discipline requires that every Point may be decided by the Majority of Votes, in all Consistories. That Assembly, amongst the Puritans, as amongst other Calvinists, governs all Ecclesiastical Affairs, keeps the Accounts of Marriages, Baptisms, Deaths, of the Number of those who receive the Communion, &c. in a word, takes care of the good Order in the Church. The Elders and Deacons are Members of it. The first are with the Ministers appointed to watch over, defend, and keep the Flock; the Care of the Sick and Poor is committed to the Deacons; their Powers may be recalled, but this is not to be done slightly, or without good Reasons. Great Caution and Prudence is likewise recommended in pronouncing any Censure, either against Persons who may deserve them, or against things subject to it. High Crimes, if publick, and odious by the Circumstances which accompany them, or by their own Nature, if they shew a Contempt of the Rules, or Obstinacy in Evil, are cognisable in the Consistory. As to lesser Faults, the Command of Christ must be obeyed, by which we are ordered to hide the Failings of our Neighbours, and to correct him for them in private, and without Witnesses. If any Person constituted in Ecclesiastical Dignity deserves Excommunication, he must first be deposed from his Office. Two Reasons may require that a Minister should be deprived, viz. Ignorance and a disorderly Life; to which a third must be added, which casts no Blemish on the Minister; and that is, an Incapacity occasioned by Age or Sickness. A Suspicion of Heresy requires a serious Examination; and till that is made, a Suspension, which is left to the prudent Consideration of some Ministers known to be learned, and Men of Probity. But if the Heresy is own'd and manifest, if charitable Admonitions make no Impression on the guilty Person, if he has no regard to the Censure pronounced against him or his Opinions: First he is suspended from the Lord's Supper, and at last Excommunication cuts him off from the Body of the Faithful. The same Method is prescribed to be followed in every other Case, for which a Brother Puritan may deserve Censure. When all other Means are fruitless, and Excommunication cannot be longer deferred or avoided, they proceed to it in the following manner: The first Sunday of the Publication the guilty Brother's Crime is declared, without personally naming him. The next Sunday he is named, to excite the Faithful to fast and pray on that direful Occasion of an approaching Excommunication. The third Sunday Notice is given that the dreadful Sentence will be pronounced on the following Sunday; which is accordingly executed with great Solemnity on the fourth Sunday. Some Faults become criminal, either by offending the whole Church, or by being contrary to the Laws of the State. Tho' the Offender gives the greatest mark of Repentance, by his Words or by his Tears, he must nevertheless be deprived of the Communion, for some time, both as an Example to deter others, and as a Reparation for his Fault. This Suspension is longer or shorter as the Consistory sees convenient; the appointed time of which being elapsed, the reconciled Brother must give publick Signs of his Repentance, in Presence of the whole Congregation. If a Minister should be so unhappy as to fall into a capital Crime, he must be deposed. And in this Particular, the Puritans are highly offended at the Remissness of the Episcopal Clergy. To what Purpose, say they, do you preach such excellent Morals in Speculation? And truly it must be own'd, that it is not much better from a Preacher of a scandalous and disorderly Life, than from a Philosopher, who should strongly inveigh against the shameful Vice of Drunkenness, and, like Despreaux^a, should afterwards get drunk with the very same Man, whom he so severely corrected and reprimanded in a long Oration for that Fault.

² In some Protestant Countries a Course of Divinity is only a Series of Controversies and Disputes, set in due Order, and under such Denominations as ought to inspire the Masters and Scholars with Sentiments of Respect and Devotion; but this last mentioned Point is much less minded than a sophistical Logick, with which they argue for some Years about Doctrinal Points, without learning to behave themselves like rational Creatures. The most essential Questions of that Course are proposed, explained, and examined with great Subtilty, and often without any common Honesty. These being known, the Art of Arguing acquired, and by the help of Academical Studies a Catalogue being well drawn up of the Articles of Religion divided and subdivided, so as to be distinguished from every other Communion; (as Mr. Locke justly observes in his Letters, tom. 2. edit. of Holland 1732). add to this many common Places got by Rote; then one may be examined; take a black Coat and Cloak, and a Band, with that mysterious, and, as 'tis thought, necessary demure Countenance, and then begin to preach. Happy those who by an elevated Genius, or solid Piety, can at last overcome the Defects of such Studies.

SYNODS and Ecclesiastical Assemblies are not allowed to treat of any other Subjects, but what are within the Verge of their Jurisdiction, such as Inquiring into the State of the Churches of their Communion, how Discipline is kept up, Doctrine delivered, and Ministerial Functions complied with amongst them, &c. The Deputies sent to those Assemblies, must be in some Ecclesiastical Dignity. To be short, every thing is transacted in the Puritans Meetings, as in those of other Calvinists. The Assemblies or Conferences of Churchmen ought to be held every six Weeks, the Synods twice in the Year; of these some are Provincial, some National; they have also, or rather might have, general and Oecumenical Synods. The Provincial must be held three Months before the National, to set together and put in good Order the Acts and other Affairs which are to be brought up from the Provincial, to the National Synod. To conclude, a compleat Collection of all the Articles of Discipline ought to be read in every Synod; ('tis from that Collection that we have compiled this Extract) what deserves Censure or a Reprimand, as they say in secular Assemblies, is amended; and they receive the Communion together in brothrely Love. The Synod begins as it ought, and as all Christians do, with a Sermon, Prayer, and calling upon the Holy Ghost for his Direction.

^a Despreaux meeting Chapelle, spoke to him freely about the Vice of Drunkenness, to which the last-mentioned Gentleman was subject, and used all the strongest Arguments to persuade his Friend to leave off that shameful Practice. "Ah! dear Friend, says Chapelle with Tears, 'tis done, I will be regular pray tell me those Reasons over again, I am charmed with them: But that I may hear them more conveniently, let us go to the next Tavern They both went, and both got so drunk, that they were forced to be carried home." See Moliere's Life by Grimaret.

A DISSERTATION

Concerning the Religion of the QUAKERS, &c.

THE Quakers owe their Origin to George Fox; it is usually fixed to the Year 1649 or 1650^b. They take upon themselves the glorious Titles of Evangelists and Apostolicks, being persuaded by the inward Testimony of the Spirit, that they are the most perfect of all Christians, and bear the nearest Resemblance to Christ and his Apostles. They pretend to follow literally the Precepts and Morality of the Gospel, under the Direction of the inward Light^d, which is the Rule and Guide of all their Actions: And had their Power been equal to their Will, all Civil Societies must have been new modelled according to their own System. This inward Light being, as the Quakers say, Christ himself, they probably think of themselves what a modern witty Writer says, “that the Quakers reckon from Christ, and that he was the first Quaker.”

FOX the Patriarch, Apostle and Doctor of Quakerism, was, they say, raised by the Spirit of God, to restore Christianity to its Primitive Innocence and Purity, and to light the Taper of Religion. They farther pretend, that by his means, the true Word of God took place of the Corruption which had been spread over all Christianity during a long Night of Apostacy; that is almost sixteen Ages. This Fox was born in Leicestershire about the Year 1624. It is reported of him^e, that in his Youth he was of a particular, dark, and melancholy Temper; that he loved to be by himself, did not mind play as other Children, despised all their Amusements and Diversions, was very thoughtful, of few Words, and reserved. 'Tis evident those are extraordinary Qualifications towards Fanaticism, or at least very apt Dispositions for it: We may even boldly say, such a Character may suit both Extremes, a Fanatick and a ^g Saint. In Fox it produced the first^h, and failed of the other. The Quakers add to this, that even in the Heat of Youth Fox's Life was irreproachable, and his Virtue exemplary, that his Piety was such, as to keep him in a constant Recollection and Retirement, which he employed in a serious and deep Meditation on the Word of God, whilst those of his Age gave themselves up to Vanity and sensual Pleasures. Thus, to use the Expression of the above-cited Author of

^b The Author of the Letters concerning the English fixes it to 1642. Fox was then only a Shoemaker's Prentice-Boy, scarce known out of his Shop.

^c So says Croesus; but he does not seem to agree with the English Writers, who have given an Account of the Quakers Doctrine.

^d This is taken from English Authors.

^e These Expressions are, according to most Historians, very common in the Writings of the Quakers.

^f Croesus, lib. 1. Histor. Quaker.

^g The word Saint is not meant rigorously; every body knows there are Saints of several sorts.

^h According to our Notions; for to be sure the Quakers look upon Fox as a holy Man and a true Apostle. No Idea is less confused or more distinct than the Character of a true Saint, and whoever judges of it by the Gospel-Rules cannot mistake it: But Party-Prejudice has rendered it Equivocal, and the Necessary has, if possible, thrown a darker Vail upon it. Wonders and Miracles are added, more suitable to a History of Tom-Thumb than to a Saint's Life, Actions against Nature, and impossible: Absurd and unheard-of Practices, irregular and unsteady Notions; and lastly, what is but too common, an open Rebellion against and Defiance to the Laws of the State.

Letters, Fox, at the Age of twenty five, was already become a Man holily mad. Yet he could scarce read or write, delivered himself heavily, spoke his native Language very ill, and had not the least Tincture of Learning; far from being capable to write the various Books of which he was said to be Author, and which were actually published under his Name both in Latin and English.

SUCH were the Endowments which from a Shoemaker's Prentice-Boy raised Fox to the Dignity of the Apostle of a numerous, and now grown powerful Sect: But a considerable time elapsed, before his Mission became publick. In the mean while, he had but a few Moments to qualify himself for such an Office; he could only steal a few leisure Hours from his Trade, to study and meditate upon Scripture: Amongst so many distracting Cares, he had no Help to understand that obscure tho' divine Book, but his own Fancies, which, as we shall see hereafter, he cunningly made pass for Supernatural and Heavenly Inspirations. It is reported of him, that by his long and continual Poring upon the Bible, he had so well got it by heart, that all his Words and Conversations were but a Rhapsody of the Expressions and Texts of Scripture, insomuch that they farther pretend, that had it been lost, it might have been retriev'd by Fox's Memory. However his Apostleship went no farther than the Shop, till he was nineteen Years old; his whole Audience was made up of his Fellow Shoemakers, who only jeered his Exhortations, and contemned his troublesome Reprehensions. Fox thus rejected, withdrew, lamenting the perverse Dispositions of his Companions, and as usual retired into some private Corner of the House, to his doleful Meditations. As he was one Day walking alone in the Fields, reflecting according to Custom on the disorderly Lives of Men, and considering which might be the properest Means to reform them, for the Glory of God, and their own temporal and eternal Happiness, he thought he heard a Voice from Heaven, or rather he felt one of those sudden Impulses which the *Quakers*¹ take for special Motions from the Holy Ghost. This pretended Voice, or Impulse of the Spirit of God, set before his Eyes a lively Representation of the corrupt and abandoned Lives of Men, from their Cradle to extreme old Age, at which time nothing is left to return to God, but weak if not wholly lost Senses, and a second Childhood; exhorting him at the same time to Retirement and an absolute Separation from the general Corruption of the World. This is the true Epocha of Fox's Vocation: After this Call from Heaven, he lived in a closer Retreat than before; he searched narrowly into the State of his Conscience; retrenched whatever he found superfluous, and followed his Trade no further than was necessary for his Subsistence. He went about preaching from Place to Place, and boldly entered into Disputes with Divines and Ministers, trusting solely to and being guided only by that pretended Divine Voice, which *interiourly speaks to the Heart, and draws Men as it pleases*². We must not omit taking notice, that at the Time of this manifest Inspiration, Fox's Melancholy was much increased. To what pitch it was arrived, may easily be guessed by the Words of the Author, who has wrote in Latin the History of the Quakers; he says³, " that Fox com-

¹ The first Quakers, says Croesus, lib. 1. Hist. p. 24. pretended that every extraordinary Motion, every Impulse leading to Good after a deep Meditation, comes from the Holy Ghost; and what is then said, is a Voice from Heaven, a divine Oracle: accordingly they boldly began their Discourses with these Words, God, or the Holy Ghost, speaks by my Mouth. The fanatick Anabaptists said the same.

² Fanatical Expressions often used by Quakers.

³ Croesus lib. 1. p. 28. Querebatur.... se sine ulla intermissione maximis angoribus & tentationibus Satanæ cruciari, &c.

prescribed to be followed in every other Case, for which a Brother Puritan may deserve Censure. When all other Means are fruitless, and Excommunication cannot be longer deferred or avoided, they proceed to it in the following manner: The first Sunday of the Publication the guilty Brother's Crime is declared, without personally naming him. The next Sunday he is named, to excite the Faithful to fast and pray on that direful Occasion of an approaching Excommunication. The third Sunday Notice is given that the dreadful Sentence will be pronounced on the following Sunday; which is accordingly executed with great Solemnity on the fourth Sunday. Some Faults become criminal, either by offending the whole Church, or by being contrary to the Laws of the State. Tho' the Offender gives the greatest mark of Repentance, by his Words or by his Tears, he must nevertheless be deprived of the Communion, for some time, both as an Example to deter others, and as a Reparation for his Fault. This Suspension is longer or shorter as the Consistory sees convenient; the appointed time of which being elapsed, the reconciled Brother must give publick Signs of his Repentance, in Presence of the whole Congregation. If a Minister should be so unhappy as to fall into a capital Crime, he must be deposed. And in this Particular, the Puritans are highly offended at the Remissness of the Episcopal Clergy. To what Purpose, say they, do you preach such excellent Morals in Speculation? And truly it must be own'd, that it is not much better from a Preacher of a scandalous and disorderly Life, than from a Philosopher, who should strongly inveigh against the shameful Vice of Drunkenness, and, like Despreaux^a, should afterwards get drunk with the very same Man, whom he so severely corrected and reprimanded in a long Oration for that Fault.

SYNODS and Ecclesiastical Assemblies are not allowed to treat of any other Subjects, but what are within the Verge of their Jurisdiction, such as Inquiring into the State of the Churches of their Communion, how Discipline is kept up, Doctrine delivered, and Ministerial Functions complied with amongst them, &c. The Deputies sent to those Assemblies, must be in some Ecclesiastical Dignity. To be short, every thing is transacted in the Puritans Meetings, as in those of other Calvinists. The Assemblies or Conferences of Churchmen ought to be held every six Weeks, the Synods twice in the Year; of these some are Provincial, some National; they have also, or rather might have, general and Oecumenical Synods. The Provincial must be held three Months before the National, to set together and put in good Order the Acts and other Affairs which are to be brought up from the Provincial, to the National Synod. To conclude, a compleat Collection of all the Articles of Discipline ought to be read in every Synod; ('tis from that Collection that we have compiled this Extract) what deserves Censure or a Reprimand, as they say in secular Assemblies, is amended; and they receive the Communion together in brothrely Love. The Synod begins as it ought, and as all Christians do, with a Sermon, Prayer, and calling upon the Holy Ghost for his Direction.

^a Despreaux meeting Chapelle, spoke to him freely about the Vice of Drunkenness, to which the last-mentioned Gentleman was subject, and used all the strongest Arguments to persuade his Friend to leave off that shameful Practice. "Ah! dear Friend, says Chapelle with Tears, 'tis done, I will be regular pray tell me those Reasons over again, I am charmed with them: But that I may hear them more conveniently, let us go to the next Tavern They both went, and both got so drunk, that they were forced to be carried home." See Moliere's Life by Grimaret.

A DISSERTATION

Concerning the Religion of the QUAKERS, &c.

THE Quakers owe their Origin to George Fox; it is usually fixed to the Year 1649 or 1650^b. They take upon themselves the glorious Titles of ^c Evangelists and Apostolicks, being persuaded by the inward Testimony of the Spirit, that they are the most perfect of all Christians, and bear the nearest Resemblance to Christ and his Apostles. They pretend to follow literally the Precepts and Morality of the Gospel, under the Direction of the inward Light^d, which is the Rule and Guide of all their Actions: And had their Power been equal to their Will, all Civil Societies must have been new modelled according to their own System. This inward Light being, as the Quakers say, Christ himself, they probably think of themselves what a modern witty Writer says, “that the Quakers reckon from “ Christ, and that he was the first Quaker.”

FOX the Patriarch, Apostle and Doctor of Quakerism, was, they say, raised by the Spirit of God, to restore Christianity to its Primitive Innocence and Purity, and to ^e light the Taper of Religion. They farther pretend, that by his means, the true Word of God took place of the Corruption which had been spread over all Christianity during a long Night of Apostacy; that is almost sixteen Ages. This Fox was born in Leicestershire about the Year 1624. It is reported of him^f, that in his Youth he was of a particular, dark, and melancholy Temper; that he loved to be by himself, did not mind play as other Children, despised all their Amusements and Diversions, was very thoughtful, of few Words, and reserved. 'Tis evident those are extraordinary Qualifications towards Fanaticism, or at least very apt Dispositions for it: We may even boldly say, such a Character may suit both Extremes, a Fanatick and a ^g Saint. In Fox it produced the first^h, and failed of the other. The Quakers add to this, that even in the Heat of Youth Fox's Life was irreproachable, and his Virtue exemplary, that his Piety was such, as to keep him in a constant Recollection and Retirement, which he employed in a serious and deep Meditation on the Word of God, whilst those of his Age gave themselves up to Vanity and sensual Pleasures. Thus, to use the Expression of the above-cited Author of

^b The Author of the Letters concerning the English fixes it to 1642. Fox was then only a Shoemaker's Prentice-Boy, scarce known out of his Shop.

^c So says Groefius; but he does not seem to agree with the English Writers, who have given an Account of the Quakers Doctrine.

^d This is taken from English Authors.

^e These Expressions are, according to most Historians, very common in the Writings of the Quakers.

^f Groefius, lib. 1. Histor. Quaker.

^g The word Saint is not meant rigorously; every body knows there are Saints of several sorts.

^h According to our Notions; for to be sure the Quakers look upon Fox as a holy Man and a true Apostle. No Idea is less confused or more distinct than the Character of a true Saint, and whoever judges of it by the Gospel-Rules cannot mistake it: But Party-Prejudice has rendered it Equivocal, and the Necessary has, if possible, thrown a darker Vail upon it. Wonders and Miracles are added, more suitable to a History of Tom-Thumb than to a Saint's Life, Actions against Nature, and impossible: Absurd and unheard-of Practices, irregular and unsteady Notions; and lastly, what is but too common, an open Rebellion against and Defiance to the Laws of the State.

Letters, Fox, at the Age of twenty five, was already become a Man holily mad. Yet he could scarce read or write, delivered himself heavily, spoke his native Language very ill, and had not the least Tincture of Learning; far from being capable to write the various Books of which he was said to be Author, and which were actually published under his Name both in Latin and English.

SUCH were the Endowments which from a Shoemaker's Prentice-Boy raised Fox to the Dignity of the Apostle of a numerous, and now grown powerful Sect: But a considerable time elapsed, before his Mission became publick. In the mean while, he had but a few Moments to qualify himself for such an Office; he could only steal a few leisure Hours from his Trade, to study and meditate upon Scripture: Amongst so many distracting Cares, he had no Help to understand that obscure tho' divine Book, but his own Fancies, which, as we shall see hereafter, he cunningly made pass for Supernatural and Heavenly Inspirations. It is reported of him, that by his long and continual Poring upon the Bible, he had so well got it by heart, that all his Words and Conversations were but a Rhapsody of the Expressions and Texts of Scripture, insomuch that they farther pretend, that had it been lost, it might have been retriev'd by Fox's Memory. However his Apostleship went no farther than the Shop, till he was nineteen Years old; his whole Audience was made up of his Fellow Shoemakers, who only jeered his Exhortations, and contemned his troublesome Reprehensions. Fox thus rejected, withdrew, lamenting the perverse Dispositions of his Companions, and as usual retired into some private Corner of the House, to his doleful Meditations. As he was one Day walking alone in the Fields, reflecting according to Custom on the disorderly Lives of Men, and considering which might be the properest Means to reform them, for the Glory of God, and their own temporal and eternal Happiness, he thought he heard a Voice from Heaven, or rather he felt one of those sudden Impulses which the *Quakers*ⁱ take for special Motions from the Holy Ghost. This pretended Voice, or Impulse of the Spirit of God, set before his Eyes a lively Representation of the corrupt and abandoned Lives of Men, from their Cradle to extreme old Age, at which time nothing is left to return to God, but weak if not wholly lost Senses, and a second Childhood; exhorting him at the same time to Retirement and an absolute Separation from the general Corruption of the World. This is the true Epocha of Fox's Vocation: After this Call from Heaven, he lived in a closer Retreat than before; he searched narrowly into the State of his Conscience; retrenched whatever he found superfluous, and followed his Trade no further than was necessary for his Subsistence. He went about preaching from Place to Place, and boldly entered into Disputes with Divines and Ministers, trusting solely to and being guided only by that pretended Divine Voice, which interiourly speaks to the Heart, and draws Men as it pleases^k. We must not omit taking notice, that at the Time of this manifest Inspiration, Fox's Melancholy was much increased. To what pitch it was arrived, may easily be guessed by the Words of the Author, who has wrote in Latin the History of the Quakers; he says^l, " that Fox com-ⁱ The first Quakers, says Creefius, lib. 1. Hist. p. 24. pretended that every extraordinary Motion, every Impulse leading to Good after a deep Meditation, comes from the Holy Ghost; and what is then said, is a Voice from Heaven, a divine Oracle: accordingly they boldly began their Discourses with these Words, God, or the Holy Ghost, speaks by my Mouth. The fanatick Anabaptists said the same.

^k Fanatical Expressions often used by Quakers.

^l Creefius lib. 1. p. 28. Querebatur... se sine ulla intermissione maximis angoribus & tentationibus Satanæ cruciari, &c.

“ plained of being tormented by Satan without Remission, of being tempted and “ persecuted by that Evil Spirit with so much Violence and Fury, that he was almost “ reduced to Despair, and sometimes preferred Death to Life.” The same Author adds, that several Ministers were of opinion^m, that his Complaints against Satan should be treated as other hypochondriack Distempers, by applying to the Body proper Remedies in order to cure his Brain. Enough has been said of this Man’s Melancholy, all know the Effects of that Malady which in all Countries has produced so many visionary Madmen ; all know that Vapours rising from the Spleen, have often been transformed into Oracles, Predictions and Apparitionsⁿ.

HITHERTO Fox had only been a Fanatick in Theory ; his Retirement and Solitude, in which he had no Companion but the Bible, no Master or Interpreter but his own interiour Direction, was at last rewarded by Visions, Inspirations, Divine Watchings, Holy Foreights, and some pretended Prophecies. These sad Effects of Melancholy made him known, and in a short time procured him some thousands of Disciples : But we must not think this ignorant and visionary Shoemaker was destitute of that artful Shew of Simplicity, by which the common People have so often been deceived and misled. His Melancholy was a studied one, brought to a System, after many Corrections and Amendments, during the Space of three Years^o, which we may justly look upon as the Improvement of his natural Dispositions, the Academical Studies, the Course of Divinity of this Shoemaker, who left off that Trade as soon as he had drawn after him a considerable number of Disciples and Followers, who, one may imagine, would not let him want Necessaries. His outward Appearance of Modesty, his Sobriety, his Dress (which was wholly made of Leather from Head to Foot) imposed upon the People : Thus accoutred he went from to Town to Town, inveighing against both the Church and the Clergy, with his Companions or Emissaries. Their whole Discourse was about framing an intirely new System of Religion, and establishing a new Church. This made him be looked upon as a seditious Person ; and accordingly Fox being now five and twenty Years old, was imprisoned at Nottingham in 1649. This is a Circumstance which was made more remarkable by some pretended Miracles ; and in particular, by casting out the Devil from a Woman, who counterfeited being possessed. The Fanatick Party increased upon it, and we are assured, that several^p honest and well-meaning People, naturally averse from such Proceedings, were nevertheless deluded by him : but no wonder ; Enthusiasm is a Catching Distemper^q. Fox being sent out of Nottingham Jail, preached in other Places, where he was roughly handled by the Mob for his extravagant Behaviour, and the Boldness with which he interrupted the Ministers in their Sermons. At Darby he was shut up for six Months in a House of Correction ; and when he came out of it, in order to be examined by Jeremy Bennet, a Justice of the Peace, the Name of Quakers was given to him and his Disciples, because in his Answers, and publick Exhortations he often said, ⁿ Most of the antient and modern Visions, Extasies, Inspirations, Possessions, if rightly examined, would appear to be only the Effects of Melancholy. This varies according to the Diversity of Constitutions ; in some it is what the Spaniards call the Devil’s Bath ; in others it becomes the Heroicon Pathos of the Greeks, that is an Inclination and Ability to undertake and perform great things.

^m Cum censeret corpori æque atque animo medicinam adferendum, ibid.

^o Croesus, lib. 1. Hist. p. 33. Mansit Foxus in hoc statu prope Triennium quod ei tempus velut curriculum Academicum extitit, &c.

^p Croesus relates several such Examples. But he is an obscure long-winded Author, and writes without any Order, more like a declaiming Orator than like an Historian ; and ’tis hard to guess whether he is for or against the Quakers.

^q See the above-cited Author of Letters concerning the English.

Quaking and Trembling was a necessary Disposition to hear the Word of God with Profit. But that Sect glories at this Day in a Denomination, which at first was intended as a Ridicule upon them.

NOTTINGHAM and Darby were not the only Places, in which Fox was punished upon account of his Fanatical Sallies; his Want of Good-breeding; his Theeing and Thouing; his pretending to give Admonitions from Heaven; and other insufferable Abuses by him committed: He had been cast into Prison, and whip'd in those Towns; at other Places he was put in the Pillory, and underwent some Punishments equally ignominious; he was often stoned or beaten almost to Death: But he endured all those Affronts according to the literal Sense of the Gospel-Precept; he desired the Judges to order a second Execution of the Sentence pronounced against him; he presented his Cheek and his Back to those who had boxed or whipped him; and in the midst of these temporal Afflictions he rejoiced and was comforted by the daily Increase of the Number of his Adherents: one of these, by name Elizabeth Hoton, was the first Woman who dared to preach in Publick. After her the Wife of one Fell converted to Quakerism by Fox. She married this Apostle of the Quakers upon the Death of her Husband, and preached likewise publickly.

CROMWELL was soon acquainted with Fox's Reputation, and the Progress of his Sect: At first he despised them and their Principles, not thinking a Body of Men (who preached and practised literally Evangelical Patience, who presented themselves to be beaten and abused, and who gloried in suffering for the Love of God) could be of any use to him in the Government of the State: But upon Consideration, and perceiving how quickly that Sect spread itself throughout the whole Kingdom, his Contempt turned to Wonder. He employed the most pressing Sollicitations^r, he offered large Sums of Money, to win over those Enthusiasts to his Interest; but without any Success^r; they were above Corruption, and behaved like worthy Disciples of the Gospel; and forced that Tyrant to praise^u this new Species of Men, whom he could not engage to his Party by either Gifts or Favours, which means he had tried upon all other Sects without ever missing his Aim.

IN the Year 1658, the Quakers were become so numerous, that they thought fit to hold a general Assembly in Bedfordshire, at the House of one of their chief Leaders. This Convocation lasted three Days: some Years before the Sect had penetrated into Ireland; and much about the same time, one of their Missionaries, a Butcher by Trade, had made it known also in Scotland. Fox himself went thither, he was ill received at first, and piously revenged that Affront^x by sharp Invectives against the Presbyterians in that Kingdom. He did not use more favourably the Episcopal Clergy, and other Protestants, but continually censured their Doctrine and Discipline, with that Violence, that furious Behaviour, which had been so notorious at the beginning of his Fanaticism^y. If we add to this, the Boldness of his pretendedly inspired Decisions, the continual and affected Neglect of which all the Quakers were guilty, as to a decent Behaviour, and the Customs both ^r He did not bow to, or take off his Hat before his Judges.

^r Cromwell paid great Regards to Fox in particular, hoping to gain him by Demonstrations of Kindness. See Croesus lib. 1. p. 75.

^u Lord Clarendon, in his Hist. of the Rebell. vol. 6. p. 473. says, the Quakers were irreconcilable Enemies to Cromwell.

^u Croesus, ibid. The Author of Letters, &c. has not repeated these Words of Cromwell: but instead of them makes him say, that This Religion was the only one upon which his Guineas could not prevail.

^x Croesus, lib. 1. p. 95.

^y The same Author, p. 124.

civil and religious ; their proudly distinguishing their Sect from all others, and self-conceited Opinion that there was no Sanctity out of it ; who can wonder that on some Occasions they were punished as Disturbers of the publick Tranquillity, and at other times treated as Madmen. Under colour of this pretended Inspiration, and of a close Imitation of Christ and his Apostles^a, they exclaimed against the Prayers and publick Offices of the Church of England, against Churches and Ministers. If they were so moderate as to give them no Interruption in their Sermons, they never failed publishing sharp Refutations accompany'd with insulting Expressions, tho' without Order or Connection. The lower Class of the Men and Women of the Sect, were the loudest, and exceeded all Bounds in ridiculing other Protestant Communions: and it might well be expected, since Ignorance is generally abusive. On the other side, those to whom the Quakers offered such Insults, were not backward in exaggerating their Faults, and in their turn accused them of Impiety and Libertinism, to render them odious ; and taxed them with Foaming at the Mouth, and Swelling with convulsive Motions, as Demoniacks, or those who pretended to speak from the Bottom of their Belly^a ; with affecting a Resemblance, even an Equality to God and Christ, with maintaining, as some Anabaptists have done, that Christ has no other Body but his Church, and teaching that his Incarnation was only figurative and not real. Such Accusations, which reflected chiefly on Fox and the other Ringleaders of the Party, rendered Quakerism so odious, that whoever was but suspected of it, was exposed to numberless Insults, and the most violent Persecutions^b.

THE Quakers flattered themselves with the Hopes of enjoying some Quiet at the Restoration of Charles the Second, and their Fanatical Fits abated likewise^c. Their furious Invectives, their violent Declamations against Ministers and Churches, were less frequent. They were not so often guilty of those pious extravagant Fooleries, which they called Inspiration ; at least they were kept more private, and their Enthusiasts, when under Examination, left off those favourite Expressions which they had before uttered in the Presence of the Judges, viz. That their Names were unknown to the World ; that they drew their Origin from the Land of Canaan ; and that they lived only in God, &c. Their Doctrine was reduced to a better Order, and rendered more methodical, and the whole Sect being more consistent and uniform, was much taken notice of, and made some Figure in Party-Lists. George Keith and Robert Barclay, both Scots, added to its Reputation, and pleaded its Cause methodically and with Art ; Barclay's^d Apology for the Quakers, which he presented to King Charles the Second in 1675, is an elaborate Work, and well known. Keith became the Doctor and Teacher of the Quakers at Philadelphia, the chief Town of ^e Pensylvania : He wrote likewise some English Books, to explain and set in a clearer Light the Doctrine of that Sect ; lastly, he advised them to choose proper Persons, who might, in the Name of the whole Party, draw up a Profession of Faith, as the most likely way to fasten the Bands of Unity : But this Proposal

^a Juxta exempla Prophetarum, & Christi & Apostolorum, p. 126. See also p. 140 and following, several Examples of such Invectives.

^a Croesus, p. 133.

^b See the Particulars in Croesus, towards the latter End of his first Book.

^c The same Author, lib. 2.

^d Theologiæ vere Christianæ Apologia.

^e A Province of North America, peopled with Quakers, and which derives its Name from William Penn, one of the most noted Men in the Party.

was rejected by the Quakers, because this appeared to them like setting up new Masters, a new Authority over themselves, in short like Slavery.

THEIR Refusal to take the Oath to the King, because in their Opinion^f all Oaths are forbid, and their plain Affirmation is as binding and equal to Swearing, raised a Persecution against them; another Pretence to give them no Quarter was their not paying Tythes. George Fox (not the Founder of this Sect, but another who for Distinction sake would be called the Younger) presented to the King^g a Remonstrance in favour of his Brethren, in which there were several bold Strokes and reproachful Expressions; to which he added some Threatnings, as from God. The then Duke of York, who was afterwards King James the Second, voted, they say, earnestly to have the Author hanged. However this Remonstrance was followed by several other Petitions, all unsuccessful. The Persecution was carried on, and grew more violent upon a new Pretence, which animated the whole Nation against the Quakers still more than their fanatical refusing to take the Oath of Allegiance, or to pay Tythes. A Rumour had been industriously spread, that there were good Grounds to suspect that some Roman Catholicks concealed themselves amongst the Quakers, who were said to connive at it. From this bare Suspicion they averred it as a certain Fact; it was confidently reported, that some Jesuits, after saying Mass in a Catholick Congregation, went to preach amongst the Quakers. If any of these last mentioned delivered himself with any Shew of Eloquence, then to be sure he must be a Jesuit. And what could be the Meaning of such a Disguise? was the next Enquiry made by their Enemies: No doubt, said they, the Roman Catholicks (who are as much averse from the Oath of Allegiance as the Quakers, tho' upon another Motive) think to hide themselves, and be somewhat safer amongst them. This Town-talk was improved into Romances very prejudicial to both Quakers and Catholicks.

WHILST the Quakers suffered the said Persecutions, of which they have given long Accounts to their own Advantage, (as is the constant Practice of all Sects and Religions) out of which Memoirs the Latin Author so often quoted has made up his History, William Penn began to distinguish himself, and to be taken notice of. In the Year 1666, having already finished his Travels through France and other foreign Countries, he went over to Ireland, in which Quakerism had gained ground for some time, but was then persecuted, as well as in England and Scotland, upon the same Account, of steadily refusing to pay Tythes, take the Oaths, and conform to several Customs established by the Civil and Ecclesiastical Government. Penn^h was naturally disposed by his Temper and the turn of his Mind, to receive all the Notions of that Sect; and hearing of it in Ireland, he went to one of their clandestine Meetings, which, unluckily or luckily for him, was discovered, and he was taken and confined in Prison with the rest. This Accident no ways daunted the young Manⁱ. He had a Call to become a Quaker, and proved in a short time one of the Elect and chief Supports of the Party. He searched to the Bottom, and acquired a perfect Knowledge of all their Opinions, and fully resolved to embrace them. Upon his Arrival in England, he waited on his Father like a true Quaker, with his Hat on, without bowing to him, Theeing and Thouing him, and calling him Friend. The Reception he met with was not very gracious, he was ^f This and several other Notions are common to Anabaptists and Quakers.

^g See that Remonstrance in Groefius, lib. 2. p. 208.

^h Groefius, lib. 2. p. 286.

ⁱ He was then two and twenty Years old.

looked upon as a Visionary and a Madman. His afflicted and angry Father tried all Means, Prayers, Threats, Arguments, Punishments to bring him back from his Errors, and despairing at last to overcome his inflexible Stubbornness, turned him out of his House. Penn bore all these Afflictions with exemplary Patience ; this made an Impression on the Tenderness of his Father, who was reconciled to his Son, left him his Estate, which was very considerable, and from a violent and open Enemy of the Quakers was almost become so himself before he died, if we can give any credit to his last Words, as related by the so often mentioned Latin Historian^k.

PENN soon acquired a great Power and Reputation amongst the Quakers by his Sermons and Writings. His plentiful Fortune had likewise some share in it, and the free Access he had at Court, where his bountiful and obliging Temper, joined to the publick Profession he made of Toleration, often engaged him to intercede both for his Brethren and for the Roman Catholicks. He carried this Notion of Liberty so far as to put all Christian Communions upon an equal Foot, pretending none ought to be excluded from bearing Offices in the State : A false and dangerous Opinion, says Groefius, which under colour of favouring Liberty destroyed it ! However Penn upon that Account was looked upon as an Atheist, a Jesuit, and a Papist ; to brand him only with being a Latitudinarian seemed too favourable a Censure. This Opinion of his he grounded on this Principle, that to be a good Christian, nothing more was required to be believed, than the fundamental Articles of Christian Religion ; that is, those Truths which are so clearly expressed in the sacred Scripture, as to be easily understood by each particular Person : The owning Jesus Christ to be the Saviour of the World was one of these Truths which he thought essential. Over and above that, he strongly recommended and insisted upon the Necessity of a serious Study of and faithful Compliance with moral Duties. The other Tenets of ancient and modern Quakers, which we have been able to find out, shall be mentioned in the Sequel of this Dissertation.

MUCH about the same time, the Persecution against the Quakers slackened ; and they employed that Respite, in framing the Rules and Discipline according to which they were to govern themselves : We shall present our Readers with a short Abstract of the long, tedious, and confused Account which the Latin Author gives of that Subject^l. They established Ministers and fixed Pastors ; notwithstanding the perfect Equality which they had till then affected to maintain amongst the Brotherhood ; they were at last forced to own, that in all Societies some are endowed with a more shining Merit and greater Talents than the rest, and out of these they made choice of such as seemed to them best qualified, to govern their Assemblies and keep Order amongst them. Some of these Pastors go (or at least did go when that Sect was first established) from Place to Place to instruct the Faithful, to examine the Proselytes or new Converts, &c. and are called Apostles. This high Dignity is not confined to the Men only, Women may also obtain it. Next to the Ministers, or as the Quakers express it, next to those who are in the Ministry, follows the Office of Elders, Men and Women, who by reason of the Experience they may have acquired in the Course of a long Life, are supposed to be more prudent. These help the Ministers with their Advice towards keeping up Discipline, maintaining Peace and Unity, taking care of, and providing for, those who are either poor or sick: They receive the publick Money, and are the Treasurers of that Sect.

^k Groefius, p. 288. The fourth Letter of Voltaire, concerning the English, plays very ingeniously upon Penn's Conversion to Quakerism, &c. That Letter is full of witty Turns ; but we cannot entirely rely upon the Authority of a Poet, who takes as much Liberty in relating Historical Facts, as he might do in the Incidents of a Play or Poem.

^l Groefius, lib. 2. p. 293, and following. This Author is in vogue amongst the Quakers, as to what concerns their Tenets and Discipline.

THE Ministers and Elders meet regularly, as other Protestants do, in their Presbyteries or Consistories. The above-cited Latin Historian says, that in Holland it has been proposed that every Quaker's Meeting should have its own Ecclesiastical Senate made up of married Persons of a ripe Age, who should direct the Assemblies according to some settled Laws: But this was rejected as favouring too much of a new Hierarchy, and being apt to put a Restraint upon and even destroy the Gifts of the Spirit.

BOTH Sexes have likewise more general Meetings, which may be call'd Classes, Colloquies and Synods. In those Assemblies, which are either provincial, and held every three Months; or general, and called together every Year, Censures are pronounced, Ecclesiastical Affairs reviewed, Books examined, and the most material Occurrences register'd in their Records. In England the Quakers general Meeting is fixed to the third Day after Pentecost; not out of Superstition, say they, as if they expected their Deputies should be more particularly inspired at a time when the Commemoration of the Holy Ghost's coming down upon the Apostles is celebrated, but solely out of a Principle of Regularity in meeting on a fixed Day, and at a convenient Season; and it is notorious, that the Quakers keep no Holidays, and solemnise no Festival. The Holy Ghost, the Spirit within, knows nor admits any such Distinctions. Deputies from all Quakers dispersed through the whole World, meet (or used to meet when our Author composed his History) at these Assemblies; in which there is a Secretary to register, or propose the Matters to be debated, or copy out the Decisions: But the Holy Ghost is the invisible President; and they do not admit of a visible one.

THEIR outward Exercises of Devotions may be seen in the Prints, where some are represented in a deep Meditation, others in an Extasy of Contemplation, whilst some one of them, Man or Woman, rises up either with a sedate and composed Motion, or in a kind of Transport, as if acted by an irresistible Power, and often with Sighs, Groans and Tears. This Variety of Behaviour is caused, as they pretend, by the Impression of the Spirit, which often dictates to the Man or Woman Preacher, Sermons two or three Hours long, after a deep and fullen Silence of an equal Duration has stupified those Enthusiasts. This Spiritual Lethargy, if we believe the Quakers, makes them enter into a serious Consideration of the State of their own Souls, into a deep Meditation, by means of which the Spirit prepares to itself hidden Ways to penetrate into the Hearts of the Faithful; then it breaks forth in Sermons and Exhortations, or in Prayer or Psalmody: During which, those who are not inspired to speak, remain in a State of Recollection, examine themselves, sigh and groan, and make a suitable Application of what they hear to the Circumstances in which they find their own Souls. From that inward Conflict of the Spirit against the Flesh; from the Devil's furious Assaults to keep the Mastery, proceed sometimes those bodily Motions, those Shakings and Tremblings with which the Faithful are seized, and which are now and then so universal, that as Croesus relates it^m, the whole Assembly-Room has seemed to be agitated by an ^m Croesus, lib. 2. p. 300. What he says must be compared to the Convulsions, which we shall mention in the Dissertation following.

*ASSEMBLÉE des QUAQUERS à Londres
A. Quakeress qui prêche*

*ASSEMBLÉE des QUAQUERS à Amsterdam
A. Quaker qui prêche*

P. Teyssie Sculp.

Earthquake. It has likewise happened more than once, that the Meeting was concluded without any Sermon, Exhortation or publick Prayer ; but the inward Devotion was so much less interruptedⁿ. We have mentioned something of the Quaker's Singing or Psalmody, but our Readers are desired not to imagine it to be any ways like the Singing of other Congregations ; by no means, 'tis but a kind of Humming or Buzzing proportioned to the spiritual Drowziness of that Sect.

MEDITATION, Prayer, Recollection, Contemplation, and Reading the Bible, are the chief Devotions which the Quakers use at Home ; they are longer or shorter, more or less frequent, and alternately diversified as the Spirit moves. Their Children are brought up to those Exercises from their Infancy, have a very plain and modest Education; without any Ornaments, fine Clothes, what is called a genteel Behaviour, or endeavouring to please other Men. The Quakers Dress is black; or of some plain dark Colour, somewhat like a Waistcoat, without Plaits on the Sides; without Buttons on the Pockets or Sleeves, their Hats broad-brimmed and horizontal; all the Politeness they aim at is an open frank Access, and natural easy Conversation. " They know not (says the Author of the Philosophical Letters, " Lett. first) how to draw one Leg behind the other, or to carry in their Hand " what is made to cover their Heads." If the other Customs and Tenets of the Quakers were not more singular or blame-worthy, 'twere almost to be wished all the World might turn Quakers.

THEY keep, as we said before, no Festivals ; but as every thing is done by them according to the Motion of the Spirit, they may meet on any Day ; in England and Holland they meet regularly every Sunday: They neither pray nor speak, either in publick or private, with a loud Voice, but when the Spirit within bids them. If this Spirit does not move them, they are only to think at Church, at Table, at going to Bed. This, says their Historian, has given their Enemies a Handle to accuse them of not Praying ; and of acting by Instinctⁿ, like Beasts. In England also, being obliged by reason of the Persecution to hide themselves, and for that end to meet in small close Rooms, where, by consequence, it often happened, that to prevent Faintings, those of a weak Complexion brought with them small Vinegar or Hungary-Water-Bottles to smell to ; the poor Quakers lay under the scandalous Imputation of inspiring themselves, and bringing down the Spirit by the Strength of the Liquor. Such Calumnies never wear off, and are generally made use of by ⁿ The witty Description of the Quaker's Meeting in the Philosophical Letters, is embellish'd with several Ornaments, not exactly conformable to Truth. However, as it may divert the Readers, we shall give it room in this Note ; with this Caution, of mistrusting what they find in an Italick Character.

" The Quakers have several Meeting-houses in London : I went to that which is near the Monument ; they were met when my Leader and I came in, to the number of about four hundred Men and three hundred Women ; these hid their Faces with their Fans ; the Men were hid under their broad flapping Hats ; all were sitting in a deep Silence ; and not one of them looked up at us when we passed by them. The Silence lasted about a quarter of an Hour ; when one rose, took off his Hat, and having made some wry Faces and groaned, he spoke partly with the Mouth, partly through the Nose, unintelligible Jargon, which he thought was from Scripture, but which neither he nor any body else could understand. When this Posture-Master had ended his Soliloquy, and the Assembly was dispersed with great Edification and Stupidity, I enquired of my Companion, how it came to pass that the wisest of them could bear to hear such Nonsense? We are obliged to bear it, says he, and bear every thing with Patience, because we know not whether the Person who rises will be inspired by the Holy Ghost or by Folly. We even allow the Women to speak ; and if two or three of them are inspired together, then we have a brave Noise in the House of the Lord. What then, says I, have you no Priests? No Friend, said the Quaker . . . and we find the Benefit of it . . . why should we have Hirelings . . . who in a short time would oppress us ? The rest is but a poetical Invention of his own.

^o Nunquam orare Deum & pecudum ritu proflire ad omnia. This is expressed rather too strongly and falsely, so we have softened it.

^p Groefius, p. 305.

all Parties ; they spread from the People to the Churchmen, and to keep up Party-Divisions are with Success returned back from Churchmen to the Laity.

THE Quakers set no great Value upon the Knowledge of Languages and Learning, which tho' they do not think intirely useless, yet, say they, are not necessary for the Ministry. The Spirit speaks, and truly according to their System, that Spirit wants neither Philosophy, Greek, or Hebrew, to understand the Scripture and explain it to the People : They express a great Contempt of Philosophy and Divinity, chiefly as taught in the Schools, and esteem them no otherwise than as the Inventions of Satan.

THEY likewise reject all Titles of Honour, either in the State or in the Church, and have no regard to Academical Degrees¹. All these Marks of Distinction are only apt to set up so many Masters, which the Gospel expressly forbids, we being all equally Brethren : They give the Name of Hirelings to Protestant Churchmen, upon account of the Income they receive from the Lands they possess, from Tythes, Salaries, or Pensions. And according to their System, 'tis evident they cannot approve of a Limitation in the number of Ministers, nor of that Function being appropriated to a particular Order of Men, since the Spirit within is not and cannot be confined. Moreover, they think the number of Pastors is too small to comply with all the Duties required of them ; and that there ought to be Missionaries, who might, as amongst Catholics, labour without Intermision for the Propagation of the Faith ; and are of opinion, that the present Behaviour of other Protestants in that Particular, paves the way for Antichrist.

DUTIES, Taxes, Great Salaries and Profits, all other Means employed in civil Societies, to engage Men to do their Duty, and become useful Members of the Commonwealth, by the Hope of considerable Gains, seem odious and dangerous to the Quakers, as becoming only Hirelings and Slaves to Avarice, not good Citizens, or Christians who ought to have their Duty at Heart.

WE must repeat it over again : Amongst Quakers the Spirit is free, and does not submit to Synods, nor to worldly Learning, Wisdom, or Customs : This is one of the chief and most essential Articles of their Religion. All the Members of the Church may and ought to concur to the general Good of the Body ; all may have the same Helps from the Holy Ghost, and feel the same Impressions of his Power ; all are animated and fed, like our bodily Members, by the same Efficacy and in the same Manner ; all by consequence ought to give a helping Hand to the Edification of the mystical Body, as natural Members contribute to the Welfare of human Bodies. This they apply to the Evangelical Ministry : The Spirit, say the Quakers, notifies by its Impulse what is wanting to the Church, and obliges those Members upon whom he makes that Impulse, to give a speedy Help to the mystical Body. If it should happen that out of Laziness, Neglect, or Distraction, the Persons so moved, should not be sensible of the Impulse, or not give a due Attention to the Defects of which the Members of the mystical Body are guilty ; then they ought to rouse themselves with new Fervour, and by a perfect Recollection, make a Trial of the Gifts and Power of the Spirit of Life. The Call to pastoral Functions essentially consists in this, it requires no Pomp, no Ceremony, no Improvement of the Mind, no Preparation, no Examination, nor any of the Means used in other Christian Societies to provide Churches with Pastors and Teachers. Yet if after this inward Trial any one is moved and forcibly drawn by the Spirit to engage in the Ministry ; the Ecclesiastical Council must not omit the Formality of Examining whether the Person so inspired is in Reality fit for it, and ought to be admitted to that Dignity ; the Importance of which, in regard to himself, and to the whole Church, is strongly represented to him, in a Speech or Exhortation made to that end : And in this manner the Pastors, and the Assembly of the faithful Quakers, concur with the Spirit ¹ to the Election of the new Minister, who thus is called and accepted. This Ceremony is sometimes accompanied by the Letters of other Churches and Societies of Quakers, recommending such or such to that Office. When installed, they are maintained by voluntary Contributions only, without any Settlement, Contract, or previous Agreement. Each Quaker contributes freely according to his Power, and the Minister is not to accept of their Benevolence, further than is necessary for a sober and frugal Maintenance : But if he is reduced to Poverty for want of such Contributions, it is lawful for him to leave the Congregation which he served ; he may even, according to their Historian, Shake the Dust off his Feet against that Church, as Christ ordered his Apostles to do against those who would not receive them.

¹ Voltaire above-cited, in a Dialogue with his Quaker, introduces him giving Proofs from Antiquity of Thievery and Thieving both Kings and Coblers, and of their plain Dress, to avoid the Pride, Vanity, and Corruption of the World.

² Crocius, pag. 310. Dicunt unumquodque Membrorum Christi oportere se expergescere, & experiri in se, &c.

TYTHES, which are an Income appropriated to the Church, and other Duties and Taxes levied in War-time², they at last have thought fit to pay, in order to avoid the Persecutions which they had suffered so long upon that account : But to palliate this open Breach of their antient Discipline, which is directly opposite to such Impositions, they pretend to be ignorant of, and will not inquire into the Uses to which the Money so levied is applied. This they still own to be a Fault, but unavoidable to human Frailty. They were more inflexible heretofore³, and their Enemies reproach them with their Variations on that head, as contrary to the Sincerity of the Gospel.

THOSE who are the least acquainted with the Opinions of the Quakers, cannot but know that they reject Baptism and the Lord's Supper : and all are ready to cry out as the Author of the Letters, in the fore-mentioned Dialogue, 's Death, why then you are no Christians ! The Truth is, they look upon Baptism as a Jewish Ceremony ; yet they are willing that other Christian Societies should receive it as a Token of Regeneration, of Initiation, of an Introduction to Christianity : But they pretend, that in our holy and all-spiritual Religion, outward Signs ought not to prevail upon Duty, nor a wicked Man be esteemed a Christian upon account of his being baptized ; whilst, for want of that Ceremony, another Man, who complies with all the Christian Duties, is looked upon as a Heathen. The true Baptism of Christ, say they, is the Purifying of the Soul, and that only can save Men. Their Belief concerning the Communion is also another Stumbling-block ; and upon perusing their Profession of Faith about that Article, most People are apt to repeat the Exclamation of Voltaire, and to eccho after him, What no Communion! The Quaker's Answer is, We have no Communion, but the Union of Hearts.

¹ Groefius, p. 312. Ut accitu accorsituque quasi horum veniat ac Spiritus.

² Voltaire, in the above-cited Dialogue with a Quaker (amongst his Letters concerning the English) introduces him giving this Account of the Notion they entertain about War : “ We never go to War ; not out of Fear of Death ; on the contrary, we are glad of the approaching Re-union to the Being of Beings ; but because we are Men and Christians, not Wolves, Tygers or Dogs..... We must not cross the Seas to cut the Throats of our Brethren, since God commands us to love even our Enemies....., and when there are publick Rejoicings in London for Victories obtained, we groan in private for the Murders committed by those bloody Cut-Throats clad in Red, with pointed Caps two Foot long.”

³ They would not petition for Liberty, when in Prison ; nor pay the Fines laid upon them, nor even the Jailor's Fees, calling all those Dues, the Wages of Iniquity.

WE shall not repeat here, what every one knows, and we ourselves have mentioned, of the Aversion which the Quakers, as well as all Anabaptists, have to Swearing and taking Oaths: The Author of Letters concerning the English, introduces his Quaker, expressing their Opinion on that Topick in the following manner: “ We never swear, not even in a Court of Justice; the most holy Name of God “ ought not to be thus profaned in the trivial Disputes of poor frail Mortals. We “ ourselves have no Law-Suits one against the other; but when we are obliged to “ appear before the Magistrates about the Contentions of others, we Affirm the “ Truth by a Yea or Nay, and the Judges take our Word for it; whilst so many “ Christians of other Denominations daily forswear themselves.”

MARRIAGES are contracted amongst them, with as little Ceremony as all their other Duties are performed. A Dutch Quaker, being reprov'd for the Holy Indifference which he pretended to, in paying an Homage due to Nature, gave this short Answer, 'tis enough that Necessity requires it. Nature gives the same Bent to Quakers as to all other Sects, all other Religions; but they pretend to govern its unruly Motions, and to make it act as being in them perfectly regenerate. Therefore their Youth are Christianly instructed, in whatever concerns that honourable State; they are admonish'd that it is of the highest Importance, requires a serious and strict Examination, and is not to be entered into without a nice Choice, much Reflection, and the Approbation and Consent of their Parents. When after all this, they persist in the Resolution of Marrying; they must give Notice of their Design to the Ecclesiastical Council, who make the usual Enquiries, Whether they are qualified to marry? and have the Consent of their Parents? &c. Informations are likewise taken from those who are present, to know if no Opposition is made to the Marriage intended, and on the next Sunday following they publish a kind of Ban. These Preliminaries being over, the Contract becomes valid amongst the Quakers in this Form: The Bride and Bridegroom come to the Assembly accompanied by the Friends and Relations whom they think fit to invite. There, in the Presence of the said Friends and Relations, they are desired to declare, whether they love one another, whether they are mutually willing to have each other, and are resolved to help and assist one the other. To these and such other Questions, suitable to the Occasion, the Quakers give, with all Sincerity, the usual Answers: which, with their mutual Consent, are registered in a Book kept for that Purpose. The contracting Parties set their Names to it, as also the Friends and Relations as Witnesses; which being done, the new married Couple are sent away, to obey religiously the Dictates of Nature. The Disorders, usually committed at Weddings, are, or ought to be, wholly unknown amongst Quakers. The Body being, in their System, the Vessel and Garment * of the Soul, it must be maintained and kept with Simplicity and Modesty, without Superfluity, or endeavouring to please the Senses at the Expence of the Purity of the Soul. Those Marriages of the Quakers were heretofore deemed illegal in England; but they are now tolerated, and looked upon as valid and indissoluble Contracts.

FOUR or five Days after the Birth of a Child, the Midwife, the Nurse, the Dresser, and all the Gossips which were present, are convened to give their Testimony, which is registered, and at the same time the Infant is named.

* Corpus Animæ Vas ac Vestimentum.

THEIR Obsequies are without Pomp, without Funeral Orations, all which, according to their Notions, are as opposite to Christian Simplicity, as the foolish Diversions allowed by other Christians, at the Celebration of their Marriages. “ Can any thing be more extravagant^y, than that the Friends and Relations of the Deceased, should with a sorrowful Countenance follow his Corps, and accompany it to the Grave in a Mourning Dress, and then come back to the House to drink and sometimes get drunk^z in his Honour? What contrary Proceedings are these! is it not a mere comical Farce to see their formal affected Grief, seeming in their long black Cloaks to shed Tears for the Loss of a Parent or Friend, of whose Death they are heartily glad, for the sake of the Riches he has bequeathed to them? All those Abuses are avoided by the Quakers: They carry the Dead to their Burying-Place, without Attendance, or Mourning; and content themselves with a serious Meditation on the Frailty of human Life, and mutually exhorting each other to the Practice of Virtue, and to a faithful Imitation of the Deceased, if his Example was truly worthy of being followed, &c.”

THESE are the most remarkable Customs and Opinions of the Quakers: We shall now go on to entertain our Readers with the astonishing Progress of that Sect. In the Year 1667, Keith being in Jail at Aberdeen in Scotland, published a Treatise of the immediate Revelation of Jesus Christ in Man. Penn was likewise cast into Prison upon account of a Book, which, in the Opinion of the Orthodox, destroyed the Belief of the Trinity. One Eccles, a Visionary Writer, and obstinate Fanatick, who from a Musician was become a preaching Quaker, invented a new way of gaining Profelytes. He and three more forcibly entered into an Assembly of Catholics, carrying upon his Head a Chaffing-dish full of Fire, with which he threaten'd to burn them^b (probably in this and in the next World (unless they renounced their Idolatry). He run about London-Streets with the same Fury, and at last met in Ireland with the Punishment he deserved. In the Year 1670, the Quakers were severely treated; and if the Account of that Persecution, as related by their Historian, is exactly conformable to Truth, the Persecutors are much more to be blamed than those whom they so cruelly persecuted. 'Tis very well worth Notice, that tho' the Obstinacy of the latter was as ridiculous in itself as it seems contrary to the true Spirit of Christianity; yet their Behaviour had something in it very moving, and apt to draw Compassion from the Spectators. For Instance, when they were thrust out with Violence, and all sorts of Affronts, from the Meeting-Places in which they were found assembled; they did not run away to screen themselves from the Insults of an incensed Mob; but gathered again at the Door of the House, and wilfully exposed themselves to the same Injuries and Outrages. The War of 1672 between England and Holland, brought them some Respite, and from that time (it may be said with Truth) the English accustomed themselves by degrees to bear the Sight of a Quaker.

HERE Fox, whom we have so long lost sight of, comes again upon the Stage: In 1671 he went to America, to visit all the Brethren Quakers dispersed in those Provinces of the West-Indies which are subject to England. At his Return he was again taken into Custody : My Lord Hales petition'd for and obtain'd Fox's Liberty, who made use of it, to write every where Letters of Advice and Exhortations, to gain Converts to Quakerism. He wrote to the Jews of Amsterdam, to the Roman Catholics, to the Pope himself, to the Princes of Africa, and even to the Grand Turk. But we need not give the Annals of his Fanatical Transactions ; at last he died in the beginning of the Year 1691. His Body and Mind were equally indefatigable ; the first by a strong and well-framed Constitution, the latter by Steadiness, Perseverance, and Fervency of Zeal : His Genius was no ways improved, and he naturally wanted a nice Taste and Penetration. Tho' he followed the Example of his Predecessors, the Fanatical Anabaptists, and slighted all Arts and Sciences, so as to be ignorant of their first and most common Principles ; yet upon occasion he argued with so much Subtilty and Sharpness, as obtained him the Reputation of a Man of good Sense : He was laborious, unwearied, and never feared taking too much Pains even for Trifles. His Steadiness, or rather inflexible Obstinacy, in maintaining his erroneous Opinions, and warmly espousing the Cause and Defence of his Disciples, was not to be equalled : Add to these Qualities an exemplary Patience, and Sobriety of Life. He carefully shunned all Excess and Disorder, not so much with a View of preserving his Health, as out of Duty, and a religious Principle. He joined to a great Courage an extraordinary Boldness and Presumption, was so conceited of his own Merit, that he would be present at and concerned in every thing, and thought nothing well done but what he either advised, or put himself in Execution. A feigned Modesty and Simplicity served for a Disguise to this excessive Pride, which as it made him appear meek and affable to those of his Party ; so it gave a Loose to a Holy Indignation against the rest of Mankind, chiefly those who opposed him : This indeed being to all outward Appearance a Saint-like Anger, did not allow him to offer any Injury to his Adversaries, except by Words ; but, to translate literally the Words of the Latin Historian, he hurt them by Words . . . as much as he was able^b, and in that Point he was sometimes not only imprudent, but even most shameless and impudent. At his Death the Quakers ran into Party-Divisions, his Authority had preserved Unity amongst them, and prevented Cabals. We shall see in the Sequel of this Work, that the Opinion of Keith concerning the human Nature of Christ, gave Occasion to and was the Origin of those Diffensions, which by Schism were like to dissolve and bring Destruction on the whole Sect.

^y See Croesius, p. 230.

^z Drinking at Funerals is still practised, but neither so commonly, nor to the Excess mentioned by Croesius.

^a Cæteroquin futurum ut universi igue intereant. Croesius, p. 320.

WE shall only glance here on the Conference held at London in 1674, between the Anabaptists and the Quakers. One Hick, an Anabaptist Minister, had injuriously attack'd the Quakers, laying it home to their Charge, that they were not Christians, and taxed them with teaching, that Christ is not a Person out of Man^c, but that the inward Light of every Man's Mind is Christ. This Accusation was grounded on this Saying, which is often to be met with in some Writers of the Quakers Sect, No Man has ever seen Jesus Christ with the Eyes of his Body. The Conference was held upon that Account, and if we give Credit to the Latin Historian, the Success of it was wholly to the Confusion of the Anabaptists. Two Years after Robert Barclay wrote and published the famous ^d Apology for the Quakers; which several Protestant Divines of Holland and Germany endeavoured to confute.

^b See Croesus, lib. 2. p. 385. Verbis quantum poterat, ladens, in eoque interdum non solum imprudens, sed & inverecondissimus atque impudens.

^c Christum non esse Personam, quæ sit extra hominem, at hominis cujusque lucem mentis internam Christum esse.

MUCH about the same time^e, Michael Molinos, a Spanish Priest, published in Italy, and in the Language of that Country, his Spiritual Guide, which contains the whole System of the mystical Doctrine of the Quietists. The Circumstance of the time in which Quietism began^f, and the wonderful Agreement of its Opinions with the Quakers Tenets, give us Ground to look upon both as Members of one and the same Sect; and it must be owned, that the Writings of one of the most considerable Quakers^g are so conformable to Molinos in the Turn of Thought and of the Expression, that the Difference betwixt them is almost imperceptible.

THE Persecution against the Quakers was carried on till the end of King Charles the Second's Reign. What their Historian relates upon this Article is so cruel and so odious, that it may serve to justify, at least in the Opinion of Men, the greatest Excesses which want of Toleration has produced in all other Religions. James the Second, upon his Accession to the Throne, seemed at first to incline towards a general Liberty of Conscience, with a View of favouring his own Religion, by a Method which might meet with the Approbation of, and give flattering Hopes to, all Parties. The Quakers, in their Address of Congratulation, speaking in a Style conformable to their Principles, "We hear, said they, that thou art not " in the Sentiments of the Church of England, any more than we are: We beg
" of thee the same Liberty which thou takest for thyself." This Petition had its desired Success, and the Quakers experienced the King's good Will towards a Toleration. About fifteen hundred of them, who had been confined, were set at liberty: Notwithstanding this, as several of them were again thrown into Jail, for refusing to take the Oaths, to pay Tythes, or to contribute to the Exigencies of the State; the King ordered them to be released, and would not suffer them to be molested either upon account of their Opinions, or for their Customs: So they were allowed to deal with the Sovereign, as if he had been a private Person, to stand in his Presence with their Hats upon their Heads, to Thou him, and speak to him familiarly as one of their Equals.

PENN was in great Favour with James the Second, which he made use of to serve his Sect: But as he was accused of advising the King to abolish the Test and Penal Laws; his own Party had a Mistrust of him, and he was hated by the other Protestants, all being convinced, that such a Project could have no other Tendency than to settle the Popish Religion in England. The Protestants called him a Papist and a Jesuit. The Quakers foreseeing, and fearing that the taking away the Test and Penal Laws would restore Popery, openly declared, that a Prince of that Religion, when he once found himself settled upon the English Throne, would certainly renew those Laws against all Protestants. Penn had given just Grounds to ^d It was presented to Charles the second: the Author, in the Dedication, addresses the King thus, "Thou hast tasted Sweetness and Bitterness, Prosperity and Adversity; thou hast been driven out of the Country in which now thou dost reign. Thou hast felt the Weight of Oppression, and thou knowest the Oppressor is hateful to God and Men instead of hearing the Voice of flattering Courtiers, hearken to thy own Conscience, which will never flatter thee." The Author of Letters Philosophiques says, that this Letter wrote to the King by an obscure private Man, put an end to the Persecution; but Barclay was not an obscure private Man, and the Persecution lasted to the End of King Charles's Reign.

^e See vol. i. of this Work.

^f Or rather was renewed.

^g Crocius, lib. 2. p. 350. There Keith mentions, The Influence of God on the Soul; Perseverance in Quietness, before the Soul proceeds to Activity; a Divine and Holy Life; the Spirit moving and acting in us, giving Liberty to act, ordaining or permitting the Action: Faith, like a Graft, draws all the Juice, &c. which mystical Jargon is also used by the Quietists.

entertain disadvantageous Suspicions of him. He had published a Book against Penal Laws; he had always professed an universal Toleration, by which every Christian was to be left at full Liberty to serve God according to his own way of thinking, and no Man excluded from bearing even the highest Offices and Employments in the State, upon this one only Condition, that he should behave himself peaceably and with Moderation in those Posts. Now he thought it high time to publish his own Apology, and to defend himself from the Charge of being a Papist. This convinced his Brethren the Quakers, and he regained by it their good Graces. But other Protestants in England, particularly the French Refugees, could not be persuaded to lay aside the bad Opinion they had of him; which was confirmed by a Letter which King James wrote to Penn from France, after the Revolution had been brought about by King William the third. Penn was strictly examined concerning this Correspondence: His Answer was noble^h, generous and wise: But Party-Animosity made it be looked upon in the Hurry of Spirits at that time, as a bare-faced espousing King James's Cause. And most Protestants, chiefly News and Libel-Writers, thought it no less a Crime than High Treason, to profess a Friendship for that Prince. From that time Penn retired to a more private Life, and minded only his Family Concerns till the Year 1693. Now we shall entertain our Readers with Penn's Performances in America.

LONG before his time, as early as the Year 1653, some Quakers went over to the English Colonies settled in the New World, or West-Indies; they met there with the worst of Treatment, and the severest Laws were made against them; they were fined, whipt, imprisoned, &c. If we give any Credit to their Records, they were dealt with more humanely by the savage Inhabitants, than by their own Countrymen the English. This is likely, and not to be wondered at; the Notions of those Savages were accompanied with a native Simplicity, as ours ought to be, and probably would be, if not over-burdened with the Prejudice of a wrong Education, which by imperceptible Degrees gives us a Bent to Evil, and to Persecution. Besides Fines, Banishment, and other Penalties, a new Law was made to stop the Progress of Quakerism, by which it was enacted, that every Convert to that Sect, every Person convicted of being a Quaker, should for the first Offence, if a Man, lose one of his Ears, if a Woman be whipt. At last even Death was inflicted on the more obstinate; and some Quakers were hanged at Boston. Enough of this disagreeable Subject, we must now return to Penn.

THE King and Parliament, (being willing to make him some Amends for the large Sums of Money which his Father had advanced for the Service of the Crown, and which had not been paid to him) gave him in 1680 the Property and Sovereignty of a Province in America, which lies South of Maryland. The new Owner called it from his own Name Pensilvania; peopled it with Quakers, built in it the Town of Philadelphia^k, entered into a strict Alliance with the Natives of the Country, gave Laws to his new Republick, and settled, as we shall see, a Toleration and ^la Christian Liberty, which promotes and keeps up Christianity and a true Sense of Religion, far better than Penal Laws, provided Libertinism is not tolerated under the specious Pretence of Liberty. “ He declared that all those (who acknow-

^h He declared that he had no Share in King James's Designs, but owned himself to be a Friend of that Prince, whom he had loved in his Prosperity, and did not think himself obliged to hate in his Adversity.

ⁱ The Capital Town of that Province was so named to be a standing Monument of the Union and Brotherly Love of the Sect.

^k Croesus, lib. 3. p. 439.

“ ledged One God, Almighty, the Creator and Preserver of the World, and testified
 “ this their Belief by serving faithfully that supreme Being, and exactly comply“ ing with the Rules of Virtue, which alone can enable Man to approach, and “ become in some measure like unto his Creator) should enjoy an entire Freedom, “ should never be forced to the Observance of any Religious Ceremony, against “ the Dictates of their own Consciences, nor required to be present at a Form of “ Worship which they disliked ; and that if any one molested any ways his Fellow-“ Citizen upon account of Religion, he should be punished as a seditious Person, “ and a Disturber of the publick Tranquillity.” So just a Law put a Stop to both Hypocrisy and Profaneness, and left no Room for Ecclesiastical Factions, which have so often forwarded the Ruin of great Empires. Not satisfied with so general a Toleration of all Sects and Religions, and with requiring nothing more of those who had a Mind to settle in his Republick, than to believe in God ; he even allowed them to bear any Offices, and enjoy the highest Posts in the State ; tho’ at the same time the Quakers could scarce ever fail of being chosen, more by Reason of their superior Numbers, than by Solicitations of Party-Interest ; which is quite opposite, says their Historian, to the Simplicity and Plain-dealing of Quakerism.
 This Author seems to suppose, that such good Dispositions are unchangeable, that those Laws never have, nor ever can admit of Exceptions, or be infringed ; but we are ignorant of those Privileges, and dare not warrant that any State can for some Ages preserve this primitive Simplicity : On the contrary, a Doubt proposed in a disagreeable Manner, a new and unexpected way of solving that Doubt, may easily occasion the Loss of it ; and this was very near being brought about, as may be seen in the following Account. This new Republick was scarce settled, when *Keith*¹ occasioned in it very warm Debates, which divided the Pennsylvanians into different Parties. The Matter in Dispute was Keith’s Opinion concerning the human Nature of Christ, which, he pretended, was twofold, the one Heavenly, Spiritual and Eternal ; the other Earthly and truly Corporal. This last was the Body of Christ born of the Virgin Mary. We have already mentioned a Book published by Keith, in which he endeavoured to prove the Truth of this Paradox, which seemed to make a double Christ ; at least this was objected to Keith by his Adversaries. He maintained on the other Side that his Sentiments had been constantly taught by all Quakers from the first Origin of the Sect ; that it was the Ground-work and Support of Christianity, and that the Truth and Orthodoxy of it could not be questioned, without denying the Passion and Death of Christ : He even threatened a Separation from those who opposed him in it. Those who had declared themselves against Keith were also at Variance amongst themselves : Some held that Christ did not rise from the Dead, or go up into Heaven with that Body which was born of Mary ; others owned that Christ rose from Death with that Body, but left it at his Ascension : Most remained in Suspence, and, as their Historian says, either knew not what they said^m, or what they should have said. Those who were more moderate were of opinion, that such Questions were of no great Importance, and useless to Salvation. These vain Enquiries brought on others full as vain. They thought fit to embroil themselves in new Quarrels about the State of Souls after Death ;
 several maintained that the Good went immediately to Heaven, and the Bad to Hell :

¹ Croesus, p. 446, and following.

^m Neque quid dicerent, cognoscebant. This will bear the two Senses as above.

Their Adversaries objected, that it followed from thence, that both were judged as soon as dead, and that by Consequence there was to be no Resurrection of the Flesh, nor an universal Judgment. Other Quakers held that Mankind had Heaven and Hell within them in this Life. Moreover, Keith was accused of believing the Transfiguration of Souls. These frivolous Questions were debated with much Heat, Bitterness and Obstinacy; and at last became the chief Object of a general Assembly of the Quakers in 1691. Keith got the Victory, his Doctrine concerning Christ was declared orthodox; but he was soon after obliged to fight new Battles, and bear new Assaults. Fitzwater accused him of teaching, that the Light of Christ was not sufficient for Mankind: Those, who by order of the general Assembly, were to give him Satisfaction, and make him some Reparation, refused to comply, and persisted in their old Sentiments, and at last obtained a Revision of the Decision made in the Assembly of 1691. This was done in the Meeting of 1692, in which the Intrigues of Keith's Enemies prevailed; he was condemned, without being heard, and dealt with as one who has not the Fear of God. This unwarrantable Proceeding was accompanied with other Circumstances, which we omit, and which obliged Keith and his Adherents to appealⁿ from that Sentence to the King and Queen^o of England. The Appeal did not take place, Keith gave way to the repeated Solicitations of his Friends who intreated him to yield, and prevent a greater Breach. The Quakers of London were soon apprised of those Dissensions by Keith himself, who was returned from America; and notwithstanding all possible Precautions were used to prevent the Contagion of those Disputes from spreading farther, yet the English Quakers were likewise divided into two Factions. A new Profession of Faith was drawn up, the yearly General Assembly was called; but those two Grand Remedies, which in all Communions are applied to Ecclesiastical Dissensions, proved fruitless amongst the Quakers, as they often do elsewhere. Three Synods one after another examined the controverted Points; their Endeavours to reconcile both Parties were unsuccessful. At last, in the Assembly of 1695, it was determined that Keith (who was as stubborn in the Defence of his Conduct, and of his Doctrine, as explained in the Course of those Disputes, as his Enemies had been in carping at his Expressions) should no more be looked upon as a Brother, but declared guilty of Schism, and remain in a State of Separation and Exclusion from the Society of Quakers, till such time as he should publicly own his Fault, and sincerely repent.

THESE are the most material Occurrences which we could gather concerning the Growth of Quakerism in the English Dominions. The Author of Lettres Philosophiques says, that “the Religion of the Quakers..... daily loses Ground in London: In all Countries the predominant Religion, if it abstains from Persecution, swallows up all others..... They are obliged to get Money by Trade. Their Children grown rich by the Industry of their Parents, are desirous of enjoying their Fortune, of obtaining Honours and Preferments, and of being better dressed; they grow ashamed of the Denomination of Quakers, and become modish Protestants.” If this Account proves true, some other Sect may rise in their Stead, which may ⁿ In the Grant of Pennsylvania, Charles the Second had reserved to the Crown the Right of judging without Appeal, whatever Causes could not be decided by the Colony, or were not decided to the Satisfaction of all Parties concerned.

^o William and Mary.

make the Loss of the Quakers regretted, and that said of them one Day which the Emperor Galba said of Nero ^p.

THE ^q Author of Memoirs and Observations, &c. mentions a Sect of Philadelphians^r, “ who pretend that their Society is the Bud or Shoot and Beginning of the true Church, the Virgin-Spouse of Christ, whose Members dispersed amongst all other Religions in the World, will soon come forth and join themselves to the Philadelphians, to form this pure and undefiled Church, according to the Pattern set them in the beginning of Christianity by the Church of Philadelphia” The said Writer says these Philadelphians are generally thought to be Quakers.

THE Compilers of Catalogues of Sectaries have made mention of Muggletonians and Reevians; this is what they mean. Two Fanatical Quakers or Anabaptists about the Year 1653 or 1654. took it in their Heads to publish in London that they were the two last Prophets of Our Lord Jesus Christ, named and sent by him to prepare Mankind for his Coming with his Angels and ten thousand Saints, &c. They had a few Followers, and arrived at so great a Pitch of Impudence, as to forbid the English Clergy to exercise any pastoral Function, under pain of eternal Damnation.

STOUPPE, who wrote a small Pamphlet under the Title of Dutch Religion, mentions also a Sect of Borrellists: We very much doubt whether there are any Remains of it still subsisting. We dare not even take it upon us to affirm, that the Account given by him is true; he had been a Minister^s, being converted was raised to the Post of a General Officer in the French Army: besides this his shifting Sides, he is guilty of two considerable Faults as an Historian, a great Inveracity against the Hollanders, and a great Negligence or Ignorance, if not something worse, in the Accounts he gives of the Heresies in Holland. However “ the Borrellists^t, says he, had their Appellation from their chief Leader one Borelle^u, a “ Man very well versed in the Hebrew, Greek and Latin Languages. He was “ Brother to Mr. Borel, Ambassador from the States of Holland, at the Court of “ Levis the fourteenth. The Borrellists hold most of the Opinions of the Menno- “ nites, though they do not frequent their Assemblies; their way of living is very “ severe, spending most of their Substance in Alms-Deeds, and strictly complying “ with Christian Duties. They are very averse to communicating with other “ Congregations, to the use of the Sacraments, publick Service, or any other “ exteriour Acts of Divine Worship! They maintain, that all the Churches which “ are now in the World, or have been since the Apostles have lost the “ Purity of sound Doctrine having suffered the Word of God which “ is contain’d in the Old and New Testament, to be explained, or rather cor- “ rupted, by Doctors who are not infallible; yet pretend that their Profession of “ Faith, their Catechisms; Liturgies and Sermons, are the pure Word of God, “ which is very false, they being only the Produce of human Wit and Industry. “ They maintain, that the Word of God must be read by itself, without any In- “ terpretation of Men; if there was any Communion, in which nothing was read “ but the Word of God, all those who own the Scripture to be the Word of God, “ should be admitted into that Society, let their Character, and other good or bad

^p Nero a pessimo quoque semper desiderabitur providendum est ne etiam a bonis desideretur. Tacit. Hist. lib. 1.

^q P. 369 and following; he wrote in 1697. These Notions are like those of the Rosicrucians.

^r Revel. chap. 3. v. 7. and following.

^s He was killed at the Battle of Steinkirk in 1692.

^t He spells Borellists and Borelle, instead of Boreel. This Family of the Boreels has filled with Reputation the highest Posts in the State.

^u We believe his Name was Adam Boreel.

“Qualities be what they would.” Two things are to be taken Notice of concerning this real or pretended Sect; first, that these Opinions about the Corruption of all Churches, the Uselessness of Sacraments, &c. seems to be no more than an ill-contrived Mixture, of the Brownists, Anabaptists, and Quakers Notions, jumbled together by Stouppe himself, or by those who furnished him with Memoirs. Secondly, that the chief, if not the only, Heresy, which can with Truth be charged upon upon Borel, is what he maintained in the Year 1645. viz. that the Word of God contained the Old and New Testament^x, ought not to be explained or preached, but only read. This being, in his way of thinking, an infallible Method to put an end to and prevent all Schisms; from which erroneous Opinion, an Infinity of mad Consequences have been drawn; a plentiful Harvest for such Authors as Stouppe, Jovet, Rejs, Prateolus, and others who may come after them!

FOX the Founder and Patriarch of the Quakers sent Missionaries into Holland^y; they settled in several Towns of the united Provinces; from thence they penetrated into Westphalia, and the Princess Palatine Elizabeth, being in that Country, was pleased to hear them preach^z. One Ames began a Settlement at Amsterdam, at Rotterdam, and in other Places. They behaved as in England. Having^a received an Order to withdraw from thence, they would not obey, but staid; they were forbid to preach, and sent to Prison. As soon as they were set at Liberty, they preached openly in the publick Places; if they were banished from a Town over Night, early next Morning they came into it again: They met every where with the like Treatment, were thrown into Jail, or confined to Mad-houses; at last they settled, and by their strange Behaviour or Obstinacy forced the Magistrates to tolerate or rather despise them. Quakerism remained in this low Situation till about the Year 1664; at which time, much to their Prejudice, they were confounded with the Socinians. But this Cloud^b being dispersed, the Sect fixed itself, and held some Rank amongst the many others which swarm in that Country: This happened about 1669. At the Beginning of the War with France in 1672, they settled in Friesland; from thence they proceeded to East-Friesland, and began to make a Settlement at Emden in 1674; but the same Persecutions which they had met with in other Places, attended them likewise in that Town: In short, they made little or no Progress in Germany, or in the^c Palatinate.

THE Quakers made some Attempts on the Side of France: Two of their Missionaries began to dogmatize at Dunkirk, a third did the same at Calais, a fourth went further into that Country. The three first thought fit to retire with some Haste, from a Country where Fanaticks are punished like State-Criminals; the fourth probably perished, having never been heard of since^d. From that time we meet

^x See Ottii Annal. Anab. Ann. 1645.

^y The first Missionaries went over in 1655.

^z The Author of Lettres Philosophiques says, that the Friends (so the Quakers call themselves) had an Audience of the Princess at the Hague. Fox sent to her two Female Quakers, who had some Conference with her Highness; who answered Fox with great Civility, and sent him Word, that she was willing to hear his Advice, and of the she Friends. Penn likewise had some Discourse with the Princess.

^a This happened to the Quakers at Amsterdam.

^b The States had published a Decree against the Socinians, &c. The Synods of Holland endeavoured to see it executed. The States of Friesland had likewise put out an Edict against the Socinians, the Quakers, and the Anabaptists: These last were known then in England by the Name of Dippers.

^c The Quakers are distinguished in Germany from the Anabaptists only as the Species from the Genus, not without some Foundation, as is evident by comparing their Doctrine. See Ottii Annal. Anabapt.

^d During the War which followed the Revolution of 1688, a Female Quaker, named Esther Bidley, took it into her Head to go, as being sent from God, and exhort to Peace all the Powers then at War. She addressed first Mary, King William's Queen. That Princess had the Goodness to hearken to this pretended Ambassadors's Representations; who being thus encouraged, her Zeal or Fanaticism was raised to such a Pitch, meet with no other Sect which bears any Resemblance to Quakerism, except the Prophets of Dauphiné, and Fanaticks of Cevennes: to which some are willing to add, the Convulsions of St. Medard, occasioned by the Honour paid to Mr. Paris a Deacon, who died in the Odour of Sanctity, in May 1727. The Disputes on that Head run so high in France, that being at so great a Distance, we are not yet willing to take any Share in them. But we may safely rank in that Order the French Prophets of London, who have since been dispersed in Amsterdam, Berlin and other Places from which they have been banished. But before we give an Account of them, we must present our Readers with a regular System of the Quakers Doctrine.

The BELIEF of the QUAKERS.

IT is not an easy Task to draw up an entire System or Body of the Quakers Doctrine: and we shall soon find the same Difficulty in what concerns the Anabaptists. The Quakers Teachers are not all of the same Opinions; one and the same Man varies in his Notions, their Expressions are so dark and mysterious, that like the Alchymists Language, they are unintelligible even to themselves; in which case they cannot make themselves be understood by others. Nevertheless, we shall attempt an Exposition of their Faith, as delivered by a modern Author^d.

EVERY one who leads a moral Life, and from the Sincerity of his Heart complies with the Duties of natural Religion, must be deemed an essentially good Christian. An Historical Faith and Belief of some extraordinary Facts, which the Christians own for Truths, is the only real Difference between a virtuous Pagan and a good Christian, and this Faith is not necessary to Salvation.

CHRIST is the true inward Light, which enlightens all Men. This is performed by an immediate Inspiration, and not by the outward Doctrine of the Gospel, which Christ has preached to Men as a Rule of their Belief and Practice. Which outward Preaching of Evangelical Truths, is not the usual and ordinary Method used by God to enlighten Mankind; but he sends to each Person interior Inspirations. This Pitch, that she begged of the Queen to furnish her with Means to go over to France, being resolved, she said, to present her self to the King of that Country, in order to make the like Remonstrances to him from God. The Queen endeavoured to dissuade her from that rash Design; but not being able to overcome her Obstinacy, was pleased to yield to her Desires, and to bestow on her some Money towards defraying the Expences of her Journey. With this Help our Ambassadors reached St. Germans, had an Audience of King James the Second, shewed him her Credentials for Lewis the fourteenth, the Contents of which were, "That by the Order of God, Sovereign Monarch of all Monarchs, she came to Lewis the Fourteenth, to desire him to make Peace with God and other Nations, and by "that Method to put a Stop "to the Effusion of Blood, which was daily spilt in such Streams as threatened Destruction to Mankind." James was not unacquainted with this female Quaker, who had before presented to him such Petitions: He sent her to the Duke of Orleans, Lewis's Brother, who gave her to understand, that she could not see the King: To which she answered, with Tears in her Eyes, "I daily converse with the King of Kings; "shall I then be denied Audience for a Moment by the King of one single Nation!" However Lewis hearing of this, was desirous to see this extraordinary Person, and gave her Audience in Presence of his whole Court; and having heard patiently what she had to say, told her, "Good Woman, I desire Peace "as much as you do; go to the Prince of Orange, and tell him he may have it when he pleases." He dismissed her with this Answer, and ordered a Sum of Money to be paid to her for her Journey homewards. We cannot help taking notice, that great Revolutions in Church or State are always favourable to Fanaticism, and there are more pretended Prophecies and Inspirations at those Times than at any other. Such was the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes, the French Protestants being Refugees, the English Revolution of 1688. What a Number of Prophets swarmed on those Occasions! How many shewed so much Favour to them, as to look upon their Opposers as so many Spies, Jesuits, and Apostates? But what is still more surprising, all these Prophets still loved Egypt, desired and hoped to return thither, the Manna of the Desert was less agreeable to them than the Onions of Egypt.

^d Smith, in his Preservative against Quakerism. See likewise Croesus, p. 113, and following, of his Hist. Quaker.

interiour Light is the true Gospel, it is to be adored as being Christ himself and God himself.

SCRIPTURE is not the true Rule, the real Guide of Christian Faith and moral Doctrine: This is a Prerogative belonging only to the inward Light, which each has within himself, or which breaks forth in the Assemblies of the Brethren or Friends (as the Quakers are called in Holland.) The Dead Letter of the sacred Writings is not of so great Authority as the Preaching of the Authors of them: The particular Books which make up the Scripture, were directed to private Churches or Persons, and we are not interested in them.

THE publishing of the Gospel has not abolished immediate Inspiration: As there are many particular Cases, which cannot be decided by Scripture, it necessarily follows, that the Light within is the true and only Rule by which Mankind is to be governed and directed. We must not judge of the Certainty of Revelations by Scripture, but each Faithful must have an immediate Inspiration; and we are not obliged to comply with the Precepts of the Gospel, unless they are confirmed by this Inspiration.

THE chief Rule of our Faith is the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost, who interiorly teaches us; and the Scripture is only a Rule subordinate to that Spirit. An immediate Inspiration is as necessary to us as to the Apostles: It teaches us whatever is necessary to Salvation. The Promise which Christ made to his Apostles to teach them all Truth by his Spirit, and that the Holy Ghost should always remain with them, was not confined to the Apostles only, it belongs to all the Faithful; and 'tis said of them all, that the Unction shall teach them all things.

AN immediate Conversation with God is much to be preferred to a mediate one. The Pleasure and Satisfaction which we enjoy in our Assemblies at the Manifestation of the Spirit, is a certain Proof of his dwelling within us.

THE interiour Witnessing of the Spirit, is the most certain Proof of the Truth of Christianity, and of the Divine Authority of Scripture: Tho' other exterior Proofs of those Truths be ever so strong, still this Testimony is necessary, and the Scripture cannot be understood without it; but Recourse must be had to the Spirit alone, in order to penetrate into the dark Mysteries contained in those sacred Books.

ALL true Ministers of Christ are as infallible in what they teach, as the 'Prophets and Apostles were: otherwise the Spirit of Christ would not be infallible. All those who are filled with the Gifts of the Spirit are equally infallible, without which the Infallibility of the Holy Ghost must be divided; there is no exterior way of Teaching, which may help one to judge of the Truth of the Doctrine which he preaches. The immediate Inspiration is sufficient to enable a Minister

* Wyeth, in his Book intituled, Switch for the Snake, asserts these Propositions: The Light within is always communicated to the Ministers of the Quakers in a supernatural Manner, which raises them to Prophecy and Visions: God is made manifest to his Children, in the highest Degree of immediate Revelation; by virtue of which Privilege, the Ministers receive the Gospel, or the Word of God, as St. Paul, immediately from Christ: Those who are not infallible have not the Spirit; or Word for Word as he expresses it, are not in the Spirit: and by consequence, are not the true Ministers. Each true Member of the true Church, enjoys a Certainty and Infallibility of Judgment, by which he is absolutely convinced of the Truths he professes. All the Members of Christ's Church have some Share of the Spirit of Christ: the smallest Share of that Spirit, the least Manifestation of it (or the Light within) is infallible. Yet the Infallibility of the Church as a Body is greater. Who can reconcile such jarring Notions? which we meet with sometimes, tho' not always in the same Writer.

* Yet they own the sacred and inspired Writers had a clearer Manifestation of the Spirit than the Quakers of these Days. More Contradiction still! they nevertheless pretend, that those who by their Obedience increase and improve their Talent, may obtain the Spirit in the same Degree for the reading and explaining Scripture, as the Apostles and Prophets had to write it.

to preach without Scripture, or any other exterior Helps. Without this particular Inspiration, all those who pretend to argue upon or explain the Words of Christ, are false Prophets and Deceivers, The Church ought to have no other Ministers, but those who are called by an immediate Inspiration, which is best proved by interior Miracles, of which the outward Signs were only a Representation or Figure. The Quakers do not preach a new Gospel, and therefore need not work Miracles to prove their Doctrine: a visible Succession of Ministers ordained, or otherwise established, is likewise of no Use. Whoever is inwardly called to the ministerial Functions, is sufficiently qualified for that Post; inward Sanctity is as essentially requisite in a true Minister, as in a true Member of the Church.

SOME Jews, Turks and Pagans^z, may be true Members of the Church, though they are out of its exterior Communion, and have not the least Knowledge of Christ or of Scripture. 'Tis an insufferable Pride in the Ministers to affect being called Clergy. This Appellation belongs to every Christian; he is an unfaithful Minister, who preaches only the outward Christ, instead of preaching Christ who is within us, and endeavouring to make the People sensible of his Presence.

WOMEN may preach with as much Authority as Men, and be Ministers of the Church; for in Christ there is no Distinction of Male and Female, and the Prophet Joel has foretold, that Women should have the Gift of Prophecy as well as Men.

'Tis a Dishonour to the Ministry of the Gospel, 'tis degrading it to Mechanism, to settle Salaries and Pensions for the Maintenance of the Ministers, who afterwards exact them as a Debt. Paying Tythes is a Judaical Practice, and a Mark of Antichrist. He is a false Prophet, and condemned by Christ, who gets a Salary for performing Ministerial Functions.

THE Scripture no where says, that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, are three Persons; there are three divers Manifestations; but three Persons would in Reality be three Gods. The Scripture being silent as to the manner of the Unity, and of the Distinction in the Trinity, 'tis a great Rashness in the Christian Churches to meddle with deciding such intricate Points^h. The Distinction of Persons in the Godhead is a speculative Subtily, no ways to mend our Lives, and very prejudicial to Christian Peace and Charity. To draw up an exact Profession of Faith, 'tis necessary to stick close to the Expressions used in Scripture.

THE true Christ is he who existed before he was manifested in the Flesh, and who has never been seen with the Eyes of the Flesh. Jesus Christ as God has a heavenly Humanity, of which the earthly one is but the outward Garment, the Type or Figure. Jesus Christ, the Word and Son of God, did not personally unite himself to our human Nature, he only took it as a Suit of Clothes, which he was to put on for a while. This human Nature was inspired, as other Men, but in a superiour and more particular Degree. Christ could not be united to a corrupt Nature: his interior Birth within Men, is a greater Mystery than his outward Nativity. The Faith in and the Knowledge of Christ, according to the Flesh, and of his Mysteries, were but the first Elements fit for the Infancy of Christianity, which being over, those Rudiments become useless; we now have learned to ^z Long before there were any Quakers in the World, some Authors have been of opinion, that the Pagans had by Tradition a general (even an inward) Light: which whoever followed, might be saved by this Light, which supplied the Want of Revelation. But how can this be reconciled to this favourite and flattering Notion, that there is but one People chosen and beloved by God, exclusively of all others?

^h This is a Proof that many Arians, Socinians and Antitrinitarians, are concealed amongst the Quakers.

be in Christ, to become new Creatures, to let old things pass away in order to make room for the new.

THE Expiation of our Sins has not been merited by the outward Spilling of Christ's Blood, which was not more precious than that of any other Saint : Neither has the Church been redeemed by it, but by an inward and spiritual Blood, which purifies our Hearts and Consciences, of which the Scripture says, it was spilt for our Justification ; lastly, of which Christ himself says, that he who does not drink his Blood shall not have Life in him.

THE Scripture does not say that Christ satisfied the Justice of God for our Sins. As God may without any Injustice forgive our Sins without such a Satisfaction, it was not necessary, neither can it be reconciled with the gratuitous Remission of our Sins : and moreover, God's punishing his own Son who was innocent, is contrary to divine Justice.

CHRIST did not go up to Heaven with the Body which he had on Earth, which is not now in Heaven at the Right Hand of God. 'Tis an erroneous Opinion to think or believe that the Body of Christ which is in Heaven, occupies and fills any particular and limited Place : The Body of Christ is wherever his Spirit is ; and it cannot save us, if Distance of Place separates it from us : whoever preaches a Doctrine opposite to these Propositions, is a false Minister, and deceitful Teacher, The same Gift of Discernment in the Examen of Spirits, which was bestowed on the Apostles, remains still in the Church.

OUR Sins being once forgiven, it is wholly unnecessary to repent of them any further, or to go on in asking Forgiveness for them. We cannot become God's Servants unless we are first purified. The first Anabaptists were of the same Opinion, as we shall see in the Sequel of this Work.

GOD accepts not the Justice of any one, till he has first fulfilled all the Law and Justice. 'Tis possible to attain the Perfection of Justice, so as to commit no Sin ; and to live without any Sin is a necessary Condition to be saved. There are no Grounds in Scripture to make a Distinction of two sorts of Sins, and of Sinners. Lastly, God not only requires that we should abstain from Sin, and become exempt from it by our Endeavours ; he further requires such a perfect Knowledge and Grace, as may not admit of any Increase.

ANY Oath, even in a Court of Justice, is a Sin ; Christ has forbid it.

WAR is not lawful, nor to repel Force by Force : This is the Meaning of Christ's Precept, not to resist Evil.

ALL Killing of Men, even in War, is opposite to the Command of loving our Enemies : Titles of Honour, and Distinctions which denote some particular Respect, taking the Hat off the Head, or bowing to testify this Respect, are unlawful. The Command of honouring Father and Mother is to be explained of an inward Respect only. We ought not to conform to the Fashions of the World, and to take or give the Title of *You*ⁱ is contrary both to Humility and Truth.

No one is obliged to be of the Communion of the Church by Law established. Scripture ought not to be called the Word of God. This Appellation belongs only to Christ.

GOD has not commanded that Scripture should be read in publick divine Service. Ministers have no Grounds or Authority to preach on the Texts of Scripture ; and St. Paul says himself, that he is not a Minister of the Letter, but of the Spirit.

ⁱ The Holy Spirit enjoins us, says Wyeth, to use Thee and Thou, or the plain Language.

GOD imprints his Laws in the Hearts of the Faithful, either by an immediate Inspiration, or by the Ministry of those who are inspired immediately. Some Persons attain to so high a Degree of Knowledge and Faith, that the Ministry and exteriour Laws are of no Use to them.

ALL outward Prayers, or such as are accompanied with exteriour Signs^k, are not pleasing to God, unless they are the Effect of an immediate Inspiration from him. There is no Necessity of setting a particular determinate time for publick or private Prayers, for either Morning or Evening. Man always acts by an Impulse stronger or weaker, which induces him to pray inwardly : And this is the true Meaning of those Texts of Scripture which forbid Praying or Preaching without a particular Motion from God : From whence it follows, that Silence is to be kept in publick Assemblies, when no body present feels that Motion. The Christians of our Days, as the Prophets and the Apostles heretofore, have peculiar Inspirations by which they are disposed to pray ; so that all Set-Forms of Prayer, are not compatible with the Motions of the Spirit. The true Sense of the Order which Christ has given us to watch for Prayer, is that we must expect the Motion of the Spirit, the fore-mentioned Impulse ; which if we do not feel, we need not pray before, or after Meals.

OUR Prayers ought not to be offered to God in the Name of Jesus the Son of Mary, nor to Jesus Christ corporally and exteriourly residing in Heaven ; in a word, all outward Signs of Veneration and Respect in the publick Worship, is contrary to the Precept of honouring and adoring God in Spirit and Truth.

OUTWARD Baptism is not an Ordinance of Christ, or at least not to be observed as a perpetual Law. Whoever pretends that Christ's Order is to be understood of Water-Baptism adds to the Text, which does not mention Water. The Baptism enjoined by Christ is a Baptism of Spirit not of Water. The Water-Baptism was St. John's, and has been abolished. St. Paul says he was not sent to baptise, but to preach. Water-Baptism was used by the Apostles only as a Toleration for the Weakness of the Jews, but it can do no good to the Soul. Baptism by Infusion is no where mentioned in Scripture. Water-Baptism, and the spiritual Baptism, are two intirely different Baptisms. The inward Baptism alone is the true Baptism of Christ.

CHILDREN ought not to be baptised, since they are not capable of taking any Engagement upon themselves, or of making a Profession of Faith, or of answering to God according to the Testimony of a good Conscience.

TAKING or receiving the Eucharist is not a perpetual Obligation ; it was instituted heretofore only for those who were newly converted to the Christian Religion, or for weak Christians in the Beginning of their Christianity.

If we find within ourselves, what is signified by Baptism, by the Bread and Wine of the Eucharist, both these Sacraments become useless to us. The Gospel being the Substance of Religion, all exteriour Rites are but Shadows, which are of no use to those who have the Substance. Those who pretend to be immediately inspired, are not obliged to conform to the Institution of Baptism, the Eucharist, and their outward Ceremonies and Signs. These Words of the Apostle St. Paul, The Bread which we break, and the Wine which we drink, are the Communion of the Body and Blood of Christ, are not meant of the Eucharist. The Commemoration of ^k The Quakers say likewise, that to practise any Command of Scripture without the Moving of the Spirit, is an Abomination to the Lord.

the Death of Christ may and ought to be made at all times, without partaking of the Eucharist, by which not the Earthly Body and Blood of Christ is given us, but his Heavenly Body, which alone communicates Life unto Men.

THE eternal Happiness of the Soul is not to consist in its Re-union to the Body: the Resurrection of which cannot help to increase the Happiness or Misery of Men.

WHAT is said of the Raising of the Dead to Life, is not to be always understood of the Resurrection of the Body. The Apostle calls them Fools, who are too inquisitive into the Nature of the Resurrection.

THE Body which is to rise again will not be substantially the same: for Flesh and Blood shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. The Belief of the Resurrection of the Body substantially the same, is not a fundamental Article of Christian Faith. A Body which changes cannot be the same in Substance: but be that as it will, it is not of great Importance to believe the Resurrection of the same Body, so we believe that we shall rise again with a Body. Neither is it to our Purpose to know when that shall happen.

BESIDES the Coming of Christ in the Flesh at Jerusalem, he will come again at the end of the World.

HEAVEN is the Presence of God within Men: Christ himself says his Kingdom is within us.

HE is strangely and foolishly fanciful, who believes that the Heaven of God and his Saints is a visible and material Place, that we shall live there as we do here, or that Heaven bears any Resemblance with this visible World.

THERE is no Harm, much less is it a Heresy, to deny that Heaven and Hell are a Space, or particular Place: By the word Heaven something spiritual is to be understood.

TO the above-mentioned Account of the Belief of Quakers, which we have extracted out of the Preservative against Quakerism, we must add the following Tenets, which we shall recite after Wyeth and other Authors, not much known except amongst the Quakers.

WE must have new Revelations to justify our being governed by old ones.

THE Soul is a Portion of the Godhead; so says Fox the Quakers Patriarch. The Authors who wrote after him have endeavoured to defend that Expression, by explaining it¹ of the close and intimate Union of the Soul with God, by which it becomes in some measure a Part of his divine Essence.

'TIS an absurd Notion to think, that the Happiness of the Saints is imperfect in the State of Separation of the Body from the Soul, and that the Felicity of the Soul depends on that of the Body.

CHRIST^m, that is the Heavenly Body, or the ⁿ Spiritual Body of Christ, different from that with which he was manifested to the World, rises again in Men by the Means of their Conversion: Their Sins on the contrary run it through, tear it, and crucify it; their Crimes and Rebellion against God kill it, or rather this Death is only a profound Lethargy, for the Light within is never quite extinguished.

¹ Some Quakers, chiefly Keith, seem to confound the Light within, or Christ within, with the Soul. But the most moderate pretend, this has been laid to the Charge of their Brethren, for want of understanding their mystical and hyperbolical Expressions. Andr. Asalpin, a Philosopher of the 16th Age, has also believed, as some Ancients had done before him, that the Soul of Man is a Portion of the Godhead.

^m This and the following Article represent the Doctrine of Keith above-mentioned.

ⁿ The Quakers use both these Expressions.

THE ⁿ spiritual Body of Christ is at all times the Food of the Faithful, who never ceases to eat the Flesh of Christ, or to drink his Blood.

To these two Principles openly professed by Keith, we must join a third, viz. The Transmigration of Souls, which, tho' not publicly owned, yet seems to be a favourite Opinion of Keith and his Adherents. The Purport of it is as follows : All Souls are created, and dwell in another World before they are united to Bodies ; after which Union four thousand Years are required for their Purification, which disposes and prepares them for eternal Happiness. On the contrary, their Abusing the divine Patience brings upon them long and grievous Punishments, which they are to suffer at the end of the World. The Soul is to undergo twelve Revolutions in the Space of these four thousand Years ; that is, must return twelve times into the same Body : Each Revolution happens at the end of three hundred and thirty three Years and four Months. Some extraordinary Souls are purified in the first Revolution, or in the second : The Souls remain in the same State, and are no ways improved whilst they are separated from their Bodies. Those who have undergone some such Revolutions before the Death of Christ, born of the Virgin Mary, and were not then saved, may obtain that Happiness under the Gospel Dispensation, when they come again into a Body. But the Souls which have been united to Bodies since the Death of Christ, or shall be so united till the end of the World, without knowing any thing of the Gospel, in their several Revolutions, shall all together and in the same Place undergo a final Revolution, and then they shall hear the Voice of the Gospel, and be saved if they believe.

THE Saints coming again to dwell upon Earth, is the first Resurrection, or the Reign of a thousand Years, during which they shall live together without Sin, as Adam in the State of Innocence. At the second Resurrection the Saints will be made like unto the second Adam ; and what may remain in them belonging to Earth shall be consumed or swallowed up by the Heavenly Bodies which they shall then put on. The Happiness of the Just shall be everlasting ; but the Punishment of the Wicked is to be limited.

HERE it must be observed, that some Quakers, and even some Divines of the Church of England, have brought again upon the Stage the Opinion of Plato's Disciples, concerning the perpetual Duration of the Passions, and unlawful Desires of the Wicked after this Life. Their Souls, say they, will preserve and keep in the next World the ill Habits contracted in this, and remain guilty of the Corruption by which it has defaced in itself the Image and Resemblance of God. This perpetual Duration of Passions and Desires which it will not be possible to satisfy, will be to such a Soul, the Worm which dies not, and the Hell Fire which is never extinguished. Like Tantalus, it will always have the Object of its Desires in Sight, and within Reach, and yet never be able to attain it. One of the Furies, or rather that Soul's Despair, when in that State, shall always increase this Fire of Concupiscence, which will burn it without ever consuming it, that is without ever satisfying it. Virgil has finely described the Punishment of the Wicked by these everlasting Desires in the following Verses.

——— Furiarum maxima juxta
Accubat, & manibus prohibet contingere mensas,
Exsurgitque facem attollens, atque intonat ore. Æneid. l. vi.

* See above the Quakers Opinion about the Eucharist.

GOOD Men partake even in this World of the Privileges annexed to the divine Nature ; one of which is, that Joy and Peace of Mind which proceed from a lively and strong Impression of the Life within, and in this mortal Life infallibly produces a Heaven upon Earth. This Joy and Satisfaction makes us in this State sensible of the Happiness of Heaven ; and we are susceptible of it at all times, and in all Circumstances of Age, Condition, Society, Country, &c.

THE inward Peace of Mind so essential to true Joy, is the only Aim which the Faithful ought to propose to themselves. 'Tis a State of Perfection, the Beginning of eternal Happiness in this World, and of the same Nature as in Heaven. There is one only God, there is likewise but one only Way of rendering his Image perfect, one Love of God, one true Joy, one Tranquillity, &c. The greatest Proof of our Love of God, and of our Submission to his Will, is not to be afflicted at whatever may happen in this World.

SUCH is the Doctrine of the Quakers, and of their Teachers ; some of which however have been disowned by that Sect. Some of these dogmatical Points may possibly have been ill represented or misunderstood. Be that as it will, no one can deny but the Quakers destroy Christianity, and by endeavouring at an overstrained Spirituality, render it chimerical, and the Practice of it impossible. The Equality which they have introduced into civil Society, the ruin of all Subordination, the forbidding all Oaths, War, and Self-defence, cannot subsist with the Quiet and Happiness of Mankind. They themselves have been forced to own, that the Laws established in other Civil Societies are necessary for Self-Preservation ; insisting only, that they are not convenient for those of their Sect. Their immediate Inspirations, and inward Impulses, are also justly censured as fanatical ; but their pretended Enjoyment of Heavenly Happiness^a in this World, is still worse represented.

A

^a " Civil Magistracy, says Wyeth, is ordained by God to punish with the Sword, but it is unlawful for any to make use of it. The carnal Weapons are only allowed to such as are not under the Gospel Ministration, &c."

^b One Leenhoof a Minister published in the Year 1703, at Zwoll, a small Dutch Book, to which he gave the Title of Heaven upon Earth, in which he pretended to prove this Fore-taste of Happiness, and gave an ample and exaggerated Description of this temporal Joy: He was soon called to an Account by the Consistories and Synods of his Country. His Brother Ministers pelted him with repeated Refutations, in which they represented him as a Libertine, an Epicurean, a Spinozist, and an Atheist, thinking it too slight a Censure to tax him only with being a Quaker or Fanatick. These fiery Zealots, after a strict Examination of Leenhoof's Doctrine, inquired into his domestick Life, and private Conversation, with the utmost Rigour, and with that fullen Sorrow which Leenhoof had painted to the Life, Page 31 of his Book, as infinitely opposite to the Joy by him recommended, and as being an everflowing Source of all Disorders, of Ignorance, Hypocrisy and Tyranny. It was also suspected, that after all, the most capital Heresy of which this Flemish Divine was guilty, consisted in his Drawing to the Life, Page 52 and 53 of his Book, the bad Character of his Brother Ministers. Now in every Sect throughout the World, and as Boileau says,

De Paris au Japon, du Japon jusqu' a Rome :
That is,
From Paris to Japan, from Japan back to Rome,

Heresies of that kind are unpardonable, and partake of the Sin against the Holy Ghost, which is not to be forgiven either in this World or in the next. But to return to Leenhoof: What was mostly censured in his Book, is the Answer which he gives Page 83 and 84, to the Objection drawn from the Sadness of Christ. He says first, that it was a necessary Consequence of his Sufferings for the Sins of Mankind ; and concludes, even from that Objection, that since Christ, by his Sadness, had atoned for the Sins which required such Sorrow, the Faithful were dispensed from it, and ought to endeavour to be always glad, and to Rejoice in the Lord. " To be sorry for Sins after Christ's Passion, would be paying the same Debt twice, which the Justice of God cannot require ; we ought therefore to serve God with Joy and Delight, as far as it is in our Power." This is the Purport of Page 84, which tho' it may be interpreted in a good Sense, yet it must be owned his Expressions are too harsh. In another Place, Page 106, &c. he wishes the Way so much used, of exciting Men to Devotion and Piety, by the Motive of Fear, and by threatening them with the Torments of Hell, might be quite laid aside. As this is directly opposite to false Attrition, it might easily be explained according to the strictest Rules of Orthodox Doctrine ; yet it plainly appears, that his manner of proving his Assertion (in the above-cited Book, intitled, Heaven upon Earth, p. 106, and following) is not without some Blemish of Sophistry. Take his Argument as follows:

“ All those upon whom the Fear of Torments may be supposed to prevail so far as to make them refrain “ from Sin, or embrace the Practice of Religion, must be divided into three Classes: one of the Wicked;
 “ a second of those who have Knowledge and Sense enough to be convinced of the Necessity of Com“ plying with their Duty; a third of those who are weak and fearful, who rather stand in need of being “ comforted, than of being frightened. The Wicked are resolved to continue in that State, and are not “ to be reclaimed by either Religion, or the Fear of Hell-Fire. They have shaken off that Yoke, and “ laugh at it; even a sudden, unprepared, or shameful Death, after a disorderly Life, cannot frighten them “ into Duty. The Remorse of Conscience which is apt to trouble them in these last Moments, is rather
 “ the Effect of their want of Power to do Evil, than of a sincere Repentance. A civil Magistrate, “ says Leenboof, with his temporal Punishments inflicted by the Laws, is more likely to hinder the Pro“ gress of Impiety, than all the Ministers together, with their frightful Exhortations.

“ As to those who have Knowledge and Sense enough to be convinced of the Necessity of Complying “ with Religious Duties, they want no such Incitements as Fears and Threats; they already enjoy Hap“ piness, and that inward Peace of Mind and Satisfaction, which is infinitely more prevalent than all the “ Sadness inspired by the Fear of Punishment.

“ I say it again in few Words, the Weak and Fearful stand in need of Joy and Comfort. No
 “ other Means can be so efficacious, in order to preserve them in a virtuous, religious, and truly purified “ State. . . . All the Ceremonies and outward Shew of Religion should tend to increase that Joy.
 “ the Number of Days consecrated to Sadness and Affliction should be lessened.” (Probably the Author means the Fasting and Communion Days of the Protestants) yet a few Lines after he owns, “ that those “ Days are useful to the People. and that some vicious Inclinations are not to be overcome but by “ Fasting and Prayers.” So true it is that all Systems which are inclining to Paradoxes, or dangerous for their Singularity, are likewise generally full of Contradiction! The same Writer, Page 110, following his usual Notions, that Religion ought to be gay, and that the Life of the Faithful should be spent in a continual Joy, made a Proposal to banish from all Protestant Churches the grave way of Singing (which in his opinion is too sorrowful) and to substitute in the Place of the low and sinking poetical Translation of the Psalms, a more lively and gay sort of Poetry. He desired likewise, that all Funeral Ceremonies should be left off, and whatever is apt to inspire the Mind with afflicting Thoughts, contrary to Religious Joy; that the Dead should not be buried in Churches, where the Faithful are to meet only to rejoice in the Lord. Such is the Heaven which Leenboof proposes to be enjoyed upon Earth. He had some Followers, but never formed a Sect; and the Name of Leenbovian passed as quick as Lightning after the first Information against his Book. We have now and then paraphrased the Author's Words, to set his Meaning in a clearer Light. But Ross, Jovet, and Stauppe, the abovementioned Authors of the Dutch Religions, would have gone much greater Lengths: They would have entertained us with the Rise and Progress of a Sect of Leenbovians, with a long Account of their Ministers, Discipline, Doctrine, &c.

A DISSERTATION

Containing an Historical Description of several Sects and Fanatical Meetings, either not numerous, or not much known, or which are not now in Being.

WE shall first introduce the Prophets of Dauphiné. Their Fanaticism, which so strongly inspired them about 1688, had plainly shewed itself from the time of Recalling the Edict of Nantes. 'Till then the Reformed Religion never produced such a Number of miraculous and supernatural Wonders, as were supposed to be wrought one after another, without giving time to recover from the Surprise, in the three or four first Years after that Epocha: As early as 1686^a, Voices were heard in the Air, and about the Places where Temples formerly stood so like the singing of Psalms (in the Tone used by Protestants) that they could not be mistaken for any other sort of Musick. We are likewise told that this was a Heavenly and Angelical Choir, and that they sung the Psalms as translated by Clement Marot and Theodore Beza. This was according to Rule. French Songs should be sung to Frenchmen. The melodious Concert was heard in Bearn, in the Cevennes, at Laffy, &c. Mr. Jurieu, a Minister of great Repute amongst the Protestants, seemed predestinated to make a Collection of the wonderful Events of that time, in favour of those who are no less edified by Illusions than by Truth; and accordingly he has with great Care and Diligence drawn up and joined together all the Proofs of such Miracles: from which he concludes (as becomes so deep a Logician, such a sworn Controversist for the Protestant Party, and such a strenuous Champion of all new Revelations) that God having made so many Tongues speak in the Air, indirectly condemns, by this Mark of his Providence, the French Protestants, for being so easily persuaded to remain in Silence, &c. The Illusion or Deceit might probably have been soon found out, had the Minds of the People been at that time in a more calm and sedate Disposition; but it must be confess'd, that the Acts of Violence, the Antichristian Cruelties exercised against the Protestants after the Revocation of that Edict, made them susceptible of the most absurd and chimerical Notions, which seemed favourable to their distressed Party. The Miracle of Heavenly Voices singing Psalms, according to the Version of Marot and Beza, soon went from one Place to another. In Languedoc the Sound of a Trumpet was added to the Musick^b, and some Ministers who were flying had this Divine Musick for an Escort, and the Trumpet sounded till they got out of the Kingdom, and were in a safe Retreat.

SUCH Wonders seldom come alone. The Shepherdes of Crete soon followed. She was but fifteen or sixteen Years old, when she began to have Visions, and to be often in Extasy. Mr. Jurieu, who had already the Gift of Prophecy bestowed upon him^c, relates every particular Circumstance of the Manner in which this new Prophetess instructed and comforted those who heard her: He has likewise taken the Precaution to let us know^d that her Discourses were without Order or Method, and against the common Rules..... which is still a further Proof of their coming from God; for it is well known, that inspired Authors in their Writings and Speeches seldom, if ever, conform to human Rules of Art. How far the Spirit with which she was animated, proportioned itself to the low Condition of this Country Girl, and by Consequence what Difference there was betwixt the new prophetick Spirit and the ancient will sufficiently appear by this one Expression which she used: She gave the Name of Merchants and Knitters of Souls to those who in her Days employed themselves in converting the Protestants. Were such Speeches worthy to be compared to the sublime Style of the ancient Prophets? did not such Comparisons villify the Gift of Prophecy? Yet Mr. Jurieu unadvisedly did it, and his Example was followed by several other Ministers amongst the new Refugees. However the Prophecies of the young Shepherdess were honoured with the same characteristick Marks of Truth, which the Propheying Minister, her Apologist, bestowed upon his own in his three Volumes of Accompl. des Prophet. none were fulfilled.

^a See the seventh Pastoral Letter of Jurieu in 1686.

^b See a Letter inserted in Jurieu's Pastoral Letters for the third Year.

^c See his Accomp. of Prophecies, printed in 1686.

THIS Fanatical Contagion spread further in Dauphiné, and reached the Vivarets. Swarms of little Prophets came forth, most of them Children, ill bred and unpolished, and by consequence, as they would persuade us, not capable of having any Intention to deceive. This Propagation of Prophecy amongst these poor Country People, might probably be carried on much in the same manner as Malebranche^e ingeniously represents the Progress of magical Art and Witch-Craft. However that be, these new Prophets^f were very different from those of Antiquity. Their Spirits were not raised, animated, rendered more subtile, and by a divine Fire enabled to soar above all material Beings, and take their Flight towards Heaven: Their Elocution sunk below the Dignity of Inspiration, wanted those noble and wonderful Starts of Eloquence, which the Ancients called the Language of the Gods; for which some Poets have been ranked amongst the Prophets. All their Atchievements consisted in a kind of Drowsiness, very like what we perceive before we fall asleep, or which follows some violent Exercise; by which the animal Spirits being very much exhausted, we scarce have any Power left us to think or speak, unless by half Words. Others have thought that the extatick State of our Prophets was a profound^g Lethargy, during which they repeated, without any Intermision, what they had heard or got by heart, without any other Order, but as it occurred to their Memory, of which they were not deprived in that State. Thus they prayed, sung Psalms, made great Promises to the Hearers, and sometimes threatned them; but the whole was in a Language which no body could understand except the Country-People of their Villages.

^d See Reflections on the Miracle, &c. in the third Year of his Pastoral Letters.

^e Recherche de la vérité, by Malebranche, lib. 1. or Le Clerc in his Pneumatology, which is only a Copy of what had been said by Malebranche.

^f There was also some Cheating in the Case; they had Masters who taught them to mimic the Prophets: But Jurieu would not own this, and constantly maintained there was some divine Operation in that Event.

^g Christina Poniatovia, who prophesied in Poland about 1628, had a very different Success: She was the Daughter of a Polander, who by a then common Metamorphosis, from a Monk became a Protestant Minister. In 1629, she was seized with such a Lethargy, that she was thought to be dead. She came out of it at length, but was ever after deprived of the glorious Gift of Prophecy. Not long after she even lost her pretended Right to Visions, by taking a Husband: Now 'tis very well known, that Matrimony is an excellent Remedy to cure Women of the Vapours; whence it came to pass, that most of the said Prophetesses were Maidens or Widows. The Prophecies of Christina, as likewise those of Kotter a Leatherdresser, and of Drabicius a Minister, were published together by Comenius.

SUCH were the Prophets, of whom the Author of Pastoral Letters is pleased to say, that God had not wrought such Wonders from the first Establishment of Christianity^b. No Writer ever produced so many Reasons to prove a bad Cause; but it must be owned that he was endowed with a subtile Genius, and the happy Talent of never being put to a stand.

WHETHER the Occasion of these Prophecies was Sicknefs, or a disturbed Imagination of Mimicks, or an over fiery Zeal spreading like a Plague from one Neighbour or Family to another, or a Cheat of some ill-minded Persons, or a Mixture of these four concurring Causes, is hard to determine: “ But it is very certain
 “ it was not always the Effect of Sleep or Drowsiness; the pretended Spirit soon “ caused in several of these Prophets the Motions, Agitations, Convulsions, Shakings, “ staring and wild Looks, half Words, &c. which usually are the Marks and “ Appendixes of a settled Fanaticism. But a short historical Account of the “ whole, from a Letterⁱ written at that time, will be more satisfactory.” The Author of it says, that the Inspiration of the little Prophets began in October 1688. The Shepherdess of Crete had left off prophesying some time before, and probably ever since she had been kept a close Prisoner: Her last Prediction was, that the little Prophets would be sent, and then the Spirit within her remained silent. At first there were but three or four Children favour’d with Inspirations, then fifteen, and in a short time its Influence spread so far, that their Number was increased to three or four hundred; and in March 1689 it was so great, that many little Towns of Dauphiné were wholly inhabited by Prophets: In a word, the Progress of Prophecy was so quick, that to use the Words of the Letter, “ Clouds of little Prophets “ sprang up in a Night like so many Mushrooms. . . . Men of good Sense (a remarkable “ Expression) no ways inclined to Prophecy, at a time when the Prophets were “ imprisoned, coming home with their Neighbours from the Meetings in the Night “ time, suddenly fell down in the Snow^k, as if they had been struck with the “ Falling Sicknefs, tumbled about upon a Bed of Snow two Foot deep, till they “ were raised up so as to sit in it: In this Posture, with their Eyes shut, as if asleep,
 “ they began to preach and to prophesy, without considering that the Parish Priest,
 “ who with his Soldiers had broke up their Assembly, would infallibly cause them
 “ to be taken up next Day.” This prophetick Spirit diffused itself in many Places, and reached to the Upper Languedoc. Some Writers of those Days assure us, that a Sicknefs which lasted about a Fortnight was the usual Forerunner of this miraculous Inspiration. Several other Accidents were likewise sure, tho’ sometimes distant Prognosticks of it. We shall present our Readers^l with two or three of them, which the least knowing Physicians may explain with Ease.

THE

^b See Pastoral Letters of Jurieu for the third Year.

ⁱ See a Letter written from Geneva the 13th of Febr. 1689.

^k This Sect of Prophets lasted only a short Time, during which the Word to fall, in French Tomber, signified the same as to prophesy, because the first Symptom of the Inspiration was a sudden Lethargy, with which the Prophet being seized, often fell down; witness the Prophet mentioned in the Letter from Geneva; who being on a Journey, and suddenly seized by the Spirit, fell into a Slough and broke his Leg: tho’ whilst he remained under the Influence of the Spirit he either felt no Pain, or bore it with as much Patience, and went on with his Prophecy, as if he had not hurt himself. When the Prophet began to be more drowsy, than to sleep and preach, they usually put him to bed, and there he preached or prophesied three or four Hours together; see the said Letter. But the Forerunners or Symptoms of such Inspirations often varied.

^l The Letter mentions first, the bleeding of a little Prophet, seven or eight Years old, upon account of an extraordinary Redness in his Eyes: The Parents told the Surgeon, “ that they thought this might “ be a Preparation to the other Sicknefs (of Inspiration in Sleep) and so it happened: The Child three “ Days after fell into a prophetick Sleep; he preached and prophesied.” Secondly, a little Prophetess, eleven

THE Prophetick Speeches of those Predicants of each Sex, and every Age, did at the first foretel a speedy Deliverance for the Church. The Shepherdes of Crete has fixed it to the Month of September in 1688. But the Prophets of Dauphiné put it back to the end of the same Year, or to the Beginning of 1689. To save the Credit of the first Prophecy, they alledged it would have happened in September^m, if a true Repentance had followed the Prophecy; without which Condition, it would not come to pass neither at Christmas nor at the Beginning of 1689. Others were bent upon the fulfilling these Prophecies; in order to which, they endeavoured to apply them to the Revolution which was then brought about in England. But these Apologists were put to the stand, how to reconcile the seemingly contradictory Predictions. The Predicants did not agree; some foretold violent Persecutions; yet those who understood the Harmony of the "Prophecies of those Days might have easily got over that Difficulty. The Persecutions were for the French Protestants, the promised Deliverance was reserved for the Protestants of England.

THE Style in which these Prophecies were delivered, was obscure, in very bad French, such as is spoke by the lowest Class of that Nation, and not to be understood, except by such as were accustomed to the Gibberidge of Vivarets and Dauphiné^o. Had they been only without Order or Connection, this might have been overlooked in modern Prophets, as it ought to be in those which are owned to be authentick. We must go further and say, that want of Method has always met with a general^t Approbation in Prophecy and Poetry, and such Objections can never invalidate the Truth of those Prophecies, which for so many Ages have been acknowledged as divinely inspired. But our Dauphiné Prophets are of another Stamp, we have seen it above. Their Sermons were not unlike to their Prophecies; they jumbled together, right or wrong, all the Word and Texts of Scripture which occurred to their Memory: yet this Heap of Nonsense is by their equally Fanatical Hearers called a Series of pathetick Exhortations which drew Tears from them. This is not to be wondered at; their Wounds were still fresh and bleeding; a severe Persecution was carried against a Body of Men, whose whole Crime consisted in meeting together to serve God; either as they had been brought up, or as their Reason and Conscience led them: This was enough to raise in their Hearts Sentiments of Compunction, and to soften their Minds. Daily Experience teaches us, that such Discourses as agree with our Notions are always approved and liked, and often admired; when the Mind is in that Disposition, Fanaticism easily follows Admiration. We or twelve Years old, said, that before the Lethargic Fit, "She felt something rising from her Feet to her Throat, (this was the Spirit of Prophecy) which when it came there, Sleep overcame her and she felt no more. Several Witnesses deposed, that during the Prophecy, which lasted as long as the Sleep, the Prophet could not be waked, either by running Pins into her Flesh, or by hard Pinching. "Thirdly, when they had a mind to hinder the Prophets from preaching or prophesying in their Sleep, chiefly the little ones who could not bear the strong Agitations of the Spirit, they endeavoured to hurt them and make them suffer. A Child of eight Years of Age seemed to be in violent Pain (because they would not let him preach) and cried out to his Mother, begging of her in God's Name to wake him, for he was not able to refrain from speaking."

^m St. Bernard, if we are to believe Bayle, in the Art. of St. Bernard, alledged the same Reason to justify himself: But every Impostor might screen himself under the same Pretence.

ⁿ History favoured the Prediction, it was easy to foretel what they were resolved to do; such as continuing their Assemblies, and raising the little Prophets. As to the Revolution of England, King William's Landing, King James the Second's Abdication, &c. they were then on the Anvil, and to be sure the French were punctually informed by their Friends the Refugees in England and Holland.

^o The said Letter-Writer owns, that the worst French was still above the Style of these Prophets, so poor, so miserable, so slovenly, says he, that nothing can come up to it. One of their Exhortations was as follows: "The Way to Heaven is narrow, 'tis not wider than a Hair, and as thin no one can walk in it, when loaded with Sins You who are present have not been at Mass this long time, but I much fear the first Persecution will drive you thither, do not go at all, rather be chopped in Pieces, rather suffer yourselves to be put on the Chopping-block than to go again, &c."

have have likewise acquainted our Readers with the prodigious Increase of this prophetick Spirit. A Letter which was wrote ^p from the Country in which these New Doctors preached their Gospel (they are the very Words of the Letter) informs us, that there were sometimes fifteen hundred or two thousand of those Prophets at one Meeting; who tho' they did not all of them ^a Fall together, or speak at the same time, yet all had an equal Right to Inspiration: Whence we may conclude, that all the Members of such Assemblies were and might be called Prophets: Men, Women, Children even not above three Years old, preached and prophesied. Some Catholicks likewise were seized with the prophetick Plague, and received an inconceivable Aversion to Mass, by following such Examples. The Letter adds to this Account, that all of them were of the Dregs of the People, few could read, but their Lives were irreproachable; "For they all publickly declared, that they obtained Grace and those "supernatural Gifts, only by their own and their Families sincere Repentance, and "should be deprived of them, if one only remained in a State of Sin.

"THEY eat nothing three or four Days before they speak, and take very little "Nourishment after it..... They preached..... Day and Night..... in publick in "the middle of the Village..... The Hearers always knelt, and the Preachers "could not bear too see them in any other Posture..... if any great Sinners hap"pened to be present at the Meeting, the Predicants bad them come near, and felt "inexpressible Torments (that is violent Convulsions) if they did not obey;
 "When the said Sinners were come near, the Preacher laid his Hands upon them,
 "and called out aloud for Mercy and Grace, exhorting them to repent, and bidding
 "the Faithful present to beg of God Forgiveness: Psalms were sung (chiefly the "fifty first) in their behalf, and Prayers said..... If the said Sinners truly repented
 "..... they likewise fell down upon the Ground as if they had been dead..... and
 "when come to themselves, felt an accountable Happiness and Satisfaction." The foregoing Acts of Inspiration were not done only by venerable old Men, or by such as were of a competent Age and ripe Years: Young Shepherds, fifteen or sixteen Years old, even some who were but in the eighth or ninth Year of their Age, used to meet and hold a Consistory, obliged fifty or sixty Penitents to make a publick Reparation for their Apostacy; that is, for their embracing the Roman Catholick Communion: they likewise required publick Satisfaction for Oaths, for Blasphemies, for being present at Mass, &c. Children exercised the Functions with a masterly Behaviour and Authority, examined Sinners with the utmost Severity, and even dictated to them the Form of Prayer by which they were to testify their sincere Sorrow and Detestation of their Sins: which Prayer generally ended with a kind of Absolution by these or such-like Words, God grant you that Grace.

THE Symptoms of Prophecy were not always the same: The most common was to fall down to sleep, or to be seized with a sudden Numbness in all their Members, with convulsive Motions. At other times this Rule suffered some Exceptions; they then prophesied when awake; their Body was in Motion; they were in an uniform Extasy, or in Convulsions. This Fanaticism ended at last by the Discovery of a Cheat: They had Masters and Prompters ^f to teach them how to behave and what to say.

^p Copy of a Letter inserted in the Letter above-cited.

^a Twenty or thirty fell all at once.

^r Letter from Geneva above-mentioned.

^f Two Prophets of Vivarets and Dauphine went to Geneva in 1689, and carried on their pretended Inspiration; upon a narrow and strict Examination, they were forced to own before the Council of Geneva, that they were Impostors, and had used that Deceit only to strengthen their Brethren. This Confession did not avail, they were banished from that Town.

The CAMISARS or FANATICKS of the CEVENNES.

SOME Years after the Dauphiné Prophets^a, those who were called Camisars^b made their Appearance in Languedoc, and in the Mountains of the Cevennes; about fourteen Years elapsed between the little Prophets and these Camisars^c. The prophetick Fire did not go out during that Interval, and the Interruption of Fanaticism was only as to outward Appearance. Most of the Inhabitants of those Countries were Protestants, who had little or no Breeding or Education; their Heads were still full of Ideas and Notions of Inspiration; these were increased and strengthened by their solitary and rough Way of living. At last Fanaticism broke out, and was followed by a general Rebellion, which was countenanced by some foreign Powers then at War with France. This is taken notice of in modern Histories; but that Circumstance is not to our present Purpose: What belongs to us, is to let our Readers know, in what the Fanaticism of those Camisars consisted. The first Camisars began the Rebellion under Pretence of Want of Power to pay the Capitation: But this was soon dropt; Rebellion and Fanaticism were openly displayed in their proper Colours, the Horror of which needs no further Description, and cannot be any ways excused, except upon Account of the Ignorance and Prejudices of these Fanaticks. But Ignorance, and Prejudice of Education, when carried so far as to disturb civil Society, become Crimes against the State; what Wonder then that they should be punished as such? The Destruction of Criminals is not a Persecution, but bare Justice. We must now give a more particular Account of their own and of their Ringleaders Character.

THE Camisars were declared open Enemies to whatever bore the Name of Roman Catholick: This was their fundamental Principle, the first Article of their Religion. Robbing and burning Churches, putting Priests to the most cruel Death, was, in their Opinion, a meritorious Action in the Sight of God; and in the midst of those sacrilegious Murders and Devastations, they read the Scripture, sung Psalms, and said Prayers. Who could have expected such violent Proceedings would have met with Approbation, and found Defenders? yet Apologies were wrote for them in foreign Countries: It was averred in them, “That the Camisars made War “ with all the Moderation of which it is capable..... that indeed they burnt and “ robbed Churches, and gave no quarter to Priests, but were not guilty of committing “ any Disorder.” Manifesto’s were published in their Favour, and the Wits amongst the Refugees in England and Holland openly espoused their Cause in Verse and Prose. Even Ministers preached Panegyricks upon them, and offered publick Prayers to God for their good Success.

THEIR Leaders were like them, of the meanest and basest Extraction: a mistaken Zeal and blind Credulity drew into that Party but a small number of People of any Distinction. They looked upon their Leaders as new Moses’s or Joshua’s, who were to destroy the Canaanites; and in order to render this more probable, Cavalier, Roland, Catinat, and Ravanel, who headed that Rabble, pretended to be inspired by Almighty God, performed all the Functions of the Ministers of the Gospel; baptised, blessed Marriages, gave the Communion, made and preached Sermons, or rather tacked together unconnected Texts of Scripture, and Pieces of old Discourses, which they had heard before, either from run-away Ministers, who came back to them from foreign Countries, or from the Fanaticks of Cevennes and the Vivarets. Moreover, they received from Geneva^d a Reinforcement of old Devotion from time to time, and in their Assemblies put off this supposed Manna, disguising it with their Fanatical Ignorance:

^a In 1703.

^{b c} They were so called, either from a white Shirt which they wore over their Clothes, (Camise, in the Dialect of Languedoc, signifies a Shirt) or from a Linnen Frock usually wore by the Country People.

CALVIER, by Birth a Mule-Driver, or of some such Profession, became in a short time the General, the Lawgiver and Prophet of the Camisars. Before he was raised to that high Station, he had borne several Offices, not worth mentioning, since the most remarkable was the Trade of a Baker^e. Being forced to take up some way of Business to get his Bread, he chose to make it, says wittily Madam Du Noyer in her Letters. But as his Performances in that Trade were very indifferent, he became Prentice to Inspiration. He pretended that God^f had revealed his Will to him in a Dream, and had commanded him to help his Brethren; he obeyed the Call, came to them, and took upon him to be, as we said before, their Prophet, their Teacher, their General. “He was always accompanied, says Madam Du Noyer^g, with a little Prophetess, her Name was Isabellu, and she never left him by Day or by Night. She was young and pretty, walked by his Side, and was very useful to the whole Party by her Enthusiasm..... This Prophetess, having first suffered many..... violent Agitations, declared it was God’s Will they should obey their Leader, and pay him the same Regard as to Moses..... By Degrees he re-united in his own Person the separate Offices of both Moses and Aaron. He took upon him the Functions of Priesthood, settled a Church of his own amongst the Inhabitants of the Cevennes, of which he made himself Pope and Patriarch.” In that Quality he directed the penitential Exercises of his Adherents, and thundered out Excommunications; which, according to the above-cited Letters, was performed in the following manner: “Cavalier exhorted his People to Repentance; before he administered the Communion to them, he admonished them not to approach to the Table, unless they were duly prepared; telling them withal, that God would reveal to him those who deserved to be admitted..... Whilst the Ceremony lasted, his Arm would now and then grow stiff, and refuse its Ministry to give the Bread to some of those who presented themselves to receive it..... Thus excluded they retired, and went back to continue their Prayers with Sorrow, till further Orders..... He recalled them when he thought they were truly penitent and sufficiently mortified.”

SUCH was this General^h of the Fanaticks: He had the Cunning and Authority to make them approve of the Articles agreed on betwixt him and the Marshal de ^d The Citizens of Geneva sent Books of Devotion into Languedoc; many of them treated of Controversy in the old way; that is, with bitter Invectives, and sophistical Arguments: But as most of those Writings were fallen into Contempt, the Booksellers of Geneva sent them to the Protestants of Languedoc, who, for want of better, took this for the pure Word of God.

^e Lettres Galantes & Historiques, by Madam Du Noyer, tom. 3.

^f This he impudently bragged of at Geneva, even after he retired thither, and the whole Party was utterly defeated.

^g See the above-cited Letters.

^h We may justly compare Cavalier to that famous Hungarian Jacob, who having been, as is reported, a Cistercian Monk in his Youth, went over to the Mahometians, and came back afterwards into Europe, with the Dignity of a Prophet, and an Enlightened Person, and headed a Rabble of Country People called from thence Pastoraux. This Enthusiast pretended, that he conversed familiarly with the Blessed Virgin and the Angels. A Lamb holding a Cross was wrought upon his Colours. The Pastoraux committed great Disorders in France; yet some Fanaticks looked upon them as Prophets: Jacob himself had the Impudence to preach publicly in pontifical Robes, to bless Holy Water, &c.

Villars ; affuring them that he did it by ⁱ the Order of God, and for the Welfare of the Flock. “ Before he went to meet the Marshal, he was for some time in “ an Extacy, in the Presence of some of his Friends ; the Bed on which he lay “ shook by his violent Agitations, and God ordered him by a Voice, which came “ out of Cavalier’s own Mouth, &c. . . . to comply with what was desired of him “ But this Revelation did not persuade or impose upon the more sensible Part of his “ Followers.” This Accommodation occasioned the total Ruin of the Party. These Fanaticks had received amongst them the broken Remnants of the Prophets of Dauphiné, and with them formed this new Flock in the Cevennes. This being likewise dispersed, they met again together in England, and established a new Society of Prophets composed of all these Party-Remnants. Cavalier not trusting to the Conditions stipulated in the Agreement, or to French Promises, came over with his Brethren, and was at first received as the Guardian Angel of the Protestant Religion. All the Refugees in England and Holland paid him Homage, he met every where with Friends and Relations, and all were proud ^k of having some Interest in him. He received such Marks of Respect and Veneration as were little inferior to the subordinate Worship which the Romish Church pays to Saints. A truly zealous Refugee would at that time have found it difficult to determine which was most pleasing to God, either this Baker turned Prophet, Ringleader of Enthusiasts, and Scourge of Papists ; or Marlborough, who had then lately delivered Germany from the French Yoke.

THE first Years of this Age were remarkable for numberless Fanatical Enthusiasts. Germany brought forth then one Tenbard, whose visionary Discourses were translated into French, tho’ they ought to have been buried in Oblivion. This Madman (and what Fanatick is not so ?) had some Disciples and Followers, whose greatest Folly was their minding Tenbard’s Visions : But it will always be true, that Folly is of a more spreading and contagious Quality than Wisdom. However, this Man seemed to be of Opinion, that all Thoughts, even the most ridiculous and profane, were inspired : Yet afterwards he recalled this Saying, and thought that some of them ^l might and ought to be attributed to the Suggestions of Satan. He moreover condemned ^m Swearing, in which he certainly imitated the Quakers ; but he added a Clause which drew after it most dismal Consequences, by pretending to excuse evil Actions, as being supposedly unavoidable. He taught that Work was useless ; yet he seems to put some Restriction ⁿ upon that Saying. He likewise seemed to follow the Quakers, as to Indifferency about Religion, setting but little Value upon the Authors ^o of the Reformation. He exclaimed loudly against Plea-ⁱ See the Theatre Sacré des Cévennes. The Spirit told Cavalier at that time several things which proved false ; for example, that Cavalier should be admitted into the King’s Favour, and converse familiarly with him. Much about the same time, a little Prophet among the Camifars foretold, that in 1706 several extraordinary Events should come to pass. “ That the Brethren should sing God’s Praises in the Streets, that “ their Enemies should lie prostrate before them that the King of France should give them Liberty “ to pray, &c.”

^k At A . . . he was accompanied to Church by several who were born in Languedoc, and praised the Prophet, calling upon him with a loud Voice Cousin, Cousin, that the World might know their Merit in being related to him.

^l In his Revelations, p. 192. he says, “ the Devil by his Suggestions endeavoured to raise Doubts to deprive me of the inward Word,” by which it appears, he made a Distinction betwixt Doubts and the inward Word, which is Inspiration.

^m P. 268. he asks of God leave to swear, and is answered, “ I give you leave, tho’ it is not well, because Necessity has no Law the Law is not for the Just.

ⁿ God told him, “ What occasion have you to work since you have an Income ? I do not love great Labours, but a holy Life.

^o God, says he, revealed to me, that Luther would have done better to have kept for himself the Knowledge he had received than in making a new Sect Fewer have been saved than if we had persevered in Popery, and led truly Christian Lives there is not a Hair’s Breadth Difference between one Religion and another.

tures, chiefly against Intemperance in Eating or Drinking^p. Lastly, according to the Taste of his Country, he gave easy Credit to Apparitions of the Devil^q. Another German Prophet lived about the same time, his Name was Godfrid, or Godfrey Winckler. He had the Gift of Prophecy bestowed upon him in the Year 1707, at fourteen Years of Age; a Season of Life fixed by Nature as the beginning of the Increase of human Society by Propagation; and which, as it occasions one of the greatest Revolutions in human Bodies, it likewise determines the Maturity of Judgment, and settles the Dispositions of the Mind. This young Man's Predictions were soon discovered to be no more than the Effect of a distempered Brain, and the Publick was easily disabused by their proving false.

WE might entertain our Readers with an Account of several such Fanaticks, but to what Purpose? Every one is fully convinced that a Man may become a Visionary by Chance, follow Enthusiasm because he finds it profitable and successful, and at last deceive himself, after having often deceived others^r. True it is, there are some Fanaticks who are by themselves, as the two forementioned Germans^s, and many others who had no Followers; by which it appears, that Fools do not always herd together, and that the Circumstances of Time, Place and Dispositions must concur with a certain Turn of the Mind to gain Profelytes; otherwise Folly remains in its natural State of Obscurity.

ABOUT a Year after the Plague which raged in Provence, a new Sect, or Society, or Confraternity, made its Appearance in Languedoc. The number of these Sectaries was not very great, but the Discourses about them were of different sorts. Some said they called themselves Enlightened, and that they had some Affinity with the Sect or Confraternity of the Rosicrucians: Others thought them to be Fanaticks by Principle of Conscience, and that they were some Remains from the Cevennes, which we shall soon find retired into England. Others pretended they were professed Libertines, and abandoned Wretches, who concealed their infamous Practices, under the Mask of the pretended Mysteries of their extravagant Religion. Be that as it will, those enlightened either believed or are said to have believed, “ That the “ Father and the Son having reigned in their Turn, it is necessary the Holy Ghost “ should likewise govern, which Government they were to settle. In order to “ which, they used many childish Ceremonies opposite to the Gospel; some of them “ were Judaical Observances. They kept both the Saturday and the Sunday. They “ initiated their Profelytes to their Mysteries by a Baptism of Brandy. Besides “ which, 'tis also reported, that they practised Circumcision. The chief of that “ Sect, if it may be called so, were clad in White at their Meetings, and wore “ Crowns upon their Heads, or Caps topped with a kind of Crest. Their Crowns “ were made of twelve Feathers, to represent the twelve Apostles. The transparent “ Glass with which they were adorned was supposed to be an Emblem of the “ Purity and Innocency of their Lives. The waving Crest was a Figure of the “ Inconstancy of the World. They wore a Belt likewise, as a Token of their “ being Knights, which was embellished with Ribbons of various Colours, with “ Lilies, &c.” Their Crowns or Caps were covered with white Taffety, as a fur-

^p Having eat a broiled Herring and Cabbage with a good Stomach and much Pleasure, God reprimanded him and said, you would soon be like a Hog. On another Occasion God told him, Take the Bread as I give it you, and do not cut off what you dislike, for by so doing you receive the Bread from the Devil.

^q He often mentions such Apparitions in his Visions. But the famous Abadie being at Dublin, took a Cow's Head for an Apparition.

^r As those who tell Lies so often, that at last they themselves mistake them for Truth.

^s Tenhard was not quite without Followers.

ther Mark of an unspotted Life. The Lace about this Taffety denoted, tho' but very obscurely, Salvation and the Love of God. Moreover the Ribbands about their Crown were tied together in the Form of a Cross, to shew that Christ had covered our Sins as with a Hat. Is it possible any one should not be sensible of the Folly and Madness of such an Assembly?

BRETHREN of the ROSY-CROSS.

NAUDE^a has wrote a Dissertation on the Confraternity of the Rosicrucians, in which he gives us the following Account of them.

THIS Society took its Rise in Germany. About the Year 1394, a young Man, who from five Years old had been brought up in a Convent, became acquainted at the Age of sixteen with some Magicians, learned their Art, travelled into the East as far as Arabia, where the Doctors of that Country taught him wonderful Secrets, and foretold him he should be the Author of a general Reformation. From Arabia he went into Barbary, and from thence to Spain, where he frequented the Moors and Jews who were versed in the Cabala. He there pretended to begin his Reformation; but being banished from Spain, he came back into his native Country Germany, and died in the Year 1484, being one hundred and six Years old. His Body was not buried, but only deposited in a Grotto. Fate, or some Oracle, had ordered that the Corps should remain in that State one hundred and twenty Years; in consequence of which Decree, it was not found out^b till 1604. This Discovery occasioned the Establishment of the Brethren of the Rosy Cross^c. And in 1615, a German printed and published their Apology and Profession of Faith.

At first the Number of the Brethren was four only, then eight; but it increased very much afterwards. They were to remain in a State of Virginity, and to make themselves known to the World by no other Name than the Enlightened of the Rosy Cross. Their Laws and Rules forbad them to receive any Reward for practising Physick, and ordered them to do it out of Charity, to do good to all Mankind, to apply themselves to Wisdom and Piety, to reform the religious Worship, by retrenching all superfluous Ceremonies, to maintain steadily all the Principles of the Confraternity, which was to subsist to the End of the World. Naude relates that their chief Customs and Opinions were to dress according to the Fashion of the Country

^a Instruktion, &c. printed at Paris in 1623.

^b A German Chronicle of the Rosicrucians relates this Discovery as follows: A Rosicrucian being probably more cunning than his Brethren, took notice of a Stone with a Nail in it: He took out the Stone, and found the Grotto in which was deposited the Body of their Founder, with this Inscription, At the end of one hundred and twenty Years I shall be manifested. Over the Monument, after these four Letters A. C. R. C. these Words were written, In my Life-time I have chosen this Compendium of the World for my Tomb, and several hieroglyphick Figures about them. The Body held in his Hand a Book in Gold Letters, which contained the Praises of the Founder, and gave an Account of his Contempt of the vast Treasures he had found, and of his Dying without Sickness or Pain when aged above a hundred.

^c Another Dissertation concerning the Rosicrucians says, that “about three hundred Years before their Society began (or rather was renewed, as will appear by the Sequel) in Germany. The Articles of this Society were to swear Fidelity one to the other..... to take an Oath to keep its Laws, which consisted chiefly in Secrecy, in speaking and writing only by Enigma's and Allegories; their Aim was only to restore good Discipline and Sciences, especially Physick, of which they pretended to know the most hidden Secrets; as indeed they boasted of knowing all the Mysteries of Nature, even the Philosophers Stone. In a word, they were the Successors and Restorers of many antient Societies and Confraternities, which sought after Truth, and endeavoured to bring Sciences to a State of Perfection: Such as the Priests and Philosophers of Egypt, the Eumopides, who kept the Mysteries of Ceres and Isis, the Samothracians, who knew how to be healthy and rich, since they could perform the Grand-Operation. The Magi, Chaldeans and Brachmans, such were the antient Rosicrucians.”

in which they lived, to be present at least once a Year at their Meetings, or to give a good Reason for Absenting; to wear constantly the Character or Impression of the Rosy-Cross, as the Token of the Brotherhood, to look upon themselves as appointed to reform all things, and as having the whole and sole Right to all the Gifts of Nature, upon that Account. They were to declare openly, that the Pope was Anti-christ, and that a Time would come when they should pull down his Triple-Crown. They rejected and condemned the Doctrine of the Pope and of Mahomet, calling the one and the other Blasphemies of the East and West; they owned but two Sacraments, and admitted only the Ceremonies of the Primitive Church. They called their Society the Confraternity of the Holy Ghost. They pretended to a Right of naming their Successors, and of bequeathing to them all their Privileges and Virtues, as being their Representatives; to know by Revelation those who were worthy to be admitted as Members of their Society; to keep the Devil in a State of Subjection, and to discover hidden Treasures. They moreover said, that their Confraternity could not be destroyed, because God always opposed an impenetrable Cloud to screen them from their Enemies. Neither Hunger, Thirst, Sickness, or any other Infirmary, could hurt them; if any Brother died, his Burying-Place and their Assemblies were to be kept secret one hundred and twenty Years. They believed as a fundamental Article of their Faith, that if the Sect failed, it might be renewed at the Founder's Monument or Tomb. They bragged of having invented a new Language, by which they could describe the Nature of every Being; yet, as the same Naudé observes, they did not make use of enigmatical Speeches or Parables, they avoided being thought the Inventors of Novelties, and the Account they gave of their wonderful Performances, was not to be deemed either imprudent, foolish, malicious, or deceitful. But their bare Word must be taken, and these enlightned Brethren very much resembled Quacks and Alchymists in this Point, as they did in their Jargon and their boasted mysterious Sciences: Accordingly they were all instructed, and had their Education in Arabian or German Schools.

MOREOVER, the Rosicrucians said, that another Sun, which borrowed its Light from the Sun of this World, enlightened the Grotto in which their Founder was deposited, and served to discover all the Wonders of the said Grotto, some of which were engraved on a Copper-Plate placed upon an Altar: where, for Instance, four Figures are to be seen, with these four Inscriptions, Never empty, The Yoke of the Law, The Liberty of the Gospel, The Glory of God. We shall omit other strange things, which deserve and require the learned Comments of some Alchymists or visionary Cabalist; several of which have promised ^d as the Brethren of the Rosy Cross, to repair the Breaches and Defects of the World; as if Nature was subject to decay, or the divine Providence, by which it is governed, could possibly be so far weakened as to suffer ^e its own Work to be destroyed. They likewise flatter themselves that they ^d Naudé, above-cited, mentions one Postel, who has wrote a Book de Instauratione rerum omnium, and Paracelsus, who has foretold the Coming of an Elias who should teach all Arts, reveal the Philosophers Stone, and the grand Operation. and so procure Plenty, Wisdom, &c.

^e 'Tis a vulgar Error that Nature decays, and as ill-grounded as the Opinion of those who fancy that the Morals and Vices of Men grow worse and worse. See what has been said on that Subject in the first Part of the second Volume, concerning the Ceremonies of Idolaters. A learned Man of the last Age, has proved, by a strict Examination of every Part of Nature, the Steadiness of the Laws by which it is governed, and that by Consequence it is not subject to grow old and decay, as the Works of Men. Matter indeed is liable to an infinite Variety of Changes, even our Souls and our Morals are affected by those Revolutions; but still Nature is the same, ever steady and constant in itself, tho' it admits of such Alterations in its Parts, as Manilius Astron. lib. 1. finely expresses it in these Verses:

*Exutæ variant faciem per secula gentes,
At manet incolumis mundus, suaque omnia servat.*

they shall be able to restore the primitive Strength of Constitution, and Innocency of Life in Mankind : Plenty and Community of Goods ^f, The universal Knowledge of Sciences, and the general Agreement of all Nations; in a Unity of the Gospel, in a Unity of Religion, and Holiness of Life.

MORHOF mentions a diminutive Sect, or rather a small Swarm of the Rosicrucians, to which he gives the Name of Collegium Rosianum, or Society of Rosay, who was a visionary Fanatick, and endeavoured to settle that Confraternity in Savoy near Dauphiné about the Year 1630. Their Number was not to exceed three ; one Mornius tried all possible Ways to be admitted for a fourth, but was rejected, and could only obtain the Favour of being reckoned as a Servant. This small Society

*Quæ nec longa dies auget, minuitque senectus,
Nec motus puncto currit, cursusque fatigat.
Idem semper erit, quoniam semper fuit idem,
Non alium videre patres, aliumve nepotes
Aspicient. &c.*

But to return to Jonston, who is the Author mentioned at the Beginning of this Note : In the Year 1634, he published a small Treatise De Naturæ Constantiâ, which is divided into five Propositions, 1. Nature is constant in its whole Frame. 2. In what concerns the Heavens and Celestial Bodies. 3. In the Elements. 4. In mixed Bodies, and animate or inanimate Creatures. 5. In regard to Man.

He proves the first by the circular Motion of Nature, which causes all those infinite subordinate, yet fixed and periodical Movements, most of them unknown to us, by which all material Beings appear or vanish according to the various Dispositions of their Parts.

The second is demonstrated by Astronomy. The Nature of those Bodies is the same as it was from the Beginning, and their Actions the same, being constant even in their seeming Inconstancy. See pag. 17, 18, 19, and 20, of this short Work.

The Elements come next under his Consideration : He reckons only three, both in Honour of that Number, (and because he takes Fire only to be the most subtle Part of the Air. It would exceed the Bounds of a Note, if we should follow him in all the Particulars of which he gives an Account, in order to convince his Readers that all the Alterations of Air, Water and Earth, are not capable of shewing any real Inconstancy in their own Nature.

The same must be said of mixed animate or inanimate Bodies, which are still the same as to their Substance. If we except some particular Occasions, in which God has been pleased to work some Prodiges, still letting Nature return to its antient Course, we shall find them all produced, increase, diminish, and vanish in our Days, as they did in former Times ; so that in all Particulars, Experience daily convinces us of Nature's Constancy.

The fifth and last Proposition is about Man. Here it must be owned, that his Life is very much shortened since the Deluge. But not to enter upon the Order appointed by God's Will, or upon the Alterations which may have been occasioned by the Deluge, is it not highly probable that this may be owing to the luxurious debauched Lives of Men, in which Case Nature is not in the Fault ; and there are still Examples of as long-lived, strong, and large sized Men, as there were in former Ages, at least since the Deluge. As to what concerns the Soul of Man, we find the same Will, Memory and Understanding : Arts and Sciences have been improved, and though it should be alledged, that we have only revived ancient Systems, and found again some Contrivances which had been lost or forgot, that Objection itself proves, that we are still capable of new Inventions. The Virtues and Vices even are the same as in Antiquity ; Superstition still has its Votaries, so has Religion ; in Politicks we find the same Frauds and Lies ; Cruelty, Avarice, defiling the conjugal Bed, Intemperance, all other inordinate Passions are as much in vogue as ever. Riches, Honour, Merit, even Virtue, as far as it is barely natural, are not more or less settled than they were in Antiquity. Then, by unknown and strange Revolutions, Worth and Fortune seldom met ; the same happens now. And these Verses of Manilius are adapted to what we now experience, as to the Age he lived in, Astron. lib. iv.

*Quin etiam infelix virtus & noxia felix,
Et malè consultis pretium est, prudentia fallit,
Nec fortuna probat causas sequiturque merentes :
Sed vaga per cunctos nullo discrimine fertur.*

So far the Poet seems to repine at Providence, but at last submits to the supreme Being, who sweetly, yet with Force governs us, whom we must serve to the best of our Power, even with the Loss of our own Lives, and cheerfully lay them down, if necessary to obtain the Possession of him.

*Scilicet est aliquid quod nos cogatque regatque
Majus, & in proprias ducat mortalia leges.
Quid cælo dabimus, quantum est quo veneat omne ?
Impendendus homo est, Deus esse ut possit in ipso.*

^f Several famous Chymists have upon this Account been looked upon by some, as if they had been Brethren of the Rosy-Crofs; such as Hermes or Mercurius Trismegistus, Raymond Lully, Arnoldus of Villanova, Flamel, Paracelsus, Glauber, &c.

was entrusted with three important Secrets, perpetual Motion^z, the Art of changing Metals, and an universal Physick.

WHAT can be thought of such a Society, which is supposed perfect in itself^h, adorned with universal Knowledge, possessed of all worldly Treasures, exempt from all human Infirmities; yet no more known or seen than if it had been composed of pure Spirits: All we can say is, that it bears a great Resemblance to, and deserves to be ranked amongst Fairy-Tales. We must own nevertheless that the common People are delighted, and love to entertain themselves with such Fooleriesⁱ. So the World is like to be for ever pestered with Quacks and Fools.

MUCH about that Time, the pretended Enlightned Brethren, mentioned in the last Note, occasioned some Rumour in Spain, as the Rosicrucians had done; and we must not omit giving our Readers some Account of them. The Singularity of their Notions, some Points in which they either did, or other People were resolved to believe they did agree with the Rosicrucians, made them be esteemed one and the same Sect. Neither shall we pretend to multiply Parties and Divisions, but rank these Enlightned Brethren amongst the most dangerous kind of contemplative Men, and the most wicked Quietists; if what is reported of them be true, that they believed that when the Mind is wholly absorbed in mental Prayer, and intimately united to God, it does not become guilty of any of the Crimes committed in that State by the Body. They moreover held, that the Sacraments were useless, &c. that all good Works were supplied by Raising the Heart to God. The Inquisition taxed them with maintaining seventy-six erroneous Opinions; and this is not to be wondered at, since that Tribunal is known to be very nice, and to require an extraordinary Exactness in religious Matters. These inlightned Brethren made their Appearance about the end of the sixteenth Age: But the Inquisition put an early Stop to the Progress of their Fanaticism. They shewed themselves again in the Neighbourhood of Seville, in the beginning of the seventeenth Age, at which Period of Time they were esteemed to be Rosicrucians.

THE Low Countries, and Picardy, produced likewise, about 1525, some such Enlightned Brethren as those of Spain. A Taylor named Quintin, and one Copin of much the same Trade, were the Ringleaders of the Enlightned Flemish Men; for in those Days, every Man was thought qualified to preach. They are accused of holding, that Intention alone makes the Sin, that the Spirit of God partakes of all the Actions of Men, and that Innocency of Life consists only in being calm and easy, without giving way to any Doubts or Scruples. This Intention, which alone makes the Sin, does not differ very widely from the Mind intimately united to God, whilst the Body wallows in Crimes. What dreadful Consequences might not follow from ^z Merkes, lib. 1. chap. 13. gives the Particulars, and explains these three Secrets.

^h See Licetus, in his Philosophia Harmonico-Magica, Fratrum de Rosæ Cruce. Meyer, a German, has published an Apology for them, under the Title of Silentium post Clamores, &c. Two Englishmen, Robert Field and John Heiden, wrote likewise in their Favour. The last mentioned, according to Marhof, tom. 1. lib. 1. ch. 13. of his Polychester, pretends there is a great Power in Numbers to raise Spirits, and work strange Miracles in Nature. But Merkes does not say that the Rosicrucians were Adepts in that Art.

ⁱ The Rosicrucians were much talked of in France in the first 15 or 20 Years of the last Age, and several, who pretended to be of that Society, were cast into Prison. The foolish Credulity of the People was raised by the following Bill posted up in all publick Places: "We who are Deputies from the Rosicrucians, and dwell visibly or invisibly in this Town, by the Grace of the most High shew and teach, without Books or Notes, to speak all the Languages of the Countries where we please to live, to deliver our Fellow-Creatures from deadly Error." In 1613, a Rosicrucian of Barbary, named Muley-Ibn-Hamet, with a handful of Men, having overcome the King of Fez and Maroc, was, they said, to conquer Spain. Some pretended Enlightned Brethren appeared then in Spain, but were soon quelled by the Inquisition.

such Doctrine, in a State governed by Fanaticks so united to God, and so perfectly weaned from Matter?

BOHEMIANS.

THIS Sort of People being the Dregs and Sink of all Nations, our Readers may wonder to see them placed amongst Fanaticks and Enthusiasts: yet we are obliged to give an Account of them, by reason of their Origin, which has some remarkable Particulars in it. We give them the Appellation of Bohemians, the Germans call them Zigenners, from which the Italians name them Cingares. Borel^k informs us, that Boem, in the old Language of the Gauls, signifies bewitched, which seems to agree with the Notion of common People, that they can foretel what is to happen, discover hidden things, and are well versed in Witchcraft. They go from Place to Place, having no fixed Abode, as the antient Germans did; and in the North, the Druideffes^b, the Sybils, the Voles and Fairies, so often mentioned by the old Gauls. Their first Rise seems owing to the Remains of the Druids, who were brought into so much Contempt by Christianity, that having lost all Credit and Power in the Towns and Cities, they were obliged to dwell in Caves, and to wander about the Country. Beggars and Vagrants are apt to associate together, which renders it probable, that others from Africa and Asia may have joined themselves to those Druids; for instance, the Kaulits of Persia, who, like our Bohemians, run about the Country, live in solitary Places, and have no Religion or publick Worship, or Rules, or any Laws: They swarm all over Persia, and from thence spread Southward to Arabia and Egypt, Northward to Tartary, and more distant Places. Accordingly we call them Gypsies, upon the same Account for which the Saxons give them the Name of Tartars^d. Our over-credulous Ancestors vainly imagined, that those Gypsies or Bohemians were so many Spies for the Turks, and that in order to expiate for the Crimes which they had committed in their own Country, they were condemned to steal from and rob the Christians. A rare Penance! We have performed such another, tho' in a nobler and more heroical Manner, by taking the Cross, and making War against those Infidels. But our Opinion, that the Bohemians come from the Southern Parts of Asia and Africa (which our Forefathers did not distinguish from Egypt, before the Way of going to the East-Indies by the Cape of Good Hope was found out) is grounded upon the Testimony of one of the most ancient Authors who wrote concerning them. He^e relates, “that in 1433, the Ciganes, “who pretended they were Egyptians, came to Germany,” and according to another old Writer cited by Pasquier^f, they likewise came to France much about the same time^g. The Story is somewhat curious: “They were, says that Author, by “Extraction of the Lower Egypt; and having abjured the Christian Faith, were

^a Recherches & Antiquités Gauloises, &c.

^b See Keisteri Antiq. Sept. & Celt, &c. 8. Hanov. 1720.

^c Chardin, tom. 8. of his Travels, in 12 edit. of 1711. p. 244 and following, says, the Kaulites are so called from one Kau, who cohabited with his own Sister, whose Name was Ly. They are also called Korbetis and Koboalis, which Words signify the Crime against Nature. So they are looked upon as detestable People, guilty of all Crimes, Incest, &c. They may owe their Origin to the Uxians, who dwelt in the greater Armenia at the Source of the River Tigris, and went about the Country telling Fortunes, as the Bohemians.

^d Tartars, because the Saxons think they come from Tartary, through Russia and Poland.

^e See Fromman de Fascinat. p. 527. Ciganes & Zigenners may be derived from Egypt, Gypsies, and the Spaniards call them Gitanos.

^f Recherches, lib. 4. chap. 19.

^g In the Year 1427.

“drove from their native Country, became miserable, and in Abomination to all Mankind : the then Emperor rejected them also, as other Christian Powers had done, and told them they should go to the Holy Father at Rome They went, confessed their Sins . . . and he enjoined them to go and travel about the World, doing Penance, not lying in a Bed, &c. . . . This they performed for five Years before they came to Paris ; the chief of them arrived there on the seventeenth of August 1427, the rest on the Day of the Decollation of St. John ^h.” The same Writer says, that the Ears of all of them were bored through, and had a Ring, sometimes two, at each Ear ; their Complexion was very black, and their Hair frizzled ; the Women also very black and ugly, and their Hair like a Horse’s Tail ⁱ. The Habit of these Women was of old coarse Flax ; some of them were Witches, and looked into Peoples Hands to tell them their Fortune. In a word, these Egyptians, banished Apostates, despised by all Mankind, and condemned by the Pope to a wandering Life ^k, bear a vast Resemblance to our Bohemians. After all, the said Author cited by Pasquier says the Pope did excommunicate them, and all those who had their Fortune told to them, and that from Paris they went to Pontoise, on Lady-day in September.

WE are inclined to trace the Origin of the Bohemians still higher than those Egyptians, the antient Druids, the Kaulies of Persia, or the Uxians of Armenia : Why may they not owe their Rise to the ^l Messalians, wandering and dispersed in Thracia, Bulgaria, &c. who were mistaken for Sectaries and Hereticks of divers Kinds, under the Name of Manichæans, and upon whom the Compilers of Heretical Catalogues have liberally bestowed a great Number of ^m odious Appellations ; by which, in Process of time, they became more black and hateful to Orthodox Christians, than the very Devils ⁿ in Hell. The Messalians are supposed to have had their Beginning under the Reign of the Emperor Constantius : They were but few at first, their number increased gradually, and when they were taken notice of, as the Writers of the fourth Age charged them with most of the Manichæan ^o Principles, they were reckoned amongst those Hereticks. The first Penal Laws against Schismaticks and Hereticks were enacted at that time, and put in Execution against the Messalians, who being prosecuted, from Pagans and Idolaters, as they were thought to be rather than Christians^p, became most orthodox ^q Christians out of Fear or Policy or Self-Interest.

As the Messalians are mentioned here only as bearing some Resemblance with the Bohemians, we shall only relate what may evidence their Conformity of Sentiments and Practice. They did not work, and lived by the Alms which they received, to ^h August the 29th.

ⁱ The French Word Flossaye comes from the German Language Flax, and still it is called Flassade in Langue-doe.

^k This Penance is certainly fabulous, see Pasquier about it.

^l In Greek, Euchites Praying. The Word Messalian comes from the Hebrew or Chaldaick, Tsala, in the Participle Mood Metjala, one who prays ; because those Sectaries pretended to long Prayers. Others derive their Name from the Arabian Word Mosul, which signifies Affyria, because their Heresy began in that Country.

^m In a Book wrote against them by Euthimius Zigabenus, and printed in 1696 by Tollius, they are called Enthusiasts, Atheists, Blasphemers, and made up of divers Heresies.

ⁿ They were also charged with adoring the Devil, for fear he should hurt them, and upon that Account the Name of Satanians was given to them.

^o To the Manichæan Heresy of two Principles they had joined others about the Sacraments, the Cross, the Blessed Virgin, the Saints, the Nature and Corruption, &c.

^p The Orthodox were then, and are still called Christians, without any Addition in Spain, Italy, and other Places.

^q The Ecclesiastical History says, that the Manichæans affected to appear very devout, and to use the same Expressions as the Orthodox, &c.

imitate the Apostles whom Christ had forbid having any Possession. This constant Idleness, their voluntary Poverty, their Contempt of all the Conveniences of Life, and of all Government, could not but lead them by Degrees into a total Neglect of Discipline, and of all Laws: This occasioned great Crimes and Disorders in their Society; and amongst the sincere Messalians, many others crept in who minded nothing less than their Prayers. They were therefore accused both of living together without observing any Order, any Rule, or even the most common Decency, and of being true Cynicks, who after wandering all Day in the Fields, met at Night, and lay in the same Place, without any regard to Age, Sex, &c. The Orthodox moreover charged them with maintaining that we ought always to follow the Dictates of Nature, to eat, to drink, to ease one's self when it requires it, and that no Fast is to be observed but when necessary for the Preservation or Recovery of Health. Besides all this, the Orthodox of those Days reproached them with their Meetings and Nocturnal Feasts, in which they were guilty of all the Abominations with which the Pagans had heretofore taxed the Christians, and which have since been laid to the Charge of other modern Hereticks, to render them more odious to the Roman Catholics.

WE find in Italy, about the close of the thirteenth Century, some Fraticelli, who were also called Bizoqui, that is, Bigots or Clownish, upon account of their unpolished way of Life, or because they pretended to a greater and more refined Devotion. The other Name of Fraticelli, that is little Brothers, either was given them because the first of them were Monks, or rather it is the same as the Name of Adelphians, which was bestowed upon the Messalians: We shall soon see that there was some Conformity of Sentiments betwixt them: Their chief Doctors were Pietro Maurato and Pietro di Fossombrone; but an Apostate Monk from the Convent of Pongilupi, was their Ringleader; at least 'tis so reported. Be that as it will, these Fraticelli wandered about the Country like the Messalians, to avoid the Persecutions raised against them, upon account of their lewd Life, and of the Errors which they held, the necessary Consequence whereof was their said disorderly Behaviour. Both the Fraticelli and Messalians pretended that all Goods ought to be in common, and condemned living by the Work of one's Hands. They deny all Obedience to Magistrates, allowed a Plurality of Wives, and those to be in common; to which the Grecian and Italian Orthodox added the heinous Imputation of holding their Meetings in the Night, to be more at liberty to commit all sorts of Crimes. We shall inform our Readers in another Dissertation, that the Ringleaders of the fanatical Anabaptists, and several of their Followers, were guilty of those three Capital Errors: which may serve both as an indirect Proof that the Fraticelli and Messalians probably might not be accused without some Grounds; and, by consequence, as a Justification of the Severities used against them. But, after all, it must be owned, that some particular Persons might live and die in that Sect, without being acquainted with the bad Principles of their Teachers, or of their evil Tendency, as but too many do even amongst the Orthodox; and tho' Heresies ought to be detested, certainly the inveterate Hatred against the Persons is highly to be censured. Dilige homines, interdice errores.

BUT to return to our Messalians of Greece and of the East, and to our Italian Fraticelli: If there were amongst them so many professed Libertines, as the Historians and Controvertists of those Times mention; Ignorance joined to the Persecutions raised against them, may have been the Occasion of their actually putting in Execution all the Enormities of their false Doctrine. A young Person, for instance, commits a Crime, and by that infamous Action loses his Reputation; he is despised, abandoned by every one; so out of Despair runs headlong into Ruin and Misery. This Example needs no further Comment.

* By these Particulars, the Messalians must likewise have been Adamites.

WE must likewise take notice here, that both antient and modern Controvertists have often represented Sects and Heretical Systems as more dangerous than they appear to have really been. Some may pretend to excuse this Fault under Colour of an unbounded Zeal against Heresy; but Zeal ought not to be bitter, or to destroy Charity; and whilst a fiery and subtile Controvertist inveighs too harshly against the Person of an erroneous Opinion, he often does more Mischief to publick Society, than the very Person who had taken it up without much Consideration, and probably might as easily have dropped it, if Pride and Shame had not (such is human Frailty!) prompted him to maintain it with Obstinacy. This same false Zeal has often made the said Writers tax one and the same Sect with maintaining inconsistent and evidently contradictory Opinions; it cannot be denied that Iniquity belies itself, Scripture says it, and we daily experience it. But that so many inconsistent Propositions should so often be justly charged upon one and the same Sect, is not very much to be credited. The Authors of those Imputations have been sensible of this Defect in the Accounts by them given; and instead of owning honestly their Mistake, have invented new Names of Derision and Contempt, to upbraid the Sects which they had accused wrongfully of such palpable Contradictions: Thus the Manicheans, the Messalians, &c. were called by a Name which in Greek signifies a Mixture of all sorts of Errors: Thus the Albigenses, the Waldenses, the Lutherans and Calvinists, have been nicknamed, the Sink and Dregs of all prior Hereticks^f.

THE Name of Adelprians, bestowed on the Messalians, was taken from Adelphius, one of their Teachers: Flavian, Patriarch of Antioch, having with great Art inveigled him to discover the most secret Articles of the Doctrine which he held and taught, obtained that he should be banished from Syria.

BUT to conclude our Account of those Sectaries; by wandering about, they in Process of Time went further and further from the Place of their Origin. The Persecutions they suffered, and ill Treatment they received from the Catholics, as we have said before, had as great a Share in banishing them from Cities and great Towns, and rendring them odious, as their erroneous Opinions and wicked Life. As they spread, so did their Doctrine, and it is highly probable, that in Europe as well as in Asia, they met many Libertines who gladly associated themselves with them, upon account of the idle and lazy Life so much recommended by that Sect. Tares soon grow amongst the good Corn^g, and the common People who are apt to form their Judgment from particular Instances to general Conclusions, easily mistook the good Corn for Tares. Thus they settled in Greece, in Thracia, Bulgaria, Transylvania, Hungary, and at last in Bohemia. In all the Countries where the Slavonian

^f The Greek Word is Pammigeis, or Polyonymoi, which denote a Sect of several Names, and a Mixture of all. This was in order to palliate the above-mentioned Contradiction. The Latin Word Collucies may likewise be interpreted a Rabble or Sink; and was given them with the same Intention.

^g Let no one mistake our Meaning, by good Corn we only understand some well-meaning People, some Truths which lie concealed under most Errors, and are only pressed too far, and by false Conclusions carried to Excess, which is the Fault of all Sects, because most Christians and others follow the outward Shew, and but few of them are capable, or will give themselves the trouble to think.

Language is understood, the Messalians themselves took, or their Enemies in Derision gave them, the Name of ^u Bogomiles.

THEIR Abode in Bulgaria and the neighbouring Countries, has rendered the Word ^x Bulgare odious throughout Europe, chiefly in France and Italy. It may likewise be presumed, that they went from Bulgaria and Hungary into Bohemia, at a time when the Bohemians began to rebel against the Church, and that upon that Account the Orthodox took the Bohemians to be the same as the Bogomiles or Messalians. This being also a critical Time for the Church of Christ, and many Beggars and miserable Wretches taking part in these Divisions, all were blended under the same Denomination. Thus at last the Name of Bohemians is universally given to Vagrants and Runaways, who have no settled Notions, Laws or Religion, who in well-governed Kingdoms ^y are banished from all Cities or Towns, and dwell in Caves and solitary Places, and live only by begging or stealing. If the Romantick Stories (mentioned in the publick Gazettes concerning some of those Bohemians, who within a few Years have made Inroads through High and Low Germany) were of any Authority or to be credited; the Proofs ^z of Courage which they are said to give, must appear very singular and strange.

The PROPHETS or CONVULSIONARIES of ENGLAND.

WE must now return to the Prophets of the Cevennes: They brought over into England their Fanatical Enthusiasms^a. There many through Weakness of Judgment, or out of Malice or Libertinism, were disposed to receive such Impressions of Folly, that even some Persons of note favoured the new Prophets, and made a strong Party in their favour; and for a considerable Time it had the desired Applause and Success. The Particulars of which we must now introduce.

IN the Year 1706, towards Winter, three Camisars, Marion, Fage and the above-mentioned Cavalier, thought fit to take up again (in London, and before the most considerable and clear-sighted Witnesses in the World) and counterfeit, as they had done in the Cevennes, prophetick Inspirations. The Reputation of the Camisars, the Circumstances of a bloody War with France, the inveterate Animosity of the French Refugees against their Country, which had treated them as a Stepmother about twenty Years before, some who were inclined to Libertinism, and hoped this would prove a favourable Opportunity of bringing the antient Scripture Prophecies into disgrace; all these concurring to the same end, made the new Prophecy believed by some, and protected by others. These various Motives inspired People with ^u In the Sclavonian Language, Bog they say signifies God, and Myle is the same as Mercy; a Bogomile therefore is one who implores God's Mercy.

^x From Bulgare, which Name the Messalians bore, comes another Word well known in Italy, France and England, not proper to be mentioned.

^y By the Statutes made under the Reign of Henry VIII. and his two Daughters..... Bohemians or Gypsies, tho' but fourteen Years old, are condemned to the Gallows, if they stay above a Month in England..... before the Month is expired, they only lose their Effects.... See Memoires, &c. p. 31. In France they are liable to be sent to the Gallies.

^z Some News Papers in 1731 inform us, that it was a Mark of Honour amongst those German Bohemians to have no Ears, that one was cut off at their being admitted into the Confraternity, and the other at the first heroical Action which they performed; but who can rely on such Reports, given out by Weekly Authors, to whom Truth and Falshood are equal, so their Paper is filled.

^a The Camisars came over to England to concert Measures, and find Means to return into their Country; and had the Siege of Toulon succeeded, the English and Dutch would probably have enabled them to do it.

divers Notions concerning this prophetical Mission. A cotemporary Author assures us^b, that some “ believed they were sent to beat up for Soldiers to help their Countrymen..... and some might flatter themselves, that the pretended Voice of God “ could not be withstood, when he gave absolute Orders for Raising an Army to “ protect a Country in which he had wrought so many Wonders..... one of “ their chief Agents could not help owning, that all their Aim in this whole Intrigue, was only to obtain some Succours to be sent to the Cevennes..... Others “ were of opinion, that this Gift of Prophecy was an Effect of a disordered Imagination..... Most were fully persuaded, that the new Prophecy was an artful “ Trick, that the Prophets had been instructed to perform those extatick Motions, “ as Tumblers learn to dance and cut Capers upon the Rope : to prove which, the “ same Writer says, that the Camisars had trained up many Disciples in London, “ who could imitate them so much to the Life, that if they thought fit they might “ raise another Company of Prophets. And if so, if this Prophecy was purely an “ Art only to be learnt, why might not the antient Prophecies have the same “ Original ? at least the Free-thinkers, who delight in reviling and boldly canvassing “ the highest Mysteries of revealed Religion, often made that Objection the Subject “ of their Mirth and profane Discourses.”

THE open and avowed Promoters and Abettors of the new Prophetical School, were Men of too much Sense and Understanding, to look upon those Men as well-meaning and true Fanaticks. The three most considerable of those Protectors of the Prophets, were of a Character very opposite to Fanaticism : Their Names are Lacy an English Gentleman, who became first one of their Disciples, then a Prophet of high Reputation in that Seminary of inspired Men, and at last wrote ^c a large Book of Prophecies, Sir Richard Bulkley, a Knight : And Fatio de Duillier a Zwitzer, or of Geneva by Birth ; he was a famous Mathematician, and taxed at the same time with want of Religion, and as liking none of those which were extant ^d in the World : This last is said to have been both the Secretary^e and the Inspirer of the Prophets. There was a fourth called Misson^f, who published the Miracles of this Prophecy. The Prophets themselves were, as we said before, Marion^g who was under the immediate Care and Direction of Fatio : Fage, who is represented as the poorest of all Mortals : Cavalier, whose Character rendered him very fit for the Prophetical Operation, in what concerned the Bodily Motions, and exterior Enthusiasm ; but his Behaviour was not serious enough for such a Part, and his Memory often failed him. Flotar a Prophet, an Agent and Treasurer for his Brethren in London, and in the Cevennes : He was more cunning and lucky than the rest, if what is reported of him be true, that the Spirit which moved him in the Disbursement of the Money allowed him to take for his own Use what he thought fit. Allut a Joiner, and his Wife Henrietta ; lastly, one Betty or Elizabeth Gray, who had been a Candle-Snuffer at the Playhouse. Marion's Spirit made him print his Prophecies in 1707. Much about the same Time Lacy published two Collections of Prophecies, with this^h Approbation from the ^b Clavis Prophetica, or A Key for the Prophecies, printed at London in 1707. This Citation is conformable to the Meaning of the Book.

^c The Eternal Spirit's Admonitions by his Servant John Lacy. He often prophesied in French, tho' his Book is in English. He was either a Madman or a great Cheat.

^d See Clavis Prophetica. He is charged with saying, that Truth without any Mixture of Errors is not to be found in any Religion. If he meant only as to the practical Part, he was but too much in the Right.

^e See Clavis Prophetica, pag. 6 & 7.

^f Known by his Voyage into Italy, and his Theatre des Cevennes.

^g Clavis, &c. p. 7 and fol. Fatio published Marion's Collection.

^h See First Letter to Misson, about Comical Miracles, London 1707.

Spirit, called, The Eternal Spirit, placed at the Beginning of the Work, Let this be printed.

THIS prophetick Play or Cheat, was at first performed with much Simplicity, the Convulsions and Declamations were not so violent as afterwards. The Invectives were only in general, and according to the antient Custom of the Sects opposite to the Papists; that is, the Prophecies were only levelled against Babylon and Antichrist, by which every Protestant knows that Rome and the Pope are meant. This was sufficient, says the Author of the Key, “to inflame the Zeal of the Reformed, few of themⁱ can be thoroughly angry with those who cunningly handle that Subject, with the most bitter Imprecations.” But the Generality was in an Error, a Roman Antichrist, a Popish Babylon were not attacked then; their Invectives were against a Babylon an Antichrist supposed to be in the Bosom of the Reformation. The Spirit moved them to say, that ^k Babylon and Antichrist are every where: “With these two Words, understood in a new Sense, they might say what they pleased against the Reformed Churches, even against the purest Part of the Reformation had any Complaints been made, any Clamours raised, the Spirit would have inspired them to say, We speak of Rome, we speak of the Pope. To this our new Prophets joined, the Conversion of the Jews, the approaching Reign of a thousand Years, and other Opinions which were not displeasing^l to all those who were inclined (in England, and elsewhere, there are many such) to believe Chimera’s and Visions.” Pharaoh and his Overthrow were not forgot by our Prophets; their Aim was against Lewis the XIV. England was also the Object of their Threats, then London in particular: Lastly, a general Slaughter and Downfall both of Church and State were foretold: The above-cited Key of Prophecies^m contains several such prophetick Inspirations.

THE Publication of such Fooleries sunk the Credit of our prophetical Party, which obliged them to have Recourse to the Working of Miraclesⁿ. In order to this, the Spirit ordered Lacy and his Scholars to go out of London, and retire into the Country. They soon came back; for scarce were they out of that great City, but the Spirit seized Lacy, and declared that neither he nor any of his Adherents should be ashamed of being the Ministers of the Lord. “The Prophet overjoyed at so glorious a Commission, rose from his Seat, went several times round the Room, counterfeiting with his Voice the Beat of a Drum to enlist Soldiers. He then sat down again, beat to the Right and to the Left with his Fists upon his Chair, as if playing on a Kettle-Drum, not forgetting now and then the Exercise of the Gun, of the Colours Waving, of drawing a Sword, or presenting the Pike. These Motions being over, he got up a second time, and walked gravely four or five times about the Room, imitating with his Voice, and by the Motion of his Hand, the Marching of a Regiment. All this ended in a long Discourse. The next Day the Prophet sounded a Charge, and made some military Motions before he spoke or sung, in very bad French, these fine Words, O God you will make us dance; our Spirits shall put in Action all the Members which are able to serve you for the Celebration of the approaching Solemnities.” This said, our English Prophet went about a new kind of Sacrament, which he instituted for those who were to ⁱ Key, p. 16. Marion’s Prophecies, p. 96. The Spirit says, “Child, Antichrist is not in one Place only, there are more Antichrists than one upon Earth, do not deceive yourselves, Antichrist is in all Places, you have all had some Share in his erroneous Actions.” This is conformable to the Opinion of Fatio.

^k Key, p. 18. Fatio had taken Pains to know the Bent of the People’s Mind.

^l Key, p. 25, and following.

^m See the Letter to Misson as above.

ⁿ Second Letter to Misson, &c. p. 2.

be initiated to prophesy. But we must first relate^o the various Motions of these Prophets, their extravagant Postures, and their extatick Agitations taken by the Author from the marginal Notes of the Prophetical Admonitions, and which may justly be called the Evolutions of the Exercise of Prophecy. “ 1. Here the Prophet points (or “ seems so to do) a Dagger to his Heart. 2. He lifts up his Fist and shakes it, “ looking out of a Window to the North. 3. He goes from that Window to another, towards the East. 4. He sheds Tears, and turns his Arm in a piteous “ Manner. 5. He extends both his Hands open. 6. He goes to the North. 7. He “ runs to the East. 8. He stretches his Arms to the North and to the West. “ 9. He lifts up his Hand with a threatening Countenance, and moves his Hand, “ as if he was whipping somebody. 10. He sits down with a thoughtful Air, “ looks up, and looks down. 11. He falls on his Knees, prays with a fervent “ Devotion, goes upon his Knees from one end of the Room to the other, moves “ his Arms on each Side very quick, imitates the Movement of the Pendulum of a “ Clock, puts himself upon his Guard, as if he was fencing, he makes a Push, &c. “ 12. He whistles like a Blackbird.” This is not common; few People would have expected to see a Prophet whistle. The Miracles answered exactly the Prophet’s Agitations: Bess Gray, at the Age of fifteen or sixteen, from a Candle-Snuffer at the Playhouse, was raised to the Dignity of the Woman-Sister to our Prophet Lacy, and was likewise become a Prophetess, and as such was instrumental in several Miracles. One Day she was seized with a Palsy, and was so numbed, that she could not use her Limbs. Lacy having first laid his Hand upon her, was in great Agitations, and made wry Faces: Then, with a majestick Tone, becoming an inspired Person, he told her, I reserve you for great things..... I shall put my Bracelet upon your Arm..... He took the Girl’s Arms, placed them on his Bosom, devoutly lifted his left Arm, saying, I shall put a Chain about your Neck, and suddenly put his Arm about her Neck..... The Miracle soon followed, the Palsy left her, and the Numbness of her Limbs went off. On another Occasion, the little Prophetess became blind; she was carried to another Chamber, threw herself upon the Bed, staid about twenty Minutes, prayed, and was in an Ecstasy. She had before given way to some Doubts, the Spirit which was to restore her to her Sight, reprimanded her severely for that Want of Faith, but was at last appeased, and inspiring by Turns the Prophet and the Prophetess, she entered into a Dialogue^p, the Conclusion of which was, that little Bess Gray recovered her Sight: Prophet Lacy wrought that Miracle, by striking gently thrice with his two Thumbs the Eyes of the pretended blind Woman. We shall barely mention the wonderful Cure of the Vapours, and feigned Convulsions of the Prophetess^q, how happily the Spirit directed the Prophet’s Hand to the Throat of the Patient, thence to her Bosom, &c. How the Name of this little Prophetess was changed, and she called Sara, and married to Abraham Lacy^r, and both became

^o First Letter to Misson, &c. p. 8.

^p The Dialogue is a Master-Piece of Libertinism. “ Lord, I come to crave your Help, you only can “ cure me. Lacy. What ails you? Betty. Lord, you know I am blind. You may restore my Sight “ to me. Lord, your Hand must do it. Come quickly. L. Child, how long have you been blind, “ and how did it happen? (Lacy had been present all the Time.) B. Lord, you know it. L. Why do “ you come to a Man. who cannot give you your Sight? B. I have been brought to you to be cured. “ L. By whom? B. By the good and Holy Spirit. L. Then the Honour of the Cure will be due to “ that eternal Spirit, which sends and gives the healing Faith: Will you attribute the whole Glory of “ your Cure to that holy Spirit only? B. Yes, Lord, I will.”

^q Key, p. 19.

^r Lacy, in the Height of Enthusiasm, called this noble Marriage the Eternal Wedding betwixt him and his Beloved.

the Parents^f of the new Believers: The wonderful Vocation of the Mathematician to the Office of an Apostle, after which he obtained of the Spirit the Power to confer the full Efficacy of it by the Imposition of his Hands; the Particulars of this Calling we refer to the Note^t, that we may have more Room to display the bold Undertaking of the prophetick Crew, who invited the whole Town to be Witnesses of Prophet Lacy's Raising a dead Person to Life. In order to perform this with Success, "the common dead Folks, who are daily buried, would not do, says "my Author" They must have one of their own Chusing; little Bess Gray, "who in the Country Journey had ended her Apprenticeship, undertook to play "that Part in London. The 17th of August, 1707, was the Day appointed. "Some English Gentlemen, curious Observers of the Prophetick Extasies, met at "the Place. . . . The little Comedian was in a deep Study and violent Agitation. "The Actors of this Comedy said she was at the last Extremity that her Breath "would be stopped, and Lacy should bring her to Life. . . . They had even engaged "a Physician of their Party to give some Authority to the Cheat But the "English Gentlemen present watched narrowly both the Girl and all their Proceed- "ings. The Scene lasted eight Hours their Intention was to tire out those "troublesome nice Inspectors; they stood it out, now and then they felt the "little Actress's Pulse, so that she could not find a proper Occasion to feign herself "dead." This Miracle failing, two small English Pamphlets^x were published against them, which ruined their Credit, and dispersed their Adherents and Admirers. Moreover, two Months before this happened, the then Lord Chief Justice had forbid their Assemblies, which probably obliged them to take the above-mentioned Country Journey. Prophet Marion, who was Fatio's Pupil, was condemned, as being arraigned and convicted of Imposture, Cheat and Impiety, in his pretended Prophecies. In the beginning of 1708, the Ring-leaders and Directors of the Faction were put in the Pillory, and from thence we may date their Dispersing themselves into other Countries.

THIS shameful Treatment did not entirely dishearten the Prophets: They had about that Time petitioned for Leave to have Meeting-houses, or Conventicles, as other Sects are allowed to have: They renewed their Demand, and presented a second Petition to the Queen. Moreover, as a great Number of Disciples still adhered to them, they were so impudent, as to fix the Fifth of June, 1708, for the Day on which a dead Person was to be raised by them to Life, and that on that Day, Doctor Emes, dead and buried, should rise again. The Crowd of those who met to see this Miracle was^g so prodigious, that the Government was obliged to send a Detachment of the Guards to Moorfields, where this wonder was to be performed, to prevent any Disorder. After all, the dead Man remained lifeless, and the Pro^f As Mother of the Faithful, she was inspired to work with the Prophets in the Lord's Vineyard. In Consequence of this Inspiration, Abraham (Lacy) embraced her, and blessed her in the Presence of the Prophets, who admired Sara's well-shaped Legs. This happened in their Country Journey. See Third Letter to Misson.

^t See Second Letter, p. 16. "The young cunning Baggage, Betty, took the Mathematician by the "Hand; he followed her, knelt like a Child before. . . Lacy, who made him a long Speech, with large "Promises from the Spirit. . . . He was to be a Pillar. . . in the House of God, to charm his Hearers with "his Eloquence, to obtain the Gift of healing the Sick, and of speaking unknown Languages: Lacy, to "ratify this Mission, gave to Brother Fatio the Name of Ijaac, instead of Nicholas, saying to him, You "shall be the Patriarch Ijaac; your Life will not be like his, as to all outward Appearances, you shall "wander, (This was fulfilled, the Prophet was pilloried, and went abroad,) you shall inherit the Promises "made to Abraham (Lacy); you must be subject to me, as Ijaac was to his Father, &c."

^g See Third Letter, pag. 19, and following.

^x The honest Quaker, and Enthusiastick Impostors. These little Books were published by those, who came to be Witnesses of the pretended Resurrection.

phets were put to their last Shift, and forced to charge this Disappointment on the want of Faith in those who were present.

In the Month of August, 1707, Lacy, and the other chief Leaders of that Sect, had established a new Way of celebrating the Lord's Supper^y. A Cloth was spread upon a Table, then a Plate was set upon it, and a Cup. Lacy, with his little Woman-Sister Prophetess, placed himself at the upper End; the other Prophets and Teachers sat round the Table; then Lacy rose up, went to the lower End, and being moved by the Spirit, addressed his spiritual Guests in the Words following. "Friends, " if I had not called you, you would not have come; I have prepared for you this " poor Treat, as to outward Appearance, but well furnished with spiritual Food: " I myself serve my poor Apostles, (he then took his former Place, and went on) " Drink this Wine, it costs me dear. . . . The Wine which I give you, is my Spirit " with his Grace, &c. Rising again, he went round the Table, took the Prophetess " by the Hand, and put it in his, saying, I here seal the Promises, of which this is " the solemn Sign, &c. He said the same to all present, bidding them eat spiritually; " which being over, he took off the Cup from the Plate, and presented the Plate to " every one round, saying, These are spiritual Riches, take some, and feed upon them." The Prophet Joiner Allut, being on a Communion-Day laid down on the Floor in a perfect Extasy, was by a special Privilege raised up by Lacy, who honoured him with a Speech; and having performed the Communion-Service, took Allut by the Hand, and both being inspired, and put in Motion by the same Spirit, they danced three or four Turns round the Room, singing, The Great King comes in Triumph. But we must not tire our Readers with such Fanatical Enthusiasm, mixt with Libertinism, Folly and Wickedness, so shall conclude with the comical Scene of their chusing a Patriarch: He was only to bear the Name, without any Authority; for theirs, and all Fanaticks constant Rule is, to own no Superior in their Church, but to root out ^z all the Bastard Plants by which it has been defiled. Thus they thought fit to vilify the Church of England. The Patriarch whom they chose was a Tavern-Boy about thirteen Years old. The Joiner proposed him, and gave an Account of his Merit; the Prophetess Betty laid her Hands upon him, and declared to the Assembly, that she would make him an Instrument of Glory; she changed his Name into that of Jacob. At that Instant, the prophetick Spirit seized Lacy; then the Joiner, then all present; the Teachers and Directors were in violent Agitations, the rest in an extatick Silence: At last, Allut, by the Impression of the Spirit, spake, and proclaimed aloud the strange Wonders, which were to be performed by the ^a Idiot whom they had raised to the patriarchal Dignity. Lacy said likewise, that he gave him his Hand of Association to work jointly with him in the Vineyard of the Lord.

These Fanaticks having lost all Credit in London, went and spread themselves in several Counties of England, and probably reached Scotland. The News-Writers, in 1709, published then, that a numerous Assembly of such Enthusiasts met in that Kingdom, under the Direction of a Highlander, named Mackmillan; that they preached, and performed other Acts of Devotion in the open Fields, that they had a Way, peculiar to themselves, of celebrating the Lord's Supper, (of which they do not give any Account) that they thundered out Excommunications against all those who pretended to Divination, to Witchcraft, all who had taken the Test ^b, or received the Communion kneeling, according to the Church of England's Rubrick. They were looked upon by some in Scotland, as Jacobites and Enemies to the established Government ; others thought them to be the Remains of those Cameronians ^c above-mentioned ; or some of the Camisars, condemned in England, and retired into Scotland. However, these Prophets soon left England, and fled into Holland and Germany. Allut and his Brethren stayed several Months at Amsterdam, and formed there a small Society, which was composed, as in England, of three Sorts of Fanaticks, Fools, Libertines, and Ignorant ; and amongst them, they had the Satisfaction of winning over to their Party ^d a Lady, in whom resided, as a Deposit, the precious prophetick Spirit, which had inspired the famous Jurieu to maintain the forlorn Cause of the Prophets in Dauphiné. All those enthusiastic Prophets, who could meet again together, have, since that Time, made up a small Sect, not much taken notice of by Strangers, nor even by the Inhabitants of Amsterdam. They usually held their Assemblies ^e in a House which is out of the Jurisdiction of that City, where, without any great Noise, they went on with their prophetick Extasies, and convulsive Motions.

^y Second Letter, p. 4.

^z The same Letter, p. 9.

^a He could neither read nor write.

The FRENCH CONVULSIONARIES.

THESE do not make a Sect, are not guilty of Heresy or Schism ; they are a Set of Men not easy to be defined, and upon whose State and Condition we are not able to frame a certain Judgment ; they pretend (and give all possible Proofs of their Sincerity in that Particular) to have nothing but Truth and the Glory of God at Heart. The Convulsionaries owe their Origin to Miracles wrought at the Tomb of Francis de Paris, who lies interred at St. Medard's, a Parish Church in the Suburbs of the City of Paris in France : His Father was a Counsellor of the Parliament of Paris, upon whose Death Francis, who was the eldest Son, resigned his Right to that high Office in favour of his younger Brother, to embrace a retired, poor, and penitential Way of Life in the Ecclesiastical State. The Severity of his Penance was such, that most of his Friends endeavoured, though without Success, to persuade him to moderate the Rigour of it. He appealed from the Constitution Unigenitus, published by Pope Clement XI. and renewed that Appeal several Times ; notwithstanding which he was made a Deacon, and died in the Odour of Sanctity, May 1. 1727. 'Till the Month of August 1731, the Wonders wrought at his Burying-Place were not accompanied with any considerable Difference from those mentioned in Scripture, or Ecclesiastical History. Those who were afflicted with Sicknes, begged the holy Deacons Intercession, were laid upon or under his Tomb-Stone (which was raised from the Ground) and were cured : But in August 1731. God was pleased to work his Miracles in a different Manner : Violent Pains, Agitations of the Body, extraordinary Convulsions, were the Means by which the Sick were healed, not all at once, but gradually. This happened to one Abbé Becheran, to Chevalier Follard, an antient Officer in the Army, and to several others. The Number of People afflicted with Convulsions increased so fast, and the Conse-

^b An Oath, by which the King is owned as supreme Head of the Church, both in Spirituals and Temporals ; and none other.

^c See above in the Dissertation concerning the Presbyterians.

^d Mrs. Jurieu.

^e Under Pretence of being Quakers.

quences of the Meetings at the Tomb appeared (or were represented to the King) so dangerous, that on the 27th of January 1732. he issued an Order to shut up the little Churchyard belonging to St. Medard's Parish, where Mr. De Paris was buried, and not to open it but when necessary for Burials. Some Weeks after Abbé Becheran was taken up, and confined at St. Lazare, and set again at Liberty about three Months after in June. But the Miracles and Convulsions did not cease upon these Oppositions; on the contrary, they daily spread farther, and gained Ground. Towards the end of the Year 1732, those who were in Convulsions began to foretel what is to happen, to discover hidden Secrets, to make Speeches, pathetic Exhortations, sublime Prayers; even those who at other times were wholly unable to perform any such things. In the Month of March 1733, the King forbade to make any publick Shew of the Convulsionaries, to meet in private Houses upon that Account, or to go and see those who were actually in Convulsions. These Wonders seemed wholly favourable to the Appellants; we must not therefore think it strange, that those who are for the Constitution wrote against them, nor that the Appellants maintained the Truth of them; and the Dispute was carried on upon that Issue for a considerable Time. But some Disorders being committed by the Convulsionaries, and some of them turning downright Fanaticks, a Division ensued even amongst the Appellants. Some reject all Convulsions, some admit them all; others, and these are the greatest Number, and of the greatest Authority, think it absolutely necessary to examine every Fact, according to the Rules settled by Tradition, pay all due Respect to what shall upon that Enquiry appear to come from God, and reject whatever is against good Order. However as these Convulsionaries own the Authority of the Catholick Church, are willing to stand to its Decision, may appeal to that very Decision, and will not make a Schism upon that Account, the Dispute still lasts, and is not like to end soon: We shall therefore content ourselves with Gama-liel's Verdict, Acts chap. v. vers. 38 and 39. If this Council, or this Work, be of Men, it will come to nought; but if it be of God, you cannot overthrow it. But if any of our Readers are desirous of knowing what is said on both Sides of the Question, they may have Recourse to the King's Edicts, the Declaration of some Physicians and Surgeons, appointed to examine some Convulsionaries; the present Archbishops of Sens and of Paris, their Pastoral Instructions, and to an infinite Number of Writings on that Side of the Dispute. On the Part of the Appellants, they may consult the Nouvelles Ecclesiastiques, the Bishops of Auxerre and Montpellier's Instructions, and the late Work, which Mr. De Montgeron had the Courage to present to the King, and for which he is still in Banishment.

A
DISSERTATION

On the Religion of the ANABAPTISTS.

THE Account contained in the foregoing Dissertation, might be only a Disposition, an Essay, or a Plan to raise new Sects. Prophecies, Visions, Convulsions, repeated Promises^a of repairing Mankind, and restoring Body and Soul to their Primitive Strength and Vigor, might be looked upon as Phænomena, portending new Revolutions in the latter Ages, or at least apt to weaken and intimidate the Minds of the Vulgar, who generally lean towards Prodigies and extraordinary Promises. A wandering Life^b, its natural Consequences, Misery and Crime, only served as a Proof that People who were thus united, though without Principles and Laws, might probably be the wretched Remains of some Sect of an antient Date fallen into Contempt. The present Subject is of greater Moment: We are to give an impartial Relation about a Sect, looked upon as fanatical^c in its Infancy; yet in Process of time, settled, owned, and, if we may say so, legitimated, tho' not trusted with any temporal Power. These are the Anabaptists, of whom the following Account will be conformable to the nicest Rules of Veracity, which we have hitherto deavoured to follow exactly.

THE common Opinion is, that the Patriarch of the Anabaptists in the Low-Countries, and the neighbouring Parts of Germany, was one Melchior Hofman, first a Tradesman^d, then a Preacher in 1525, or 1527. Having preached first in Livonia and other Places, he exercised his Ministerial Office at Embsen, where he left a Vicar, who spread the Doctrine of his Master in Holland^e. But we shall soon convince our Readers, that Anabaptism had a more early Beginning, five or six Years before Hofman's Mission. Luther reproaches him with the same Fault, of having taken upon him to preach without a Call, with which he himself, and all the other Reformers, had been charged. Our Readers may find an Account of Hofman in Bayle's Dictionary: His Opinions were fanatical and absurd. He pretended to be the Restorer of Christianity, and the Founder of a new Kingdom: He maintained that Christ had only one Nature, and could not be united to a Body taken from the Blessed Virgin, because all human Flesh was defiled and cursed. The whole Work of our Salvation, in his Opinion, depends entirely and solely on our Free-will, and he taught that Infant-Baptism was brought in by that Enemy of God and Men, Satan.

BUT that as it will, 'tis however certain that this Doctrine is of a much older Date than Hofman, and the other pretended Patriarchs of the Anabaptists, whose Tenets took their Rise much earlier. This we must first prove, and then proceed to give ^a The Rosicrucian Brethren.

^b The Bohemians or Gypsies.

^c The present Anabaptist Teachers pretend to abhor Fanaticism, and lay it from themselves upon those who infested Germany in the sixteenth Century.

^d He was a Furrier, and dealt in Skins. See a Citation in Bayle, in the Article Hofman.

^e He was afterwards put to Death at the Hague.

a clear but short Abstract of the Doctrine and Actions of those furious Enthusiasts, who openly embraced and became the Ringleaders of that Faction. We might easily trace the Footsteps of Anabaptism amongst the Heresies broached in the first Ages of Christianity. But we need not make a Shew of Erudition, by copying Books which are in every Body's Hands. We shall not go further back than the eleventh Century; in which lived in Brabant a Fanatick named Tankelm, after whom Muntzer and John Buckold, commonly called John of Leyden, the chief Leaders of the Fanatical Anabaptists of the sixteenth Century, seem to have copied: Tankelm pretended also to the Royal Dignity and Power; like them he had his Guards; a naked Sword and a Royal Standard were carried before him: His Life was equally criminal, and his Temper as cruel and barbarous; like them he infested the Country, by sending about his Emissaries and the People whom he had seduced; he preached in the open Fields, pretended to Prophecy and Inspiration; the Resemblance was as great in the Doctrinal Points. His Flock, and no other, was the Church; like all other Fanaticks he allowed every Layman to preach, &c. Some of his Disciples held that the Sacrament of Baptism was not necessary for the Salvation of Children. In the same Age, one Henry, a Follower of Peter de Bruis, was the Author of a Sect called Henricians, well known in Languedoc and throughout France by the Name of Albigenses, who were but a Spawn of former Hereticks and Manichæans, justly or unjustly so called; (for it must be acknowledged, that in those Days, whatever seemed contrary to the received Doctrine of the Church, or levelled against its Ministers, was branded with the odious Appellation of Manicheism.) This Henry and his Followers baptized People over again, exclaimed against Infant-Baptism, under Pretence that they could not believe, or receive any Instructions. They pretended likewise, as the Anabaptists of the sixteenth Century did since, that no Man ought to have any private or particular Possessions. We need not strictly inquire into all the Branches of this Sect of Henricians, Petro Brufians, or Albigenses; but we may look for and find amongst them the Forerunners and Preliminaries of Anabaptism. However we must take notice, that in the same Age one *Constantine Chrysomalus*¹ had taught at Constantinople, and published in his Writings, what is likewise the Doctrine of the Anabaptists, that to honour Princes and Magistrates is as criminal as to adore Satan; that Baptism given to Children does not make them truly Christians; because they are not yet capable of being instructed, As to Regeneration, and the Inspiration of the Holy Ghost, he maintained the same Opinions, and spoke like a true Quaker or Anabaptist. The Reader may see all these Particulars in Citations from original² Pieces.

WE need not mention some Men, who took upon themselves the Name of Apostolicks in the thirteenth Century; who from Italy, where they began to preach, spread throughout Europe. They are taxed likewise with rejecting Infant-Baptism; Doucain, their Chief, called his Sect the Spiritual Congregation, the Apostolical Order, and condemned the Church and its Head, as having been reprobate long before his Time. He bragged, as the Quakers have done since, that his Party was the only free and the only perfect. Poverty, Humility, Community of Goods he recommended, as the first Anabaptists did; he was positive, that War, Swearing, paying Tythes, Prosecutions, and hindering other Men from professing or doing what they pleased, were unlawful Actions: Preaching and Praying, he said, might be done every where, in the Woods or in the Streets, as well as in the Churches. He even allowed Wives to be in common, at least this is laid to his Charge. We might likewise prove, that the Waldenses and Bohemians held the same Doctrine ^h as the Anabaptists; but the latter own, and glory in it ⁱ.

¹ Under the Reign of John Commenus.

² See Allatius. lib. 2. ch. 11. De Eccles. Orient. & Occid. perpetua Consensione.

THIS is sufficient to prove, that the Anabaptists, like all other new Sects, have not even the Merit of Invention to boast of; but have taken up old Heresies broached long before. Now to fix the exact time of their renewing those ancient Tenets, we must with Bayle, Bossuett and other Authors, date it from the Year 1521; and own that their true Founders and Patriarchs were Nicholas Stork, Mark Stubner, and Thomas Muntzer: The Storm raised by Lutheranism in Germany, and the Doctrine preached by the Apostle of the Reformation, Martin Luther, gave them an Opportunity, and Grounds to build their System. He maintained that a Christian is the Master of all things, and not subject to any Power; whereas he who is not a Christian, is a downright Slave. We cannot but take notice, that Zeno and the Stoicks expressed themselves much in the same Terms, ^k and that it is very wonderful such Opinions did not encourage the Fanaticks, in the Time of Paganism, to rebel; as they did Christians in the latter Ages. But, to return to our Anabaptist Leaders: They first endeavoured to become popular, and gain the Affection of the vulgar sort; a necessary Step to bring on Revolutions, to settle a Sect, or form a powerful Faction, and without which it is not possible to draw in those of a higher Rank. Nicholas Storck, or Storch, born in Misnia, was very learned in the Opinion of some, whilst others thought him very ignorant; however he was crafty enough to act the Part of a Fanatick. He entertained his Countrymen the Misnians with strange Visions; Stubner more subtle and cunning, and Munzer ^l more bold and enterprizing than Storck, soon came in to his Help. Cotemporary Authors relate, that this Triumvirate won on the People, by a devout and mortified Countenance, they fasted, and practised other Severities, their Clothing was coarse, they let their Beards grow, and neglected entirely their bodily Welfare. They travelled through Germany, preaching up their pretended Gospel Liberty, which consisted wholly in renouncing all temporal Authority; and under Pretence that all Men were free, and of an equal Condition ^m, raising Rebellion against secular Princes. Muntzer, who was of a fiery, enterprizing, and seditious Temper, soon gathered a considerable Army, chiefly if not wholly composed of Country Fellows, with which he over-run and laid waste all Germany: This is the War which Historians call the Country-Peasants War ⁿ. At or before the Beginning of it, they published a Manifesto, which contained twelve Articles; in one of them they declared they would not obey any Princes or Magistrates beyond what should appear to them just and reasonable. Muntzer was at the Head of this Rebellion; his chief Favourite and Counsellor was one Pfeifer a Monk, who had left his Convent, and embraced the Doctrine of Luther. This Man acted the Part of a Fanatick and an Enthusiast to the Life,

^h See Tom. 3. of the Ceremonies, Dissertation on the Waldenses and Bohemians.

ⁱ See Apol. Anabapt. by Galen, and Hist. Mennonitar. by Schyn.

^k Wise Men only are free, are Kings, &c. was Zeno's fundamental Opinion, and he was the Founder of the Stoicks.

^l He had first been a Priest, then became Luther's Disciple, and in such Credit as to be looked upon as his Vicar.

^m He bragged, that God had made choice of him to pull down all temporal Power, being resolved to bear no longer with their unjust and vexatious Proceedings.

ⁿ This War broke out in 1524.

and bragged that God had given positive Orders to Muntzer for setting up an universal Liberty; accordingly the last mentioned took upon him the Title of The Servant of God against the Wicked. We shall not enter into the Particulars of this War, nor give an Account of all the pretended Visions and Revelations which they published, in order to promote a general Revolt; we shall only inform our Readers, that the Army of this Fanatick was entirely defeated in the Month of May, 1525, Muntzer and his Counsellor Pfeifer were both taken Prisoners, and beheaded. The Catholicks did not fail to charge the whole War, and its direful Consequences, on the erroneous and absurd Doctrine taught by Luther°.

MUNTZER, and his above-mentioned Associates, left behind them many Disciples, who laboured with great Industry to propagate his Sect; some went as Missioners of the new Gospel into Poland; others into Bohemia and Hungary. Hofman, as we said before, went into the Low-Countries, and Balthassar Hubmeyer preached the Anabaptists Opinions in Switzerland. The Sect increased so fast in this Country, that the Magistrates of Zurich thought fit at last to condemn their chief Teachers to Death. Before they published this Decree, which happened in 1530, Writings and Conferences were made use of to bring those Sectaries to a better Disposition. Hubmeyer, who had been banished by the Magistrates of Zurich, retired to Moravia, and was burnt at Pienna, in the Year 1527.

HIS Banishment did not put an end to Anabaptism in Switzerland; Blaurock, Felix Manz and Grubelius remained; these three Enthusiasts employed themselves to stir up the People to a Sedition, which obliged the Government to have recourse to Penalties more severe than Exile. Manz was drowned by publick Sentence; Blaurock whipt in the open Streets, then banished, but brought back to Prison, because he would not obey that Order¹.

SCHWENCFELT, who was first a Lutheran, became an Apostle of Anabaptism in Silesia. He taught², that the Flesh of Christ was not created, and that it was deify'd and absorbed in the Godhead. His Doctrine was so little different from the Generality of the Anabaptists, that it was not necessary to mention the Schwenefeldians, unless it was in order to increase the Number of imaginary Sects. The German Historian Zeiler, cited by Ott, who wrote the Anabaptistical Annals, mentions Schwenefeldians, settled in Moravia, as a distinct Sect; but nothing can be inferred from thence, except that each Congregation of those Fanaticks was distinguished by the Name of its Teacher or first Founder³. Hutter was seduced by Hubmeyer, and served to spread Anabaptism still more in *Moravia*⁴; his Flock was called *The Hutterian Brethren*⁵. David George, a Native of Delft, preached in his own Country, much about the same time as Hofman did. He is said to have assumed the Character of the Messiah, and of one sent by God to publish a new Adoption of Children of the Most High; he is likewise charged with denying the Resurrection, ° Luther was sensible at last, tho' too late, of the evil Tendency of his Principles, and to clear himself as much as he could, he wrote a Book against the Rebellion of these Country-Peasants.

¹ See Boyle, in the Article of Anabaptists; also the History of Anabapt. Edition of 1700. See likewise the Continuation of Fleury's Eccles. Hist. tom. 27 and 28. in Twelves; and other Writers.

He perished in the Tyrol. See Hist. of the Anab. above cited.

² See the Preface to Ott's Annals of Anabapt.

³ In the said Annals, in the Year 1570, there is a Citation which proves, that the Schwenefeldians did not differ from other Anabaptists. The same is very probably true of each other small Congregation.

⁴ This Hutter was a furious cholerick Enthusiast. His Letter to the Moravian Lords shews his Notions were not settled, nor his Designs, however, he was burnt at Innsbruck.

⁵ The Passage taken from Zeiler, makes mention likewise of another Flock, under the Appellation of Brethren Switzer: This was made up of those Anabaptists who fled from Switzerland.

and another Life, allowing Wives to be in common, pretending that Sin defiled only the Body ; of despising Martyrs, and maintaining that it was to no Purpose to suffer upon Account of Religion. As those who draw up Catalogues of Heresies are not very scrupulous and nice, they moreover accuse him of holding Opinions diametrically opposite to these already mentioned, such as, that the Souls of Infidels should be saved ; which Error is not to be reconciled to his denying the Resurrection. But Quacks in History, like those in Physick, are not ashamed even of plain Contradictions. David George retired to Basil, and died there : One Historian says *, that he was sentenced to be publickly whipt at Delft, that his Tongue was bored through, and he sent into Banishment for six Years : The same Author adds, that his Doctrine was thought so detestable and shameful by the other Anabaptists, that being excommunicated by them, he was forced to form a separate Congregation.

THE shameful Crimes against Chastity, with which the first Anabaptists have been charged, require that we should make a Digression to speak of the Antinomians †, otherwise called Islebians, because Agricola their Founder was of that Place. He taught, that the Law is of no Use, that good Works are unprofitable, and bad Actions hinder not Salvation ; that God does not chastise a whole Nation for its Sins ; that Crimes are such only when committed by the Wicked ; that the Faithful being once assured of Salvation, ought never to doubt of it ‡, whatever they may do against it ; that no Man ought to be troubled in his Conscience for his Sins ; that 'tis needless to exhort Christians to the Practice of their Duty ; that Christ alone being holy and full of Grace, he alone does good Actions ; and that, let the Lives of Christians be ever so disorderly, the Faith in the Gospel-Promises sets them in the Way to Happiness. This is the Description given of Agricola's Doctrines, which are after all but Consequences drawn by his Enemies from his Manner of explaining some Passages of Saint Paul's § Epistles. We do not by this intend to justify Agricola ; all here meant is only that Controvertists are not always fair Disputants, but charge their Adversaries with Consequences which they disown. See that good Man Garasse's comical Mistake about Agricola ¶, in the Note.

The Severity of the Edicts published in Germany and Switzerland against the Anabaptists, and several of them being punished according to the Rigor of those Orders, were the Occasion of the Fanaticism's spreading in lower Germany and Holland. The Temper of those People naturally inclined to Melancholy, and the gross Ignorance which then reigned amongst them disposed their Minds to favour Fanaticism so far, that nothing but Prophecies, Visions, new Gospel-Lights, a new Kingdom, the publishing a new Law, and such Chimæra's, could find Admittance in their Thoughts or Discourses. The Anabaptists published a Book entitled, The Work of Re-Establishment, in which they maintained, with the Millenarians, that before the last Judgment Christ would reign temporally upon Earth, and his Kingdom would begin by the settling of their Doctrine. They themselves were the Just, who were to reign with Christ, and as being the choicest of the Just, they flattered themselves with the Hopes of enjoying many Wives. Such alluring Promises to natural Cor-

* See Hist. of Anabapt. p. 35. and their Annals.

† The Signification of that Word is Opposite to the Law.

‡ The same Consequences are charged upon Calvin's Doctrine about the Decree of God concerning Predestination and Reprobation.

§ See Bayle's Dictionary on Agricola and Islebius.

¶ Garasse, instead of John Agricola of Isleb, calls him John Isleb a Husbandman or Plowman. See Bayle's Dictionary.

ruption ; the Community of Goods, which they prescribed ; the Contempt of all temporal Power, which they professed, brought over to their Party all the Libertines and wicked Men, by whose Help they soon became so formidable, that they had near overpowered several considerable Towns of Holland ; but the Storm at last fell upon Munster. They became Masters of that Town in 1534, under the Conduct of John Matthew, who being killed at the Siege, was succeeded by John Becold, known by the Name of John of Leyden *. This Man from a Taylor was raised to the Dignity of King of Munster, by a pretended Revelation from God to the Anabaptist Knipperdoling. So many Authors have given a full Account of the Disorders committed under the Government of this Fanatical Taylor, that we need not rehearse them in this Place, we shall only set down in the Marginal Note ^a some remaining Monument of his chimerical kingly Power.

MUNSTER was retaken from those Enthusiasts in June 1535, their King, his Counsellors and Prophets were put to Death, and severe Laws were enacted against them. An Assembly held at Hamburg, took several Resolutions to that end, which are worth notice, and may be seen in the ^b History of the Anabaptists. Those Resolutions were followed by a rigorous Edict, they were prosecuted with the utmost Severity, and as many as were caught were more or less punished according to the Crimes by them committed. In Holland, Friesland, and other Places of the Low Countries, they were put to cruel Torments : and it must be owned no Punishment could be too severe for such Miscreants, who made Religion to be a Cloak to overthrow all Government, and to countenance a Libertinism which they carried to the highest Pitch of Scandal and Profaneness, where ever they could get footing : as they did chiefly in those Provinces of the Low Countries, which many Years after were called the United Provinces. After all, these Anabaptists suffered Death with a Constancy, which, had their Cause been better, would have deserved to be admired by all Christians. They underwent the severest Trials like true Martyrs, and, to their Cost, were at last guilty of an obstinate Fanaticism. So true it is, that Stubbornness and Prevention may inspire as much Strength as a good Cause : But true Constancy and Intrepidity is that only which is grounded on solid Principles and just Reasoning.

SOME of the seditious Anabaptists of Holland fled ^c into England ; and after the ill Success of their Project to become Masters of the Low Countries, were content to spread their Doctrine there ; but we have already taken notice that the English Government put some of those Refugees to Death, because they would not give over dogmatizing.

WE must now place in one View the Doctrine of the first Anabaptists ; and afterwards represent the same Sect cured of its Enthusiasm, and violent Fanaticism, which like a contagious Distemper had raged during a Series of many Years, and might be deemed an Epidemical Sickneſs.

SOME Ecclesiastical Writers of the sixteenth Century relate, that the Anabaptists themselves had digested the whole System of their Doctrine into seven Articles, which they published in the Year 1529. 1. A Christian ought not to bear Arms, or

* So called because he was a Native of Leyden.

^a The first Medal represents him with these Words, John of Leyden King of Munster ; on the other Side were these Words, The Power of God is my Strength. The other Medals had these Words, The Word of God is made Flesh, and is in us, &c.

^b P. 192, and following.

^c The Quakers owe their Rise to these Anabaptists, and this is the Reason why their Opinions bear so great a Resemblance.

MONNOIES et MEDAILLES frappées par les premiers ANABAPTISTES acknowledge any Magistrates, because Christ has said, The Kings of Nations domineer over them, but it shall not be so amongst you. But they took Arms so often, and the Obedience which they paid to John of Leyden was so blind and passive, that they belied in Practice what they held in Theory, not being able to comply with this pretended Duty ; and accordingly, to excuse their own Breach of it, they were obliged to soften it by adding this Clause, That Magistrates and Princes are to be obeyed only in their just and rational Commands.

2. IT is not lawful to swear, not even when the Magistrates order us to lift up our Hands.

3. ALMIGHTY God does not call any true Christian to administer Justice, or to preserve the publick Tranquillity. This Principle destroys all Society, and would not fit even Highwaymen, since^d even these cannot live without some Order or some Rules.

4. THE Chair of Moses is only with the Anabaptists, and no one can be predestinated to eternal Life, unless he belongs to that Sect.

5. FROM whence it follows, by a necessary Consequence, that they only have a Right to preach the Gospel, and to convert Mankind.

6. ALL those therefore who oppose the Progress of Anabaptists are to be deemed Reprobates.

7. WHOEVER then at the Day of the last Judgment shall not be found to have professed Anabaptism, shall infallibly be placed on the left Hand, amongst the Goats ; and on the contrary, God will acknowledge as his own Sheep, and set on the right Hand all true and faithful Anabaptists.

THESE were the principal Tenets of Anabaptism, which their Teachers varied, changed, and amplified, as it suited their present Purpose, or as the fanatical Spirit directed them, yet in such a manner as to remain still^e one and the same Sect. We have seen before, which were the Opinions of Hofman, whom some Compilers of Heretical Catalogues have thought fit to reckon as the Founder of a pretended Sect of Melchiorists, though 'tis evident, all things considered, that the true Doctrine of the first fanatical Anabaptists is more fully expressed in the Articles of Hofman than in the seven just mentioned : and accordingly, notwithstanding some Differences of little Importance, the Anabaptists have always looked upon him as one of their chief Masters and Teachers. We cannot say so much for David George and some others, whom, we are told, were excommunicated by them : Another Trick of these Compilers, to increase the Number of Heresies, is to reckon as many Sects as there are Ringleaders of each. Thus, besides the Melchiorists^f, they mention the Hutterians from Huter, the Munxerians from Munzer, &c. As to the Mennonites, they must be set a-part, as having, under the Conduct of Menno, thrown off the extravagant ^d Leges Latronum esse dicuntur quibus pareant, quas observent, Cicero lib. 2. Offic. No Society ever did, or ever can subsist without some Order, some Rules agreed upon to be kept at least for a Time: They may vary according to the different Circumstances of Persons, Time and Place ; but some are absolutely necessary. Not to mention those grounded upon Religion and Virtue ; the Desire of Gain, our own Weakness, the want of being helped by others in our Wants, are a sufficient Proof of this Truth ; though much cannot be expected from Rules barely grounded on such Motives ; because as it was said of Pirates, Cretenfis incidit in Cretensem, yet even Bandits must have and keep some Order and Rule.

^e Variety of Opinions does not always produce a Distinction of Sects, as we find by daily Experience, even in the Catholick Church, where Jesuits and Dominicans so widely differ in Opinion, yet preserve the Unity of Communion.

^f J. H. Ott. in the Preface to his Annal. Anabapt. has a complete Alphabetical Catalogue of all the Anabaptistical Sects to the Number of seventy seven ; amongst which he reckons the Mamillarians, a quodam qui Mamillas puellæ contrectavit, and the Ollarians who loved good Eating and Drinking, ab Ollâ a Porridge-Pot ; to be sure these two were the most numerous. We shall not follow his Example, but give only our Readers an Account of the most remarkable Differences.

and senseless Enthusiasm of their Predecessors. But to reduce their System to its Standard: Every one knows that Rebaptizing is the fundamental Principle of Anabaptism: Besides this, they maintained that Christ did not take Flesh in the Womb of the Blessed Virgin Mary, that he is only an adoptive Son of God, that Adam's Sin being atoned for by Christ, the Faithful are by him reinstated in the Sanctity and Innocency of the first Man before his Fall^e; that the Soul of Man is created before the Body, and sins in Heaven; that the Stars and other celestial Bodies are animated; that the Torments of the Devils, and those who are damned shall have an End; that after Baptism Men sin no more, and then the Flesh which sins does not defile the Soul; that they themselves are the chosen Children of God, a second Israel. Upon this Account John of Leyden took upon himself the Title of King of the New Jerusalem. They refused to be subject, or to obey Magistrates; their Notions about Marriage were false and dangerous, if it be true that they allowed a Man to repudiate his Wife upon every Occasion, even for a Disgust. This has brought upon them another Accusation of their believing that Polygamy is lawful: But either their Adversaries have objected to them as a Point of their Doctrine, what was only their Practice; or their Teachers delivered that Opinion only in order to palliate their criminal Lusts^h. They preach up, that all Goods should be in common, were declared Enemies to all Learning, and ordered all Books to be destroyed except the Bible; which, as it appears by their Practice and Teaching, is only a dead Letter, not to be explained but by Inspiration. They published, that their Kingdom was the new Reign of Christ, during which it was lawful for them to destroy all those who were not or should refuse to become Anabaptists. These two last mentioned Tenets were the true Grounds of that prophetic fanatical Character which they assumed, some pretending to be Elias, others Enoch, or even the Messiah.

No one can think it strange that such Men should be dealt with as Rebels, Impostors, and Enemies to publick Peace and Society: If it be objected, that it would have been better to confine them as Madmen, the Answer is easy. It was unavoidably requisite to make an Example of their Ringleaders to frighten the Rest; and as they had thrown off all Sense of Humanity in their barbarous Cruelties, they were to be treated as wild Beasts; but the many thousands imposed upon and seduced by those Fanatics, were used with more Lenity. One of the Articles drawn up in the Assembly of Hamburg, which said, that the Anabaptists might and ought to be punished with Death, adds these Words, chiefly those who seduce others. It was enacted at the same time, that those who through Weakness, through Ignorance, &c. had offended, should be shut up in Houses of Correction erected for that Purpose, where they should be used with Severity, and yet be allowed all the Instruction by which they might be brought back to their Duty. As to Foreigners, it was agreed they should only be banished, and not put to Death, unless they came back to preach their shameful Doctrine. But to return to the various Errors of the Anabaptists: A Letter wrote by *Hoeper*ⁱ to Bullinger in the Month of June 1649, says of the Anabaptists who retired into England, “ They daily Flock hither..... and pretend that “ a Man once reconciled with God, is ever after without Sin, and freed from all

^e See on this Innocency restored what we shall say hereafter of the Adamites.

^h Polygamy, and all other Sins against Chastity, have been practised by the wicked Part of all Religions, but no Sect has ever taught the Lawfulness of them, as their only Doctrine: and it is not unlikely that what is objected to the Anabaptists, is only a false Consequence, or at least not owned by them, deduced from their Doctrine of Goods being common, or from the criminal Excesses committed amongst them, chiefly by their Teachers.

ⁱ See Annal. Anabapt. of Ott. for the Year 1649.

^k We need not repeat here some of their Opinions mentioned before.

“ inordinate Desires ; there remains nothing in him of the old Adam: If it should “ happen that a regenerate Person, who has received the Holy Ghost, should fall “ into Sin, he can never obtain Forgiveness. God is, in their Opinion, subject to a “ fatal and absolute Necessity ; besides the Will which he has notified to us in the “ Holy Scriptures, he has another by which he is forced to do necessarily¹ what he “ does..... some of them think that the Souls of Men are not different from the “ Beasts, but equally mortal, &c.”

THE first Anabaptists denied likewise original Sin, and all the Consequences which flow from it ; they maintained that Laymen may preach and administer the Sacraments, because the Scripture, as they pretended, does not any where appropriate those Functions to a particular Set of Men, and that we are not allowed to add outward Shew to them, or leave their Performance to Ministers preferably to others ; that by Consequence the Master of a Family, without wearing a four-cornered Cap, or a black Gown, or a Surplice, might very lawfully administer the Lord's Supper to his Family, and baptise his own Child (when come to the Use of Reason ; for they reject Infant-Baptism, and to this Day maintain, that Scripture in general, and the Words of Christ in particular, evidently prove, that Baptism is not to be without actual Faith.) War was held in Abhorrence, as being contrary to the Gospel-Precept literally understood, by which we are forbid to do evil, or to revenge ourselves : As to their Disobedience and Want of Submission to Magistrates, they grounded their Notion upon a charitable Principle, because forsooth it is a State in which Men cannot be saved.

WE shall next entertain our Readers with what regards the Discipline of these antient Anabaptists^m. We are told, that those of *Moravia*ⁿ “ performed their “ Devotions on two consecutive Days of the Week, Saturday Evening and Sunday “ Morning : They omitted this Part of the Lord's Prayer, Forgive us our, &c. be“ cause being regenerated, they esteemed themselves to be without Sin. They prayed “ fitting..... Instead of the Psalms, they sung some spiritual Canticles composed by “ their Teachers. They owned only the New Testament ; it was their only Rule, “ and they read that alone ; their Sermons were extremely long and tedious. They “ had a Chieftain (some call him a King) who did not appear or make himself “ known, but secretly governed the whole Anabaptistical Sect, (at least those of “ Moravia :) He had twelve who governed under him. As the rigorous Laws en“ acted against them, obliged them to hide themselves, their Children were privately “ brought up at a Distance, till they were of a competent Age to make their Ap“ pearance without running any Hazard. About the Feast of Pentecost, and after “ they had received the Communion, they made Choice of the Missionaries, “ whom they sent into foreign Countries to propagate their Doctrine. Likely those “ Missionaries went in a Disguise, and did not shew themselves to any but such “ whom they found disposed to hear them. They went readily to the Post assigned “ to them by their Superior ; and for fear of being found out took By-Roads.
 “ Their outward Behaviour was very imposing ; so that it was next to an Impossi“ bility not to be deceived. Their Dress was plain, their Looks demure, and in “ their Words and Actions they made a Shew of great Patience and Meekness : Be-

¹ Had they meant no more, than that God cannot act against his own Attributes, his Goodness for Instance, or his Justice, this would not have been erroneous : But then this does not infer a fatal Necessity.

^m Disciples of Huter, whom Zeiler calls Huterian Brethren.

ⁿ This is taken from Zeiler cited by Ott in his Annal. Anabapt. on the Years 1587, 1617, &c.

“ fides their cast-down Looks, they were forbid fwearing, taking any Oaths, using “ any indecent or immodest Words. A Salute or Kiss was reckoned an enormous “ Crime ; infomuch that one of them, who was married to an old Woman, being “ so unfortunate as to be caught in the Fact of kissing a young Sister, who was very “ pretty (probably to indemnify himself, and make amends for the Disgusts he “ found in his old Wife) was cited to appear before the whole Assembly of the “ Anabaptists : Both were severely reprimanded and threatned to be cast out from “ the holy Congregation, and sent back into the World of the Infidels and Wicked°.
 “ The Brethren and Sisters of the Assembly interceded for them ; notwithstanding “ which, the Man, who was a Master Shoemaker, had this Penance enjoined him, “ to be degraded for fifteen Days from his Degree of a Master, and to work with “ the Apprentices or Journeymen, and to be treated no better than one of them.”
 Tho’ this Discipline of the Moravian Anabaptists seems so severe, yet the same Author takes notice, that “ they loved Drinking to Excess..... that they celebrated the “ Lord’s Supper with little or no Devotion, and that when the time of administering
 “ it drew near, they rejoiced, not out of a pious Inclination, but in Hopes of meet“ ing with some Diversion.....” Moreover, those who pretended to be best acquainted with them, accused them of being vain, haughty and proud, prone to carnal Sins, and apt to invade the Property of their Neighbours, &c. What can one think of such Variety of Reports ? To be sure those who have given such contradictory Descriptions of Sects, were either very ignorant, or laboured under very great Prejudices : Tho’ it may likewise be alledged, that it is almost impossible to know every Sect, and that the more they are inclined to Fanaticism, the more difficult it is to reduce to a consistent System their Notions, which are often wavering, as being only the Produce of enthusiastical Fits. Most of these Anabaptists (whom the Author reckons to have amounted to the Number of seventy thousand at the Time when he wrote) were Labourers, Gardners, Journeymen or Tradesmen. This put them to hard Shifts in breeding up their Children, and serving their Masters, or exercising their respective Trades ; as soon as the Children were born, they were taken from their Parents, and as we said before, privately kept in the Schools or rather Seminaries belonging to that Sect. In the Year 1622, the Moravian Anabaptists were obliged to leave that Country upon Account of a violent Persecution raised against them, and several Families of them took Refuge in Hungary and Transilvania.

THE same Writer informs us^p, that the Anabaptists of the Palatinate differed but little from the Huterians of Moravia ; that they were inured to Fatigues, laborious, and not easy in their Circumstances ; which nevertheless did not hinder them from allowing a decent Maintenance to their Pastors, and taking great Care of the Poor and the Sick. “ They have an Abhorrence, says the Author from whom we “ borrow these Particulars, of all the Anabaptists who teach the Divinity of Christ.
 “ They keep themselves in a State of Separation from other Anabaptists, nor are “ they in Communion even with those of Switzerland. They marry only such as “ belong to their Congregation : the Chief, who governs it, is called Elder, and “ has under him some other Elders^r, who preside in Assemblies^s subordinate to ° Those Titles they bestowed on all other Christian Assemblies. See Ott. on the Year 1627.

^p See Ott. in the Year 1656.

^q This shews that the Socinians are often confounded with Anabaptists, and to this Day there are many Socinians and Anti-Trinitarians amongst the Anabaptists in the united Provinces.

^r Subseniores.

^s Collegiorum præsides.

“ the whole Congregation : In difficult Points the Chief calls these under Elders “ together, and holds a Synod. They are also Ministers or Pastors of the Sect, “ which has twelve Colleges, (Churches or Assemblies) one in the Palatinate, ten in “ Hungary, and one in Transylvania. Most Princes and States, chiefly of those “ who call themselves Evangelicks (Protestants) are very willing to employ them, “ because they are sober, laborious, and understand all Trades, excepting such Ma“ chines and Instruments as are made use of in the Wars, &c.” This is what appears worth Notice concerning the Discipline of those Anabaptists, who did not rebel against the civil Power, or at least did not attempt its Overthrow by open Force.

THE ancient Anabaptists were subject to Convulsions and Inspirations exactly like those of these latter Days. “ When the Spirit seizes the Anabaptists, says an emi“ nent Writer of the Calvinistical Party¹, their Countenance alters, their bodily Mo“ tions are apt to strike with Terror those who look at them ; they fall suddenly,
 “ as if in a Fit of Epilepsy ; they lie upon the Ground for a considerable Time “ stretched out in the Posture of a dead Man. Sometimes their whole Body shakes, “ and is in a frightful Agitation, at other times they are as motionless as a Log of “ Wood : When they come out of this Extasy they repeat their Dreams and “ strange Visions” Another Author says, that to put themselves in an Extatick State², they keep their Breath in as long as they possibly can.

WE have entertained our Readers with the different and various Judgments passed upon the Brethren of Moravia : But who could ever imagine that the Anabaptists of Switzerland (those Fanaticks³ accused of the most shocking Obscenities of Rebellion and Rapine ; looked upon in their own Country as Incendaries and Fire-brands, prosecuted, banished, and even put to Death as guilty of all those Crimes) could ever find an Apologist ? Yet they had one of the highest Reputation, even the great Erasmus, who lived when Fanaticism was at the Height, and was Cotentpo-rary with the Founders of *Anabaptism*⁴. “ The Switzers (of Zurigg) says he, use their “ utmost Endeavours to prove, that Hereticks ought not to be put to Death, whilst “ they themselves kill the Anabaptists amongst whom several, from a very loose “ disorderly Life, have been truly converted, and embraced an exemplary Reformation.
 “ Tho’ their Opinions may be censured as mad and senseless, yet they have not “ usurped any Church, nor surpris’d any Town, they have not contracted any Alliance
 “ to the Prejudice of their Sovereign, they do not invade the Lands, and moveable Effects
 “ belonging to others.” We may infer from this Quotation, 1. That the seditious Anabaptists were not countenanced by the other Societies of that Sect. 2. That excepting these rebellious Fanaticks, the other Anabaptists embraced that Doctrine in the Sincerity of their Hearts, and did not carry to any Excess the Principles of their Teachers. 3. That they had not yet got Possession of Munster, nor raised any Revolt either in Holland or Germany. 4. That from the Disorders committed by some seditious Anabaptists ; from common Reports, which may have both represented these Disorders as being greater than they really were, and even charged the Guilty with

¹ Bulling. adversus Anabapt. lib. xi. chap. 1.

² This Citation is in Ott’s Annal. Anabap. on the Year 1525.

³ See in Ott’s Anal. Anabapt. what Crimes are laid to their Charge.

⁴ Miris modis urgent ne hæretici trucidentur, cum ipsi Anabaptistas plebant capite, qui multo paucioribus articulis damnati sunt, & in suo sodalitie plurimos habere dicuntur, qui a perditissima vita ad emendatissimam se converterint. Utcumque delirant in Opinionibus, nullas ecclesias aut urbes occuparunt, nec se fœderibus communiverunt adversus vim Principum, nec quemquam suâ ditione aut facultatibus ejecerunt. And in another Place he speaks of them in these Terms Tametsi magno sunt ubique numer, nusquam obtinuerunt propriam ecclesiam Vitæ innocentia præ cæteris commendantur, sed a reliquis sectis opprimuntur, non solum ab orthodoxis.

more than were actually done, to render them odious ; most People have taken the Liberty to censure the whole Sect, and to draw false Inferences from Particulars to the General. 5. That religious Revolutions had raised such a dangerous Fermentation of Spirits, that probably the Libertins and factious Men at that Time were glad to embrace a Sect, which held Opinions so favourable to Anarchy and Independency ; and by which simple and well-meaning Souls might be seduced and flattered, with the Hopes of a thorough Reform in Church and State. On the other Side, the Severity used by most Princes and States against the Anabaptists, cannot be justly condemned ; if one seriously considers the * obstinate Behaviour, and Tergiversations of those Sectaries in Switzerland, and the Danger to which all States were exposed, from the Consequences which flowed from their Doctrine. To which we must beg leave to add, that the rigid Anabaptists render themselves entirely useless to a Government in time of Danger, by that favourite Opinion of theirs, that War is not necessary but criminal ; and that States are to be defended only by a pious and regular Life : This obliges them to refuse going to War, or performing any military Function ; they are to use no other Weapons but Patience and Humility : We are fully convinced of the Inconveniencies such Notions draw after them, by the Jewish History : † That Nation by too exact keeping of the Sabbath, was very near being totally destroyed.

The MENNONITES.

THE reformed Anabaptists come next under our Consideration ; for we must look upon the Mennonites in that Light. They not only disown and detest the fanatical Proceedings of the forementioned Anabaptists ; but likewise pretend to be of an older Date ; being the Successors, as they say, of the ^a Waldenses ; who being persecuted in France and Italy, retired into Flanders, and privately settled in that Country. “ In the Year 1500, says our Author, many “ People were discovered in Flanders, who condemned the Custom of baptizing “ Infants, and admitted to that Sacrament, only those who were of a competent “ Age, and had given a rational Account of their Faith They were called “ for that Reason Anabaptists But in the Year 1536 The Appellation of Mennonites, was given them from Menno a new Reformer, who joined them about that Time.” He had been a Priest or Curate in the Province of Friesland, of which he was a Native : Two Anabaptist Predicants had gained him over to their Sect, during the Fanaticism of Munster : The said Predicants finding in him a promising Genius, and capable of purging that Sect from its Corruption, invested him ^b with a full Commission to reform Anabaptism, which the Fanatics had shamefully disfigured, and rendered odious. Menno apply’d himself to this Work with so much Fervour and Success, that in a short Time his Reformation was embraced by a great Number of Anabaptists, in Friesland, and several other Provinces of the Low Countries. The Mennonites are fully persuaded that this sudden Propagation of their Sect, is owing to Menno’s sweet Temper, which drew so many Followers after him : ’tis certain, however, that he highly disapproved the ^c Rebellion of Munster, and all the

* See Bayle’s Dictionary in the Article Anabaptists.

† See 1 Maccab. Chap. ii. Ver. 40, 41. As also Josephus Antiq. Jud. xii. c. 6.

^a See Glen. Apolog. for the Anabapt. As also Schyn. Hist. Mennonit. &c.

^b Hist. Anabapt. p. 210.

^c Non sum Monasteriensis, neque alius seditiosæ sectæ ut me calumniantur, &c. Says Menno himself in Schyn. p. 152, of Hist. Mennon. See also p. 225, and foll. and p. 227, and foll.

sedition Sects of the Times he lived in. He even openly declared in one of his Writings, " That there was a greater Difference in Opinions between the Munsterians and the other Sects, though sprung from those Fanaticks, than between the Roman-Catholicks and the Lutherans I am but too well convinced, that the World does not believe it; but our Consciences give us this Testimony." Nevertheless he is accused of giving the Name of Brethren to those Fanaticks of Munster, but to this Imputation his Friends reply, That the Word Brethren is not to be taken in a literal Sense; but only as a Token of Christian Charity: As the Apostles themselves bestowed it on the unbelieving Jews. The Author whom we cite in the marginal Note ^b above relates, to the best of his Knowledge, the several Articles in which the Sect of Menno differs from the antient Anabaptists.

SOME trifling Disputes caused a Disturbance amongst the Menmonites: And from thence arose open Breaches and Schisms; the Chief of which was that made by the ^c Waterlanders. The Particular Opinions in which they differ from the rest, are ^d " that they will not allow of any Person to be excommunicated, till he has been admonished and exhorted to mend; nor if he gives any Proofs of Repentance, let the Crime be what it would. Yet they did not admit any one without Re-baptisation; so that several of them had received Baptism thrice. They likewise teach, that Christ did not take his Flesh from the blessed Virgin, but brought his Body from Heaven: That he died only to atone for original Sin, not for the actual." The same Author informs us, that in 1557, the Disputes about Excommunications rose to such a Height, that nothing was to be seen but Factions and Divisions, Synods against Synods, which far from remedying the Evil, made it worse, and ^e occasioned farther Quarrels.

Menno died in the Year 1561. The Schism widened betwixt the Flemish Anabaptists and those of Friesland, so far that they looked upon it, says their Historian, ^e as an unpardonable Crime, to hold the least Correspondence with one another. The Frieslanders were more indulgent about Excommunications, and the Duty of avoiding those who were under that Censure. We must take Notice, that this Sect in general is so touchy about religious Affairs, that it is not easily satisfy'd, but upon the least Dispute rings the alarm Bell, calls out for Help to save Religion from Danger, and so breaks into Schism: For Instance, in 1586 a considerable Member of that Sect bought a House, some Rigoirists suspected some Fraud in the Purchase Disputes arose, and in a short time three Parties were formed, the Purchasers, the Anti-Purchasers, who would not communicate one with the other, and the Neutrals, who, though they did not approve of the Purchase, yet did not think it a sufficient Cause for a Separation. Such were the Beginnings of this Sect, which at this Time is so well settled, and makes so great a Figure in the United Provinces, by its extensive Commerce and great Riches. They are taxed with cunning and subtil Fetches in Trade, with using Equivocations, Distinctions, and Restrictions, under an outward Shew of Frankness, and open fair Dealing, in order to deceive those who are not acquainted with them: But we must not be too se-

^c Waterland is the lowest Part of Holland.

^d Hist. Anabapt. p. 223.

^e The chief Dispute ran on this Point, Whether two Persons of different Religions, being married, ought not to separate, and marry again in their own Persuasion. Some Anabaptist Teachers were too severe; the Synod of Wismar ordered the Husbands to leave their Wives, and Wives their Husbands, when under Sentence of Excommunication: Another Synod condemned that excessive Severity. Menno favoured the mildest Courses, and was against Divorce; but for fear of Excommunication, sided at last with the rigid Anabaptists.

^f Hist. Anabapt. p. 230.

vere. The least that can be said in their Favour is, that they are zealous for Religion, without neglecting their temporal Concerns: Under the Appearance of Gospel-Modesty, which is the true Characteristick of the Mennonites, they enjoy, without Noise, the Pleasures of this Life, which, for fear of giving Scandal, they ingeniously refine, so as to reconcile them with Religion.

A Loan of Money, with which in 1572 they helped William the First, Prince of Orange, obtained for them some Beginnings of a Toleration: This went on slowly, for it could not be expected, that a Sect, sprung from those Fanatics who had committed such Disorders, should on a sudden cease to be odious to the Government; some Towns and Provinces, as Middleburgh and Zealand, refused to give them any Toleration. The Synods complained, and were soon back'd by the secular Power, in order to stop the Increase of the Mennonites, who, as early as in the Year 1537, held numerous Assemblies, and employed, without much Privacy, several Houses, to serve them for their Meetings and religious Worship. A Law enacted in 1581, against Sectaries, brought upon them some Prosecutions; but at the last Mennonism has overcome the Oppositions and Hatred of the Magistrates and Synods; though these last have often endeavoured to get the Mennonites condemned and punished¹ as Deserters from the true Church.

Notwithstanding all the Opposition which they met with from the reformed Churches, and from the Magistrates of Holland, till the Middle of the last Century and longer, their intestine Broils and Divisions went on, as we shall prove by two or three Instances: A Synod was convened at Dordrecht in 1632, to endeavour at a Reunion,² and some Articles were agreed on, and signed by 151 Mennonites; but within a few Years new Schismaticks sprung up in Menno's Sect. One Weko Walis maintained in an Assembly held in 1637, that Judas, and all those who had a Hand in putting Christ to Death, were saved, because they had fulfilled the Decree of Providence; that likewise all the Sinners who are punished in this World, according to the Laws, for their Crimes, are saved by the Grace of our Lord. This Weko Walis had some Followers, but they were forbid holding any Assemblies, and he himself was banished from the Province of Groningen, where he had begun to form his Sect; he retired into Friesland, but was also obliged to fly from thence, after having been condemned in a reformed Synod, held in 1644, at Francquer.

Another Mennonite named Outreman, in 1605, had taught that there are three Essences in the Godhead; and that the Essence of the Father was so confined to Heaven, that it could never exceed those Bounds.

At present Mennonism is divided in Holland, into two great Parties; which comprehend all the Brethren. The Waterlanders, and the Flemish (Vlaminghen) This Branch includes the Mennonites of Friesland and Germany, who in Reality are a Spawn of the old Anabaptists, but more moderate than their Predecessors of Germany and Switzerland: There are many Socinians amongst them; and they are still accused of being inclined to Disputes, and subtil Evasions, which often occasion Quarrels and Divisions amongst them. In the Year 1664,³ the Government thought fit to interpose and exert its Authority, by forbidding them to dispute about the Divi-

¹ See Lock's Miscellanies, tom. 2. letter. 16. in what Manner a Synod of the Province of Overijssel prosecuted a Mennonite-Minister, upon Account of a small Book which he had published, to re-unite all Christian Communion. Such an Attempt to be sure was looked upon as a damnable Heresy; to which he added still a more unpardonable Fault, by speaking too freely of, and turning into Ridicule, the pretended Orthodox Pastors of that Province.

² See the Hist. of Anabapt. p. 269.

³ See Comelin in his Description of Amsterdam, Vol. 2. p. 493. folio Edit. 1726.

ANABAPTISTE D'AMSTERDAM.

QUAQUER D'AMSTERDAM.

J. F. du Bourg del.

QUAQUERESSE qui preche.

B. Desnoes del.

*ANABAPTISTE
de Ost frise*

nity of Christ, &c. They are also called Galenites from Galenus a Physician, and a famous Predicant of that Sect, in which these two Functions are often performed by one and the same Person. Besides the above-mentioned Branches of Mennonism, several small Assemblies of those Sectaries meet at Amsterdam, and differ from each other in some Points of small Importance. They are not much known or taken Notice of, because they are held without Noise or any great Shew, in Houses belonging to particular private Mennonites ^m.

The Disputes of the Galenites, amongst themselves, concerning the Divinity of Christ, in 1664, brought on a new Assembly of Mennonites, which, at breaking up, entered a Protest against the Socinian Opinions: And from that Time, these have continued their Meetings in a particular Church by themselves.

The chief Articles of the Belief of one Branch of the Mennonites are widely different ⁿ from what some Writers charge them with, as will evidently appear from the following Extract. In the 2d and 3d Article of their Profession of Faith, they own the Mystery of the Trinity: The 4th rejects Original Sin: The 5th and 7th maintain Liberty in Man, and his freely and voluntarily chusing Good or Evil, &c. The 8th wholly rectifies and amends the erroneous Opinion of the antient Anabaptists, concerning the Incarnation of the eternal Word. The 19th is couched in mystical Expressions, according to the Genius and natural Bent of that Sect; but it may be reduced, only to establish the Necessity of knowing Christ spiritually: The same may be said of the 22d, in which they admit the Necessity of the Regeneration of Man. The 25th and 26th acknowledge, that the Christian Church must have Pastors and Teachers (not Lay-Men) expressly consecrated (or appointed) for the Instruction of the Faithful: By the 27th they are to be chosen by Ministers and other Members of the Church joined to them; after imploring the Help of God, and calling upon his holy Name. By the 28th the Elders of the Mennonite Church approve the Election of these new Pastors. The 29th declares that the New Testament is the true Rule of Faith, and contains whatever is necessary for Salvation; adding to it whatever is in the Old Testament conformable to the Doctrine delivered in the New. The 30th own two Sacraments. The 31st says, that Children (Infants) are not fit for receiving Baptism. The 36th ^o is expressly against the married Faithful being divorced from the Unbeliever with whom the Marriage was contracted. The 37th acknowledges, that Obedience is due to the temporal Power, even Respect, &c. but this Article at the same time says, that it is not lawful for any of their Sect to be invested with that Power, or to go to War, or to kill an Enemy, &c. The 38th forbids Swearing. The 39th teaches that Marriages are indissoluble, except in the Case of Adultery; but they deem it a grievous Sin to contract Marriage with an Infidel.

THIS Profession of Faith contains forty Articles, at the end of which the Historian who relates them repeats a second time, that they are quite contrary to the Doctrine of the Fanatical Anabaptists.

GALENUS, in his Apology for his Sect of Mennonites, recites 103 Articles of their Opinions; which are chiefly upon mutual Toleration and Christian Charity; He teaches that Scripture (particularly the New Testament) is sufficient to Salvation:

^m One of those Assemblies is nick-named the Class, because the Members of it will not use Pins, and the Women dress themselves and fit their Cloaths to their Shape with Glasses or Hooks. The four Figures here annexed, represent the usual Dress of the Anabaptists, and the Posture of a Female Quaker preaching.

ⁿ See Schyn. Chapt. vii. of his Hist. Mennon.

^o Ut Maritati non se jungantur, neve in operibus maritalibus se subducant, &c.

and that Man is endowed with Free-will. The 25th is against Original Sin. The 28th, 29th, 30th and 31st, deliver their Belief concerning the Divinity of Christ in the following manner :

“ WE believe and profess that Jesus, born of the Virgin Mary, bred at Nazareth, “ and crucified..... is truly the Messiah, the Son of God, who was to come into the “ World, in whom the Patriarchs hoped with Joy; whom they expected and earnestly “ desired; who was represented by many Figures in the old Law, and foretold by “ the Prophets long before his coming.

“ WE think this Profession is sufficient as to the Person of our Lord Jesus Christ, “ and that it is not necessary for Salvation to make any further Inquiries as to his “ Pre-existence, his becoming Man, the Union of what is called the two Natures, “ divine and human, and other Points so hotly contested amongst Christians; since “ Christ himself.... and his Apostles.... were satisfied with this plain Confession.

“ BUT to explain our Thoughts further on that Subject: tho’ we are fully con“ vinced that the foregoing Confession, with true Obedience, suffices for Salvation;
 “ yet we believe that the Son of God, whom St. John calls the Word or Speech, “ did not begin to exist when born of the Blessed Virgin Mary: But that being the “ Splendor of the Glory of God his Father, and the imprinted Image of his Person, he “ has been in God his heavenly Father before the World, this visible World was “ made.....

“ We acknowledge likewise and profess, that Jesus Christ our Lord, the Son of “ the living God, has been given unto us..... as our great Prophet, as our chief “ and eternal sacrificing Priest, and as our Heavenly King.” The 34th Article teaches, that Christ alone is to be heard, being our only Lawgiver, and that no Submission is due to Councils, Synods, or any Ecclesiastical Assembly. The 35th says, that true Christianity, and the whole Doctrine of Christ, is contained in short in the 5th, 6th, and 7th Chapters of St. Matthew, and in the 6th of St. Luke. These Chapters are an Abstract of the Morality of Christ, and the Faith which is due to the Precepts of Christ, who has no other Dignity bestowed upon him in this Abridgment of Mennonism, except that of the great Prophet. The 36th and 37th are only a Confirmation of the 35th, enforcing the Necessity of a Holy Life, and conformable to this Morality. The 38th is against Swearing. The 39th against Revenge of any Kind, against War, &c. The 40th and 41st approve and order Obedience to be paid to Princes and Magistrates, but declares that the safest is not to accept of any Political Office. The 42d is an Abstract of Erasmus’s Rules concerning a Christian Life; which, after the Example of that great Man, is brought to such a Simplicity, which makes the Faithful true Followers of Christ, and Observers of his divine Precepts: But the Mennonites, like most Christians, admire those Laws only in Theory. The 43d and following, to the 47th, repeat and enforce what had been said before of the Morality of the Gospel. The 52d and 53d are about Baptism, forbid its being administered to Infants: Those which follow are concerning Communion. The 57th speaks of Washing of the Feet, which Ceremony some Christians, meaning the Mennonites, have added to the other two Baptism and Communion. “ We “ believe, says the Author, that this Custom relates to the mutual Duties of Humi“ lity and good Offices which Christians owe one to the other, rather than to become “ a Church Ceremony.” The Articles 59, 60, 61, 62, explain the Distinction between the visible and invisible Church; that is, the Faithful dispersed, in what Part soever of the World, and under what Denomination soever they may appear to Men, and yet remain unknown. The 63d teaches, that no Church whatever is to be deemed the true visible Church of Christ, so as to exclude others, and that the Work of Reformation cannot be looked upon as infallible, or undertaken or performed by the Authority of God, and of his Son our Lord Jesus Christ, &c. The 64th declares, That the Rulers, Ministers, and Deacons of Brotherly Meetings are not to be considered, as if they had any divine Right or special Authority above the rest of the Brethren..... and that they are not to be hearkned to as if they were the infallible Ambassadors of Christ, nor obeyed as if God always spoke to and exhorted the Faithful by them: This Office, says the same Author, has been given only to the Apostles..... from whence he draws this Conclusion in the 65th Article, That Excommunication (or to use his own Words, The Power of giving the Rebellious to Satan, &c.) “ did belong heretofore to the “ Apostles, but that now it is of no Use in divided Christian Societies.... and it “ is not lawful to go beyond Remonstrances, and fraternal Exhortations..... which “ if they are not followed by the Conversion of the Brother or Sister corrupted in “ their Faith or Morals, they ought to be told from the whole Assembly, that Com- “ munion and Christian Brotherhood cannot be kept with them, and that a Se- “ paration becomes necessary till they are intirely converted..... They ought even “ to be shunned as to any spiritual Conversation in order to shame them..... But “ this must be done discreetly, and in a Manner not contrary to Christian Charity.”

THE Articles 66th and following to the 78th, are about Christ; he is owned to be a true Saviour, a Heavenly Sacrificer and Mediator, who has offered himself as a Victim for our Sins, &c. who died for all Men, and who, besides the Dignity of Prophet and High Priest, with which he is invested, is likewise possessed of Regal Power, that is of the Divine Power which has been given him by his Father. The said Articles treat likewise of Justification.

THE 79th, 80th, 81st and 82d, treat of the Distinction betwixt good and bad Angels; and they do not swerve in that Point from the common Notions, viz. “ that those Spirits..... are sent and made to serve the Faithful..... that the “ Scripture makes mention of them under various Denominations and Degrees of “ Dignity..... that the bad Angels, Devils, or spiritual Powers of Wickedness “ dwell in the Air..... Christ is the chief Lord and Master of both; for, say “ they, as if Scripture Words were always to be understood literally, God has “ given to Christ a Sovereign Power over Mankind; the Father judges none at pre- “ sent....., but has given all Judgment to the Son.” If an Indian, whose Words we are apt to take literally, thought fit to explain our Sayings in the same Sense, he certainly would imagine, that we spake of a King, who having set his own Son upon the Throne, lets him govern as he pleases, without intermeddling in any Affair.

THE 83d to the 90th, treats of the sending of the Holy Ghost into Men; and of his Operations on the Faithful: Those Graces are divided into glorious Gifts, such as the Holy Ghost had granted to the Apostles on the Day of Pentecost, and into Gifts of Sanctification, which are the common and universal Operations of Grace. Several other Graces are mentioned betwixt these two, which are communicated after a perfect renouncing ourselves, and are next in order to the glorious Gifts. The Description of these Gifts is somewhat obscure and mystical. We shall set it down in the Author's Words: “ They consist, says he, in the sensible Experience of a ravishing “ Love, of a sweet overflowing of Joy, of a profound Peace, of an inward quiet “ Repose; that is, which resides in the Heart or Minds of Man; and this Grace “ is called sensible with good Reason, not being given properly in this Life to any “ but the particular Friends of God, and being wholly hid to the Eyes of the “ World it is chiefly bestowed on those who have entirely renounced themselves, “ and still oftner when they suffer for Justice’s sake . . .^p. Had he only said plainly, that the Holy Ghost acts with so much Strength on the Hearts of the Faithful, that he weans him from all worldly Affections; from whence it follows, that his only Employment is to love God; that being thus loosened from the World, and wholly resigned to the Will of God, the Faithful became perfectly easy and quiet, rejoiced in the Practice of Virtue, and underwent with Chearfulness the most severe Trials in the World, he might have been understood; but such a Style would not have suited the sublime Notions of Bigots, who delight in dark and extraordinary Expressions like spiritual Quacks, whose only Aim is to puzzle and cheat the Ignorant,

THE Articles 91st to the 97th speak of divine Providence, and of the Reign of Christ, who preserves the Faithful from the Power and alluring Charms of the World; gives them Strength to withstand all the Endeavours of Men, to bear their Persecutions, and overcome their own Passions; Christ, says this Mennonite Writer, delivers his spiritual Subjects from Satan and other evil Spirits, &c.

THE 98th and 99th Articles are about both the just Men and the wicked, their rising from Death to Life: the 100th about the last Judgment: the 101st speaks of various Degrees of Punishments, but does not mention any Difference in the Rewards; the two last contain further Proofs of the Doctrine of Life everlasting, and of the compleat Happiness enjoyed by those who have lived upon Earth in a State of Shame and Contempt upon account of their Love for Religion and Virtue.

HAVING given an Abstract of these Professions of Faith, we must further inform our Readers, that in 1710^a the Anabaptists or Mennonites of the Canton of Bern in Switzerland, gave to the Magistrates of Amsterdam a Declaration, in which “ 1. They own that the civil and temporal Power of the Magistrates, &c. is settled “ and ordained by God, and add that Subjects must pray for them, obey them, and “ pay what is due to them, &c.

“ 2. That it was not lawful for them to swear or take any Oaths, but only, ac“ cording to the Letter of the Gospel Precept, to answer Yea and Nay, by which “ Words they thought themselves as strictly bound as by the most solemn Oath.

“ 3. THAT they were willing^r to pay to the Magistrates for their Protection, what“ ever Sum or Sums they should be able to pay, according to their Abilities, and to “ supply their not being able to go to War (which their Religion forbid) they should “ be ready to build Fortifications, &c. whenever Necessity required it.” They defired that the foregoing Declaration might be registered; and as they do not mention any Article of Faith, we are well grounded in believing that they did not differ from the Opinions of the other Mennonite Brethren.

THE German Anabaptists of Alsatia, in 1660, subscribed, with great Solemnity, to the Profession of Faith drawn up in 1632 at Dordrecht by the Brethren of Flanders (Vlaminghen). The Mennonites of Prussia^r agree likewise with those of Holland within a few trifling Particulars. Their Profession of Faith contains eighteen Ar-

^p See in Pere Simon (St. Jore) tome II. ch. 20. of his Biblioth. Critic. above, a Prayer drawn up by Cardinal Berulle, worded in much the same Style.

^a Hist. Mennon. p. 278 and following.

^r Quod paratissunt ad tribuendam pecuniam . . . pro protectione . . . & loco armorum usus quantum possunt extruere fortificationes.

^r In the Title of their Confession, p. 281. Hist. Mennon. they are named Claricks, Clarici.

Le BAPTEME des MENNONITES.

La BENEDICTION qui suit le BAPTEME.

ticles, the most remarkable of which are the 2d, owning Christ to be the Son of God, and himself God: and in the 4th they declare, that they acknowledge only one eternal God, not three Gods; one Godhead, or as the Latin Word is, one Deity. The 9th establishes the spiritual Eating, the Body and Blood of Christ^c. The 10th approves the Washing of the Feet, so far that those Mennonites of Prussia seem to place it in the same Rank as the Sacraments (Baptism and Communion) maintaining that this Ceremony in which^d the Greater humbles himself towards the Lesser is grounded on the Example of Christ, and is helpful to the Faithful, in order to obtain Life everlasting. This Custom is chiefly kept up towards those who are sent as Deputies for Ecclesiastical Affairs: When such a one comes into the House of a Brother, first he receives the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Peace, then his Feet are washed in a Spirit of Charity and Humility: By the 12th Article Sinners and Hereticks are to be excommunicated; for, say they, such Criminals ought to be punished^e and thrust out, in the Strength and Power of the Word of God, as being self-judged and self-condemned by their evil Works: To this the 13th Article adds, that according to the Precept of Christ, we must separate ourselves from a Perverse Brother, neither eat nor drink with him, nor keep him Company, nor receive him into our House, nor give him the Holy Kiss, or bow to him; out of a holy Intention and Desire to excite him to a saving Repentance; which such a Reprobation and Separation from all civil Society is, they think, most likely to bring him to. Such a severe Excommunication may produce exterior Regularity, and an appearing Conversion: but at the same time it is calculated to make Hypocrites rather than true Faithful. The Articles about civil Power, Swearing, Infant-Baptism, and the last Judgment, are conformable to the Tenets of other Mennonites.

THE Hamburgers of that Sect use the same Profession of Faith, as those who several Years since separated themselves from the Flemish^f Mennonites. We shall now conclude this short Dissertation by introducing an Account of their Religious Customs and Ceremonies in the Administration of Baptism and the Eucharist^g. Baptism is given after the Sermon: those who are to receive it go to the Minister^h (or Doctor) who comes down from the Pulpit to perform that Function. He asks them whether they are willing to be baptised; they answer by an Inclination, or bending their Body, which is looked upon as equivalent to their saying Yes. They kneel, and the Minister in the same Posture likewise says his Prayers; which being ended, the Reader, or Chanter of the Assembly, comes with a Basin full of Water, and follows the Minister, who goes to each of the Neophytes still kneeling; and pouring some Water on the Head of each of them says, N. N. I baptize you with Water, May our Lord Jesus Christ baptize you with (or by) his Spirit: When they have been all baptised, the same Minister raises them one by one, and having in a Christian manner made them a Compliment on their being admitted into the Society of the Faithful, gives themⁱ the Kiss of Peace.

^c The Latin Word is literally, partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ.

^d Lavationem pedum exemplo & Doctrina sua Christum approbasse ajunt, quo maximus minimo... obviā ireteneatur, idque propterea ut obtineat æternam salutem, ad quam hanc lotionem maxime necessariam putarunt, imo fere instar sacramenti habent, &c.

^e Protervos procaces & carnales peccatores, imo Hæreticos vi Verbi Divini puniendos ac expellendos judicant, &c.... ad Mandatum Christi necesse est ut subducamus nos ab omni fratre qui inordinate ambulat, nec cum eo comedamus aut bibamus, &c.

^f See above.

^g The Prints, set in this Place, represent those Ceremonies.

^h The Dutch Word signifies literally a Doctor or Master.

ⁱ This Ceremony is now laid aside, because the Strangers, whom Curiosity brought to see the Baptism of the Mennonites, either turned it into Ridicule, or contemned, and were even scandalised at it.

THE Communion is likewise administer'd after the Sermon : The Minister takes out of three Baskets, which are upon the Communion-Table, some Bread, which he breaks, and gives first to his Collegues, saying these Words, Do this in Memory of our Lord Jesus Christ. Then two other Ministers joined themselves with him, and all three followed by three Deacons, each of whom holds a Basket, go through all the Ranks to give the Communion to every Faithful present ; after which, the Minister who has preached that Day goes alone to the Communion-Table, the other two Ministers and the three Deacons retiring. The Minister standing before the Table enquires aloud if every one has received the Communion-Bread ; if any Faithful has not, he rises up and makes a Sign, and the Minister comes back and gives it to him : No Body eats the Bread when they receive it, but all stay till the Minister is gone back to the Table ; where, after a short Prayer, he eats it, and invites the Assembly to partake with him of the Communion, which they perform ; but till that Moment they either hold the Bread in their Hands, or fold it up in a Handkerchief, or put it in their Pockets. The Wine is distributed to the same Faithful after it has been blessed or consecrated by the Minister, who first receives it with his Collegues, then the Deacons carry it about to every one in the Assembly. Like all other Protestants, they end this act of Religion by a Prayer, and singing a Psalm.

La CENE des ANABAPTISTES premiere figure.

La CENE des ANABAPTISTES seconde figure

A DISSERTATION

On the ADAMITES.

THE Existence of Adamites is not to be questioned : Such Men have been in former Ages, and some are still in Being. If by the Word Adamites we mean People, who, out of a Principle of Religion, or to do Penance, have cast off their Cloaths, and gone naked without any Fear of offending either their own Modesty, or that of others; Paganism, both antient and modern, and even Christianity, furnish us with several Examples of a religious Nakedness. The Romans had their Lupercalia or Feasts in Honour of Pan, in which Solemnities they went about the Streets stark naked. Augustus put some Stop to this Disorder, and in his Time, those Devotees were obliged to wear Breeches or Drawers: The same Nakedness was practised amongst the Greeks, both in some of their Festivals, and in the Olympick Games; in which, according ^a to a Greek Epigram, a Lacedemonian was the first who took it into his Head to fight naked, and to be crowned in that Condition. As to the modern Heathenism, the Faquirs and Indian Penitents live naked and exposed to the Inclemency of the Air, or burning Heat of the Sun, from a Motive of Penance and Austerity. Even amongst Christians, several Anchorets and Monks of Palestine have done the same: 'Tis even related, that, to shew how far they had mastered the most unruly of all human Passions, they went with Women into the publick Baths ^b: Sure both were equally chaste, or paid but little Regard to the Judgments of the World, if they could thus expose themselves, and brave the Temptation, without any dangerous Consequences.

If by Adamites we mean professed Votaries to carnal Pleasures; a Set of People, who, instead of endeavouring to overcome their Passions, use on the contrary all the Means and most refined Methods to raise and keep them up; amongst which this Nakedness is reckoned, as may be seen in Propertius ^c and his Commentators: Even in this Case (so widely different from the pretended Insensibility of the Stoicks, or the Monks of Palestine) 'tis to be feared, no one can say that there have not been, are not, or will never be such Adamites. But those of whom we now give an Account, are supposed to have heretofore formed a Sect, often renewed under various Denominations: They act upon Principle, and pretend to give some Reasons to justify this Practice; they even draw their Reasons from the Christian Revelation: Though true Christians have always deservedly looked upon them as fanatic and dangerous Notions. This is all that can be alledged in Vindication of what Bayle ^d has said, to shew why Christians were, as he pretends, oftner guilty of that Absurdity of going naked: "Because, says he, the Pagans were entirely ignorant of a Truth, which may have been abused by Christians under the Gospel-Dissipation: To wit, that Christ, the second Adam, came to repair the Evil which

^a See a Citation in Cælius Rhodig lib. 13. Leſt. Antiq.

^b This is an unlikely Story, but an Over-Credulity is to be met with in all Ages. The Dissertation on the antient Adamites, tom. xxi. of Biblioth. German. furnishes us with many Examples of it.

^c See Propert. Eleg. xii. of the second Book: See likewise his Commentator Brockhusius, who cites several antient Poets, and two Verses of the Emperor Gallienus.

^d In the Article Turlupins. Mr. de Beausobre, in his Dissertation on the same Subject, attacks Bayle very warmly: But he does not set his Proofs in the strongest Light; and certainly all those who have wrote in Favour of the Adamites alledge the same Reasons which Bayle does: However this did not suit with Beausobre's Aim, which was to prove that Adamism is a down right fabulous Invention.

“ the first Adam had brought into the World: From this Principle (says Bayle)
 “ some Fanatic has drawn this Conclusion, that whoever is Partaker of the Law
 “ of Grace, is perfectly reinstated in the Innocency of Adam and Eve, &c.”

’Tis highly improbable, and next to an Impossibility, that any Sect should have been really made up of Adamites: But we cannot deny that some Sectaries may have been so foolish, as to understand in a wrong Sense, the Regeneration of Man by the Law of Grace, and the Reparation of the bodily Sensations in the Regenerate: Such a Denial could only be the Consequence of a rash mistrusting all antient and modern Authors, who have mentioned this Sort of Fanaticks. However, the most remarkable Particulars related of them are as follow.

Some Adamites, or Adamians pretended to imitate the State of Innocency and Nakedness of our first Parents, and to live as chastly as they did in Paradise. Prodicus, who lived in the Beginning of the second Age, is supposed to be the Founder of that Sect, of which the Antients have transmitted to us various Accounts. Some tell us, that in order to perform their Devotions they put off all their Cloaths in the Room where they held their Assembly; then placed themselves indifferently, without any Distinction of Age, Sex, Quality, Ecclesiasticks and Laity, Men and Women, Boys and Girls: Yet without committing any immodest Actions; that in that State of pretended Innocency, they were so much Masters of their Passions, as to be no more moved, than at the Sight of so many Marble-Statues: That if any of those Adamites committed any Fault, or gave Way to sensual Pleasures he was turned out of the Assembly, as having eaten, or attempted to eat the forbidden Fruit. That, in a Word, they were so averse from Incontinency, that they even abstained from Matrimony, as from a Crime; the Allurements of which had cost Adam and Eve the Loss of their Innocency, and never would have tasted, had it not been brought about by the wily Craftiness and Sollicitations of the Devil. This Notion, which the Adamites entertained about Marriage, makes it not unlikely, that they looked upon the History of Adam’s Temptation, as an Allegory, by which Moses has concealed the Shame of the first Sin, and of its fatal Consequences*. If we examine narrowly the State of Man, before and after the great Revolution which Nature produces at a certain Age, it might probably be lawful to determine, which is the forbidden Tree mentioned by Moses: But Silence is much preferable to such insignificant and useless Inquiries and Gueses†.

Some others amongst the Ancients, either less charitable towards these Fanaticks, or being determined by stronger Motives to find them guilty, accused the Adamites of actually committing the most shameful Abominations, of eating carnally without any Sense of Modesty, the forbidden Fruit, and with a cynical Impudence. They are moreover reproached, with maintaining that the four Elements were God; con-

* We have an Account of some Abelians, or Abelites in the Diocese of St. Augustin in Africa, who though married, and approving Matrimony, yet were continent, and only adopted the Children of others: what Folly will not Men commit! To be sure it was no small Trial to withstand Temptations, and yet live in the immediate Occasion of yielding to them. Some Ages of Christianity furnish us with several Examples of People who were married, and agreed to remain in the State of Virginity. As to the Abelites, their Practice was grounded on a Jewish Fable; that after the Murder of Abel, Adam lived one Hundred and thirty Years with Eve, without cohabiting with her. From whence they were called Abelites.

† Beverland has wrote a Dissertation in elegant Latin, intitled Peccatum Originale, &c. He has been since copied by a Frenchman, who published in that Language a small Treatise, under the Name of The State of Man, in Original Sin; in which he is so wicked, as to make an Apology even for the Devil. We must not omit here the foolish Conceit of Antoinette Bourignon, “ Men, says she, think they were “ created as they now are but Sin has destroyed the Work of God . . . They are become Monsters “ . . . unable to produce, by themselves, others like them, as Trees and Plants do . . . God created the “ Woman, by taking from Adam that inward Part which contained the Eggs, from which Men spring,
 “ and with which Adam, by himself, might have had Children . . . ”. See more of this Subject in the Dissertation on the Pietists.

ASSEMBLEES nocturnes des ADAMITES

ADAMITES d'AMSTERDAM

denying Prayer; denying the Necessity of owning the Belief of Christ. Yet some Fathers assure us, in express Terms, that the Adamites ^e prayed: But we must leave these ancient Adamites, and give an Account of those of a later Date. Tandeme, or Tanchelm, an Heretick of the twelfth Century, is one of those who are charged with renewing the cynical Opinions of the antient Adamites. But, after all, this amounted to no more, than that he, being a profligate Debauchee, and the Ring-leader of a Party, might endeavour to screen his Crimes under some religious Pretence: There are some in all Religions who act as if Lewdness was the first Article of their Belief. Tandeme carried with him several Women; he was guilty of committing with them an infinite Number of Crimes; But, as Bayle observes ^h, neither he, nor the ancient Adamites obliged their Disciples to go about stark naked: Whereas, the modern Adamites were not to wear any Cloaths, but out of a religious Principle, appeared, in the open Streets, in the plain State of Nature. In that Condition the Adamites shewed themselves amongst the Anabaptists of the Low Countries, about the Middle of the sixteenth Ageⁱ.

Then, and not before, did this Sect begin: Bayle gives an Account of them, their Founder's Name was ^k Picard: They increased and multiplied as others do, but without any formal Marriage; and were so much at Liberty in that Particular, that it was allowed them to change the Object, as often as their Desires or Inclinations prompted them. No other Ceremony was required, but to bring to their Chief the Woman whom they coveted, saying these Words, My Spirit is heated for this Woman, to which he answered, Go, increase and multiply. Those Fanaticks called all other Men Slaves; and it would not be easily guessed, in what Sense they used that Expression, if some of their Women, being taken Prisoners, had not boldly declared, that Breeches took from Men their Liberty. Some Women may think so to this Day; and like the grand Maxim of the Art of War, that true Warriors ought always to be ready. But we must not joke at the Expence of those poor Wretches, who braved Death with Joy and Constancy; for such Actions, in which Madness, Seduction, and wrong Consequences, drawn from religious Principles, might have a greater Share than lewd Inclinations.

The Author of the ^l Dissertation on the Adamites of Bohemia, seems to call in question, what we have said of the Women of that Sect; and brings plausible Reasons to support his Opinion; but we cannot enter into his Sentiments, that such Madness is not possible. There have been many such in the World, highly extoll'd as heroick Acts of Religion: Do not we read, in ancient History, that the Heathen Priests persuaded some Men, that if they ran head-long into Precipices and certain Destruction, it would save their Country? The Custom of some Indian Women, to burn themselves with their Husbands, in the same funeral Pile, is scarce absolutely left off in some Places; yet this inhuman Ceremony had the Sanction of their Priests, who supported it upon extravagant Notions of Virtue and Religion. The Principles in which we are brought up, are often the Occasion of the Difficulty we find, in reconciling some Things with Truth: Study, and knowing the World, make such Impressions on our Minds, as either increase or diminish Incredulity: And as we ^e Bayle, in the Article Adamites, cites a Passage of St. Clement of Alexandria, and another of St. Augustin, point blank contradictory one to the other.

^h See Bayle in the Article Picards.

ⁱ At Amsterdam, and in other Places. The Prints here represent them.

^k Beausobre says, these are the Words of Æneas Sylvius, are a certain Picard, whose Name was John.

^l Tom. 4. "Is it probable, says he, that Women in their Senses, and who had Courage enough to undergo the Punishment of being burnt to Death, should be so abandoned, and impudent, as openly to maintain such Opinions? &c".

labour under many Uncertainties, we often judge of Times past, by our own, of what happened before us, by what we daily see, and are apt to censure and reject what is out of our Sphere, and beyond the Reach of our Understanding. Mr. Beaujeu's Dissertation on the Adamites ^m is full of Erudition and solid Reasoning; but he seems too much bent to turn into Ridicule, and look upon as fabulous, whatever Historians have wrote concerning the Adamites; though we are willing to own, at the same Time, that Hatred and Calumny have not been wanting, to amplify the Story. This is but too common in all Ages and Parties: But there is something true in the Main; and all we can allow Mr. de B... is, that the Orthodox have given a malicious Turn to the Facts, to render more odious, all those, who either disapproved of the Doctrine received in the Church, or inveighed against the corrupt Lives of the Clergy. No Doubt they were glad to find Fools, Fanaticks and Debauchees, whom they might rank amongst Hereticks, whom they thought it the Interest of the Church that the Orthodox should detest.

The Flagellants ⁿ might, with some shew of Reason, be reckoned amongst the Adamites. In the publick Processions, in which they whipp'd themselves out of Devotion, the Rule was to have only the Shoulders bare, but some were of Opinion it would be more pleasing to God, and give more Edification, if they were above half naked, when they performed this Exercise. If Fanaticism is to be compared with Fanaticism, the religious Flagellations of the Christians, will not appear much inferior to those amongst the Heathens.

An Author, whom we often cited in the foregoing Dissertation, informs us upon the Credit of a Compiler of Heretical Catalogues, that, in 1581, some Adamites were discovered in Holland; those who desired to be initiated into this pretended Sect, walked quite naked in the middle of the Assembly, (probably naked likewise) if in that Condition they had no Temptation, or did not outwardly shew any of those evident Signs, without which no one can know such Thoughts, they were admitted into the Society of Brethren Adamites. The Words of the Author are cited ^p at the Bottom of this Page; but those who informed him, mistook probably for a religious Sect, some wicked Society of Profligate Debauchees; such as have been found in Holland, and other Places; and, 'tis to be feared, will subsist to the End of the World.

We shall conclude this short Dissertation, with the Account which Thevenot gives us of the Houames ^q. “ They are, says he, Arabian Vagrants, live like them in “ Tents: They have a very remarkable Custom, peculiar to themselves, every “ Night they perform their Ceremonies, and say their Prayers in a Tent, without “ any Light, then cohabit with the first Person they meet in that dark Place, be it “ Father, Mother, Sister or Brother: This is much worse than the Religion of the “ Adamites: They keep themselves very private, for if they were found out to be “ Houames, they would infallibly be burnt.”

^m Tom. 4. and 19 of Biblioth. German.

ⁿ Guy, an Abbot, who lived in the eleventh Century, is said to have invented the voluntary Flagellations which were carried to such Excesses, as are related in the Hist. of Flagell. and other Books.

^o The Print in this Place is drawn from an ancient Manuscript of the Abbey of St. Martin, at Tournay.

^p Ott. In the Preface of Annal. Anabapt. In Belgio, anno 1581. adhuc reperiuntur (Adamitæ) recipiendi nudi per horam in Communi cœtu obambulare debebant, illique qui nullas carnis illecebras sentiebant, recipiebantur. These pretended Adamites were probably some Remains of the fanatick Anabaptists.

^q Voyages Tom. ii. p. 852. of the Amsterdam Edition. 1727.

Procession of flagellants

A
DISSERTATION
On the PRE-ADAMITES.

ABOUT the Middle of the last Age, an obscure Author endeavoured to frame a new System concerning the Origin of Mankind, and to prove^a that some Men had existed before Adam. This is so peculiar a Notion, that we are under an Obligation to entertain our Readers with the Particulars of it in this Dissertation.

PEYRERIUS found out, in what St. Paul says concerning the Imputation of Adam's Sin, &c.^b strange and new Difficulties, which had not been thought of in the sixteen Ages of Christianity before him. This induced him to embrace the above-mentioned extraordinary Opinion, that some Men must have had a Being before Adam. We shall not enter into all his new Enquiries, only take Notice that he sets out with saying, that the Imputation of Sin began at the Transgression of the Law, not the Law of Moses, but a more general one given before to Adam, which Transgression has spread Death amongst Men. This Imputation was taken away by Christ, who is the second Adam. The Apostle says, that Sin was in the World till the Law (given to Adam.) This is the Origin, and, if it may be so called, the Queen of all other Laws; amongst which some are particular, and prior to that of Moses. The Ordinances, Laws and Ceremonies established by that Lawgiver were not the first published in the World. The Jews before him (Peyrerius means all the Posterity of Adam to Abraham, who is looked upon as the true Father of the Jews and Believers, according to the general Opinion) kept the Sabbath, observed the Distinction between the clean and unclean Beasts, abstained from strangled Meat, had some Sacrifices, a regular Worship, which is meant by the Invocation of the Name of God begun by Enos; though, says this Author, God was certainly called upon before the Days of that Patriarch; who probably might make some Alteration in the Religious Worship, Calling upon the Name of God, signifying literally only calling upon God by another Name than Adam and Seth had done, or as he boldly supposes, changing the Order and Manner of Calling upon God.

CIRCUMCISION likewise was before Moses. The Book of Genesis also informs us, that all the Laws of his Decalogue were observed before his Time; and indeed how could Men live in Society without keeping these Laws? Can any one believe (as Peyrerius pretends that most Divines do) that they began to be in force only in Moses's Time? We might easily answer that they were natural Orders, and of such evident Authority, that it is not possible any Man of a sound Judgment should not be sensible, that abstracting from all other Motives, our own Interest requires they should be observed. But we are not to give Scope to our Reasonings; our present Business is to follow the Thread of this Author's System. All the above-mentioned Particulars being of an older Date than the Laws of Moses, we can only attribute to him the Institution of such Ordinances which were to be peculiar to one Nation, one sort of Government, ceremonial Laws prescribing some Customs which the Jews alone were to observe, and which Christ has abrogated. The Imputation of Sin does not fall upon all Mankind; for having disobeyed such antiquated Laws, which tho' of divine Institution, were to be abolished after some Ages. But the Law of Adam is not like this, it concerns all Mankind. Adam broke that Command, his whole Posterity feels the direful Effects of this Violation, which in the Sight of God is become the universal Crime of which all Men are guilty.

^a The Title of this Book is Præadamitæ sive exercitatio super versibus, 12, 13, 14. Capitis quinti Epistolæ Divi Pauli ad Romanos: quibus inducuntur primi homines ante Adamum. At Amsterdam in 1655, without the Author or Printer's Name.

^b Chap. 5. ver. 12, 13, 14. of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans.

THEREFORE, says Peyrerius, the State of Man under the Law begins with Adam; whence then are we to date the State of Nature? We shall see his Opinion about that shortly. The Divines, to elude the Difficulties which are proposed against the common System, have invented a Propagation of Sin called original Sin, begun by the Disobedience of Adam. They did not (as our Author pretends it was their Duty) seek a State of Nature before Adam, by which it is proved that Sin was committed before the pretended first Man was created; but not imputed till his Time. Thus the Præ-adamitical System solves the Difficulty, says Peyrerius, without offending Religion, without giving the Lye to the Scripture, or interrupting the Course of Grace, &c. Men had sinned before Adam, without its being imputed, because Sin was not imputed till the Law: We must still keep in Mind that by this Law Peyrerius means that given to Adam. Moreover, the Distinction of the first Adam from the second is made plainer. Adam was not the first Man, nor Christ the last. The Satisfaction or Atonement of the Sins of Mankind by the second Adam has been imputed to those who lived before him, and it may be said, that the Imputation of the Sin of the first Adam has in the same manner affected those who had a Being before him.

SIN and Death, according to this System, were before Adam, but^c they did not live and reign over all Mankind; Sin and Death were dead, they had no Sting. This is expressed by St. Paul in these Words, “Until the Law Sin was in the World, but Sin is not imputed when there is no Law,” and by Consequence Death had no Power over Mankind. But the same Apostle says likewise, “by one Man Sin entered into the World, and Death by Sin; and so Death passed upon all Men.” These Præ-Adamites, these Men who are absolutely unknown to us as well as to the Author, who introduces them upon the Stage, had not sinned in the same Manner as Adam did. They had committed a material Sin, or (to speak more intelligibly, if we can) a Sin inherent to and inseparable from human Nature, Matter, Flesh and corporal Sensations: Adam, on the contrary, had committed a Formal Sin; for so Peyrerius is pleased to call the Transgression against the Law. But after all, to maintain this extraordinary System, and the most paradoxical ever invented, he is obliged to suppose that before this Law given to Adam, Men acted only like^d Beasts.

IN this Case one may easily conceive, that Sin was only material in them, and became formal afterwards by the Violation of the Law given to Adam. The Author goes on and says, that no Man since Adam has sinned as Adam did; but this Question is not to our present Purpose, and no ways affects the main Point of this Præ-adamitical System.

^c Nulla jure pervaserant in omnes homines, non vivebant. Peccatum tunc temporis erat mortuum, mors erat mortua, & nullus erat sepulchro aculeus.

^d Nomen peccati à pecore &c. homo vergebat in brutum, &c.

PEYRERIUS introduces afterwards a Præ-Adamite making a long Speech to the Post-Adamites, if this Word can be used. Which is but an Explanation of what we have mentioned above concerning that Opinion, and in which he owns an innate Reason^d, which yet seems contradictory to the Note above. But the whole is an inconsistent System. We shall not tire our Readers by a longer Extract from this Dissertation.

A TREATISE much larger followed it, under the Title of Système Theologique, &c. a Theological System drawn from the Hypothesis of the Præ-Adamites. The Author maintains his Notion of material or natural, and formal or legal Sin; and contradicts all the Divines: Material Sin is natural to Men, and to the Body of which he is composed. All the Evils to which Mankind is subject, are a Consequence of Matter, not of Adam's Sin. Men and Beasts having the same organick Texture, are equally mortal. The Variety of their outward Form gives no Preference to Men, except the accidental Merit of looking up to his Creator, and the Place of his Abode^e. Such is the Nature of Matter, such are its Defects. The Soul only, which animates it in Men, raises them above Beasts.

MEN, says the said Author, were created to the Likeness of God, perfect, and even to a high Degree; they would have remained so, had not the Soul been lodged in a Body subject to Corruption. If any one asks, how Matter could defile the Soul? he gives no Answer to that Objection; but says by a kind of second Creation^f, Men are freed from this Corruption. This Deliverance is owing to the divine Spirit, by whose Strength Men acquire a truly supernatural Holiness^g, and are redeemed from Death by a supernatural Immortality, of which they were not capable by the first Creation.

THE Election of the Jews is a Consequence of the same System: It began at Adam, who is their true Father. God is also Father of the Jews, having espoused the Judaical Church^h. Nay, he is likewise their Motherⁱ. The Gentiles are only adopted Children, as being^k Præ-Adamites. The Scripture calls them only Men, or Children of Men, or Fools, or Sinners, sometimes Beasts and unclean Animals; whereas the Jews are said to be the Children of God, as having been made of a more perfect^l Nature than the other Nations which he had created.

THIS Distinction was very flattering in regard to the Jews, who were thus raised by Peyrerius to a superior Order of Men: and at the same time it might have proved an ingenious Romance, had not the Author strongly insisted upon the Truth of it. But he goes seriously about proving the Reality of the Jews being the Children of Adam, and the Gentiles Sons of the Earth. In order to this, he compares the first Chapter of Genesis, where it is said that God created Man by his Word^m, with the second, wherein Adam is introduced as the Work of God's own Hands; again,

^d Quidquid Dei, &c. manifestum mihi erat lumine illo innato & rectâ ratione quæ mihi à Natura indita est.

^e So Ovid. l. 1. Metam. says,

*Pronaque cum spectent animalia cætera terram,
Os homini sublime dedit, cælumque tueri
Jussit & erectos ad sidera tollere vultus.*

^f Lib. 1: Chap. VI: Homines in lutum suum revolutos . . . Deus . . . recreare . . . decrevit, &c.

^g In the same Book, Chap. 8.

^h See Book 2. Chap. 1.

ⁱ Deus Judeorum mater.

^k Primæ creationis homines. Lib. 2: Chap. VI:

^l See the said Book II. Chap. X.

^m See in Bayle on Peyrerius many Testimonies of that Writer's being stubbornly wedded to his new-invented System.

ⁿ Book II. Chap. X. above-cited.

the 47th Psalm joined to the 49th, in which the Gentiles are expressly called Sons of the Earth, appears to him as an evident Proof that there are two Species of Men. The Jews then being made of a finer Mould^c, had all the Reason on their Side not to be inquisitive about the other Nations, which drew their Origin from the Præ-Adamites. This was not an Effect of their Pride, but a Self-consciousness of their own Dignity. They were by this second Creation to live eternally, whilst the Præ-Adamites and their Posterity were doomed to Death as a natural Consequence of the Corruptibility of the Matter of which they were composed. Moreover, the Jewish Genealogies are clearly traced from Adam their first Father: Whereas in the Pedigrees of the Gentiles no Order is kept, no Knowledge preserved^p of their Origin.

THESE are not his only Arguments drawn from Scripture; God created Man Male and Female, not one only of each, but several; how else could they have peopled the Earth? and if God would not destroy the Canaanites suddenly, lest the wild Beasts should destroy the Israelites, who were in number six hundred thousand, besides Women and Children; how much more pressing would that Danger have been, if God had created only one Male and one Female? 'Tis plain then, says Peyrerius, he created several, and their Posterity was immensely increased before Adam came forth from his Hands, and he gave him a Wife made like him; and this is the Reason why the Jews were not to take Wives from amongst the Gentiles.

PEYRERIUS having thus displayed his happy Talent at Reasoning, proceeds to other Proofs drawn from historical Facts. Adam it seems had a Governor or Tutor, a Rabbi^r says his Name was Sembofer; who could this be but a Præ-Adamite? Our Author indeed^t does not believe Rabbinical Fables; but there are some Footsteps of Truth even in Fables. Cain having killed his Brother Abel, was afraid of being killed himself: by whom? he became a Robber and Captain of Robbers: who were they? He married; yet Adam had then no Daughter; what Wife could he get? He built a Town; what Architects, Masons, Carpenters and Workmen did he employ? The Answer to all these Questions is in one Word Præ-Adamites.

THE Histories of the Chaldeans, Ægyptians, Chinese, &c. Thirty Dynasties of Kings in Egypt for thirty thousand Years, besides the Reign of the Sun in the same Country during the Space of six hundred thousand six hundred and seventy-six Years; not to mention other Nations, are a clear Demonstration of the Existence of the Præ-Adamites.

THE wonderful Improvements of Arts and Sciences, of Astrology, Astronomy, of Divinity, of Witch-Craft, of which we have such ancient and curious Monuments, shew they were arrived to such a Perfection in those early Days, which we consider as the Infancy of the World, that it seems impossible^u that the Space between Adam and Moses could suffice for such a stupendous Progress. Whence without entering into Particulars, which is needless, and would appear long and te-

^a Quæis meliore luto finxit præcordia Titan.

^b Gentium.... stirps & origo prima confusa & incognita.... quod à principio incognito & a sæculis innumerabilibus Aborigines creati.... crescente propagationis luxuria, qua alii super alios trusi & retrusi sunt.... certus sui primitias conturbaverunt.

^c We find in the Menagiana "that Peyrerius would have been well pleased if he had known that a Rabbi had mentioned Adam's Tutor." If Menage had read the third Chapter of the third Book of the Work from which we now extract, he would have found that Peyrerius knew it. And 'tis a Wonder that Bayle did not take Notice of this Mistake, but probably he had not read it neither.

^d Quamvis parùm credam Rabbinorum fabulis, nihil tamen adeo fabulosum est quod non antequam redoleat veritatem, Chap. 3. lib. 3.

^e See Chap. 4. lib. 3. He takes this Story of Cain's Robberies from Josephus Ant. Jud.

^f See the last Chapter of the third Book.

dious to our Readers, it must be concluded, says Peyrerius, that these were Præ-Adamites.

IF one should answer, That Adam was endowed with the Knowledge of all Arts and Sciences at his Creation ; and had no more to do than to cultivate them, and instruct his Children in them : This appears no ways satisfactory to our Author, over fond of his own System. Accordingly he complains loudly of the Prejudice which makes the World think that Moses's Books are the oldest that ever were wrote about the History of the World ; he advances many bold Assertions in that Chapter ^a in favour of what Libertines object against the Authority of Moses's Books. He says they are Extracts taken from Books of greater Antiquity, and that this great Lawgiver himself had given a History of the Creation of the ^z Præ-Adamites ; but what now remains of his Works concerns only the Jewish Nation. He looks upon it as a Consequence of the same Prejudice, our looking upon as general to the whole World, what is only peculiar to one Nation. Thus, says he, the building the Ark, planting the Vine by Noah, was the first Work of its Kind, as we think ; but how is it possible they should have been so long unknown ? The Deluge only overflowed the Countries inhabited by Adam's Children, to punish them for joining in Marriage with the Præ-Adamites, and following their ill Courses. Darkness overspread only Judæa at the Death of Christ ; the Star, which guided the three wise Men, was only a Light set up for them. The Sun did not go back really, only the Shadow retrograded upon Abaz's Sun-Dial. The Babylonians had it only by Hearsay, and were not Eye-Witnesses of it ; neither did the Sun and Moon stop their Course for Joshua ; and he avers that such Explications of the Scripture are not in favour of Unbelievers, nor derogatory to the Wonders of God's Providence. Our Readers may consult this strange Work concerning the 29th Chapter of Deuteronomy, in which he explains away the Miracle of the Jews Cloathing not wearing out, &c. by pretending it means no more, than that having Oxen and Sheep, they needed not want Clothes and Shoe-Leather ^y, and pretends one ought to have Recourse to Reason ^z on such Occasions. His Notions (as to the Eternity of God ^a and of the World, as to the Imputation of ^b Adam's Sin, its spiritual Propagation to all his Children, nay even its Retrogradation so as to be imputed even to the Præ-Adamites) are so abstruse, that we shall not overburden our Readers with them in a Work like this chiefly historical.

FATHER Simon has collected some curious Anecdotes, which make it appear ^c, that Peyrerius had borrowed his System from the Rabbins and Cabbalists, who “ upon “ no other Ground, than because the first Letter of Genesis happens to be the “ second of the Alphabet, draw this Inference, that Adam is only the first Man of “ a second World, before which there was another. Many Jews, says Simon, “ believe this Dream.” The Mahometans have gone further than Peyrerius ; some of them having given us the Names of some Præ-Adamites ^d. The Sabæans ^e are of Opinion, that Adam was born of another Man and a Woman. But P. Simon takes notice ^f of a very remarkable Turn of Thought of Peyrerius, who in a

^a The first Chapter of the fourth Book.

^y Rerum omnium Genesim ante Adamum conditum scripsisse mihi facile persuadeo, Book IV. Chap. 2.

^z Book IV. Chap. 5.

^a Rationalis sum, & rationi conveniens nihil a me alienum puto. Ibid.

^b Chapters 10, 11, 12. of Book the fourth.

^c See Book fifth.

^d See choice Letters of Simon, Tom. 2. Lett. 1. and following, in which he refutes Peyrerius's System.

^e See P. Simon in his said first Letter.

^f We shall give an Account of them in this Volume.

^g See P. Simon in his second Letter.

Book ^f supposes two Messiah's, one for the Christians, who is Christ ; the other for the Jews, who is to come, and conquer for them the whole World. But this has no Connection with the Præ-Adamitical System.

THE same learned Writer informs us^g, that a Sect appeared in Holland under the Denomination of Præ-Adamites : But either he was wholly mistaken, or if any embraced that Opinion, they did not form a Sect. Peyrerius, according to the same Author, was accused of Plagiarism, and drawing up his System from some Memoirs of one of his Brothers who died in England. Be that as it will, Peyrerius died without ever renouncing either his Præ-Adamism^h, or his second Messiah, who is to come for the Jews only, and restore themⁱ to the flourishing Condition from which they fell so many Ages before.

^f The Work was intitled, Recalling of the Jews; it was never printed. See P. Simon in his fourth Letter, which contains some curious Anecdotes concerning Peyrerius.

^g See the said fourth Letter.

^h See Bayle in the Article Peyrer. and P. Simon.

ⁱ Dr. Barnet, in his Book de statu Mortuorum & Resurgentium (translated into French, or rather disfigured by one John Brion, first a Priest, then a Church of England Minister, and now probably not so much as a Christian, as is the Fate of most of his Brethren who have left the Catholick Church) gives flattering Hopes to the Jews of a glorious Reign for a thousand Years. But this no ways regards our present Subject. That ingenious Writer has certainly fallen into great Mistakes, not but that we hope for the Conversion of the Jews, and their Re-establishment ; but in a Solid, Christian, and Spiritual Sense.

A General Dissertation,

On several modern mystical Sects.

WE need not have Recourse to the first Ages of Christianity, to trace out the Origin of those who are now called ^a Mysticks: Neither is it requisite that we should prove, that the Expressions, the Notions, Contemplations, Principles, Enthusiasm, &c. of those who are so called, were known to the primitive Christians, and that many ecclesiastical Authors, even some Saints, have gone, both in their Conduct and Writings, beyond the Bounds of what is required of Men, as their essential Duty. Particular Men may, by a special Privilege from God, have been raised to a higher Degree of Holiness, which would appear merely fantastical if ordinary Men should claim it; and Saints, in their exalted Station, may use extraordinary and supernatural Expressions; which, if apply'd to a whole Sect, upon all Occasions, as a Rule by which Consciences are to be governed, contrary to the constant Practice of all civil Societies, even of Christian Communions, would at last turn to the Prejudice and utter Ruin of both. Ancient and modern Mysticks, which, by their own natural Temper, or from Self-Conviction, have been carried beyond the usual Limits, ought to be excused and pitied: But, without judging too severely of the ancient Mysticks, who are far less dangerous by the Distance of Time, who can find Fault with us for blaming those of a later Date who have made it a general Practice to speak in such a Language, as no-body else, nor they themselves can understand? Our modern Quietists and Pietists seem to be of Opinion, that their so much boasted Contemplations, ought, like a strong Fever, to deprive Men of all common Sense, and rational Way of thinking or speaking ^b. It must be owned, that a great Fervour of Devotion is often accompany'd with a heavenly Fire and Sallies, which raises the Mind above sensible Objects: But this is not common to all Sorts of People, much less at all Times, because we are frail Men, and none but Angels and Saints in Heaven are, or can naturally, remain in a State of perpetual Ecstasy of Contemplation. Let, therefore, the Mysticks give us leave to say, that the Language of Religion ought to be clear and plain, without any Shew of Vanity or Pride; the Generality of the Faithful are to be edified by it; they have a Right to speak to God, and to hear his Word: How can this be done, how can they attain true Christian Wisdom, by Means which an Author ^c calls Occult, or Secret, by the various subtle Ways, which he mentions, and sets down in four distinct Orders ^d, the Universal, the Purgative, the Illuminative, the Unitive? What useless unintelligible Words are these, to the

^a By the Word Mysticks we mean those pretended enlightened Persons, who are called Quietists or Pietists: Though, at the same time, we own some may be sincere, and not to be reckoned amongst the Hypocritical Contemplatives.

^b Their Expressions are dangerous, and even blasphemous, or tending to Libertinism, if literally taken; and if they do not use them in that Sense, why will they constantly employ them, and thus act against Reason and Religion?

^c Goth. Arnoldus, in his Hist. and Descript. Theol. Myst. p. 88, 89, edit. Francof. 1702.

^d This Table, drawn up by Hugo de Palma, is highly recommended by Arnold, as clear and easy.

Generality of the Faithful? Would not a sober Meditation on Christian Truths, and moral Duties, be far preferable, cost less Trouble and Study, and produce more solid Conversions? Well may we apply, to these Spiritualists, the Words of ancient Authors^c. So much being premised, 'tis now high Time to extract from the best Authors, what is most essential to modern Pietism, and Quietism, as a Supplement to what has been said before in this Work^f concerning the Quietists.

What we have heretofore taken Notice of about the Anabaptists,^e that Antiquity plainly shews remarkable Foot-steps of their Opinion, may with Justice be repeated here of Mystical Doctrine: Not only of the true one^h contained in holy Writ; but likewise of that Mystical Devotion, which renders Men singular, and different from all others, which inspires them with a Spiritual Misanthropy, of which all Ages and Countries furnish us Patterns. The natural Dispositions of some Men, the Turn of their Mind, their Spleen, is so closely connected to those pretended Raisings of the Heart and Soul to God, so easily mistook for the Love of God, for the Sighs and Groans of true Repentance; that we may, with good Grounds, aver, that Mysticism, as a German Writer says,ⁱ is as ancient as Adam.

But to look no farther back than the three or four last Ages,^k we may look upon St. Bonaventure, John Taulerus, Ruysbrochius^l, Denis the Carthusian, St. Bridget, blessed Angelica of Foligny and some others, as the Founders of our modern Mysticks: Or, if this is thought too injurious to their Memory, at least, the Conduct and Writings of those pious Authors, have, in some Measure, given a Sanction to Mysticism, which the Moderns have carried to so great an Excess: Yet neither these, nor many others since their Time, ever pretended to make a Schism, or form a Sect. The same must be said of John of the Cross, Lewis Granada, the two St. Catherines of Sienna and of Genoa, St. Theresa, Rodrigues, Eusebius of Nierembergh, St. Francis of Sales, and Cardinal Bona, Barbanfon, Horstius, Bernieres de Louvigni, and many others, have only lived and wrote in a mystical Way. But in our Days, Molinos, and his Disciples in Italy; Mrs. Bourignon, and Mr. Poiret in Flanders; Madam Guyon and Francis la Combe, a Barnabite Monk, her Director, Master, &c. in France, spread the Quietism and formed a Sect. Several pretended inlightned Persons had been taken Notice of before the last mentioned, such as Desmarais de St. Sorlin, who, amongst other Works, published a Book under the Title of Delights of the Mind, which Pundsters^m called the Delirium of the Mind: One Father Guilleri, whose enormous Excesses would probably have met with an exemplary Punishment, if his own

^c Turpe est difficiles habere nugas Petron.

^f In the first Vol. about Jesus and Catholics.

^e See above in this Volume.

^h An Author who has wrote against the Pietists says, that the Mystical Doctrine of the Prophets consists, in teaching Men how to think and act, so as to practise Virtue, and obtain Happiness, which is the reward of it.

ⁱ Arnold. Chap. iii, and ix. of Hist. and Descrip. Theolog. Myst.

^k Ecclesiastical History makes mention of some Monks of Mount Athos, who pretended to see a Light, which they called God, with bodily Eyes, by the Perfection of their Prayer, and by this Vision, to have arrived at the highest Quietude. They were called Omphalo Psychi, that is, having their Soul in their Belly: Because they were directed "to turn their Eyes and Thoughts towards their Belly to look in " their Bowels for the Place of the Heart Day and Night, &c." See Allatius, lib. ii. c. xvii. de Eccles. Orient. & Occid. perp. Consens. In the 15th. Century, one William de Hillerness, a German Carmelite-Frier, and one Giles, pretended to give the Spirit of Intelligence to their Disciples; from whence they were named Intelligent. They moreover taught, that bodily Senses sin not, and corporal Actions are not Crimes. This Opinion is not very different from the Tenets of our Quietists: And might not the Monks of Athos, looking at their Belly, be maliciously explained in the same dangerous Sense?

^l Ruysbroch, who has wrote against some German Quietists, pretends to settle exact Rules, to distinguish true Mysticism from that which is false.

^m The French Words, Delices Delights, and Delires Delirium, differ but in one Letter, and the Punishment consists in that.

Rank, and the Interest of the Society of which he was a Member, had not obtained his Pardon : Besides, it was not judged convenient, by a publick Condemnation, to divulge an abominable Doctrine, fit only to be buried in eternal Oblivion.

England and Germany had also their Quietists ^a. But we must here inform our Readers, that the Name Quietist is peculiarly adapted to those who pretend to be Catholics : Whereas the Protestants are called Pietists; though at the same Time it must be owned, that they differ in some Points, and even those who are of the same Denomination of Quietists or Pietists, do not agree amongst themselves. The Pietists renounce all worldly Vanities, are absorbed in a deep Contemplation, reject all sensual and earthly Desires; but then they separate themselves from all Christian Assemblies, under Pretence of the scandalous Abuses practised in them: Such Pietists are perfect Man-Haters, they complain of the whole World, and the whole World either laughs at, or in its Turn complains of them. The Pietists are also accused of being Latitudinarians, and believing that they may remain in the Religion in which they were brought up, provided they keep in their Hearts the essential Points of Pietism.

Some Years ago a Catechism of the Pietists was published ^o, the Author of which is not against Christian Assemblies, nor like the Quakers, for Sacraments only inter-our. But there are so many various Sorts of Pietists, that it is not possible to reduce their Doctrine into a Catechism, without foisting a Thousand Contradictions in it: However the most violent amongst them are, within a small Matter, the same as the Quietists. Next to these are those of Germany, Switzerland and other Countries, who are not willing to profess openly a rigid Mysticism. They practise it only at Home, or within Doors, but in publick they avoid a Conduct different from that of other Christians. We may reckon, as a third Sort of Pietists, a Set of Men who, in all Communions, are doubly diligent in all exteriour Practices of Devotion, and are less known in the World, than in Churches which they daily visit. They are very numerous in the United Provinces, and are nick-named Refiners, by the Dutch. They intirely deprive themselves of all the Pleasures of Life; and contrary to the Practice of most Bigots and Prudes, who generally leave their Passions when these fail them; these Refiners dispatch them early, though some of them think it enough to take up one when they leave another. Be that as it will, they are to be known from other People, by a grave, sedate, outward Behaviour, no ways apt to inspire the Beholders with Joy, and verify the Saying, that Joy is not in this World the Portion of Piety ^p. In a Word, they might easily be mistaken for another Sort of Pietists, who followed one Doctor ^q Francke, who always affected an humble and contrite Aspect, down-cast Eyes, and a negligent Carriage of their Head, or leaning towards their Shoulders.

These Disciples of Francke aptly introduce the Account of the Pietism of Germany, which, not without some good Grounds, is thought to have taken its Rise from English Quakers, who flying from their Countrey, brought their Doctrine into the Place of their Retirement, which, with some Alterations, became from an English Fanaticism, a German one. Thus Anabaptism came from Antiquity; Quakerism from some Anabap-

^a Rous, Bromley, Pordage, and several others, have been famous Mysticks in England. See Ar. o'd in the above cited Hist. & Descr. Theol. Myst. Chapter xii. Wherein he likewise mentions several Germans.

^o This pretended Catechism is a Medley of Anabaptism, Quakerism, and Latitudinarian Principles; and the Contents of it never held by any one Man.

There is a Joy very opposite to Piety: But there is another Sort of Joy which always accompanies it.

^q These Disciples of Doctor Francke are taxed with despising all those who did not embrace their Party: But what Communion is exempt from that Fault. See hereafter some further Account of this Francke.

tists who fled to England; and now again Quakerism was changed into Labadism in Friesland, and into Pietism in Germany, Switzerland, and other Countries. A Lutheran Teacher named Brosgeband, and a Minister of the same Communion, named Muller, Men who made Profession of a suspicious and jealous Sort of Piety, took Scandal at the Generality of Lutherans, as minding too much the outward shew of Religion, and paying too little Regard to the essential and interiour Duties of it. About the Year 1664, or 1665, they exclaimed vehemently against this Disorder. Muller went so far, as to say that Christians, (he meant the Lutherans) had their Idols, to which they paid an Homage very prejudicial to true Piety. But these Idols proved at last to be no more than a Pulpit, a baptismal Font, a Confession-Seat, or an Altar. But at this Rate, our over-zealous Preacher might have found out Idolatry in all Religions, even in those amongst Protestants, who are the most averse to Ceremonies. Such ridiculous and over-strained Invectives raised several Lutheran Consistories against Muller, and they looked upon him as a Quaker. Spener and Horbius, two German Ministers, the one at Francfort, and the other at Traerbach, inveighed also bitterly against the outward Lutheran Worship; and being approved by a great Part of their Flock, complained still louder, even against Customs of no great Importance, under Pretence of bringing Mankind back to the true Faith in Christ, and a sincere interiour devout Life. They held their Assemblies apart, and grew daily more numerous: They explained Scripture each of them as he could, exhorted themselves and others, and were by Turn, this Day Pastors, and Sheep the next. They never disputed about dark and mysterious Points of Divinity, but, as it is pretended, took Notice only of those Truths, which were evident, practical, or necessary to Salvation. Spener had a Call to go and preach at Dresden, before the Elector of Saxony: A dangerous Office for a Pietist that of a Court-Preacher! He performed it with all the Severity which could be expected, from a Mystick. The Dignity of Superintendent^r, to which he was raised, and is much like that of a Bishop amongst Catholicks; the Authority of that high Station, and Spener's own Example favoured the Increase of Pietism, which was begun in Saxony, in the following Manner. During the Superintendency of Spener, some pious Assemblies were held, they say, at Leipsick, and in other Towns of Saxony; which might be called Schools, since the Bible was there explained to young Students in Divinity, in a far different Method from that which is generally used^r, that is, without entering upon Controversy, or handling those knotty Questions which are so common among Divines: We are likewise told, that the Instructions given in those Schools consisted only in reading the Bible, with a clear and plain Explication of it; tending solely to mend the Lives of the Hearers, and inspiring the young Men with true Sentiments of Piety, and training them up in the Practice of religious Duties: In a Word they were only Schools for moral and practical Divinity. Doctor Francke^r had his Education in those Schools. Their Reputation daily increased, ^r See before the Dissert. on the Ceremonies of Lutherans.

^r These Schools were called Collegia Philobiblica. See Croes. Hist. Quak. l. 3. p. 545.

August Herman. Francke had for a long Time been an Admirer and a Disciple of Spener. The Collectors of Biblioth German. in the xviii Tom. give a long Account of him, taken from several Pieces published to his Honour, in a Volume in Folio, of two hundred Pages in small Print, besides the Funeral Orations: So fertile are the Northern Genius's in their Productions of Panegyric Wit! "He is there praised as the Founder of the abovementioned Collegium Philo-Biblicum, at Leipsick, in 1686. by the Help of some of his Friends. He went afterwards to Luneburgh, where his Inclination to Piety was so much increased, that he called that Place his own Spiritual Country.... Going back to Leipsick, his Lessons on Scripture... being adapted to make his Hearers better Men... brought him great Audiences... at which Envy and Jealousy being raised, he underwent many Vexations about his new Method... He met likewise powerful Enemies at Erford, of which Place he was Minister... but deprived of that creased, by Degrees the Citizens, even Women, were admitted in them ; and the Crowd was so great at those Meetings of Learning and Piety, that the Churches were unfrequented ; and some were so wedded to this new Method of Devotion, that they despised the old, even the Lord's Supper, as an indifferent and insignificant Practice. Thus it happened, they say, that pious Notions carried on to an Excess, gave Birth to Pietism, the Professors of which were attacked with many Calumnies or Detractions. Their Assemblies were forbid, and inveighed against in the strongest and most odious Terms, which did not put a stop, but rather increased the Evil^u. In 1689, Francke and some of his chief Disciples had many captious Questions put to him by the Deputies of the Academical Senate of Leipsick. One brought on another, every Article of Faith was canvassed, and those Inquisitors, for so they are called by the Author here cited^x, finding no Heresy, nor any thing tending to it, in the Opinions of those into whose Faith they had so strictly inquired, pronounced no Censure against them ; but ordered^y them not to instruct the People ; except in the ordinary Method. And to enforce their Obedience, the great Consistory of Dresden, backed by the Authority of the Elector, who is the Head of this ecclesiastical Senate, gave express Orders to the Academical Senate of Leipsick to suppress entirely those Colleges, Schools and Conventicles, and to imprison all those who should refuse to obey. These violent Measures, the Effects of which are more or less perceived in all Christian Communions, brought some Pietists back to the Lutheran Orthodoxy out of Fear, whilst the rest shewed either more Constancy or more Stubbornness.

" Office

THE most moderate of the Pietists were Spener's Followers : They made a public Profession of adhering to the Doctrine of Luther ; but at the same time pretended to aim at a greater Purity than the generality of Lutherans ; at a more entire Denial of their Inclinations, and a closer Union with Christ ; they condemned the Neglect in the Practice of Christian Virtues, the loose Discipline of the Church, and the Pastors who were guilty of either in their Ministerial Functions. They despised human Learning^z, chiefly Eloquence in Preaching, which they looked upon as downright Noise and Bawling^a. But their boasted Adhesion to Luther's Doctrine did not screen them from the Hatred of Synods and Pastors, whom they condemned for neglecting their Duty, and accused of minding nothing but to purchase Ease, and the Conveniencies of Life. The Pulpits thundered out against them ; the learned Academicks wrote Books, drew up long Catalogues of their Heresies ; and then gave by Derision the Name of Pietism^b and of Pietists to the Sect, and the Abettors of it.

WE said before, that Pietism in its Beginning was only transplanted Quakerism : Others pretend the contrary^c ; because, say they, most of these Mysticks were scarce acquainted with the Name of Quakers ; and Spener^d, the first Founder of Pietism in ^u Office in September, 1691, and ordered to leave the Town in two Days The Elector of Brandenburg gave him some Employment in his new University of Hall where he founded a School for poor Children and died in June, 1727." His other Praise-worthy Actions may be found in the above-cited Biblioth. German. with the Description of the Foundation and Order kept in the Orphan's House at Hall.

^v Thomasius, a learned Man of great Reputation, wrote an Apology for those Assemblies, and had like to have fallen a Victim of the Anti-Pietist's Fury. Other such Assemblies were held at Gießen, &c.

^x Croesius, p. 547.

^y Neu quis publice privatimve aliter populum imbueret, &c. Ibidem.

^z Poiret in his Divine Oeconomy, tom.v. p.46, 50, 304, and other Places, pretends to prove by the Example of Christ and of the Apostles, that Studies are to be despised. No wonder ; Mysticism and sound Learning are inconsistent.

^a Evagatio Linguae & Vociferatio.

^b See Croesius, p. 550.

^c Croesius, p. 552.

^d Spener died at Berlin, where he was an Ecclesiastical Counsellor, in 1705.

Saxony, was wholly ignorant of their Principles. We leave it to our Readers to decide this important Dispute ; and in the mean time proceed to give them some Account of Horbius, who going to Hamborough was made Pastor of a Lutheran Church in that City. He held such Assemblies as he had seen at Traerback : His Collegues were soon apprised of the Doctrine by him taught ; their Zeal was fired, and they accused him before the Consistory of being a Quaker and an Enthusiast ; this was further confirmed by a small Book^c, which he put into the Hands of his Disciples, and which the Orthodox of Hamborough judged to be entirely conformable to Pietism. One of the most zealous Pastors inveighed with all his Eloquence against the Heresy, taxed Dr. Horbius with being a Heretick and a Quaker, insisting with all his Oratory on the Necessity of expelling so dangerous a Man. His Enemies met with the desired Success. Horbius was obliged to retire, and leave the Victory to Lutheran Orthodoxy. But he left behind him some Remains of Pietism.

PROBABLY our Readers will be glad to find here in one View, and in few Words, the Opinions charged upon Pietism in^d general. They are taxed with being indifferent as to Religion, and despising (in Germany) the symbolical Books of the Lutherans : Their Notions of the Trinity are far, they say, from being orthodox ; Creation and Providence they look upon only as an Emanation from the Divinity. They are accused of being Millenarians ; of pretending that all Religion consists only in Contemplation and Quietism ; in which State the Soul is no ways guilty of the Disorders committed by the Senses, of believing that all Actions are necessarily good or bad : In consequence of the last-mentioned Opinion, they condemn Dancing, Gaming, &c. because no Action being indifferent, and these not being good and religious, they must be ranked amongst those which are evil. We shall not mention here what is further objected to them concerning their thinking a greater Reformation necessary than that of Luther, the Abuses which they find in the Lutheran Confession, their little Regard for Controversy, and being very indulgent to Fanaticks, &c. The Truth is, Pietists differ widely one from the other.

THE Author from whom we borrow this Account distinguishes three sorts of German Pietists. The first is as above described ; the second he calls Weigelians, from one Weigelius, who had preached in Misnia long before Pietism. He taught that all Men have within them a divine budding Shoot, that God and Christ communicate themselves to them in such a manner that they are as one Essence, that each Man ought to adore God and Christ as residing within himself, &c. This bears some Resemblance to Quakerism and Quietism, &c. Who but Mysticks can understand this Jargon. The Pietists who adopted this boundless Mysticism were likewise Millenarians, and their Kingdom or Reign of a thousand Years, which at first was represented as wholly spiritual, soon became carnal by the gross Notions which they since added^e to it.

THE Disciples of Bohm, according to the same Author, made up the third sort of Pietists. This Bohm was both a Shoemaker and Writer of Books, though employed at his Trade ; his Meditations on Religion shewed also some reading of Cabalistical and Chymistry Books. His Mind was^f well turned for Enthusiasm and Fanaticism ;

^c This was, we are told, Poiret's Book on the Education of Children.

^d The Reason of this Expression is, that in Germany whatever is condemned is called Pietism ; in France Quietism or Jansenism. Thus in former Times whatever was not orthodox was branded with Manicheism, in the Arians Time with Arianism, which is a great Obstacle to the clearing up Historical Facts.

^e See Madam de Bourignon's New Heaven and new Earth. See also Poiret in Tom. v. Chap. 4. and following of his Divine Oeconomy, where he cites another Book of Bourignon, called the Morning Star. Morhof in his Polyhist. Tom. 3. p. 555.

Visions and Dreams he bragged of, which he displayed in Matters of Divinity and Philosophy, which he pretended to clear up in a Book ^e intitled, The Grand Mystery, which is a Theological, Chymical Comment upon Genesis, wrote in the German Language: This being printed, made more Enthusiasts. 'Tis likely this Cobbler, notwithstanding his superior Genius^e, as his Disciples pretend, did not well know his own Meaning; for he is always obscure and ambiguous, as might become a half learned Person, who has but confused Ideas of what he undertakes to explain: Other Mysticks endeavoured to clear up his Works, or rather carried on the false Principles he had laid down, and added of their own Invention ^h strange and pernicious Things. For Instance, they owned a perfect Unity in God as his Essence, yet they imagined it contained a three-fold Principle of all Things, viz. Fire is God; they said, the Light of the Fire is the Knowledge and Wisdom of God, the Son of God; the Holy Ghost is the Unity by which the Light enlightens. This seems rather to be Spinosism than Pietism, since in this System, God and the whole World is but one Being. However these pretended Pietists delivered the foregoing Expositions of Nature in a chymical Style not easy to be understood. They said moreover, that God had created the World with Number, Weight and Measure; that he had created himself in the rational Creatures; that Man restored enjoys alone this Light, which they call Christ, &c. This may bear some Resemblance to the Notions of Pythagoras and Plato; but 'tis very possible that a Man should produce out of his own Thoughts such Ideas, especially when they are accompanied with extravagant Notions, which require no other Master than a lively Imagination violently heated. From these real or false Mysticks we now come to Labadism.

The LABADISTS.

LABADIE had been a Jesuit in France, became a Protestant, and was made a Minister at Middleburgh in Zeland. He was, they sayⁱ, eloquent, but not very learned; which Defect was supplied by Art and Cunning. His Dispute against Wolffogues, Minister at Utrecht, on account of his Treatise concerning the Interpretation of Scripture^k, shews him to have been contentious, and even seditious; his Behaviour in that Quarrel was unfair and deceitful; so that his Enemies were not quite in the wrong, when they described him as a haughty, proud, self-conceited, stubborn Hypocrite: Yet he had Admirers, who praised his Humility and modest Carriage, and undertook his Defence with so much Warmth, highly approving his Project of reforming even the grand Calvinistical Reformers of the United Provinces, that a Schism had like to have ensued in the Church of Middleburgh: But his Design failed; notwithstanding all the Endeavours of his Friends, he was deposed from the Ministry in the Synod of Dordrecht, held in March 1669, having before that been suspended from his Functions by the Synod of Narde. The Sentence of his Deposition says, that from his first coming into Holland, he designed to reform the Church, and maintained that this was to be brought about by a Separa-

^e Moorhof in the same Work, Tom. 2. p. 166.

^h E suæ sapientiæ officina multa, verum monstruosa atque horrenda, superstruunt, says Croesius, p. 558. Adding withal, that the Elector of Saxony ordered the Doctrine of Bohm to be examined by the Divines of Dresden, who found it orthodox, and acknowledged that he had received particular Gifts from God. But one Weckius having inserted this Fact in his History of Dresden, the Examiners of the Manuscript ordered it to be omitted in the Impression, p. 559.

ⁱ See Croesius, p. 510, and following.

^k The Apology for the Synod of Narde by Wolffogues, printed in 1669, relates all the Particulars of this Dispute, and of Labadie's Conduct: he was his Enemy.

tion..... and setting up a new Church of Elect : which he actually began at Middleburgh, and¹ in other Places ; he taught, says the same Act, that whoever could or thought fit should have free Liberty to speak in the Assemblies on the Text proposed, which approaches to Quakerism^m. Labadie himself gives the following Account of his new Churchⁿ: “ God has been pleased to hear at last the Prayers, Tears and “ Groans of his little ones..... and opened a Way to a happy Separation..... “ which has been and is very advantageous to us, since we are about three hundred “ well-chosen Members in our Assembly, all Elect, and breathing a true Christian “ Spirit.

“ WE give Thanks to God who has chosen us..... all of one Heart and Soul, unan- “ nimous.... in speaking openly all Truths, remedying all Abuses, in Doctrine, “ in the Administration of the Sacraments, and in Morals, with a full Intention “ to reform ourselves according to the Model of the Primitive Christians..... We “ meet twice a Day, Morning and Evening ; thrice on Sundays. We do not “ preach in Pulpits, but all sit on Benches, without any Difference between the “ Rich and the Poor ; excepting that the Pastors, Elders, or those that speak, sit on “ a Bench made like the rest, but somewhat higher, in order to be seen and heard “ Modesty, Union, Humility, Zeal, Piety, &c. are such amongst us, that we “ daily give God due Praises for the Establishment of this new Church. We have “ several Doctors and eminent Persons, humble, fervent, and pious. No Abuse is “ tolerated, no Excess allowed in Dress, Ornaments and other Vanities, nor the “ Trades which are subservient to them encouraged. Our Lives are measured in “ every Point by the Rule and Standard of the Gospel and Apostolical Doctrine, being “ firmly resolved to become a lively Representation of the Primitive Church in our “ Belief and Practice : Many are astonished, but many are drawn in.... from other “ Places : For God has almost every where united some to us and to our Spirits.

“ EVEN this Day, being the first of the Year 1669, (which we desire may be “ happy) we met before Day-Light, to explain the 6th, 7th, &c. Verses of the fifth “ Chapter of the first Epistle to the Corinthians, and are fully bent on casting off “ the old Leaven from us and our Congregation, &c.”

NOTWITHSTANDING the Oppositions which Labadie met with, several Persons of Note embraced his Reformation ; and if we believe the Author of the Religion^o of the Dutch, this Ex-Jesuit, Ex-Carmelite Fryar, and since his Deposition both Ex-Minister and Excommunicate desired to be protected, he and his Adherents, by the States of Holland : The Answer to his Petition was, “ that if he pretended to be “ a Member of the Wallcon Church, he must conform to their Orders and Disci- “ pline ; but if he formed a new Sect, he should enjoy the Protection given by the

¹ A small Collection of Tracts printed at Leyden in 1669, gives us a Letter against Labadie, in which he is accused of “ being guilty, wherever he preached, of despising his Colleagues, and sowing Divisions “ betwixt the People and their Superiors, both ecclesiastical and political, &c..... of being a publick Enemy “ to the good Order of the Church, disturbing its Peace by his wild Imaginations, which he maintains as “ heavenly revealed Truths.”

“ In the Title of the same Collection he is called Arch-Quaker, and the above-cited Letter calls his Disciples Quakers, and gives a long Account of his schismatical Behaviour in a Church of which he took Possession by Fraud on a Communion-Day. April 14. 1669. making use of the Bread and Wine paid by and prepared for others, inventing new Forms of Administring the Lord's Supper, disobeying the repeated Orders of the Magistrate, signified to him by proper Officers : to remedy which Disorders, the publick Council of Middleburgh made an Order on the Day following, forbidding Labadie to hold publicly or privately, at home or abroad, any Assembly, till further Orders ; under the Penalty against him or his Abettors, of being dealt with as guilty of Rebellion and Sedition.

ⁿ See in the same Collection a Letter from Labadie to Mr. Arondel at..... On reforming Churches already reformed.

^o See p. 79.

20	19	18	17	16	15	14	13	12	11	10	9	8	7	6	5	4	3	2	1
40	39	38	37	36	35	34	33	32	31	30	29	28	27	26	25	24	23	22	21
62	61	60	59	58	57	56	55	54	53	52	51	50	49	48	47	46	45	44	43
84	83	82	81	80	79	78	77	76	75	74	73	72	71	70	69	68	67	66	65
106	105	104	103	102	101	100	99	98	97	96	95	94	93	92	91	90	89	88	87
129	128	127	126	125	124	123	122	121	120	119	118	117	116	115	114	113	112	111	110
107	108	109	110	111	112	113	114	115	116	117	118	119	120	121	122	123	124	125	126

“ Sates to all Religions.” But if this Story, related by a professed Enemy to the Dutch, is true, the Policy of the States was then very different from what it now is, since they have lately put a Stop to all the Meetings of a Society which is no ways offensive to Religion, good Manners, or political Government ^p, and has, and does still flourish in Great Britain, under the Protection of the greatest Men of that Kingdom, even Princes of the Royal Family. However Labadie, according to the same Author, “ did not settle his Sect in Holland, lest his female Disciples, several of whom were of the highest Rank, should be taken from him ; but went elsewhere with his Adherents of both Sexes^q.”

MOTHERS and Husbands were chiefly startled and afraid of Labadie's Society, upon Account of so many Ladies embracing his Doctrine. It was reported that this Sect, recommended to the Female Sex, so exalted a Spirituality, as to be above all Sensation, and to bear without Emotion, the Practice of the Mamillarians, which this new Apostle try'd upon a young Lady ^r, though without the desired Success; she was scandaliz'd at his Impudence, he was ashamed she had made so little Progress in Spirituality. Thus whilst some sincere Persons are dazzled with the glorious Pretences of Mysticism, and seriously aim at true Spirituality, others begin with the Spirit to end by the Flesh: This is the Carnal Quietism, so justly charged upon some Mysticks in France, Italy, and other Parts; these are its dismal Consequences ; tho' we hope few Mysticks practise them. But to return to Labadie ; his other Opinions were no less pernicious. He taught, 1. That God did sometimes deceive Men. 2. That Scripture was not necessary, because God immediately inspires some Souls, and whoever reads Scripture ought to be less mindful of the Text, than of the inward Inspiration of the Holy Ghost. 3. That Baptism is to be deferred till the Use of Reason. 4. That the Gospel is only for spiritual Men, and reinstates them in perfect Liberty. 5. That God did not prefer one Day to another ; so a Day of Rest was not absolutely to be kept ; accordingly Christ gave leave to work devoutly, &c. All these, and other false Doctrines he held, yet he could, upon Occasion, exclaim against the Corruption of Christian Churches, as loudly as any of those Quakers, against whom he wrote a small Book, intitled Confutatio Quakerismi.

LABADIE and Bourignon were Contemporaries, but their Spirits did not unite ; Labadie was not spiritual enough to be her Colleague, and too stubborn to become her Disciple: Both were of a hot, fiery, quarrelsome Temper ; how could they have agreed together? The enlightened Woman despised the regenerate Man^s. At last Labadie died, in 1674. at Altena, in the Arms of his beloved Schurman, and left Peter Yvon to succeed him, who brought the Labadists together, at Wiwert in Friesland, a Manor belonging to the Family of Somersdyk. He had before spread his Fanaticism from Middelburgh to Amsterdam ; he had likewise a small Settlement between Utrecht and Amsterdam, with a Printing-house ; from thence he went into Friesland, Westphalia, and at last to Hamborough. Every where he made Proselytes

^p The Free-Masons who are so well known in England, that we need not give our Readers any Account of them: Besides, as it is not a religious Society, it is out of the Sphere of this Work: But the ignorant or curious Reader may consult the Book of their Constitutions, and the Defence of Masonry, occasioned by a Pamphlet, called Masonry dissected. The Prints here annexed represent Free-Masons.

^q Such were four young Ladies de Somersdyke; the Princess Palatine Elizabeth, who embraced Labadie's Reform, by the Persuasion of the illustrious Anna Maria de Schurman, so well known amongst the Wits and learned Men of her Time; this last Lady was so favourable to this Sect, that Groefius, p. 510. of his Hist. Quak. calls her their second Parent.

^r See Bayle, at the Word Mamillaries. See Basnage, p. 52, and following of Tom. 2. Annal. Prov. Unies.

^s See Bayle, in the Word Bourignon.

of both Sexes, till in 1670. one Antony de la Marque published his Reasons for leaving his Sect; which, though brought into Disrepute by the Discoveries then made, is not yet extinct, but some of them are still to be found in Friesland and Groningen: We can only look upon them as a Branch of Quakerism.

WE must beg Leave of our Readers to introduce (at the End of all these Mysticks, more or less extravagant and fanatical, as their own Temper, or the various Circumstances of Time and Place directed them) a Sect of Men (the Cocceians we mean, Disciples and Followers of Cocceius, one of the most venerable Divines of Holland) who, as Bayle[†] informs us, have formed a Party which is generally embraced by the Youth of Holland. Some will find the Cocceian Notions and Opinions very much tending to Mysticism; and the more moderate will, for their own Sakes own, that one Mystick widely differs from another: However we shall say nothing but what is borrowed from approved Authors.

To begin, Stoupe[‡] speaks of Voetius, the Head of the Party opposed to the Cocceians, and known amongst the Dutch Divines, by the Name of Voetians, in these Words. “Voetius, says he, held, and still holds, that it is no less a Crime than “Sacrilege”, to leave Church-Revenues in the Hands of voracious lazy People, who “are useless both to the Church and State; that one ought to exclude from the “Communion, those who are called “Lombards, the Usurers, because they follow “a Business expressly forbid by the Word of God; that the Day of Rest ought to “be kept religiously, but no other Holy-Days; that speaking of the Apostles, “&c. . . . the Name of Saint should not be prefix’d; that all Christians ought “to lead a penitential Life, and renounce almost every, even innocent Pleasure. . . .” Another Author[†] says, that Voetius loved Piety, and was remarkable for the tender Sentiments of Devotion dispersed through all his Writings, and visible in his Life and Conversation. Such a Man might hold such Opinions. He would not leave off the old Way of teaching Philosophy, either for want of Penetration, or out of Scruple and Tendernefs of Conscience, but, says the same Writer, “Strongly oppos’d the “Opinions of Descartes (Cartesius) thinking that the Consequences drawn from his “Principles were very pernicious.” This was the Occasion of the Dispute between Voetius and the Disciples of Cocceius, who had embraced the Cartesian Philosophy, as is pretended[†] for their own Interest; but in a short Time, the whole Difference turned about a new and whimsical (according to the Voetians) Method of explaining the Scripture, brought in by Cocceius, which has been much followed, “because, say the same Voetians, it helps to teach and preach, “without Labour, “Trouble, or even Attention, strange Things, which the Vulgar think sublime, “for want of understanding them, and look upon them as deep Mysteries, because [†] See Article Witichius.

[‡] Religion of the Dutch. p. 34. and following.

[‡] Voetius was then alive.

[†] Some rigid Christians with the Churchmen were like Levites, in the old Law, without Lands: As Sulpicius Severus relates Lib. 1. Hist. Levitis . . . nulla Portio data quo liberius servirent Deo. But at present the Church has as much Right to its Possession, as any Man to his Estate: All that can be desired is, that Churchmen would avoid Avarice, which that Historian blames in them. In hiatis possessionibus . . . auro incubatis . . . quæstui per omnia studeatis, &c.

[‡] The Lombards were the first Usurers, from them the Name is derived to all those who follow the Practice.

[‡] Entretiens sur les Differentes Methode . . . des Voetiens, & des Cocceiens. p. 405. This Author says that Voetius applied himself more to Morality, and to inspire Christian-Virtue, than to display a vain Reading and a vast Learning.

[†] Entretiens, &c. as above, p. 19. give the Reasons which moved Cocceius to embrace the Cartesian System.

[†] The same p. 238.

“ they are obscure This singular Method is reduced to four ^v or five Heads.
 “ 1. The seven periodical Changes in the Church, of the new Testament, which “ they find in every Text. 2. Types and Figures without ^w End or Measure, drawn “ from the ancient History and Worship. 3. An everlasting Affectation of applying
 “ to Christ and the Gospel those Texts of the old Testament, where before “ Cocceius, no body guessed that they were meant. 4. Discovering late and modern “ Facts ^x in the ancient Prophecies. 5. One may reckon, says the same Author,
 “ as a fifth, the numberless and exaggerated Distinctions, betwixt the Faithful un“ der the Mosaical Dispensation, and the Christians. In a Word, Voetius ^y is always “ mindful of Morality and Practice, Cocceius only of the Theory. Yet it must “ be owned speculative Divinity is of great Use, and deserves to be cultivated by “ Clergymen:” It gives at least an Appearance of Erudition to Discourse, and helps to make Sermons longer, so that an Author ^z says, the Cocceians are learned Men, but the Voetians are ignorant: Moreover these Types and Mysteries amuse the Hearers, and please them by their sparkling Wit; whereas Morality often proves tiresome, and even is apt to bring a Terror upon them; nevertheless this Method is also liable to some Defects; the Figures are easily mistaken for true Learning, and serve only to increase the Pride of both the Preacher and his Audience. After all, we are not to commend or condemn one Side or the other; only we must, according to the Design of this Work, take Notice, that the Cocceians maintain, that the Command given to the Jews to keep one Day of Rest, is Part of the Ceremonial Law, from the Observance of which Christ has freed us; that Christ will reign temporally upon Earth, after the Destruction of Antichrist, and that the Jews are to be converted, at that glorious Time of the Church of Christ upon Earth.

We shall now entertain our Readers with the Account given us by the same Author ^a, of the Antinomies and Hebraicks. “ They says he, retire into private “ Places, and have their Meetings together and all the publick or particular “ Complaints made of their holding scandalous Opinions, have not hitherto been “ able to draw from them an open Profession of their Doctrine: Some bestow “ upon them the Appellation of Antinomies; others say they are a spurious Branch “ of the Cocceians, with whom they glory in having the same Origin, same Name,
 “ and Marks of Distinction: But the Cocceians disown them Be that as it will,
 “ these Hebraicks have left the publick Assemblies, and meet in particular Conven“ ticles, without publishing any Profession of Faith: They are therefore looked up“ on only as Antinomies: We have no more to do, than to collect what has been “ said of the Antinomies, and what is known of the Hebraicks in general Here-“ ticks of that Denomination have appeared in the World at three different Periods “ of Time. 1. Towards the End of the fourth Age. 2. At the Beginning of the “ Reformation^b. 3. In our Days Their chief Errors consist in a Dislike, not to

^a The same p. 48.

^w The same Writer furnishes us with strange Instances of such Types and Figures as explained by the Cocceians. p. 80. Blew, is Grace; Crimson, Humility; p. 174. The Gold of the Ark, is the Divinity of Christ; the Cedar-Wood, Part of it, is his human Nature; see likewise p. 109, 184. concerning the Bells which hung at the High Priest's Garment, and the Finns and Scales of the Fish, which the Jews are allowed to eat. We shall leave for our Readers, the Pleasure of finding out, if they can, what Explications are given by the Cocceians to those Texts.

^x The same p. 342. and following says, that Cocceius finds the Council of Trent, in the 7th Chapter of the Canticle of Solomon: Charles the fifth in Isaiah. 23. and the Universities of Praga, and Heidelberg, given to the Jesuits in Ezech. Chapt. 39.

^y The same p. 406.

^z See Entretiens, &c. p. 30.

^a The same Entret. &c. and following.

^b See above in the Dissertation on the Anabaptists.

“ say Hatred of Sermons about Morality, which they look upon as unseasonable: For
 “ as St. Paul often mentions, that the Law is abolished, and its Opposition to the “ Gospel, they pretend, that preaching up Duty and Obedience, the Justice of “ God and his Rights, the Awe in which we ought to stand, of him and his “ Judgments.... which are relative to the Law, is the same as giving a new Life....
 “ to the Spirit of Slavery, by Reproaches and Threats contrary to the Gospel.....
 “ which breathes..... only Sweetness and Grace.... They say, that Christ dying for “ us, has not only taken upon him the Punishment due to our Sins, but our very “ Sins likewise, and draw from thence Consequences..... against the Necessity and “ Use of Penance.... (such Doctrine renders good Works wholly useless, if not “ pernicious, which ^b no Libertin has yet had the Assurance to say). Our Author “ goes on, and says, that it appears by the Writings of Witſius, on the Paradoxical “ Opinions and Expressions of these Antinomies, that they esteem the doing good “ Works, as an Endeavour to be justified, which is injurious to the Death of Christ.
 “ These Endeavours, say they, are used, these Works are carefully multiply’d, only “ upon Account of ^c some Merit to be acquired by them.... (This evidently proves,
 “ that they affect to exalt Faith, without any Dependence on good Works; which “ Faith, if it was to be defined according to their Notions, would only appear “ to come after Justification).... Faith, according to the Hebraicks, is a strong “ Persuasion which one has, of being elect.... This is a compendious Method, a short “ Way, which leads straight to our Aim, Salvation, the Consequence of Election, “ without the Trouble of examining so many Points, which practical Divines in“ clude in Faith.... Try but your own Belief, and you may know whether you “ are elect....” Our Author closes this Account, with some Remarks on the Contempt, with which he taxes the Cocceians of Morality, and those who preached it.

To conclude this Dissertation, we must observe, that the ancient Heathen Philosophy contains many strong Foot-steps of Mysticism and Quietism; but without running so far back, we shall only set before our Readers a short Parallel, betwixt Asi-atick and European Quietists. The Siameſe say, that ^d the first Quietude is in God, who is in an eternal Rest, and all true Sanctity amongst them, consists in the Imitation of that Repose. Christian Quietists also make it their chief and only Study, to contemplate and admire, without any Action, the everlasting Tranquillity of the supreme Being. Again some Chinese maintain, that the more one is idle, insensible and motion-less, like a Log of Wood or a Stone, the more he approaches the divine Perfections: Travellers call them the Idle Sect, which Name we may justly bestow on our perfect Quietists, who recommend Insensibility, and so great renouncing ourselves, as to be Nothing before God. The Eastern Quietists represent God as so mysterious and incomprehensible, that no Idea can be framed of him: And their Doctors are so wild, and full of Contradiction in their Descriptions of God, that all Travellers deem them to be Atheists: the Quietists of the West are also of Opinion, that in a true Contemplation, in renouncing ourselves, &c. the Soul of the Faithful cannot frame to itself an Idæa of God, but loves him such as he is, without diving into his Attributes, so far as to wish what is contrary to his Perfections; for Instance, to be annihilated, struck out of the Book of Life, &c. “ Love, ^b Yet such singular Notions may be the Effect of Libertinism.

^c See in Entret. &c. p. 421. a Letter from one of the same Principles, in which he says, of good Works
All I can say is, that I do not condemn you.

^d Tom. 2. of this Work on Idolat.

“ says Molinos, in his Spiritual Guide, must go before the Understanding the “ Soul must love God as he is, not as she conceives him to be love him with“ out knowing him, under the dark Veil of Faith, &c.” And our Myſticks have given such false and dangerous Descriptions of God, that their Adversaries made no Difficulty of calling them Spinoſiſts, or even perfect Atheists. Some Eastern Sects have thought human Nature so essentially corrupt, that no Grace of God can raise it from that State : And our mystical Writer Taulerus^a says the same. This Parallel might be carried on further, ^b but we shall only take Notice, that as the Asiatick Quietists prescribe several Purgations which purify the Soul, and bring it to an absolute Apathy, or Insensibility which she can never lose : Our Europeans affirm likewise, that the Soul passes from the Purgative Way to the Illuminative, which, even in this World brings them to the Unitive, where Apathy begins, since, according to Eschius, a Soul must live ^c without any Creature, any Sin, or any Pleasure.

^a See Tauter. Chap. 34. Exercit. de Vita Christi, where he says, Deus cum Universis donis & charisma-tibus suis cum non posset extollere, &c. Indeed he adds a saving Clause; but still these Words are too strong.

^b We may mention in the Sequel of this Volume, the Quietism of some Mahometan Sectaries.

^c See Nicol. Eschius, Exercit. Spirit. xi. absque omni Creatura, peccato et Delectatione.

A DISSERTATION

On the Discipline^a of the Polish^b Brethren, known by the Names of Unitarians, Anti-Trinitarians,^c Socinians, &c.

THE Origin of Socinianism in the sixteenth Age, the astonishing Progress it has made through Europe; the subtile Arguments and Objections proposed from Age to Age against the Eternal Generation of Christ from the Substance of God the Father, and his Divinity equal to his Father, which that Sect has renewed, are Subjects so well known, so odious and even dangerous, so foreign to the main Drift of this Work, which is only to give an Account of Customs and Ceremonies that we need not entertain our Readers with the Particulars of those Transactions. We even mention Socinus and Socinianism with Reluctance, and shall give a short Abstract, with Fear and Trembling, of the Doctrine of that Heresy. The Orthodox burn the Professors of it in some Countries; in others they only condemn them to Hell-fire. But Christians of all Denominations (except the Socinians themselves) would cheerfully commit to the Flames the Books published against the Divinity of Christ, his being equal, co-existing and consubstantial to the Father and to the Holy Ghost. They would use all possible Endeavours to bury in Oblivion the very Names of those who have dared to attack these fundamental Points, and degrade him from his Godhead. A learned Author^d has compared them to the Mahometans: This may seem too honourable a Parallel; we ourselves might also be condemned for giving any Account of the Doctrine and Discipline of the Socinians, if a very orthodox^e Controvertist had not set us the Example.

THEY insist upon it, that the Doctrine of the Trinity destroys the Unity of God, and the perfect Simplicity of the supreme Being; adding withal, that if there may be three Persons, there may be more, and that at all Events the Godhead must in Consequence be multiplied. They pretend likewise, that the Texts made use of to prove the Divinity of Christ are not convincing, and ought to be understood in a different Sense; that many other Texts are point blank against it, that the Expressions employed to explain this Mystery are not scriptural, or to be met with in Holy Writ; that if Protestants endeavour to supply this Silence of Scripture by^f Tradition, this is a way of deciding Controversies to which they themselves have no regard in their Disputes against the Catholics.

^a It is contained in a Manuscript wrote in 1642, by Peter Morfcovy, intitled Politia Ecclesiastica, &c. from which part of this Dissertation is borrowed.

^b They are called Polish, because the Sect began in Poland, but have Churches in several Parts of Europe.

^c So called from Socinus, who died in the Year 1604.

^d See La Cr.... Dissertations, printed at Rotterdam in 1704. We believe our Readers will not concern themselves in that Dispute, which indeed is of no Use or Consequence.

^e Maresius published three large Volumes in 4to, under the Title of Hydra Socinianis. against Volkefius, whose Book de vera Religione, Maresius printed with his own, to refute it Page by Page.

^f We must take notice here, that the Unitarians and Antitrinitarians pretend, that the Fathers of the three first Ages, and before Arius, are silent about the Divinity of Christ. Dr. Bull has evidently proved the contrary: Both Arians and Socinians deny the Trinity; but the Socinians speak of Christ with much more Indignity than the Arians ever did.

As to the Incarnation of Christ^s, and his two Natures, the Socinians think that Doctrine useless to the Salvation of Mankind, and maintain that it cannot be proved by Scripture: For, say they, had it been necessary for obtaining eternal Happiness to believe the Mystery of the Incarnation, the Bible would have mentioned it as clearly and distinctly as the other Truths which we are obliged to profess openly. But we must not dwell too long on such dangerous Blasphemies. The other Opinions of the Socinians are in short as follows.

MAN was of his own Nature mortal, even before the Fall, and was never endowed with original or primitive Justice: The Light of Nature alone is not sufficient to lead us to the Knowledge of a supreme Being: There is no such thing as original Sin: We have a free Power to do good Actions, and our Reason, whilst sound, freely determines itself to them: ^b God knows not before-hand contingent and free Actions: The Cause of Predestination is not in God, but in Man: God predestinates no one in particular to be saved: He might have forgiven the Sins of Mankind, and reconciled Men with Divine Justice, and pardoned them, without the Satisfaction of Christ; for as he is Lord and Master, and disposes the whole Universe as he pleases, he may likewise forego and yield up his Right. Christ suffered Death in obedience to the Will of God, to comply with the Mortality and Weakness of human Nature, as being Man: God cannot die. The Death of Christ shews also his Love for his Brethren, and the Love of God for Mankind; it is a Confirmation of the Christian Doctrine, it has renewed the Alliance and Reconciliation of God with Men, &c. God the Father alone ⁱ is God, he has given or communicated his Divinity to ^k Christ; and that is the Name above every Name which has been given to Christ: Baptism is not to be despised, neither is it in itself of an indispensable Necessity, &c. Eternal Death is only a Continuation of Death, a kind of Annihilation with which God threatned Adam when he said to him, Thou art Dust, and shalt return into Dust: In like manner the Fire called eternal, is an eternal Destruction, named in the Apocalypse, or Revelation, the second Death, an Annihilation of both the Body and Soul of ^l the Wicked; and this is in Truth ^m the infinite Punishment due to Sin, by which the infinite Majesty is offended: Creation also they explain away; to create or produce out of nothingⁿ, says a fiery Antitrinitarian Zealot, is to bring it out of a shapeless Matter, &c. We omit the dreadful Consequences drawn from these Principles, and the sophistical Arguments by which the above-cited bold Socinian endeavours to prove ^o, that Trinity is an Invention.... &c. We now hasten from such Blasphemies to give an Account of their Discipline.

THOSE who are acquainted with Socinianism and all other Heresies only by Hear-say, may likely wonder at our mentioning any Order amongst such Atheistical Sectaries: Let them remember, that as Cicero himself observes, even Thieves and Rob-

^a Volkelius de vera Rel. lib. 5. chap. xi.

^b Volkelius in the same Place.

ⁱ The same, in the first whole Chapter of the third Book.

^k The same, Book 5. Chap. 29.

^l See Protest. Pacif. part 2. p. 73. "As the Life of the Body is quite destroyed by a Man who kills another, so God utterly destroys the Life of the Souls.

^m The last-mentioned Author in the same Place argues thus, "Sin deserves that God should take from the Sinner what he had given him: Now God has not given us in this Life eternal and infinite Pleasures; why then should he inflict eternal and infinite Punishments? &c.

ⁿ Deus ex nihilo omnia fecisse dicitur, quia ea creavit ex materia informi, &c. So says Volkelius, lib. 2. cap. 4. See also lib. 2. cap. 1.

^o Volkelius, lib. 5. cap. 9. Veterator iste Satanas.... ex sacris voluminibus ea dogmata elicit quæ partim gloriæ divinæ partim humanæ salutis non parum officiant, atque huc primum pertinent errores, &c.

bers must have some Rules: But, to be serious, they have a Discipline which is worth Notice.

IN the Preamble of their Discipline, they give a Definition of the Christian Religion; it is, they say, a rational Worship, God being the eternal Reason can require nothing unreasonable or absurd, paid to God through Jesus Christ, there being no other Name by which Men are saved, in Spirit to exclude Ceremonies, and in Truth to reject the Types and Shadows of the Mosaical Law, with (or grounded upon) the Hope of an immortal Life; because such a Worship must inspire us with a steady Trust in God's Goodness, and Expectation of Immortality in consideration of our faithful Compliance with it. But for this end two things are required, first to admit no Doctrine but that of the Gospel, and to own no Teacher but Christ; the other to raise no Building but upon the Foundation of Christianity; that is, the true Doctrine of Christ, who is and ought to be the only Head of all those who profess it. Christ being gone to Heaven, it became necessary that in his Absence this Doctrine should be preserved, and the Faithful governed by wise, pious, learned Persons, who should not be the Masters, Fathers, Princes of the Church; there is one only Father and Sovereign, which is God; one only Master, which is Christ; but keep the Deposit of Faith, and deliver it to others as they received it. Our Dependence is not on them, but on Christ; we do not obey them, but Christ. They ought not to exalt themselves above others, neither ought the Faithful to prefer the one to the other out of a Prædilection and Prevention in favour of a particular Person, to the Detriment of, and Injury offered to, another: such Behaviour would be a pernicious Occasion of Ambition in the Church. Obey those who are set over you; that is, shew them due Respect, as being the Dispensers of Truth; submit to this same Doctrine which they preach as from Christ. In a word, the Church is a Monarchy, and Christ is its only Monarch.

AFTER this Introduction, which we have abridged, Discipline or Ecclesiastical Policy is defined, A Mean, or an Order by which the Church is exteriorly governed, according to which, as much as is possible, both the Governors, and those who are governed, comply with their respective Duties. This Definition says, that Discipline is for the Exterior Government of the Church, that is, for the Customs and outward Ceremonies. The interior Government belongs to Christ, the only Monarch; into whose Secrets whoever has dived, may be acquainted with the Nature of his Government: But we are persuaded, say the Socinians, that with the Help of the Holy Ghost, he imprints his Laws on the Hearts of the true Faithful, and that ^p setting out on a Voyage in a far distant Country, he has called his Servants, and has given ten Talents to one, five to another, to trade with, that is to instruct the Faithful, &c. As to the Laws which regard the governing of the Church, Christ has not settled any immutable and fixed for ever, as Moses did with the Israelites, whom by God's Appointment he loaded with minute and circumstantial yet inviolable Ordinances. Christians then not being slavishly bound to any particular Policy, they bring great Mischiefs on the Church, who for every trivial outward Custom, are ready to make a Schism. Sooner than break Communion with the Brethren on such Occasions, it would be better and more becoming a good Christian to follow the Ceremonies and Customs of those who are scandalised at ours, with this only Caution, not to swerve from the Religion of Christ. It is lawful for any one to build upon the Foundation of ^p They are the Words of the Gospel used by our Author.

Christianity, provided, first, that he is mindful, and shews a Respect for Truth, and secondly, that he observes Decency, and preserves the Honour of Religion. Such is the general Character of these Antitrinitarians Discipline. The Particulars are delivered by the Author whom we copy.

“ WE divide, says he, the whole Church into six Parts, of which four are to take care of the Ecclesiastical Policy, viz. 1. ^a The Patrons or Protectors of the Church. 2. The Pastors. 3. The Elders. 4. The Deacons. The last mentioned and the Patrons or Protectors are to provide for the bodily Wants; the Pastors and Elders are to take care of the spiritual Wants..... We call Patrons or Protectors of the Churches those who either build them or keep them in Repair at their own Expence: whether they are the first Founders, or only carry on the Work begun by others: Those also who provide a Maintenance for the Pastors, or raise charitable Contributions for the Poor belonging to a particular Assembly or Church..... We name them first only because they with the Pastors and Elders are the Props and Pillars of the Churches as to what regards their Ecclesiastical Policy, &c. We detest Anarchy, as the Root of great Evils, but we do not allow any to usurp the supreme Authority, which belongs only to Christ. The Protectors and Pastors ought mutually to support and pay a Deference to each other, and all unanimously to concur with joint Endeavours to promote the Glory of God, and the Cause of Religion.... Pastors are the Ministers of Christ, and Dispensers of the Mysteries of God: they hold the Rudder of the Ecclesiastical Commonwealth^c, and watch for the Safety of the Church, they and the Elders, with all the Members of the Ecclesiastical Senate..... The Pastors are all equal, their Age and Labours may draw Respect and Veneration, but do not give them an arbitrary Authority..... The young ones must pay great Regard to those who are more advanced in Years; but these ought not to take occasion from thence to behave haughtily towards their younger Brethren, &c. Age and Experience must have some Weight, when it promotes the true Interest of the Church, but the Advice of the younger must not be despised, when by common Consent these Counsels are found more profitable and advantageous to the Church.”

THE Elders are described as Persons of known Probity and great Experience, who are jointly commissioned to govern the Church: Age or Riches are not considered in that Choice, but Virtue and Abilities.

THE Function of Deacons is well known, they are the Treasurers of their respective Churches, are to give an exact Account of what they receive for the Maintenance of Widows, Orphans, and other Poor.

THESE are the Duties of the four Orders who govern the Church Policy: The other two Parts of the Faithful governed are, 1. Children, or Beginners not yet initiated. 2. Those of ripe Years, well instructed in their Religion, and truly pious. They are called Brethren.

THE chusing or ordaining of Pastors belongs to the Synod or Assembly of Pastors and Elders met by the Authority of the Church, in order to be its Representative on that important Occasion: Elders and Deacons are chosen in the same Manner: A good Life and sound Judgment are the chief Qualifications required in Elders preferably to Learning: Their Piety is a tacit Condemnation of Vice, and hinders its

^a Patroni Ecclesiarum.

^b Nullum ordinem in Ecclesia vim dominii, quod ipse Christi est, usurpare patimur:

^c Clavum Reipublicæ Ecclesiasticæ tenent, &c.

Progress; a solid Understanding helps them in giving Advice, and composing Differences: Deacons likewise may perform their Duties without Learning; good Sense, a good Conscience and tried Fidelity are the only necessary Dispositions to that Office.

WHEN a Pastor has a Call, his Election and Ordination are performed in the following Manner, “ Whether this be done in a general Convocation of the Faithful, or in private and before a small Assembly, Prayers, a Sermon, singing Psalms or Canticles are requisite as in the Sunday Office. They begin with Singing and Prayer, the Faithful are warned and disposed, by an Exhortation, to the Ceremony. The Sermon is concerning the Duties of a Pastor, which being ended, three Pastors rise from their Seat and go to the Person who is to be elected (or consecrated) who is kneeling. They lay their Hands upon him, and hold them on the Head of their new Brother till they end the Prayers, which he is to say likewise with an extraordinary Fervour and Zeal, and aloud (that the Faithful may hear him) in the Name of God the Father and his only Son (because he is to represent them in his Ministerial Functions) with the Help of the Holy Ghost (to bear the Weight of that important Office) &c. These Prayers being finished, and the new Elect still kneeling, one of the three Pastors desires the Faithful to pray for him, &c. Then all kneel, and conclude the Ceremony with singing a Canticle suitable to the Occasion.”

THE Sermon includes the mutual Duties of Pastors and their Flock, the Union and Peace between them, the Submission of the Faithful, which yet is not to be a blind Obedience nor slavish, the Pastors ruling like Fathers, with Patience, forbearance and Charity, &c. yet without weakning by too much Remissness the Power and Authority of the Gospel; their Obligation to prefer the Interest and Welfare of the Flock to all private Considerations; serving the Church with Joy and Freedom, not as mercenary hired Servants; giving good Example, in order to enforce their Instructions; and avoiding to be concerned in temporal Affairs and worldly Cases, lest their more essential Duties should be neglected.

PASTORAL Functions consist in preaching, administering the Sacraments, visiting, exhorting, and praying for the Faithful. Preaching is, in the Socinian Discipline, the chief Duty of a Pastor, in order to instruct the Faithful, and feed their Souls by the Word of God. Prayers, Psalms, or Canticles, which are said before or after Sermon, raise the Hearts to God, and inflame the devout with Zeal. The Instructions are to be 1. Without any Shew of Erudition, wholly tending to Edification. 2. Without Disputes, and nothing to be mentioned in them but what is necessary to Salvation. 3. Without Eloquence and its Flowers, or any choice Expressions. 4. Without Confusion, clear and methodical, the Arguments conclusive, earnestly moving Sinners to Repentance. 5. Without enlarging much upon common Topicks. These are the Rules prescribed in the Author of the Book we cite.

“ As to Baptism, says the same Writer, it is ordered that the Pastors only should administer the Sacraments; they only therefore are allowed to baptize. We call Sacraments *those exteriour Actions by which a Christian * either consecrates himself* (or (*) is consecrated by others) to God and to his Son, in the Holy Ghost, and under-

* Ad summum tres. Never more than three.

* Facta quædam exteriura, quibus aliquis se Deo filioque, ejus in Spiritu sancto, aut alicui propter Deum obligatum esse quoad vixerit contestatur.

* This is upon Account of Infants.

“ takes to be devoted to them all his Life: But as this cannot be done without Witnesses and some Solemnity ; therefore our Author goes on and says, the said Christian enters into an Engagement with somebody (meaning the Pastor) for the Love of God and of his Son.”

The Socinians, like other Protestants, admit but two Sacraments, but before Baptism they lay their Hands upon Children^y, to testify, that “ from the Cradle* “ Infants, even before they are fit for Baptism, ought to be consecrated to God, and “ to Christ, which Ceremony is also to serve as an Admonition to their Parents, to “ take upon them a solemn Engagement, to breed them up according to the Will of “ God.” This Imposition of Hands, seems to be a new Invention of the Socinians, but they bring this Reason for it, That Infants, not being capable to give an Account of their Faith, or, by Consequence, to reap any Benefit, from the Things signified by Baptism, it must be owned they cannot engage themselves to Christ; so the Pastor’s Blessing, (which accompanies the Imposition of Hands) and the Exhortation which they make to the Parent of the Infant, supply the Defect of Capacity, till coming to the Use of Reason, they may be sensible of the Obligation contracted by Baptism. Such is the Ground of that Custom, which is performed by the Antitrinitarians, as follows. A Pastor goes to the House where the Child is, says a Prayer, which, if Time and Place allow of it, is often accompanied by singing a Canticle : Then he makes an Exhortation to the Childrens Parents, lays his Hands upon the Infant, naming him, and blessing him in the Name of God, and desiring his Grace and Protection for him, chiefly † to fit him for taking the Obligation of serving God and Christ in Baptism. This is followed by another Prayer, to give God Thanks for the Child’s Birth, to beg his Forgiveness for the Sins of all present, and his Grace for that Child, and all other Children of the Faithful, and for the Parents, &c. A general Blessing concludes this devout Ceremony.

We may easily conclude from hence, that the Socinians have the same Notions about Baptism, as the Anabaptists, and that they think no one can receive it, unless he is able to know the Difference betwixt Truth and Falshood, to know God, and embrace the Christian Doctrine by Choice: Besides which, they require Piety and Devotion, an humble Sentiment of their Unworthiness, all which the Minister is to inquire into. Baptism itself is conferred, by Immersion, in a clear running Water*: The Minister, those who are to be baptised, with their Friends and Relations as Witnesses meet. The Pastor explains the Effects, Excellency and Dignity of Baptism, makes an Exhortation to the Candidates, and desires God will baptise them with his Holy Spirit, &c. When all the present Witnesses have said Amen, the Pastor goes into the Water, and those who are to be baptised go in likewise, and kneel. The Minister says, I baptise thee with Water, in the Name of the Father, &c. may the Lord Jesus baptise thee with his Holy Spirit. Whilst he pronounces these Words, he puts one Hand on the Head, the other on the Chin of the Baptis’d, and thus dips them. He then comes out of the Water, a Canticle is sung, and the whole concludes with a Prayer.

^y Baptismi aquæ prodromus est manuum parvulis Impositio.

* Manus parvulis recens natis eos in imponuntur ut per Benedictionem Pastoris, & admonitionem parentum, illi quidem initiuntur hi vero ad illos secundum voluntatem Dei educandos obligentur.

† Vovens ... ut ad Sacramentum Deo Christoque ejus dicendum adulescere possit, &c.

^z Convenient in locum (qui est aquæ limpidæ) Baptismi.

By this Baptism all these faithful become, and are owned as perfect Members of the Christian Antitrinitarian Church : The Day after they receive the Communion, with suitable Exhortations, and Acts of Devotion. We now must introduce the Ceremonies used by those Sectaries, in the Administration of the Eucharist, (which Word ^a they prefer to those of Christ's Body, or the Lord's Supper. With them, as with some other Protestants, the visible, sensible, and real Matter, is Bread and Wine, which are Signs, Types, and Figures, of the Body and Blood of Christ : This Sacrament, as that of Baptism, is to be given only to those who are instructed, and can give an Account of their Faith, &c. These Brethren cannot approve, that the Communion should be carried to the Sick^b: But their Discipline allows, that in a long Distemper, when the infirm Person earnestly desires to pay Homage to Christ by this Ceremony^c, an Assembly may be held at his House. Except that one Case, wherein Decency is highly recommended, and all possible Caution, the only Place of Communion is the Church, the most proper Time Sunday-Morning, it being a Day set apart for Piety and Prayer, in brotherly Union, the rest of the Day may be employed in Meditations on, and Thanksgiving for, the Benefits which God is pleased to bestow upon us: They think it sufficient to receive once a Year, at Easter, and like all other Christians exclude from the Eucharist those who are under Sentence of Excommunication.

THEIR Manner of celebrating the Eucharist, is like the Custom of the Calvinists : They sit round a Table covered with a clean Cloth, on which is placed some Bread, cut into small Pieces, and an empty Chalice, into which the Deacon pours Wine, at a convenient Time ; all this is decently covered till the Hour of the Communion-Service. The Pastor stands at the Table, and having administered the Communion to the others, he takes it himself sitting. Exhortation, Prayer, and the singing a Canticle accompany this Ceremony, which ends with a general Blessing.

SACRAMENT, say they, is an Oath, an Engagement, two are made to God, Baptism and the Eucharist, there remains another Sacrament, which is called Marriage^d, which is a mutual Engagement between a Man and a Woman. The Ceremonies of it are much the same amongst the Polish Brethren, as with other Protestants. All Christians agree, that Marriage is a strict Obligation, contracted between the Parties, for Life, instituted, and ordained by God, in order to people the World in a regular Manner ; before Witnesses, with the intervening Help or Blessing of a Churchman, who is invested with a Power from Heaven on that Occasion, all which Conditions are so requisite, and ought to be publicly known, that without them Children are not lawfully begot. Our Sectaries disallow Marriages with Infidels, or within the Degrees prohibited, ^e by the Laws and Customs of the Countries in which they reside : They forbid all Immodesty, Excess, and Vanity, in the Preliminary, or subsequent Ceremonies. The contracting Parties stand in the Church before the Pastor, who reads to them ^f a Text, concerning the Duties of

^a Nos malimus antiquam Eucharistiæ vocem retinere, &c.

^b Ægrotis solis Eucharistiam domi eorum administrandi morem, ut superstitiosum, minimè laudamus.

^c Nisi longo detineatur morbo æger, & hoc ritu Dominum . . . honorare aveat . . . tum poterunt fratres ad eum convocari, &c.

^d Restat Sacramentum quod non ipsi Deo Christo immediatè dicitur, sed quod alter alteri dicit propter Deum & Christum; vocaturque Conjugium, &c.

^e Eos qui aut præter Dei præscriptum, aut præter legum dictamen, morem denique inter eos inter quos vivunt receptum, matrimonium inire volunt pastor copulare cavebit.

^f Stantibus omnibus textum ad officia conjugii pertinentem legit.

that State, and explains it in a Christian Discourse, which is like a Sermon to them, and to all present; then they solemnly, and before Witnesses, Friends, and Relations, make to each other the usual Promises, which are too often forgot, the Pastor joins their right Hands, and holding his Hand upon theirs, pronounces the Blessing, after which they exchange Rings. They are, says our Author, made of the purest Gold, no Joints or Separations appear in them, and their round Figure admits of no beginning or ending. Excellent Types of the Union and Constancy of the married Couple! ————— Dancing, Singing, Musicians and Fiddles, are strictly prohibited at Weddings; as being only Incentives to Uncleanness.

In the Order for visiting the Sick, their Discipline prescribes no particular Ceremony: The Pastor is indispensably obliged to visit the Sick, to comfort and exhort them, and to pray for them and his whole Flock: We therefore shall give now an Account of their Funeral-Service. The chief Benefit and Comfort, which a Pastor ought to reap by the Death of the Faithful, is to see them depart with an edifying Repentance, and Submission to the Will of God: The Ceremonies used by most Protestants are not many; if now and then they obtain large Legacies, and lead, as one may say, the Testator's Hands to their own Profit; this is neither so common as in some other Countries, nor does the Substance so left, turn to the enriching whole Communities: However the Discipline prescribes as to the Place, "that it be left to Choice, though they do not condemn those who bury in Church-yards." The Body of the Deceased is placed in its Coffin, at the Door, or in a Ground Room of the House, till the Time of Burial. The Pastor begins a Psalm, and sings it with the Faithful present, pronounces a Sermon, to exhort and comfort them for the Loss; on the short Duration and Uncertainty of Life, the Sins of the dead Person, and of those who are still living; the Virtues, good Qualities, and Faults of the deceased Brother, &c. Then Prayers are said, to obtain Mercy, and Forgiveness of Sins; which being over, the Assembly goes out, and the Pastor standing at the Door takes leave of the Company, in the Name of the deceased^h. Before the Body is put into the Ground, another Exhortation is made, accompany'd with a short Praise of the dead Person, according to his Merit, but rather over than under. The Ceremony is concluded by eating and drinking; Wine in plenty is given to those who honour it with their Presence, to drown Sorrow, as is the Custom in the Northern Countries.

The Elders and Deacons are called the Pastor's Handsⁱ, being like Instruments which he makes Use of; their Functions are well known, as to the Manner of chusing them, it is the same with the Polish Brethren, as with other Protestants.

In order to keep the Flock to its Duty, Pastoral Inspection, Correction, and Censure are employed; either in private or in publick: The first is not any ways frightful, but then it seldom mends the Guilty; the publick, as in process of Time it becomes an Anthem, or Excommunication, the very Name of it is dreadful in all Communions; it generally breeds a Hatred against those who incur that Censure, which is not easily overcome, the excommunicated Person being looked upon as the Object of God's immediate Punishment. And in such Circumstances natural Pride decides in our Favour, as if our Sins were more pardonable, because either ⁱ Pastorum velut manus, quibus tanquam instrumentis . . . utuntur, &c.

^e Annuli . . . ex solido & ab omni fæce depurato auro constantes, ita sunt compacti, ut nulla in iis partium scissura, nullæ commissiões appareant . . . ob orbicularem suam figuram, nec principium sui nec finem obtinent.

^h Pastor . . . nomine mortui viventibus valedicit, &c.

Chance, or the Indulgence of others in our Regard, has hindred them from being made publick. However, the Aim of truly Christian Pastors, in such Censures, is only to mend a guilty Brother, and to bring him, by this saving Shame, to Repentance: In which Case, he must make some Reparation to the Church, which directs the Duties of each Christian; on some Occasions, a Confession made to a Pastor, with Signs of Amendment, sets all to Rights.

The Socinian Discipline requires, that Pastors be watchful over the Devotion of their Flock; that they take Notice when, and how often the Faithful come to Church, to hear the Word of God, whether they do it with due Attention and Respect; what are the Occasions of their Neglect, in a Word, that they enquire diligently^k into every the least Report, of ill Conduct, of Scandal or Disorder, &c.

THEIR Customs about Synods, or ecclesiastical Assemblies, Consultations, collecting Money for charitable Uses, and publick yearly Fasts, to atone for the Faults committed in the Course of the Year elapsed, and to beg the Continuance of God's Favour, &c. are no ways singular; so setting aside what is controversial, we shall not trouble our Readers with further Extracts from that Discipline, in which we cannot help commending, at least, their Moderation, and seemingly charitable Condescension.

The Socinians followed these Ordinances, till the Year 1658, when they were banished out of Poland; which proved a considerable Loss to, but not the entire Ruin of this Heresy; on the contrary it spread itself the more, and without ever obtaining such Toleration, to preach and meet together as the Anabaptists, Quakers, &c. have done: This Sect has cunningly insinuated itself, in most Christian Communions, even in those which seem the most opposite to their Doctrine; inso-much, that if the Hearts of many pretended Orthodox could be laid open^l, more Anti-Trinitarians would be found out, than can be imagined; and 'tis to be fear'd the Church of God would be dispeopled, and reduced to a small Number of Elect; by the unexpected Discovery of such a Number of hidden and invisible Hereticks.

The Socinians are taxed with measuring their Faith by the narrow Bounds of their Reason, God, say they^m, never commanded that Man should believe what cannot be comprehended we are created with an Understanding fit to conceive and to deny what is impossible: They are likewise accused of being useless to Governments, because, like the Anabaptists, they are against War, and the Functions of Magistrates. All Christians who admit a Revelation, know that Reason has its Bounds; but how far they reach is the Question, which is not a proper Subject for this Work. As to the other Accusation, we are inclined to believe, that if ever they meet with a publick Toleration, they will alter their Mind, and not refuse their Share of either Civil or Military Offices: Some might even be brought to accept of rich Church-Livings.

WE shall say nothing of what is called modern Arianism, chiefly in England, because these Disputes are well known to our Countrymen; and after all, though there are but too many wedded to such Principles, yet they have not made any Schism or Sect apart. All we need take Notice of in this Place is, that now a-days every Opinion is taxed with Arianism and Socinianism, if it deviates in the least from the common orthodox Expressions about one God and three Persons. 2. That few are qualified either by their learning or reading Ecclesiastical Authors, or even by a fair way of handling Controversy, to settle the just Bounds to Arianism or Socinianism. 3. That the Variety of Systems, frequent Disputes, and endeavours during fourteen Ages to clear up Difficulties, have had no other Success than to throw a darker Veil on the Understanding. 4. That all those who have entertained the Publick with new Notions, have been branded with the Names of Hereticks and false Doctors. But if our Readers are over-fond or curious to read such Books, they may find Employment by perusing Dr. Clarke's Scripture Doctrine of the Trinity, printed at London in 1712, as also Toland's Christianity not mysterious, published in 1696. And in order to proceed fairly, they must likewise take the Trouble to read with equal Attention, the Writers on the other side of the Question, a long laborious Task! which when they have gone through, they will probably be convinced at last, that Authority must and ought to prevail, that it is necessary not only to govern common People, in whom it supplies the Want of Sense; but even to direct the greatest Wits in their Enquiries, by which without this help, they are often misled from Doubt to Incredulity, from Incredulity to Atheism.

^l Etiam ad rumores de illorum vita aures arriget.

¹ The History of Socinianism, printed in 4to. at Paris, says, that Socinianism appears boldly in most Protestant States, and in the Books of several Protestant Doctors; and cites even Furieu.

^m Deus nunquam voluit, aut jussit debere hominem credere id quod non potest intelligi, nec percipi . . . : hominis intellectum fecit aptum . . . ad negandum quod impossibile est . . .

WE shall conclude this Dissertation with Arminianism; so called from Arminius^o, who headed that Party, which in 1609 presented to the States of Holland a Roman-france, from which they had the Name of Remonstrants. In that Writing all their Doctrine was reduced to five Points.

THE first was about Election and Reprobation, the Faith and Perseverance of the Faithful, and the Incredulity and final Impenitence of those who are damned: They widely differed from the Doctrine of the Reformed Churches.

THE second maintained that Christ died for all Men without Exception.

THE third owned that the Grace of God is necessary to do good Works. But

THE fourth denied that Grace operates in us with an irresistible Power.

THE fifth insisted that one cannot positively affirm that the Regenerate cannot loose Grace entirely: An Opinion of such Importance, said the Arminians, ought to be weighed, and well considered over and over. (It was in the Synod of Dordrecht, where the old Orthodoxy of Calvin got the better: We call it old Orthodoxy, because of late Arminianism is in great Vogue, and a modish Religion in several Protestant Countries.)

BESIDES the above-mentioned Articles, the Arminians are against original Sin, and deny the Imputation of the Justice of Christ; they likewise raise some Disputes about the Satisfaction of Christ; in a word, all the particular Tenets of Arminianism are to be found in the said Synod of Dordrecht, which condemned them^p. The Divines, as is usual in such Disputes, grew warm^q, and at last an open Schism en-

^o The Work may be abridged by a serious Perusal of a Book intitled, An Answer to Dr. Clarke and Mr. Whiston, &c. printed in London in the Year 1729.

^p The History of Arminius is well known. He undertook to answer a Book which had been published against (Calvinistical) Predestination: he weighed all the Reasons on which his Adversary grounded his Opinion; was convinced by the Force of those Arguments; embraced the Sentiments of his Adversary, and maintained them even better than his Book had done. This is the first beginning of Arminianism: Such Accidents have happened more than once. See in the Colomesiana the Story of the two Brothers Reynolds, one a Roman Catholick the other a Protestant; they so disputed one against the other that each changed Sides.

^q See Epist. Eccles. & Theol. Ep. 317. p. 527.

^r Jurieu and Gomar.

sued. The Arminians were accused before the civil Magistrates as ' Factious and Rebels : they have likewise been often branded as Abettors of Socinianism and Libertinism, and suspected of worse Crimes. But we need not enter into those Disputes which were occasioned by the Arminians, shewing as much Inclination to Toleration, as their Opponents did a bitter Zeal for Persecution. At present the Arminians have their own Churches, in which they quietly perform their Devotions, as other Reformed Sects.

' The famous Dutch Cato, Barneveldt, lost his Life partly on that Account or Pretence.

ASSEMBLÉE de ceux qu'on appelle COLLEGIANS à Amsterdam.

Leur CÈNE à Rensburg.

A DISSERTATION

On the Customs, &c. of those who are called in Holland
Collegianten, and Rhynsburgers.

THEY have been settled at Rhynsburg * above a Hundred Years, and meet twice in every Year: This is known in the Country; but as they seldom hold their Assemblies, it is not much to be wondered, that Foreigners should not so much as be acquainted with their Names: The following Account is authentick, the Author being one of the chief Members of that Society.

WE must first take Notice, that they are much mistaken, who take it for granted, that Collegianten and Rhynsburgers are the same; but to set them right, we must put them in mind, that the Collegianten own their Name, to the Manner in which their small Societies were formed; The Nature of these religious Meetings cannot be better described, than by comparing them to the friendly Societies, which we call Clubs, and the Dutch Collegeen. They likewise bear some Resemblance with the Mystical Schools, which we have mentioned, when speaking of the Pietists. However, we shall call them Clubs.

IN these Clubs therefore, every Man may, and has a Right, to speak what Religion soever he may outwardly profess, what System soever he may follow, and let his Notions be ever so much out of the common Way of thinking: On this one only Condition, that he owns Scripture to have been divinely inspired. Churchman or Layman, every one explains that Text as he sees fit, and freely may utter whatsoever he thinks about Religion, either in general, or in regard to any particular Sect. Women are not allowed the same Privilege, as amongst Quakers, for they must hold their Tongues. And indeed these Clubs have nothing to do with the Spirit within of these Enthusiasts, nor with its Impulses: What any of the Club says, is the Produce of his Studies, and Meditations on the Bible, or of his own ingenious Discoveries. Moreover (and most People of a bold and free Spirit will approve this Part of their Rules) the Club is not to be kept under Subjection by any one Doctor, or by three or four, who, as is done in other Assemblies, keep all the Discourse to themselves. Besides the Club of Rhynsburg, from which they derive the Appellation of Rhynsburgers, there are many others, in several Towns and Villages of Holland, Friesland, and West Friesland; at Amsterdam^b, Rotterdam, Harlem, Leyden, Groningen, Lewarden, &c. what need we mention any more Towns? As to Villages, the most noted Club meets at Sardam, and is remarkable for being composed of Members who belong various Sects. For, lest our Readers should forget it, we must once more put them in Mind, that in these Clubs only one essential Point is agreed on, to wit, the divine Inspiration of Scripture: They are at full Liberty to explain it as they think fit, and to build any System they please upon that Foundation.

* Rhynsbergh is a Village near Leyden.

^b The Print here annexed represents one of these Clubs.

THEIR devout Exercise begins by reading a Canticle and a Psalm, which is afterwards sung, then a Prayer is proposed, which being ended, the Text appointed for the Subject of their Christian-Entertainment, or sometimes any other Text is read, the Brethren present are invited, to make Use of the Freedom of those Clubs, in objecting what Difficulties, making what Remarks, or giving what Admonitions and Exhortations they please. If no one rises to speak, then those who were appointed to handle that Subject speak to it, (for lest the Club should separate without any Discourse, two are always appointed to speak;) when they have done, Silence is kept for a considerable Time, that any one may make what Objections, &c. he thinks fit, to what has been said. The whole Ceremony concludes with a suitable Application and Prayer.

No Register is kept of the Names of the Members belonging to the Clubs, and in Reality, they are but a Body composed of such Members as are borrowed from all Sorts of Sects, in order to meet twice every Week, (Sundays, and Wednesdays.) If this Definition does not please some, they must, however, be forced to look upon them as a Society of Christians, brought up in divers Systems of Religion, Arminians, Menonites, Unitarians, Mysticks, &c. Each of which keeping to his own Religion, frequents the Clubs, to utter with Freedom his Thoughts about the Sense, the Doctrine, and the Instructions contained in holy Writ, and by that Means acquire greater and surer Knowledge, and give Edification one to the other, &c. If the divine Authority of holy Writ is owned, no-body is looked upon as a Heretick, though their Way of explaining it, or arguing upon it, is ever so bold. Those who lead disorderly Lives, or blindly follow their Passions are, they say, the only Hereticks, for God will shew more Mercy to false Notions and Errors of the Understanding, than to the Sins against Morality, which are committed willfully and knowingly, against the Dictates of Reason and Conscience.

THESE Clubs were begun about 1619, and owe their Beginning to the Spirit of Persecution, which then reigned in Holland, which has occasioned the Members of them to run into the other Extream: Three Brothers, called Vander Codde (in Latin Coddeus, who had a fourth Brother Professor of Hebrew at Leyden) were the first Founders of these Meetings. All three were Arminians, and lived in three different Villages, one of them was an Elder in his Parish, and lived at Rhynsburgh: They were not inspired as the Apostles, but resembled them in their low State of Life, being either Husband-men, or Tanners; moreover they were well versed in Scripture, which they read and meditated upon with great Assiduity, and lead a moral, sober Life. Arminianism was then at a very low Ebb, both because it had lately been condemned in the Synod of Dordrecht, and upon political Accounts; so far, that Arminians, when found out, were dealt with as Enemies to God, and civil Society. The Ministers of the Remonstrants were forbid preaching, and even banished, if they refused to sign the Act of Exclusion and Suspension from the Ministry; which was drawn up against Arminianism, after the Victory obtained in the said Synod of Dordrecht, by the Calvinistical Orthodox. Others, who would not sign the said Act, were fined, and Rewards promised to those, who should discover and denounce a Remonstrant Minister to the Magistrates. We cannot affirm positively, that the Hopes of Gain brought on many such Discoveries of these new Palagians^c, but we are fully assured, that the Gospel does not appoint such self-interested Ways of finding out Hereticks; and that whoever made Use of them, probably were not predestinated to Salvation by the eternal Decree. However by these Proceedings the Remonstrants were deprived of their Pastors and Teachers. Then the above-mentioned three Brothers, to the End that all Exercise of Devotion might not be laid aside, proposed to set up a Religious Club, into which, besides Remonstrants, People of all Sects were admitted in Process of Time, all as equal Brethren, for their mutual Edification.

^c This Name is also given to the Arminians.

THE first of these Clubs was established at Warmand, a Village where one of the Vander Codde lived. A great Number of Remonstrants, who could not then meet either openly or privately as Arminians for fear of severe Fines, were over-joyed at this Opportunity of assembling together as Friends under a Name of Society, very common in the Country, and in which Religion is never supposed to be concerned. When the Heat of Persecution abated, several Ministers of the Remonstrants returned into their own Country, and offered their Services as Pastors; but were told by Vander Codde, that their new Institution, being on the Model prescribed by St. Paul, 1 Cor. chap. 14. verse 26 and following, did admit or require Pastoral Functions.

THIS Club was soon removed to Rhynsburgh, where it increased considerably, and was joined by two famous^d Pastors of the Remonstrants, who were received as Brethren only. Several other Places of Holland followed this Example, and had also their Clubs, which at first were strictly enquired into, but at last connived at.

THIS is the best Account we could get of the Institution of those Clubs; others pretend it to be of an older Date, tho' established on the same Plan, governed by the same Rules, and grounded on the same Exposition of St. Paul's Words. This Dispute may be reconciled by owning that the oldest were only made up of Anabaptists and other Fanatics; and that after all, such Meetings may have been held in all Persecutions, as we see Conventicles and clandestine Assemblies are to this Day in England; but let us not dispute about Words.

IT is likewise reported, that Grindal Archbishop of Canterbury held some such Meetings in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth; but as they were kept openly in the Church, and under the Protection and Direction of the Diocesan Bishop; they cannot be ranked amongst Clubs and clandestine Assemblies. Nevertheless as it concerns England, we shall give a short Account of them. The Time of their Meeting was once a Month, sometimes twice; only Churchmen were allowed to speak; the Subject, and the Persons who were to handle it, were appointed before-hand; the youngest of those Preachers began, and the others followed according to their Age; so that the oldest spoke last, recapitulated what the others had said, praised what deserved it, corrected their Faults with Mildness; their whole Discourse was in order to compare the Text in hand with others, to settle its true and genuine Sense, the sacred Writer's Aim, the exact Significancy of the Words, the various Translations, the Consequences which flowed from it, and to expose the wrong Explications of Hereticks and false Doctors. If we consider the Circumstances of those Days, and that every Preacher was allowed to publish his Opinions freely, it must be owned the Variety of Systems and Opinions could not but produce warm Debates; but the grave Divines who presided in those Assemblies by Order of the Bishop, moderated their Heat, and helped to keep good Order. This lasted two or three Hours; yet such was the Variety of Matter treated on, and of Opinions concerning it, that the Hearers were never tired: The whole began and ended with a Prayer, and then they went together to a Brotherly Dinner. The Queen expressed her Dislike of those Assemblies, the Archbishop was strenuous for them, and wrote a Book in their Defence; but to no purpose, Elizabeth discountenanced them.

^d Camphusius, and Gesleranus.

AFTER this short Digression, we now return to the Dutch Clubs; they made an open Profession of Toleration, so far that in 1677, and in 1680, most of those Clubs in Holland contributed largely to the Erecting and Endowing at Amsterdam the College of Orange, which is founded also for the Maintenance of Orphans, not only of their own Sect, but of others; and the same has been done in other Places of Holland: A glorious Effect of that human Disposition which ought to influence all Men notwithstanding the Disputes about Religion!

As to the Rhynsburgers, they are made up of Mennonites, Remonstrants, Unitarians, Calvinists, Lutherans, &c. who from all Parts meet at Rhynsburgh, as the Jews heretofore at ^d Jerusalem. They assemble only twice a Year, at Pentecost and on the last Sunday in August, to partake of the Lord's Supper, and whoever leads a regular Life, according to the Scripture Precepts, may be admitted, whatever Opinion he may otherwise entertain even about the Essence and Nature of this Sacrament. The Eve of the Communion Day is to be employed in a Review of their Sins, and disposing their Hearts. Two Discourses are pronounced before they receive, the first on the Lord's Supper in general, and the Death of Christ in particular, the other explains the Motives of their Meeting in that Village, to unite themselves like Christians and Brethren without Distinction of Parties, without declaring themselves some for Paul others for Apollo, as the Jews celebrated their Solemnities together in the Temple, not minding the Disputes betwixt the Pharisees and Sadduces. They deplore the Evils which flow from Schisms; "Is it not much better, says a Rhynsburgian Teacher, to admit every Christian who believes the Scripture, and endeavours to live up to its Rules, according to the Law of Christ? We therefore invite them all to take the Communion with us, without minding the odious Appellations with which they are bespattered, and without giving any Room in our Souls, to that Gall of Bitterness which most Men look upon as a Proof of their Zeal for the Doctrine of Christ." These and such Discourses being ended, they perform the Communion ^e Service, in the same manner as the Calvinists. The Alms collected from the Faithful are deposited in the Hands of the Secretary of that Village, who gives a Receipt for it, and distributes it to the Poor of Rhynsburgh. This Solemnity is concluded with a Discourse by way of Thanksgiving to God; and next Morning they take leave of one another, with mutual Exhortations to Perseverance in the true Religion, and faithful Service of God. All may speak, teach, or administer the Communion; yet these Functions are generally performed by People who beforehand are prepared, and sometimes appointed to do it. Rhynsburgh being at a great Distance, the *Friesland*ers of that Sect meet yearly at Lewarden to partake of the Lord's Supper, as is done at Rhynsburgh: "An evident Proof, say they, that we are not guilty of the Superstition imputed to us, of having a particular Devotion for the Village of Rhynsburgh."

NEXT to the Lord's Supper, the only remarkable Ceremony of these Sectaries, is their Baptism; of which, one of their own Members gives the following Account: The Candidate for Baptism, makes publicly his Profession of Faith on a Saturday ^e They do not look on Rhynsburgh as a more holy Place than other Towns; which the Jews did in relation to Jerusalem, and Roman Catholics to the consecrated Churches, but have only regard to their own way of baptizing in a running Water.

^f The Prints here annexed represent their Baptism and Communion.

L. F. du Roure, inv.

LE BAPTÊME À RHINSBOURG.

J. Bernaerts, del.

in the Morning, before an Assembly of Rhynsburgers, held for that Purpose: A Discourse is pronounced, on the Excellency and Nature of Baptism: The Minister and Candidate go together to a Pond, behind a House belonging to the Sect; (we might call it an Hospital, since they receive for nothing, those who have not wherewithal to pay their Reckoning at the Inns.) In that Pond the Neophyte, Catechumen, or Candidate is baptised by Immersion, if a Man, he has a Wastecoa and Drawers, if a Woman, a Boddice and Petticoat, with Leads at the Bottom, for the Sake of Decency. The Minister, in the same Dress as the Men wear, is also in the Water, and plunges them in it, pronouncing, at the same Time, the Form used by most Christian-Communities. This being over they put on their Cloaths, go back to the Meeting, hear an Exhortation to Perseverance, in complying with the Precepts of Christ. A publick Prayer is said, and some Canticles or Psalms sung.

THESE are the most singular Customs, of those who are called in Holland Collegianten and Rhynsburgers: 'Tis said, that this Sect, and that of the Unitarians, who are mixed with them, with the Quakers, and with the Anabaptists, is very much diminished: Others pretend, that all Sectaries have learnt to dissemble, more than their Predecessors, and that this Disguise makes some over-credulous, but devoutly inclined Persons, flatter themselves with the Hopes, that Heresy and Libertinism lose Ground. But probably they are most in the Right, who think that the Religion of Mammon does get a Superiority over all others. We must be contented to suspend our Judgment, and desire that the Grace of God may be granted to all Mankind.

An quidquam nobis tali sit munere majus!

A

DISSERTATION

On the singular Doctrine of a Sect which is accused of Libertinism and Deism.

THE generality of Mankind know no Difference betwixt Deists and Atheists, yet they are widely different; not to say 'tis hard, even next to an Impossibility, that there should be any real Atheists. The Existence of a supreme Being is so evidently proved, the distinguishing Characters of Good and Evil, and their Consequences, are so deeply ingraved in the Conscience of every Man, that they cannot entirely throw off the Notion of a God. Accordingly we find that the most unpolished and barbarous Nations have always entertained some Belief of a God-head, and cannot be looked upon as Atheists: The same must be said of the Chinese, of the Inhabitants of Japan, and of all Idolaters: for tho' Tertullian says truly that there is no God, if he is not one; yet it does not follow that all those who worshipped more than one, thought that there was none.

ATHEISM then is a Chimera, but Deism is not so; to own the Being of one God, to worship him, yet so as to embrace, out of Policy, what Religion soever is most in vogue, and favoured by the Government, is as natural to the general Bent of Mankind, as to live under that Government as long as our Affairs require it, or our Inclination leads us. As for those, if there be any such, whose Principles are destructive of publick Society, they might be thought to go beyond Deism; but either they are not serious in their lawless Schemes, which if successful, would prove their own Ruin, as well as of the rest of Mankind; or rather they act against their own Knowledge, to acquire an empty Reputation of senseless Wit.

ON the other Side, both in civil and ecclesiastical Societies, several are accused of Deism, who are no ways guilty of it: and the more they complain of such Usage, all their Protestations serve only to strengthen the Prejudice-conceived against them. Thus an Indifferency as to the various Opinions which divide Christendom, too extensive a Toleration of all Sects, Errors of divers kinds, such as those of the Anabaptists, Socinians, Remonstrants, &c. Even too much Freedom in censuring the Faults of Churchmen, and the Quibbles of the Schools, are looked upon as the worst sort of Deism by fiery Zealots or over-scrupulous Christians.

BUT the Sect we are now giving an Account of, is of a mixt Deism, as is evident by their Tenets. The Founders of it were Pontian of Hattem, and another Dutchman named Woutelaer, who, they say, added some of their own Notions to the System of Spinoza, and interlarded the whole with some mystical Opinions of the Pietists. This Sect of Hattem still meets, but with so much Privacy, that no one is admitted to their Assemblies, unless he can give evident Proofs of his being a trusty Member of their Society. This Precaution is necessary to avoid the grievous Penalties inflicted

* Deus si non unus est; non est; quia dignius credimus non esse, quodcunque non fuerit ut esse debeat.
This seems to favour Bayle's Problem, in his Thoughts on Comets.

upon them by an Edict of the States of Holland and West Friesland, which orders, that they shall be banished or cast into Prison, and severely punished as Enemies to Virtue, to Divine Worship, and Disturbers of the publick Peace; that their Books shall be suppressed, and the Authors, Printers and Publishers proceeded against as directed in the Edict about Spinofism.

OUR curious Readers may find a full Account of Baruch or Benedict Spinofa in Bayle's Dictionary, to which may be added his Life, published by Maximilian Lucas, one of his Disciples; he was born at Amsterdam, Son of a Portuguese Jew: His bold Explications of Scripture occasioned his being excommunicated, and cast out of the Synagogue; to avoid their Persecutions, after they had obtained his Banishment, he retired to Rhynsburgh, then to Voorburgh, and lastly to the Hague, where he died. Lucas praises much his Morals, as to his forgiving Injuries, outward Neatness, and Disinterestedness. His System is wholly included in this Verse of Lucan:

Jupiter est quodcumque vides quocumque moveris.

Meaning that there is but one Substance in the Universe, by the different Modifications of which all Nature is formed. He seems likewise, by a Conversation which Lucas relates, to have been of opinion, that God had a Body, and that there are no Substances merely spiritual.

PONTIAN of Hattem had been a Minister of Zealand, in the foggy Air of which Country he invented the System afterwards published by his Disciple Wootelaer, who lived at Amsterdam beyond the Age^b of thirty four, and vented his Doctrine, whilst he sold Linnen: In the clandestine Assemblies which he held, he entertained his Audience with the following unintelligible Paradoxes.

1. EVERY criminal Thought, Word, or Action, is the Effect of Sin; Sin is a Privation of God, of Soul, of Life, 'tis the Death of the Soul; whoever is sorry for a bad Thought or Desire, is not sorry that he is a Sinner, but that his Sins are discovered, and that God has made him know the State in which he is.

2. OWNING criminal Thoughts, Words, or Actions, is not a Confession of Sins; on the contrary, 'tis a Denial of being a Sinner, since it is a Denial of being dead; for to be dead and to be a Sinner is one and the same thing.

3. ALL Sinners are equally dead, being all equally Sinners; Sin may shew itself in one more than in another; but it is essential to Man, whoever is a Sinner this Day, shall not be more so to Morrow: The Action of Man is not to be called Sin, that Appellation belongs only to his State of Death.

4. ACTION's therefore do not make the Sinner; but they are Sins only, because he was a Sinner first; Sin is the Death of Man, the Actions are only his Corruption, such Corruption as manifests itself when Bodies are naturally dead.

5. WORKS good or bad do not change a Man, they only shew whether he be good or bad, as Fruits change not the Tree.

6. GOD is immutable, and suffers no Change in regard to us, not even by our most criminal Actions: He is not angry at Man because he has sinned, but Man sinned because God was angry with him Satan says, Man has sinned, let him be punished; God says, Man is a Sinner, that is, he is dead, I must raise him to Life. No Man can be pleasing to God, till after this Renunciation.

7. FROM thence he concludes, that they who condemn their Brethren are like the Devil, and those who . . . are merciful to them resemble God. Man is dead by Sin, Actions which are bad are the Corruption flowing essentially from Death : to be angry ^{at} bad Actions is as extravagant, as to be angry at a dead Corps for stinking.

^b See also a Pamphlet called Korte Aanzmerkinge, that is, Short Remarks, &c.

8. HE calls Christ Peacemaker. 'Tis foolish to enquire what Faith a Man professes ; there is but one Faith. " Whoever thinks himself just is quiet, he rests, " and works no more ; his Repose is the Effect of his Faith. Those who do not " enjoy Rest, and go on with Works, and do not think themselves just yet, but " endeavour it, those divide themselves into Sects..... as Catholicks, Mennonites, " Socinians, Arminians, &c. they even belong to Religions intirely opposite to " Christianity, as Judaism, Mahometism, and Paganism yet all these Divisions " make no Difference amongst them ; they are all alike, says Hattem, they con- " demn Christ, crucify him over again, and make him a Liar and an Impostor."

9. THREE Persons are one God, who denies one, denies all three. Jews, Mahometans, Socinians deny the Son, who is the second Person of the Trinity ; therefore they reject God, therefore they are Atheists. Catholicks, Mennonites and Arminians are Atheists, says Hattem, because they are not at Rest in Quiet, but take Pains to give God Glory, and to do his Will.

10. GOD alone can do his own Will, Man worships him and does his Will only passively, by receiving his Impressions, &c. Then all Religion is only passive.

11. WHOEVER pretends to any other but this passive Religion is an Atheist, by calling the Will of God any other Will but that of the Creator.

12. All those who believe that God has within himself a Law which Men are required by God and obliged to fulfil, are Atheists and Idolaters ; because all Religion consisting in this being passive, it must be a wild and vain Imagination, to pretend that religious Worship consists in obeying Laws, supposed to flow from God.

13. THEN he concludes no one can believe in God unless he is insensible, immovable, and has no Desires.

14. THEY have no Faith in God, who are displeased at any thing that happens ; who are not satisfied either with their own Conduct, or that of others ; who think they can do more, be more holy and happy, and enjoy a more desirable State.

15. So that whoever desires to be any thing else than what he is, does not believe in God, even tho' he should wish a sick Person to recover, or a Drunkard to leave off Drunkenness : Censures and Punishments, Repentance, Desires and Endeavours of Amendment are useless ; Men by such Sentiments resist the Will of God, and become inflexible to it, and consequently are without true Faith and Atheists.

16. THIS Indifferency ought, according to Hattem, to make a true Faithful equally satisfied whether Virtue or Vice is predominant in himself or others : Passiveness and Quiet will be his only Virtues, these will keep him even from knowing Evil, and render him pleasing to God the Creator, whom by the first Article of the Creed we are to believe.

17. The Actions of Men are their Fruits, and are such as those who do them : good Fruits cannot be expected from bad Trees, Men are essentially bad ; 'tis therefore a wicked Opposition to the Will of God, to require good Fruits (good Actions) from Men.

18. THE Son is the Word of God and his Wisdom.... our Prophet and Doctor, &c. all the Expressions of Scripture teach us, that believing in him consists in receiving his Testimony as infallible..... Now the Testimony of the Son of God is that the Will of God is not in Precepts, that our Actions are not the Obedience we owe him : We obey by Faith, and the Will of God is his eternal Decree. We are neither better nor worse by our Actions.

19. THE Corruption of Man is according to God's Will, Man is naturally dead, naturally wicked, naturally damned, &c. yet our Works are the Works of the Son of God, by which we know we are Sinners, dead, without Soul, without God, in a Word perfect Atheists, &c.

20. But a true Faithful is not sorry for his Sins, he owns them, humbles himself in the Sight of God, acknowledges that he is dead, and that as such he can only spread Infection (commit Sins) and this is all the Repentance and Confession required: so says Hattem, and adds, "That no one believes in the Son of God, but owns " that he rejects the Divinity: to own a God is to deny that one is dead." Who can understand this Nonsense? and what dreadful Consequences flow from such Principles?

21. THE Love of God and of our Neighbour does not consist in Actions. This would be a Denial of God's Justice; and prove only as a Disguise of our hating the supreme Being.

22. THE Love of God consists in Faith, and that is shewed by being pleased with the Punishments he inflicts, and those are our bad Actions. Probaby Hattem himself did not understand his own Expressions.

23. THE Faithful alone are filled, glad, and content, &c. All is the Work of God, therefore every thing pleases them: they are always perfect, because they are such as God thought fit they should be. Their Works are their Punishment, they own it and thus are justified: they alone are the regenerate Children of God, his Heirs, and are intimately united to him by the most tender Affection; which Hattem and most Myssicks express after the Model of Solomon's Canticle by the most endearing Words employed in Love Affairs.

THESE are the chief Tenets of Hattem, a strange Jumble of Quietism and other Heresies, with which, no doubt, our Readers are sufficiently tired: These Sectaries were accused of Atheism and Libertinism, and no Wonder; they supposed every Body else to be Atheists, and by Retaliation the same was objected to them: again, it was reported^a that they enlisted Men in the Devil's Name, and made them swallow in a Glas of Wine a Paper with the Word Devil wrote upon it; that their Teachers were Wizards, and used Conjurations: which Calumnies (if we believe this their Apologist) had the desired Success in reducing the Hattemites to fly their Country, or to abscond. We must not omit letting our Readers know that Pontian of Hattem^b had frequented the Cocceian Schools.

SOME pretended Wits who have lately renewed in Holland the System of the Soul of the^c World and the Eternity of both^d might with Justice be reckoned Spinofists and Deists more than Hattem. One of them indeed pretends to be far from a Spinofist, by establishing some Difference^e betwixt God and Nature. The same Writer maintains also, that the Trinity is only three Modifications of the su-

^a See Buitendyk's Letters to Davervelt, Letter third.

^b See Letter fourth to Davervelt towards the End.

^c This Soul is said by ancient Philosophers to be united to Matter, as our Souls are to our Bodies, and is the Life of Matter, as the Soul is the Life of the Body: But tho' inseparably united as our Soul is not our Body, so God is not Matter. Others have been of Opinion, that Matter is coeternal with God, as a Shadow is coeval with the Body.

^d This Author and his Disciples, as much as can be guessed from his Reasons, seem to think that Matter flows from God, as Light does from the Sun.

^e See a Dutch Book entitled, Imaginary Chaos, &c.

preme Being; that Extension is essential to God, and is the second Person; that Creation is from all Eternity, &c. He and some others, namely one Deurhof, have had some Followers, and held as they do still some small Assemblies, in a very private Manner, to avoid the Prosecutions which the Magistrates might make against them ^a.

THE ancient and modern Wits have always endeavoured to bring into Contempt the Religions settled in every Country: But never thought fit to break Society upon that Account with the rest of Mankind. And after all their Arguments, have been forced at last to own the Necessity of some Religion, not only to keep Men in Awe, and out of Fear ^b, but because they were convinced of the Being of a God by Dint of Demonstration; when forced so far, they have denied Revelation, yet could not avoid acknowledging that God might reveal himself by some Means or other, that being so much above our Reach of Understanding, his Authority must overcome all Objections; thus these Libertines, Deists, pretended Wits, with their bold Inquiries, are reduced to own the Weakness of their boasted Reasonings, and to humble themselves under the powerful Hand of God.

THEY ought likewise to be reckoned as Deists, who believe that all Religions are equally agreeable to God, provided they are not opposite to the Laws of Nature: God they say loves Variety in Religious Worship. But if he has revealed any Religion, that only can be agreeable to him, which he has prescribed; and how can Man know, without Revelation, what exterior Worship is acceptable to the supreme Being? They also must be deemed Deists, who, as Toland and Woolston, under Pretence of crying down Superstition, have attacked Religion itself, as being loaded ^c with ancient Errors, ancient Frauds, ancient Lies, which by Length of Time ^d have been taken for Truths, and which the old Heathenish Romans highly prized, and I wish, says Toland, I might not be forced to say Christians do likewise ^e. Superstition is no doubt a great Evil, Fables and Stories have brought Religion into Disrepute, and cannot be countenanced by any rational Man, unless actuated by Avarice, Ambition, Ignorance, or an over credulous Fear: We must then conclude, that a truly religious Man renders to God what is due to him, submits himself, and the whole Extent of Reason, to his infallible Word; adores him in Spirit and Truth; loves him, without servile Fear, out of Gratitude and Duty; expects all Good from his bountiful Hand, despises the Terrors of Death, and rejects all the false Notions of an inexorable Fate ^f.

^a Such Meetings are still held in several Towns, in retired Places, and under inoffensive Pretences, such as mutual Visits, smoaking a Pipe, or drinking Tea, which is followed with Talking of Religion, &c.

^b Primus in orbe Deos fecit Timor.

^c Antiqui errores, antiquæ fraudes, antiqua mendacia. Adeisdæmon, p. 31.

^d In rebus tam antiquis si quæ similia veri sunt, pro veris habeantur satis habeam, Livy.

^e Maximi certe talia fecerat Romanum vulgus, utinam & Christianum dicere non possem! Adeisdæmon, p. 34.

^f *Felix! qui potuit rerum cognoscere causas,
Atque metus omnes & inexorabile fatum
Subiecit pedibus, &c.* Virg. Georg. lib. 2.

I N D E X.

A.

ABELIANS or Abelites, though married and approving Matrimony, yet lived continent, and only adopted the Children of others, 186: Origin of their Name, ibid.

Adamism, Whether what has been said upon it, ought to be accounted fabulous, 186

Adamites, Hardly composed whole Sects, 185. An Account of those who pretended to imitate the Innocency and Nakedness of our first Parents, 186. Their Chief, ibid. Modern Adamites, and their Founder, ibid. 187

Adelprians. See Maffulians

Adelprius, A Maffalian Doctor, banished from Syria, 156

Advent, Derivation of that Word, 62

Agricola, Chief of the Antinomians, 169

Allut, A Joyner and a Prophet, His Predictions, 158

159, Forms a small Society at Amsterdam 163

Ambrose, (St.) Whether he be the Author of the Trium 58

Anabaptists, Their Opinions vigorously attacked in England, 22

Anabaptists, Whether Melchior Hofman can be called their Patriarch in the Netherlands and Parts adjacent, 165. How high the Beginning of that Sect may be traced, 166. They have had Predecessors and Forerunners as well as other new Sects, 167. Name of their Chiefs, ibid. Their Increase, 168. Impurities with which they have been charged, 169. Their taking of Munster, 170. Their System digested into seven Articles, ibid. 171. Divided in several Branches, 172. Their Errors, ibid. An Account of their Discipline, ibid. 173. Some Anti-Trinitarians and Socinians are to be found among the Dutch Anabaptists, 174

Anathema, How dreadful in England, and the Manner it is inflicted, 67

Ange, (Cardinal St.) Odd Expression of his against granting the French the Communion under both Kinds, 34

Annals, Taken off in England by Act of Parliament, 4

Annointed. See Millenarians

Antinomians, or Islebiens, Doctrine of those Heretics, 169

Anti-Trinitarians, Pretend that the Texts made use of to prove the Divinity of Jesus Christ, are not convincing, 208. That the first Fathers of the Church favour their Opinion, ibid.

Apostelicks, Name assumed by the Quakers, 3

Apostelicks, Name of a Sect in the 13th Century, 166

Archbishops, (English), Their Ordination and Functions, 49

Archdeacon, Their Functions in the English Church, 54

Arminians, or Remonstrants, Their Tenets, 217. Their Churches, 218

Arminius, Chief of the Remonstrants, Historical Account of him, 317

Arragon (the Kings of), Pretended to the Gift of curing the King's Evil, 67

Ash-Wednesday, When the Custom of lighting Candles on that Day, was abolished in England, 18

Atheists, How far they may be deemed State Criminals, 26. There is hardly any real Atheists, 224

B.

BANS, Must be published three Sundays in the Church of England, 82

Baptism, Was called Light or Illumination by the Vol. VI.

antient Christians, 59

Barbanfon, A zealous Promoter of Mysticism, 196

Barclay (Robert), Contributes to the Increase of Quakerism, presents an Apology in favour of the Quakers to King Charles II. 115

Barrow, Chief of the Barrowists, 101. Was hanged together with another Minister of that Sect, 102

Barrowists, Name given to the Brownists, from one Barrow, who became their Chief, 101. Their great Number, ibid. Why called Separatists. Their Baptism and Communion, ibid. Solemn Protestation of those admitted into their Sect, ibid. Church they formed in London, their Assemblies, 102

Barrowists, Charged by their Enemies with divers Extravagancies, cruelly persecuted, 102. Their Idea of the Church of England, and their Opinion concerning the Sacraments administered by Priests of that Church, ibid. Called one another by the Name of Brother, ibid. Their Manner of electing their Ministers, Elders and Deacons, ibid. Their Proceedings upon any Churches swerving from the Rules of Christianity, 103. The Power of their Ministers reduced to narrow Bounds, ibid. Any Man had the Liberty to preach, ibid. Their Reasons for separating themselves from all other Churches, and that of England in particular, ibid.

Barton (Elizabeth), Commonly called the Virgin of Kent. The Monks help her to counterfeit the Spirit of Prophecy, 5

Bath, (The Knights of the) Their Institution 70

Beaufobre, (Monsieur de) Attacks Mr. Bayle very warmly, 185. His Opinion concerning the Adamites, 188

Becheran, (Abbt) His miraculous Convulsions; is confined and set again at Liberty, 163

Becket (Thomas), His Body is burnt, and his Festival abolished, 8

Benefice, How obtained in England, 53

Benefit of the Clergy, What, 56

Beza, Song attributed to him, 12

Bible, Publickly burnt, 27

Bidley, A Quakeress, who presumes to exhort to Peace all the Powers at War, 130. Is kindly heard by King James II. then at St. Germain in France, 131. Applies herself next to King Lewis XIV. and presents him her Credentials as from God, ibid.

Bizequi. See Fraticelli, 155

Blaurock, Name of a Fanatick who was publickly whipped in Switzerland, 168. His Death, ibid.

Blood (Duck's) Shewn formerly in England for some of Jesus Christ's, 8

Boem, Signification of that Word, 153

Beg, Signification of that Term, 157

Begomiles, Confounded with the Bohemians, 157

Bohemians or Gypsies, Their beggarly and wandering Life, thought by our Ancestors to be Spies for the Turks, 153. Whether they come from the Southern Parts of Asia and Africa, or rather from the Messulians, a wandering People dispersed in Thracia Bulgaria, &c. ibid. Confounded with the Begomiles, 157. Are punished with Death by a Statute made in King Henry the VIIIth's Reign: In France they are sent to the Gallies. ibid.

Bohm. A Shoemaker, and an Author inclined to Fanaticism, 200. An Account of his Doctrine, 201

Bonner, Pastoral Instructions that English Bishop published in the Beginning of the Year 1543, to recommend to Churchmen the reading of the Bible, 10. His Endeavours to maintain the Romish Religion, 15. His Oppositions to the Book of Homilies, and the Order of the Visitors, ibid.

Borrel, Name of the Chief of the Borrellists, 129

N n n Borrellist,

I N D E X.

- Berrells*, Name of that Sect which follow Berrel's Doctrine, 129
Baker (Abel), Removed from Court and recalled, 3.
 Marries King Henry VIII. 4. Her Coronation, ibid.
Bentley, A Presbyterian Doctor who wrote a Treatise on the Sabbath, which was suppressed by the Archbishop of Canterbury, 98
Bourignon (Antoinette), Her silly Opinion concerning Man in his State of Innocency, 106. Parallel of her and Labadie, 203
Brothers of the Passion, Who, 10
Brother (Switzer), Who they were, 168
Bridget (St.) What was St. Bridget's perpetual Fire at Kildare, 83
Brechtland, A Lutheran Preacher, who exclaimed vehemently against the Roman Church, 193
Brownists, Name of certain Refiners of Puritanism, which they had from one Robert Brown their Chief, 101. Were persecuted, and why, ibid.
Brown (Robert), A Preacher of North, who after inveighing bitterly against the Church of England, retires to Widdling in Zealand, where he forms a new Church, and after that comes back to London, where forsaking the Severity of his Principles, he embraces the other Extreme, 101
Brown (Robert), Chosen a Minister in Edinburgh in 1598. Refuses the Imposition of Hands, but is prevailed upon afterwards to receive it, 37. His Reasons for such Behaviour, ibid.
Brown (Peter), Chief of a Sect of that Name 160
Bucer, His Advice for correcting the new Liturgy of the English Church, 23. Prosecuted and condemned after his Death, 26. Plan of the Reformation he proposed to King Edward VI. ibid.
Bullsey (Sir Richard), One of the Protectors of the French Prophets in England, 158
Bungus of Burgundy, Author of a Book wherein he pretends to demonstrate that a thousand is the Cubical Number of Eternity, 106
Burnet (Thomas), His Opinion concerning the Earth before the Flood, 104
- C.
- C. A. N. D. R.* (the English), Contains still the Testament of several Saints, 60
Cathars, Name of several and morose Temper influences on the Reformation, writes a Letter to the Protector of London, 20. His Successors have copied more of his Faults, than of his good Qualities, ibid.
Cathars (the English), See Cambric.
Cambric, An Account of that Sect, 106. They rebel against the King, and reunite themselves afterwards to the Presbyterian Kirk, 107
Cambric, Origin of their Name, their Proceedings, the first Article of their Religion, 145. Character of their Leaders, 146
Caput Verum, Name of the first Day of Lent, according to some Antient Authors, 66
Cartwright, A zealous and learned Pre-byterian Doctor, 94
Cathars, Name given formerly to the Manicheans, 85
Catherine of Aragon, Her Marriage with King Henry VIII. occasions the Schism, 2
Cavalier, The Name of one of the Chiefs of the Cambrics, his Birth and Profession, 146. Takes upon him, with the Military Command, the Sacerdotal Function, ibid. His Cunning in making those of his Party approve his Accommodation with Marshall Villars, 147. Is received with great Demonstration of Joy and Respect, by his Countrymen then in Holland and in England, ibid.
Cajalpin, or Ajalpin, His Opinion concerning the Soul, 136
Charles I. King of England, Fast the Church has consecrated to the Memory of that Prince, 64
Charles II. King of England, Restores to the English Bishops their Authority, 37. Sends for four Presbyterian Ministers up to London, from Scotland, who were consecrated Bishops, ibid.
Chilias, Conformity of their Doctrine with that of the Millenarians, 105, 106
Christmas, The Antiquity of it is uncertain, 62
Christian, Definition of a good Christian, 46
Chrysostomus (Constantine), Taught Anabaptism in Constantinople, 165
Chrysostom, Make Religion consist in destroying all, 34
Church yards, The Custom of having them about or near the Temple, was practised by the Heathens, 13
Cingari, Name the Italians give to Gypsies, 153
Cinnamon (the), When first known in the Church under that Name, 63
Claire (Peter), Cited
Class, Name given to some Mennonites, 179
Clay (the) is necessary in civil Society, 60
Coccius, See Coccius.
Coccius, His Difference with Netius, 204. His Doctrine, 205
Cole (the) Surname of three Brothers, who established the Colleges or religious Clubs in Holland, 219
Collegium, Clubs or Assemblies in Holland, wherein they discourse of religious Matters, 219, 220. The Members of those Clubs profess an entire and unlimited Toleration, 222 Collegium, Religious Assemblies set up in England in Queen Elizabeth's Reign, 221. Order observed therein, ibid.
Collegium or Collegians, The Members of some religious Clubs in Holland, settled chiefly at Rhynsburg, 219. How they must be distinguished from those called Rhynsburghers, ibid. See Collegium.
Comenius, Author of a Millenarian System, 105. The Time he fixed for the Beginning of his thousand Years, ibid.
Communion, What, 66
Communion, How administered in the Church of England, 75. The Altar ought to be covered with a white Linen Cloth. ibid. Prayers repeated on that Occasion, ibid.
Communion, The French petition Pope Pius IV. to have it under both Kinds, but in vain, 34
Confession, Whether the Custom of beginning Divine Service by the Confession is as antient as St. Basil, 53
Congregationalists, The same with the Brownists or Barrabists. See those Words.
Constitutions of France, Miracles that occasioned their Rise, 103. Proceedings against them, 164
Constitutions of England. See Prophets of the Covenants.
Cope, Ornament in the Church of England for Bishops, Deans, and Canons of Cathedrals, 55
Copin, A Chief of the Flemish enlightened, 152
Coronation, Ceremonies observed at the Coronation of the Kings of England, 46
Courayer (Father), Writes on the Validity of the Ordination of the English Bishops, 30
Cranmer, Zealous Promoter of the English Reformation, 3. Raised to the See of Canterbury, 4. Confirms King Henry's Marriage with Ann Bullen, ibid. Composes a Catechism, 19. Invites Peter Martyr into England, 20. Is degraded and burnt, 26
Cromwell, His high Station placed him at the Head of the Reformation. 9. His Death, 10
Crucifix of Boxley, Surnamed the Statue of Grace, What Frauds the Monks practised with it, 8
Cup (St. Magnus's), What, 83
- D.
- DAY* of Bread and Light, What, 59
Deans, Their Ordination, and Functions in the English Church, 47
Deism, What is meant by that Name, whether it admits the outward Profession of any Religion whatsoever, 224. Compound Deism of Hatten and Woutelaer, ibid.
Deists,

I N D E X.

Deists, Whether all those that believe all Religions equally acceptable to God, ought not to be accounted Deists, 224
Divinity, What is meant by a Course of Divinity in some Protestant Countries, 109
Dominica in Albas, Derivation of that Name 69
Donatus (St.) Killed a Dragon of a prodigious Size with only the Sign of the Cross, 72
Doucin, Chief of some Anabaptists in the 13th Century, 166
Doxology, Origin of it. 58
Druideffes, What they were, 153

E.

E D W A R D VI. King of England, Progress of the Reformation in his Reign, 15, 16. His good Qualities, ibid. His Aversion for the Romish Religion makes him refuse Princess Mary his Sister, the free Exercise of it, ibid.
Edward the Confessor, Was canonized by Pope Alexander III. 63
Elements, Are now the same they have ever been, 151
Elizabeth Queen of England, Shews an Inclination to favour the Use of Images, 14. Was brought up with a strong Aversion to the Pope and the Romish Church, 28. Loved Ceremonies and Splendor in religious Worship, ibid. Divers Regulations made by her at her Accession to the Throne, ibid. Shews some Reluctancy to take upon her the Title of Head of the Church, 28
Ember-week, Origin of that Name, 66
Emes, Name of a Doctor the French Prophets pretended to restore to Life, 161
English, Usages established in their Devotions 57
English Bishops, Their Ordinations, 49. Their Functions, 50. That of London, the first Peer of England, ibid. Their Titles, ibid. Their Vicars and Officials, ibid.
Ephiphany, Custom practised in England on that Day, 64
Enlightned, A Sort of Fanaticks who hold most dangerous Tenets, 148, 152
Eumopides, What they were, 149
Excommunication, Is of two Sorts in England, 67
Expectation week, What, 70

F.

F A G E, The Name of a pretended Prophet, 158
Fagius, Prosecuted after his Death, 158
Faggot Countries, Are those where Hereticks are burnt, 91
Fanaticks, How far they may be deemed State Criminals, 26
Fatio de Duilliers, A Fanatick accused of having but very little Religion, 158. He was Secretary to the French Prophets in London, ibid.
Festivals, kept in England, 60
Fierte St. Romain, History of it, 71
Fitzwater, His Differences with Keith, 128
Flagellants, May be considered as Adamites, 188
Flotar, Agent and Treasurer of the French Prophets in London, 158
Friday (Good), Most strictly kept in England, 68
Fossombrone (Pietro di) First Doctor of the Fraticelli. 153
Fox (George), Apostle of the Quakers 111. What Idea his Followers entertained of him, ibid. Was from his Youth of a melancholy Temper, ibid. Books falsely attributed to him, 112. How he felt the first Impulsion of the Spirit, ibid. Leaves off his Trade of a Shoemaker, ibid. Persecuted by Satan 113. His Visions, Prophecies, and outward Modesty, ibid. Inveighs bitterly against the Church and Clergy of England, ibid. Imprisoned at Nottingham, where the Name of Quaker was first given him and his Followers, ibid. His great Patience in bearing Affronts, 114. His Marriage with one Fell, ibid.

Great Regard shewed him by Cromwell, ibid. Goes to Ireland, where he exclaims against the Doctrine of all the Protestants Churches, ibid. His Voyage to America, and his Return into England, where he is taken into Custody, but set at Liberty again, ibid. His Character, ibid.
Fox (George), Surnamed the Younger for Distinction Sake, petitions the King in Behalf of his Brethren the Quakers, 116
Franke (Augustus Hermanus), His History, 198
Fraticelli, Time in which these Monks appeared first in Italy, 155. Their Doctrine and their wandering Life, ibid.
Free-Masons, mentioned, 203
Free-Thinkers, Have endeavoured to renew in our Days, the System of the Soul of the World, and the Eternity of it 227
Funerals, How performed in England, 89

G.

G A L E N I T E S, Name of some Meinonites, 179. Their Dispute concerning the Divinity of Jesus Christ, ibid.
Galerus, Chief of the Galenites, 179
Gardiner, Bishop of Winchester, whether he be the Author of the six new Articles upon Religion, proposed in England in 1539. 9
George (David), His Errors, 168
George (St.) Procession of the Knights of the most noble Order of the Garter on the Festival of that Saint, 70
Giles, Chief of a Sect called the Intelligents 196
Glasser, A reformed Preacher, who inveighed against Lent, in a Sermon at St. Paul's, 15
Godfrey, Earl of Coventry, deprives the Inhabitants of that Town of their Privileges, 92
Godiva, The Name of Godfrey's Lady. See Godfrey.
Gray (Elizabeth), A Prophetess. Her pretended Miracles, and her Dialogue with Lacy a famous Prophet, 160
Grindal, Protects some Colleges set up in England, 221
Grubelius, A Fanatick, who endeavoured to stir the People to Sedition in Switzerland, 168
Guy, The Inventor of voluntary Flagellations 198 Gypsies. See Bohemians.

H.

H A M I L T O N (Patrick), Why put to Death, 32
Hatten (Pontian of) accused of having renewed the System of Spinoza, 224. His Doctrine, 225
Henry VIII. Is looked upon as the Author of the Schism in England, 2. Marries Catherine of Arragon, ibid. His Passion for Ann Bullen, ibid. His Marriage with the first declared null, and that with Ann Bullen confirmed by Cranmer, 4. Appeals to a general Council, 7. Excommunicated by the Pope, he finds Means to revenge himself, 9. Whether he died in the Romish Religion, 14. His Obsequies, ibid.
Henry, Chief of a Sect called Henricians, 166
Hertford (the Earl of), Protector of the Kingdom of England, 14. Was inclined to an entire Reformation, ibid.
Hick, Anabaptist Preacher, who reproached the Quakers with not being Christians, 124
Hierarchy (the English), Is not of Divine Right, but by Law established, 50
Hofman (Melchior), Whether he may be looked upon as the Patriarch of the Anabaptists in the Low-Countries, 165
Holy-days. See Festivals.
Hooper, A reforming Bishop who would not be consecrated with the Pontifical Robes, 22, 23. May be considered as the Head of the Non-conformists, ibid.
Horbius, Inveighs against the Lutheran Discipline, 198. Suspected of Quakerism, 200

Hoten

I N D E X.

Hoten (Elizabeth), was the first Woman who ventured to preach publicly among the Quakers, 114.
Huames, A sort of Vagrants in Arabia, accused of enormous Crimes, 188.
Hubmeyer (Baltassar), A Chief of the Anabaptists, 168. Preaches his Doctrine in Switzerland, ibid.
 Is burnt at Vienna, ibid.
Hutter, A Promoter of Anabaptism in Meravia, is burnt at Innsbruck, 168.
Hutterians. See Hutter.

I.

JAMES I. Endeavours to re-establish Episcopacy in Scotland, 37. Some Alterations of his in the English Liturgy, ibid.
Images, Intirely abolished in England, 18. The great Scandal they caused, ibid.
Independents, The same with the Barrowists, 126.
Intolerancy, Some Intolerancy is necessary to prevent Libertinism in Religion, 26.
Ishabell, Name of a Prophetess, Companion of Caualier, 146.
Ishabians. See Antinomians.
Jurieu (Mr.), His Millenarian System, 105. His over-credulous Temper, 139.

K.

KELB (Genge), Promotes Quakerism, and becomes a Doctor of that Sect in Philadelphia, 115. Being come to Scotland he is there imprisoned, 123. Falls at Variance with his Brethren, 127. Is excluded their Society, 128.
King's-Evil, The Gift of curing the same attributed to the Kings of England, 68.
Knipferdelling, Name of an Anabaptist, who by a pretended Revelation prompted John of Leiden to make himself King of Munster, 170.
Knaa (John), Name of one of the chief Reformers in Scotland, 27. His Character, ibid. Wrote an Apology to the Queen in Behalf of his Brethren, 33. His Voyage to Geneva after having been burnt in Effigy in Edinburgh, ibid. Coming back into his own Country he establishes there the same Discipline as in Geneva, 30. Draws up Articles of Ecclesiastical Policy, ibid.

L.

LAD D I E, First a Jesuit, and then a Protestant Minister, 201. Deposed from the Ministry, 202. How he tried the Spirituality of a young Lady, 203.
Leop, An English Gentleman who published a Book of his own and other Prophecies, 153. Miracles attributed to him, 160, 161. Institutes a new Way of administering the Communion, 162.
Lee (Roland), A Priest who married King Henry VIII. with Ann Boleyn, 4.
Leenbess, Author of a Book intitled, Heaven upon Earth, 133. Represented by his Brethren as a Libertine and an Atheist, ibid.
Levi, Antiquity and Signification of it, 65.
Lepriss, Whether the Kings of England had the Gift of curing that Disease, 67.
Leiden (John of), or John Euckhold, Chief of the Anabaptists, 166. Made himself King of Munster, 170.
Liturgy, drawn up in England in King Edward VIth's Reign, 20.
Liturgy, Troubles it caused under Cromwell, 43. Was very nigh abolished by the Authority of the Puritans, ibid. Altered in 1660. ibid.
Lellards (the), Paved the Way to the Reformers in Scotland, 32.
Lucan, A Verse of that Poet which includes the whole System of Spinoza, 225.
Lustration or Purification of the Fields practised in England, 69.

M.

Mack-millan, A Sect Highlander, Chief of an Assembly of Enthusiasts, 162.
Maizeaux (Monsieur Des), Cited, 53.
Mamillarians, An Account of them, 171.
Manzius, Name of a Fanatic, drowned in Switzerland by publick Sentence, 163.
Marriage Ceremonies in England, 82. And Fol.
Marriage (Clandestine), 83, 84.
Marriage, When it was allowed to the English Clergy, 21.
Mary Queen of England, The Support of the Romish Religion in England, 28.
Marion, A Prophet convicted of Imposture, Impiety, &c. 161.
Martyr (Peter), Invited into England by Granmer, 20.
Messalians, A wandering People in Bulgaria and Thracia, 154. Surnamed Satanians, ibid. Accused of divers Crimes, 155. Called Adelphians and Begumies, 156. Contounded with the Bohemians, 157.
Menns, Converted to Anabaptism, is very zealous in reforming the same, 176. His fair Character, 177.
Mennites, Are the Followers of Menns, 176. They disapprove the seditious Deportment of the other Anabaptists, ibid. Divided into two great Branches, 178. Their Doctrine, 178, and Fol.
Mih, An old Priest, who upon owning himself a Protestant, was burnt in Edinburgh, 34.
Millenarians, Hold the System of Jesus Christ's reigning one thousand Years upon Earth, 104.
Miracles, Some very unfit to be related, 111.
Mishus (Michael), When he published his Book, 125.
Muggletenians, Who they have that Name from, 129.
Muyler, Taken by the Anabaptists, 170.
Muntzer, One of the Chiefs of the Anabaptists, 160. Acquires a great Reputation, 167. Is taken and beheaded, 168.
Mylicks, Signification of that Word, 195. Founders of Mylicism, 196.

N.

NARR E, Whether the Kings of Navarre had the Gift of curing the King's-Evil, 67.
Nerthampton (the Marquis of), Takes the Liberty of marrying a second Wife, though his first was living, 18.
Nuptials, See Marriage.

O.

OLLARIANS, Who, 171.
Omphals Psychi, Name of some Monks of Mount Athos, 196.
Oxford. See Universities.

P.

P A R I S (Abbot), Miracles wrought on his Tomb, 163. Austerity of his Life, 164.
Parker, A zealous Reformer in England, 30. Made Archbishop of Canterbury, ibid. Whether his Consecration be valid, ibid.
Pasteraux, The Name of some Sectaries, 146.
Patrons of Churches, Who, 53.
Penn (William), Distinguishes himself among the Quakers, 116. Is imprisoned and set again at Liberty, ibid. His Behaviour to his Father, ibid. Acquires great Credit, 117. How far he extended Tolerancy, ibid. Taken again into Custody on Account of one Book that destroyed the Belief of the Trinity, 123. Gains King James the IIth's Favour, and makes use of it to serve his Sect, 125. Is accused of Papism, 126. A Letter directed to him from King James (then in France) makes him suspected, ibid. His noble and generous Answer, ibid.

Penn

I N D E X.

Penn (William), The King and Parliament grant him the Sovereignty of a Province in America, 126. Builds the Town of Philadelphia, and establishes wholesome Laws therein, ibid.
Pennsylvania, Name of a Province in America given in Property and Sovereignty to William Penn, 126
Pentecost, Why called Whitsunday in English, 70
Pew (the reading) not introduced in the Church till in 1603, 66
Peyrerius, His System of Pre-Adamitism, 189
Philadelphians, Who, 129
Picart (John), Chief of the modern Adamites, 187
Pietists, Are among the Protestants what the Quakers are among the Roman Catholics, 197. Different Sorts of them, ibid. and foll.
Poniatzwa (Christina), Lost the Gift of Prophecy by marrying herself, 141
Poor, What is allowed them by the King on Maiden-day-Thursdays, 67
Pre-Adamites, Peyrerius pretends that there were Men before Adam, 189, and foll. borrowed that System from the Rabins and Cabalists, 193
Presbyterians, Name given formerly to the Presbyterians, 100
Predestinarians, Their Conduct degenerates into Libertinism, 22
Predications. See Sermons.
Presbyterians, Their Beginning, 26. Those of Scotland attack the Pride and Vanity of the English Bishops, 50. Their refusing to subscribe to the Discipline of the Church of England, brought upon them the Name of Puritans, 84. Their Separation from the English Church, only exterior, ibid. Treated as Schismatics by Queen Elizabeth, 97. Their particular Discipline, 107. Their Synods, 110
Priests, Their Ordination in the English Church, 47. Their Functions, ibid., 48, 49
Predius, Supposed to be the first Founder of Adamitism, 186
Prophets of Dauphin, Their Fanaticism first began, 139. Their Imposture discovered, 141 Prophets of the Cevennes or Conventinaries of England. Their Abettors in England, 158. Miracles by which they endeavoured to gain some Credit, 160, 161. Their new Way of celebrating the Lord's Supper, 162 Puritans. See Presbyterians.

Q.

QUAKERS, Take upon them the Name of Evangelists and Apostles, 3. The Spirit the Rule of their Actions, ibid. Cromwell's Attempt to win them over to his Side without Success, 114. Their first general Assembly, ibid. Treated as Madmen and Disturbers of the publick Peace, 115. Exclaim against the Church of England, ibid. Their Doctrine, ibid.
Quakers, Flattered themselves with some Tranquillity at the Restoration, 115. Their refusing to take the Oath to the King renews the Persecution against them, 116. Suspected of harbouring Jesuits among themselves, ibid. Keep no Festivals, ibid. Their Meetings, 119. Express a Contempt for Sciences, and Titles of Honour, 120
Quakers, Their Ministers maintained by voluntary Contributions, 121. Take no Oaths, 122. Have no Sacraments, ibid. Their Marriages, ibid. Their Funerals, 123
Quakers, Meet with the worst of Treatment in America, 126. Their Differences adjusted in a Synod, 128
Quakers, Endeavour to establish their Doctrine beyond Sea, 130. Had but very little Success except in some of the United Provinces, ibid.
Quakers, It is not an easy Task to draw up a complete

System of their Doctrine, 131. What Difference they put between a good Christian and a virtuous Pagan, ibid. Scripture is not the true Guide of Christianity, ibid. 132. Some Jews, Turks and Pagans may be true Members of Christ's Church. 133. Their Women are allowed to preach in publick, ibid.
Quakers, Their Idea of the true Christ, 133. Of the Forgiveness of Sins, 134. War and Murder, ibid. Of exterior Prayers, and Baptism, 135. Of the Resurrection, and the true Kingdom of Heaven, 136
Quakers, The Transmigration of Souls intimated by some of them, 137. Others have renewed Plato's System concerning the Passions and criminal Desires of the Wicked after Death, ibid.

R.

REFORMATION, When it began in England, 3. The Popish Yoke shaken off, 5
Reformation, Bears not such Marks of Divinity as the Beginning of the Christian Religion, 37
Reformation in England, Articles drawn up by the Clergy, 6. Amended and corrected by the King as Head of his Church, ibid. The Frauds practised in regard to Images and Relicks, causes the Suppression of them, 8. The Pope is declared Tyrant and Usurper of the Kingly Power, 9. The reading of the Bible ordered in all the Churches of England, 10. The Mass changed into a plain Communion Service, 13
Reformation in England. The Bishops are ordered to take new Commissions from the King, 14. Alterations made in regard to Festivals, 18. Office of the Church altered, 19. Several Ceremonies abolished, 20. Marriage allowed to Clergymen, 21
Reformation in England, Orders issued out to take up all the Books used in the old Religion, 22. Profession of Faith of the Reformers, 23. Beginning of the English Presbyterians, 26
Reformation (Episcopal), in England, 37
Reformation (Presbyterian) bears the Sway in Scotland, and is very powerful among the English, 37 Remonstrants. See Armenians.
Rhynburghers. See Colagianten, Colden.
Resay (the Society of), Their Number was not to exceed three, 151. Pretended to be intruded with three important Secrets, 152
Resy-Creys (the Confraternity of the), Took its Rise in Germany, 149. Their Aversion for the Pope and Mahomet, 150. Called themselves The Confraternity of the Holy Ghost, ibid.
Ruthuen (Lord), His Answer to the Queen of Scotland, 34

S.

SABBATARIANS, or Seventh-day-men, Their Doctrine, 106
Satanians. See Missionaries.
Scotland, Reformation in that Kingdom, 12
Sermons, Of the English Clergy deserve Praises, 74
Seton, A Dominican Frier considered as one of the first Authors of the Reformation in Scotland, 32
Sevinians, Have that Name from Sevinus, 207. How they explain the Nature and Incarnation of Jesus Christ, 209. Their way of electing their Ministers, 211. Their Sacrament, 213. Are often confounded with the Anabaptists, 174
Soul, Whether material, 227
Spener, His Exclamations against the exterior Worship of the Lutherans, 198. His Severity, ibid.
Spinoza, System of that Philosopher renewed by Hattem and Woutelair, 224.
Stone, Hollow-stone near Cork, which furnished Wine enough to celebrate Mass, 83

O o o

Stouppe

I N D E X.

- Stauppe*, Author of a Book intitled the Religion of the Dutch, 129. Whether he may be accounted for a Man of any Veracity, ibid.
Sunday, Kept very strictly in England, 59
Surplice, Ornament much respected in England, which distinguishes the Clergy from the Laity, 55
Schwenfeldians, Whether they may be reckoned as a particular Sect, 168 Vertians. See Voetius.
Voetius, Chief of a Sect opposed to the Cocceians, 204. His Doctrine, ibid.
Voles, Who they were, 153
Veto Wales, Proposition maintained by that Menno-nite, 178. Is banished, ibid.
Uxians, People that used to ramble about the Country telling Fortunes, 153

T.

- Tandeme* or Tanchelme, Accused of having renewed the Opinion of the antient Adamites, 187
Te Deum, Who is the Author of it, 58
Tenhard, A Visionary and crazy Man, 147. His Doctrine and Followers, ibid.
Theophany, The antient Name of the Festival of the Birth of Jesus Christ, 62
Toland, Mentioned, 217
Trinity, How represented formerly in England, 18

U.

- Valentine* (St.) Humorous Diversion in England the Eve of that Festival, 65, 66
Vergin of Kent (the) See Barton.
Flamingben, Name of a Branch of the Mennonites, 178
Unitarians. See Anti-Trinitarians.
Universities, How long they must study in England to attain to the Degree of a Doctor in Divinity in either University, 56

W.

- Waterlanders*, A Branch of the Mennonites, 177
Whiston, Author of a Map called by him, the Rule of Christian Faith, 31. His Millenarian System, 105 Whitsunday. See Pentecost.
Wicliff, Paves the Way to both the English and Scots Reformers, 32
Wolsey (Cardinal), Persuades King Henry VIII. that his Marriage with Catharine of Arragon was null, 2
Woutelaer, Is accused of having renewed the System of Spinosa, 224

Z.

- ZEILER*, A German Author cited, 168
Zeno, Chief of the Stoicks. His fundamental Maxim, 167
Zingenners, Name given by the Germans to Gypsies, 153

F I N I S.

THE CONTENTS OF VOLUME VI.

D Issertation on the reformed Episcopal Church of England	Page 1
Dissertation concerning the Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of Eng- land.	44
Religious Customs and Ceremonies of the Church of England	45
Feasts	61
Vigils	62
Other Days of Fasting or Abstinence	ibid.
Religious Customs of the Church of England, in the Administration of Sacraments	75
Dissertation concerning the Ecclesiastical Discipline of the Presbyterians	85
An Abstract of the Discipline of the Puritans	107
Dissertation concerning the Religion of the Quakers	111
The Belief of the Quakers	131
Dissertation containing an Historical Description of several Sects and fanatical Meetings, either not numerous, or not much known, or which are not now in Being	140
The Camisars or Fanaticks of the Cevennes	145
Brethren of the Rosy-Cross	149
Bohemians	153
The Prophets or Convulsionaries of England	157
The French Convulsionaries	163
Dissertation on the Religion of the Anabaptists	165
The Menonites	176
Dissertation on the Adamites	186
Dissertation on the Præ-Adamites	189
General Dissertation on several modern mystical Sects	195
The Labadists	201
Dissertation on the Discipline of the Polish Brethren, known by the Name of Unitarians, Anti-Trinitarians, Socinians, &c.	208
Dissertation on the Customs, &c. of those who are called in Holland Collegianten and Rhynsburghers	219
Dissertation on the singular Doctrine of a Sect which is accused of Libertinism and Deism	224

EXPLANATION OF THE SEVERAL PLATES

In the SIXTH VOLUME,

With Directions to the Book-binder for placing the Figures.

No 1.
LA Communion des Anglicans à St. Paul.
No 2.
Le Batême Domestique
Le Serment de la Fille qui se trouve enceinte
Convoi funebre des Anglois
No 3.
Le Mariage clandestin
Ceremonies Funebres Domestiques chés les Anglois
No 4.
Assemblée des Quakers à Londres
A. Quakeresse qui prêche
Assemblée des Quakers, à Amsterdam
A. Quaker qui prêche
No 5.
Monnoies et Medailles frapées par les premiers Ana-baptistes
No 6.
Anabaptiste d'Amsterdam
Quaker d'Amsterdam
Quakeresse qui prêche
Anabaptistes de Oost frise
No 7.
Le Batême des Mennonites
La Benediction qui suit le Baptême
No 8.
La Cene des Anabaptistes, première Figure
La Cene des Anabaptistes, seconde Figure
No 9.
Assemblées nocturnes des Adamites d'Amsterdam
Adamites d'Amsterdam
No 10.
Procession des Flagellans
No 11.
Les Free Massons
No 12.
Assemblée de ceux qu'on appelle Collegiens a Amsterdam
Leur Cene a Rhynsbourg
No 13.
Le Batême de Rhynsbourg

No 1. Page 78.
THE Communion of the English at St. Paul's
No 2. Page 80.
Baptism administered in private Houses
The Breeding Woman's Oath
Funeral Procession of the English.
No 3. Page 83.
The clandestine Marriage
Funeral private Ceremonies among the English
No 4. Page 118.
Assembly of the Quakers in London
A. A Quaker-woman preaching
Assembly of the Quakers in Amsterdam
A. A Quaker preaching
No 5. Page 170.
Money and Medals struck by the first Anabaptists
No 6. Page 179.
Anabaptist of Amsterdam
Quaker of Amsterdam
Quaker-woman preaching
Anabaptist of East-Friesland
No 7. Page 183.
The Baptism of the Mennonites
The Benediction after Baptism
No 8. Page 184.
The Communion of the Anabaptists, first Figure
The Communion of the Anabaptists, second Figure
No 9. Page 187.
Nocturnal Assemblies of the Adamites
Adamites of Amsterdam
No 10. Page 188.
The Procession of the Flagellans
No 11. Page 203.
The Free Masons
No 12. Page 219.
Assembly of those called Collegians at Amsterdam
Their Communion at Rhynsburgh
No 13. Page 222.
The Baptism of Rhynsburgh.

THE CEREMONIES
AND RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS
OF THE
VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD.

VOLUME VII.

THE CEREMONIES
AND RELIGIOUS CUSTOMS
OF THE
VARIOUS NATIONS of the KNOWN WORLD.
Together with
HISTORICAL ANNOTATIONS
And feveral
CURIOUS DISCOURSES.
Equally Instructive and Entertaining.

VOLUME VII.

Containing the VARIOUS SECTS of MAHOMETANS.

Written originally in FRENCH, and illustrated with a large Number of Folio COPPER
PLATES, all beautifully Designed

By Mr. BERNARD PICART;

And curiously Engraved by most of the BEST HANDS in EUROPE.

Translated into ENGLISH.

L O N D O N :

Printed for CLAUDE DU BOSQ, Engraver at the Golden-Head in Charles-Street, Covent-Garden.

M.DCC.XXXIX.

The Night of the Decree

INTRODUCTION

TO THE

HISTORY of MAHOMETISM.

BEFORE we enter into a particular Description of Mahometism, it seems necessary to give some Idea of the Nation which gave Birth to Mahomet. We shall borrow this Introduction from two or three Authors whom ^a we shall often copy, and we frankly own they have a Right to claim it as their own. This Acknowledgment is due both to the said Authors and to the Publick, lest we should become guilty of Plagiarism; a Crime so common in the Republick of Letters, that few Authors are exempt from it, and most Booksellers ready to receive and conceal those Thefts.

Arabia derives its Name from a small District of the Province of Tehama, called Araba, from Yarab Son of Kahtan, and Father of the antient Arabians. Others are of Opinion this large Country has been so called from its Deserts, or from its different Inhabitants, &c. Antient Christian Authors generally give to all the People of Arabia the Name of Saracens, which Word signifies the East, or, according to Bochart, Plunder. This Etymology, as we shall see hereafter, does not please M. Gagnier.

^a The Discourse published by Mr. Sale in 4to at London in 1734, before the English Version of the Coran. The two last Lives of Mahomet, one by Mr. Gagnier still living, the other a Posthumous Work of Mr. Bouhainvilliers.

I. Origin of the ARABIANS.

The Historians of that Nation reckon three sorts of Arabians.

I. The Primitive or Antient Arabians; who were the first Inhabitants of Arabia after the Flood, and their Posterity is either lost, or blended with those who came in after them.

II. The pure and unmix'd Arabians, that is the Children of Kathan or Yöflan, who after the Confusion of Languages settled in that Part of Arabia called Yemen, or Arabia Felix. Kathan had two Sons, Yarab and Giorham. Yarab founded the Kingdom of Yemen; Giorham that of Heyaz or Hegias.

III. The Mostarabians, who became Arabians either by settling amongst them, or by contracting Alliances with the pure Arabians. These Mostarabians are the Offspring of Ishmael Son of Ibrahim or Abraham, from whom Mahomet pretended to draw his Pedigree in a direct Line. We must say something of the two first sorts of Arabians; tho' no more than is necessary to give us a competent Knowledge of the Origin of Mahometism.

Mr. Gagnier is of Opinion, that “ the first of the PRIMITIVE or ANTIENT “ ARABIANS, who settled in Arabia immediately after the Flood, was the said Giorham “ called the First, to distinguish him from another of the same Name. He was “ of the Posterity of Seth, Adam's Son, and saved in Noah's Ark: for though eight “ only are mentioned in Scripture to have been saved in it, yet the Arabian Histo“ rians, says Gagnier, pretend there were eighty Persons so saved. Coming out of the “ Ark he went and dwelt in Arabia, and there his History ends; not the least “ Footstep of his Offspring remains.” Those who are inclined to give Credit to Facts without any Proofs or authentick Records, may believe this Account. Such are also the first pretended Histories of the Chinese, Swedes, &c.

There are also four Tribes, which made so many Nations comprehended under the Name of the Primitive or Antient Arabians, viz. Adits, Thamudits, Giadits, and Tasmits. All of them Children of Sem Son of Noah: for which Reason Sem is called the Father of the Arabians. As the Coran mentions these four Nations to have been dreadful Examples of God's avenging Justice, we must give a short Account of them.

1. Ad, Father of the Adits, was Son of Aws called in Scripture Uz, Son of Aram, Son of Sem, Son of Noah. After the Confusion of Languages, he went to the South Part of Arabia called Hadramawt in a District named Al-Alcaf, that is, moving Sands, which reaches from the Yemen to the Country of Oman.

Schedad, Son of Ad, was the first Ruler or King of the Adits. He governed, according to the Eastern Authors, with much State and Splendor, and was so proud as to flatter himself that his Subjects would honour him as a God. They are as lavish of fabulous Stories concerning this Schedad as the Grecians concerning their Heroes; but the Particulars are useless here. We know nothing of Schedad's Successors: But the Coran relates, that the Adits being fallen into Idolatry, God sent their Brother Hud (whom they pretend to have been Heber) to preach to them the Unity of the supreme Being. Abulfeda gives the following Account of this Mission. Hud, or as most think Heber, looked upon by the Jews also as a great Prophet, was sent by God to the Adits who adored three Idols. These People, as likewise the Thamudits,

Thamudits, were Giants of an immoderate Size, to which the Coran alludes in these Words: Remember the Time in which God made you to succeed the People of Noah, when he enlarged your Stature^a.

Hud preach'd to the Adits; they rejected him, persevered in Wickedness; and God punish'd their Incredulity, by sending against them a choaking Wind seven Nights and eight Days successively. This Wind^b was so scorching and pernicious, that the breathing of it entirely consumed their Bodies. So all those Unbelievers were destroyed, except Hud himself, and those who believed his Prophecies. Hud lived many Years after, and his Tomb is in the Country of Hadramaut, or at Heg'r, in the Territory of Mecca.

The same Tradition relates, that amongst the Adits lived a great Man called Locman (different from the Philosopher of that Name, who was Contemporary to the Prophet David) who was in so high Esteem for his Sanctity, that his Countrymen, labouring under an excessive Drought, which destroyed both Men and Beasts, were persuaded no one else could by his Prayers appease the Anger of God.

This Locman, after the Destruction of the unbelieving Adits, remain'd in the holy Territory of Mecca. God said to him, Chuse what you like best, except Immortality, and I will grant it to you. He answered, Lord, Grant me to live as long as seven Eagles. His Petition was heard, he took a young Eagle newly hatch'd, and when that dy'd a second, and so on to the Number of seven. Each liv'd 80 Years, and Lockman died with the last of them.

The Vulgar, says Abulfeda a Mahometan Historian, roundly believe this Fable. We must own ingenuously, that such simple Credulity may be met with elsewhere. The Arabian Poets have also set forth this Fable in their Verses.

Other Writers of the same Nation speak of those Adits who remain'd at Mecca with Locman, and were not then involved in the Destruction of their Countrymen; but met at last with as tragical an End; for God, incensed at their Wickedness, changed them into Monkies. This is found in the Coran, and may be look'd upon as an allegorical Fiction according to the Genius of the Eastern Nations. Upon the whole, the Arabians, when Mention is made of some old Thing or Story, usually say, by way of Proverb, This was in the times of Ad, as the Grecians did say heretofore, such things happened in the time of SATURN and of OYGES.

2. Thamud, Father of the Thamudits, Son of Gether, Son of Aram, Son of Sem, Son of Noah, after the Confusion of Languages, went to settle in the Country of Heg'r, betwixt the Province of Hegjaz and Syria. His Offspring, like that of Ad, fell into Idolatry; and when they heard the Adits had been destroy'd by a strong scorching Wind, 'tis said, that, to screen themselves from this dreadful Calamity, they chose to dwell in Rocks and Caves. The ADITS, said they impudently, perished only because their Houses were built without Cement. God, in order to their Conversion, sent to them their Brother Saleh, who, we are told must not be confounded with Selah, as Herbelot has done^c in his Oriental Library; but might probably be Phaleg, according to the Opinion of the learned Bochart.

Abulfeda, cited by Sale and Gagnier, relates the Story thus: God sent Saleh to the Thamudits. Saleh was Son of Obaid, Son of Asaph, Son of Mafakh, Son of another Obaid, Son of Hadder, Son of Thamud. Saleh preach'd to them the Unity of God,

^a GelalPdin explains those Words thus: The tallest of them was a hundred Cubits high, and the lowest sixty.

^b See in Chardin and other Travellers the Description of this Wind, and of its bad Effects.

^c Mr. Sale is the Author of this Remark.

very few believed, and these were of the lowest Rank : The others desired the Prophet to work a Miracle which might convert them, engaging themselves to believe on that Condition. They required he should bring forth a she Camel out of a Rock which they shew'd to him. Saleb pray'd and begg'd of God to work this Miracle. Immediately a she Camel, which had newly brought forth, came out of the Rock. The incredulous Thamudits, instead of believing as they had promis'd, did hamstring the she Camel. God being provok'd destroy'd them three Days after, by dreadful Storms, Earthquakes and Thunder, in the midst of which, according to the Arabian Tradition, the Voice of the Angel Gabriel was heard crying out in a frightful manner, Perish all of you. After this Saleb retired into Palestine, but went back afterwards to settle in Hegjaz, and persevered in the Worship of God till he died in the fifty eighth Year of his Age. This Tribe of the Thamudits is propos'd, with that of the Adits to the Mahometans, as an Example of the Consequences of God's Anger against the Wicked and Unbelievers.

3. Gjadis, Thamud's Brother, and Father of the Gjadisits, after the Confusion of Languages, settled in the Country which lies betwixt the two Keblab's^a, that is between Mecca and Medina, and all the flat Country of the Peninsula of Arabia called Al-Yemâm.

4. Tajm Son of Lud, Son of Sem, Son of Noah, Father of the Tajmits, inhabited the same Countries as the Gjadisits : and those two Tribes were united under the Government of Tajm.

Abulfeda gives the following Account of them : “ One of the Posterity of Tajm, who was King of the Tajmits and Gjadisits, a wicked and voluptuous Prince, made a Law to hinder the young Women of the Gjadisits from being married, till he had obtained from them what was heretofore called^b the Right of the Lord of the Manor^c. This highly provoked the Gjadisits, who conspired to rid themselves of that Tyrant : In order to put this Design in Execution, they invited the King and his chief Courtiers to a grand Entertainment, which was prepared in the open Fields. Those Wretches no sooner began to be merry, but the Gjadisits who had hid their Swords in the Sands, rushed upon the Tyrant, and killed him, with all those who had been invited : They likewise murdered the Tajmits, some of whom having escaped the Slaughter, called upon the King of Yemen, or Arabia Felix, to come to their Help : He granted their Demand, attacked the Gjadisits, and utterly destroyed them, and from that Time there is no Mention made in any History either of the Gjadisits or of the Tajmits, so far that when any incredible Story is related, it is pass'd into a Proverb, This is a Story of Tajm.”

This is all the Account given of those antient Arabian Tribes, the Whole of which is uncertain, if not fabulous ; yet serves their Poets and other Authors as a Ground-work for their Poems, Allusions and Proverbs. Even the Historians relate gravely these Fables ; and the Coran itself, if literally understood, looks upon them as the Basis and Foundation of the Doctrine of Morality. We now must introduce a more credible and sure History of the unmixed Arabians.

This Nation is the Posterity of Kathan, Son of Eber, Son of Schalekh, Son of Arphaxad, Son of Sam, Son of Noah. Kathan is the same as Töctan Son of Eber, Brother to Phaleg, mentioned in the Book of Genesis : This is so firmly believed by ^a See hereafter the Meaning of that Word.

^b “ These two Notes are only to let us understand, that our Author, out of Modesty, has put these Words instead of those employ'd by Abulfeda or his Translator ; and for the same Reason I shall not put the pretended English or Scotch Word he mentions ; but this barbarous Custom is easily guessed at.

Saadiab Gaon, that, as Pocock observes, he has put the Name of Kabtan instead of Yoetan in his Arabian Version of the Pentateuch, which Example has been followed by Elmacin, a Christian Writer in his History. Eber, says he, had several Sons, and amongst them Kahtan, Father of the Arabians, who is also called Yoetan. Yoetan having many Children, named three of them to be above the rest, Saba, Awfar, and Hawila, they all inhabited the Yemen.

Kabtan had two Sons, Ya'arab, Father of the Arabians, who dwelt in Yemen; and Gjorham the Second, Father of the Gjorhamites, who lived in the Country of Hegiaz: Ishmael, Son of Abraham, allied himself to them by marrying a Gjorhamite Woman.

Ya'arab had a Son named Saba, mentioned in the Coran. In the Book of Genesis, Saba or Sheba is placed amongst the immediate Children of Yoetan; but the Arabian Historians reckon him only in the third Generation.

Saba was so named, says Abulfeda, from the many Captives he took in the Course of his Victories, he was before called Abdschems, that is, Servant of the Sun. From him came all the Arabian Tribes of Yemen. His Children were Hamiar, Cablan, Amru, Asb'ar, and Amelab; from Hamiar descended the Kodhairs, by Kodha'a King of the Province of Shagr, his Tomb is yet seen on the Top of a Mountain of the same Name; from the Kodhairs came the Calbits, by Calb, who settled at Dawnato'l-Gjandal at Tabuc, and on the Confines of Syria. Zobair Son of Habab, and Zaid Son of Harethba (who was first a Slave, then set at Liberty, and an adoptive Son of Mahomet) were both Calbits. The Marahairs and Gjobainits (a numerous Tribe subdivided into several large Families) who settled in the North of Hegias towards the Sea of Gjodda. The Baluts, likewise the Tanuchites and the Salibites, were Descendants of Kodha'a. The last mentioned lived in the Deserts of Syria, and were destroyed by the Kings of Gassan. Kodha'a was also Father of the Nabbits and of the Odbruits. The Tribe of the Shaabanites descended also from Hamar by his Son Shaaban.

The Posterity of Chalan was very numerous, and made up seven Tribes.

1. Al-Azd, from whom were derived the Gassanites Kings of Syria; the Awfites, Inhabitants of Yathreb, since called Medina; the Khazregiits, who dwelt in the same Place; these two Families embraced Mahometism, and were Mahomet's^a Ansarians, or his auxiliary Troops: The Barekites, the Dawrites, the Atikites, the Gasekites, the Khofaites, so called because they were separated from the other Tribes of the Yemen by the great Inundation, which in the Koran is called Sil-Al-Arem, they were obliged to retire into the Hegjaz, and settled at Batn-Marr near Mecca, where they became so powerful, that they usurped the Temple and Principality of Mecca, from the Children of Ishmael, who had enjoyed it ever since the Destruction of the Gjoramites: They maintained themselves in Possession till Abu-Gabshan was cheated out of it by Cosa, one of Mahomet's Ancestors, at a drunken Bout in the Town of Alfaiet. The Poets, says Abulfeda, made themselves merry on this Loss of the^b Ca'aba, and their Verses, according to Gagnier, a Man very well versed in the Arabian Language, are ingenious, but would not be agreeable in a Translation; we must take his Word for it. However Aba-Gabshan's repenting his Bargain when 'twas too late, became a Proverb: and the Khazaites were turned out of Mecca, and obliged to retire into their old Quarters at Batn-Marr.

^a Ansar, Protector or Defender. See Herbelot, &c.

^b The Temple of Mecca was so called.

2. Al-Tai, who settled in Nag'd, a Province of the Hegjaz, near the Hills Agja and Salma, since called Mountains of Tai, who was also nam'd Odad: from him came the Families of Gjodailab, Nabhan, Bowlan, Salaman, Hana, and Sodus.

3. Madbegi, from whom sprang the Families of Kawlan, Gjanb, Awa, Sa'ad (surnamed Ab-Al-Afbira, Father of the numerous Family, because he lived to ride on Horseback at the Head of three hundred Men, all of them his own Children and Grand-Children) Gjofits, Zobaidits, Al-Nachaits and Anas, of whose Posterity was Amar, Mahomet's Companion.

4. Hamdan, from whom descended the Family of Rabia, who were in high Repute both before and after the Establishment of Mahometism.

5. Kenda had that Name given him for his ungrateful Behaviour towards his Father Gofair; he was before called Thaw'r; he settled in the Yemen joining the Province of Hadbramut; and was killed by Moawia: from him sprang the Families of Sasafec and Sacun.

6. Morad, Father of all the Moradites, who inhabit the Mountains of the Yemen in the Neighbourhood of Zabid.

7. Anmar, from whom descended the Bagjalits and Cbata'anites. All these were the Posterity of Chalan Son of Saba, from whose other Children came Lachm and Gjodham, Children of Amru: the Ashaarites, from Ashaar; and the Amelits, from Amela; these last fled to Syria about Damascus, into a Mountain called to this Day Amela, at the Time of the above-mentioned Inundation, about the Reign of Alexander the Great.

All these Tribes had their own Kings for some Ages; Mahomet and his Successors brought them over to Mahometism, some by Persuasion, others by Force; having first destroyed the Jews, who from the Time of Jeshua, or rather from their Dispersion, were grown very powerful, and had gained many Profelytes in Arabia: but as seventy Years before one Joseph Dhu-Nowas, an Arabian Prince and a Jew, had treated the Christians with the utmost Severity; Mahomet served the Jews in the like manner, and forced them to retire out of Arabia; He was more humane towards the Christians, only laid a Tax upon them, and allowed them the free Exercise of their Religion.

We shall now introduce an Account of the Origin and Progress of the Most Arabians, or Arabians mixt, such as may be gathered from the Genealogy of Mahomet, borrowed from Gagnier in his Introduction to the Life of that false Prophet.

The GENEALOGY of MAHOMET.

“ Mohammed, or Mahomet, who was also called Abul Kasem, that is, Father of “ Kasem”, was Son of Abd'ollab, Son of Hasbem, Son of Abd Menaf, Son of Cosa, “ Son of Kelab, Son of Morrah, Son of Ca'ab, Son of Lowa, Son of Galeb, Son
 “ of Febr, Son of Malek, Son of Al-Nadbr, Son of Kenanab, Son of Hozaimah, “ Son of Modreka, Son of Al-Yas, Son of Modbar, Son of Nazar, Son of Ma'ad, “ Son of Adnan.

“ So far all the Arabian Historians agree; but some pretend there were about “ forty Generations betwixt Adnan and Ishmael, others reckon but seven: Abulfeda

‡ The Arabians are often called by the Name of their first Son.

“ thinks it more probable that Adnan was Son of Odd, Son of Odad, Son of Al-Yesa, “ Son of Al-Homaisa, Son of Salaman, Son of Nabet, Son of Hamal, Son of Kidar, “ Son of Ishmael, Son of Ibrahim (or Abraham) : Ishmael was also called Aarako'l “ Tharam, which signifies, a Spring of Water, from the Fountain which the Angel “ shew'd to Agar in the Desert^a. This they pretend is the Well now called Zem- “ Zem, near the Ca'aba, or famous Temple of Mecca.

“ The direct Line of Mahomet's Descent from Ibrahim is thus related by Gagnier, “ Ishmael was born in the Land of Canaan^b, when Abraham was eighty six Years old:
 “ His Mother was Hagar, Servant Maid to Ibrahim; Ishmael was circumcised with “ his Father at thirteen Years of Age: Isaac being born a Year after by Sara, the “ Wife of Ibrahim, Ishmael and his Mother were banished to Mecca. This “ Town was inhabited by the Gjoramites. . . . or pure Arabians; Ishmael entered into “ an Alliance with them, and married ^c Ra'ala Daughter of Madbad King of the “ Gjoramites, and had by her twelve Sons, from whom sprang all the Most or Mixt “ Arabians, otherwise called Ishmaelites from their Father, or Hagarenians from Ish- “ mael's Mother. As to the Word Saracens, there is no Reason to think it is de“ rived from Sarah, nor from a Word which signifies Thieving, a common Vice “ amongst the Arabians, as St. Jerome takes Notice; but, as Pocock^d learnedly “ proves it, from another which signifies the East; so that Saracens only mean “ Eastern Nations: As to the Words Arabia and Arabian, the same Pocock may be “ consulted.

“ Hagar died at Mecca some time after her Son Ishmael's Marriage, and was bu“ ried at a Place called Hagira. Ibrahim received a Command from God, says Gagnier
 “ and the Arabian Historians, to build the Ca'aba. . . . which he performed with his “ Son Ishmael, who furnished the Stone, and work'd with Ibrahim. This last men“ tioned Patriarch, whilst at Work, stood upon a Stone, which is to this Day called “ Ibrahim's Footstool, and on which remains the Impression of his Feet. This “ Temple subsisted till the Koraishites demolished it in the thirty fifth Year of Ma- “ homet's Life, and built a new Temple, about two thousand seven hundred and “ ninety Years after the Building of the first. Ishmael lived one hundred and thirty “ seven Years, died at Mecca, and was buried in the Tomb of his Mother Hagar.

“ 1. The Arabian Historians mention only two of Ishmael's twelve Sons. The “ eldest was Nabet, who succeeded his Father in the Command or Custody of the “ Temple. After his Death the Gjoramites usurped that Function, and kept it about “ three hundred Years, when they were destroyed by Sicknefs, such as the bloody “ Flux and other Distempers in Punishment of their Sins, and then the Ishmaelites “ recovered their antient Right.

2. “ The second Son of Ishmael was Kidar, the same who is mentioned ^e in several “ Places of Scripture, and Mahomet's Pedigree from Ishmael is continued by him:
 “ This was known by the Prophetick Light which appeared bright on his Face, as “ it had done on his Forefathers from Adam. . . . Kidar married a hundred Wives out
 “ of the Daughters of Isaac, but they all proved barren: At last he learnt by a Dream

^a See Genesis, ch. xxi. v. 19.

^b See Abulfeda in Mahomet's Life: The Coran, Sur. 37. v. 103, and following, says, that Ishmael was to have been sacrificed: the Bible says Isaac.

^c The Scripture says to the contrary, that he married a Wife out of the Land of Egypt.

^d See Pocock, p. 33, 34 and 35 in his Notes.

^e See Genesis, c. xxv. Jerem. c. xlix. 1 Chron. c. i. Ezek. c. xxvii. Psal. cxx, &c.

“ that ^a Fakhera, Daughter of the King of the Gjoramites, of the Posterity of Seth,
 “ was to be his Wife ; he married her, and had a Son, viz.

“ 3. Hamal, who was born in the Life-time of Jacob He had a Son named “ 4. Nabet.

“ 5. Salaman.

“ 6. Homaisa.

“ 7. Al-Yesa.

“ 8. Odad, so called from his strong Voice ; he was, they say, the first of the “ Ishmaelites who made use of a Reed to write, and excelled in that Art above all “ his Contemporaries. His Son ^b was “ 9. Od.

“ 10. Adnan who had two Sons, Acc Father of the Accits, and “ 11. Ma'ad, so named from his Victories and the Spoils he took from his Ene“ mies. Zohari relates that Moses hearing of the Depredations committed by “ Ma'ad's Children upon the Israelites, called thrice upon God for Help against “ them, without receiving any Answer, which wondering at, and complaining of,

 “ he was answered, that from that People the best of God's Servants was to be born “ (Mahomet). We are likewise told that Bocht-Naser ^c (Nebuchadnezzar) having “ resolved to conquer Arabia, and to put their Prophets to Death, and destroy “ their Temple, ordered Jeremiah to seize Ma'ad (of whom Mahomet was to come)
 “ to bring him into Syria, and hinder him from cohabiting with his Wife ; which “ being performed by Jeremy, yet Nebuchadnezzar set Ma'ad at Liberty, and sent “ him back into the Province of Tchemab, in which Mecca is situated Ma'ad
 “ had a Son out of the Prophet's Genealogy named Kodba'ab, Father of the Kodaites,
 “ and in the direct Line.

“ 12. Nazar who had four Sons Anmar, Ayad, Rabiab, and “ 13. Modbar (in the Pedigree of Mahomet) who tho' younger was established

 “ by his Father in the Dignity of Master of the Temple". (Gagnier relates a long Story about the last Will and Testament of Nazar, the Judgment pronounced by Al-Afa'a, some Particulars of the four Brothers Journey to Al-Afa'a, and of their Stay with him ; of which Herbelot gives likewise an Account with some Variations ; which we omit as useless to the Pedigree of Mahomet, or of the Most Arabians") “ Modbar in his old Age had a Son

“ 14. Called Al-Yas, that is Despair, because his Father had lost all Hopes of “ having a Son. Al-Yas was also named Habib, that is, the Well-beloved he “ brought back the Ishmaelites to the Religion of their Forefathers, and gave a “ new Lustre to the Ca'aba ; for which Reason the Arabians compared him to Loc- “ man, called him the Prince of the People, and Lord of his Tribe. Nothing was “ done without him.

“ Out of the Genealogical Line Modbar had another Son, called Kais, or Ailan, “ tho' some pretend that Ailan was Modbar's Horse or Dog, others say Ailan was “ Brother to Al-Yas and Father of Kais : However that be, Kais became very il“ lustrious by the Number of Tribes and Families sprung from him, viz. the “ Hawaxenites, amongst whom Mahomet was brought up ; the Children of Kelab,

^a Fakhera signifies precious.

^b Out of Mahomet's Line Odad had another Son, named Tai. See Vita Mahom. p. 120.

^c Such is the Ignorance of the Arabian Historians, they make Nebuchadnezzar and Jeremy Contemporaries to Moses.

“ who were Lords of Aleppo and Kings of Meusel; the Families of Amer, of Saasaa,
 “ and of Ghafagia, which last mentioned were in Abulfeda's Time Lords in the Pro“ vince of Erak; the Children of Rabia, of Gjofm, of Helal, of Thakif.... of “ Nomeir, of Rabela, of Mazen, of Gatjan, of Abas; the Tribes of Dhobian and “ of the Abasits, with those of Solaim and of the Algjaits. The Dhobianits and “ Abasits entered into a War which lasted forty Years about two Horses called Dahes
 “ and Cabra, who had run against two others named Al-Chara and Al-Fana, du“ ring which Antara the Abasite, and Hefu the Dhobianite signalized themselves, “ the first by his intrepid Courage, the second by a boundless Liberality. The “ Length of this War gave rise to a Proverb about Law-suits not easily decided, which “ are said to be like the War of Dahes and Cabra. Adwan, whose Tribe inhabited “ Taief before the Tbakistcs was likewise a Descendant of Kais.

“ 15. But to return to Mahomet's Pedigree, Al-Yas had a Son called Amer, and “ surnamed Modrecab, that is, the Pursuer or Obtainer, because all the good Qualities “ and Virtues of his Ancestors, (besides the prophetick Light shining in his Face as “ it did in all Mahomet's direct Line) were re-united in his Person: he was for “ many Years without a Wife, but at last he married his Cousin-German, having “ been advised in a Dream to do it.

Al-Yas, in the Collateral Line, had another Son named Tabecba.... from whom were derived the Tribes or Families of Tamin, Rabba, Datbah, and Mozaina, all of which were called Kbendafits, from their Mother Kbendaff^a.

“ 16. Amer or Modrecab had a Son in the direct Line called Kboxaimab; and in “ the collateral another named Hodbail: from him sprang all the Hodbailits, and a“ mongst them Abdo'lla one of Mahomet's Companions, the Poet Abu-Dhowaid, &c.

“ 17. Kboxaimab, in the prophetick Line, had a Son named Kenana, from the “ Word Ken, which signifies a Covering, a Shade, because he protected his People:
 “ His other Children were Hawn (from whom came the Tribes of Addabal and of “ his Brother Al-Daish) and Afad Father of the Cabelites and of the Dowdanites.

“ 18. Kenana's Son Malek was surnamed Al-Nadbr for his Beauty.... in the “ Collateral Line Kenana had several other Sons, viz. Mal-Kân, Abd-manab, Amrou
 “ and Amer, from each of whom sprang several Tribes.....

“ 19. Malek's only Son was Fehr, surnamed Kerajsh, by Reason of his Boldness “ and Courage; others are of Opinion Al-Nadbr had that Name given him by “ God, upon account of his plain and frank Temper; lastly, some Authors derive “ that Word from Karasha, which signifies to assemble or gather, because Cofa, “ Ferb's great Grandson, got together all the Descendants of Ferb to obtain by “ their Help the Possession of the Caa'ba.....

“ 20. Galeb was Ferb's Son in the direct Line: in the Collateral Ferb had two “ other Sons, viz. Mohareb, Father of a Tribe of the same Name, and Al-Hareth, “ from whom sprang the Family of Al-Chologe, whose Descendant was Abu-Obaidah, “ one of the ten Martyrs mentioned in the History of Mahomet.

“ 21. Galeb had a Son in the direct Line called Lowa, and one in the collateral “ named Taiem or Al-Adram, that is, without a Beard, whose Descendants were “ nicknamed Adramits.

“ 22. Lowa had six Sons, viz. Caab in the direct Line, and in the collateral Al- “ Hareth, who died without Issue, Saad, Hofaima, Amer and Afama, who were

^a That is who walks proudly.

“ Founders of as many Tribes: Amru who was killed by Ali in the War of the “ Ditch was of the Posterity of Amer. Ca'ab enjoyed a great Authority amongst “ the Arabians, he changed the Name of the sixth Day of the Week from Arnba, “ which signifies a Day of Joy and Pleasure to Gjama'a, which means a Day of “ Assembly, and consecrated that Day to divine Worship, calling the People together,
 “ and instructing them in the Law of God, and foretelling the Coming of Mahomet, “ (if we give any Credit to Mahometan Legends).... But after Ca'ab's Death, which “ happened five hundred and twenty Years before the War of the Elephant^a, at “ which Time Mahomet was born, all his Instructions and Exhortations were “ forgot.

“ 23. Morra was in the Prophet's Genealogical Line Son of Ca'ab, who had also “ two other Sons, Hofais (Father of the Sabamits, and likewise of the Gjemachits, “ from whom came the two Brothers Omaia and Obba, sworn Enemies of Mahomet)
 “ and Ada Father of the Adits, from whom descended Sa'id one of the ten Mar“ tyrs, and Omar one of the Califes who succeeded the Prophet.

“ 24. Morra had in the direct Line a Son named Kelab, or Hakim, or Adwa.....
 “ and two more in the collateral, viz. Taiem (from whom descended Talha one
 “ of the ten Martyrs, and Abu-Beer surnamed Al-Seddick the faithful Witness, who “ was Mahomet's Father-in-Law, and his Successor in the Dignity of Califf) and “ Tokdba, from whom sprang the Makhsumits.....

“ 25. Kelab, in the Collateral Line, had a Son named Zabra, Father of the Zabrits, “ from which Tribe came Sa'ad one of the ten Martyrs, and Amenab Mother of “ Mahomet: But in the Genealogy of the Prophet, Kelab's Son was Zaid, otherwise “ called Kofa, upon Account of his Beauty, Learning, Love for Truth, and glorious “ Achievements.... he married Haia Daughter of Halil, who besides being Master “ of the Ca'aba, was also chief Ruler of Mecca. Kofa found Means to obtain “ the spiritual and temporal Government, took upon him the Name of King^b,
 “ and left three Sons, viz.

“ 26. In the direct Line Abd-Menaf, or At-Moghaira, or Al-Kamar, that is, the “ Moon, by Reason of his Beauty, he was declared Prince in his Father's Life“ time.... died at Mecca, and was buried in the Hill named Al-Hagian, which “ became a common Burying-Place. Kofa's Sons in the Collateral Line were Abdo'l- “ Dar, (Founder of the Family of Sbaiba, from which descended Al-Nadbre one of “ Mahomet's most inveterate Enemies, and put to Death by his Order after the Battle “ of Bedr) and Abdo'l-Ozza, from whom came Al-Zobair, one of the ten Martyrs,
 “ and Khadigja Wife of the Prophet.

“ 27. Abdmenaf had in the Genealogical Line a Son called Amra, surnamed “ Al-Ola the Sublime, by reason of his high Station, or Hasbem, that is the Bread- “ Breaker, because in a Time of Dearth he furnished his Subjects with Bread....
 “ he died at Gaza. In the collateral Line the other Sons of Abd-Menaf were Abd- “ shems (Father of the Ommiads by his Son Ommiah, from whom descended Ocka, “ put to a violent Death by Mahomet, after the Battle of Bedr.) Al-Motalleb (Fa“ ther of the Al-Motallabits) and Nawfal (Father of the Nawfalites.)

^a According to this Chronology, Ca'ab lived in the first Age of Christianity, before the Destruction of Jerusalem.... but the Time of his Birth, or how long he liv'd, is not known.

^b Gagnier relates the Story of Kofa, his obtaining the Possession of Mecca and the Ca'aba two different Ways; the Curious may consult him.

“ 28. Hassem had only one Son named Sbaiba Al-Hamd, that is Venerable old “ Age because he had, when born, Gray-hairs ; he was likewise call'd Abdo'l-Mo- “ talleb, because that having lost his Father in his Childhood, he was brought up
 “ by his Uncle Al-Motalleb. He was the first Arabian who dy'd his Hair black :
 “ God revealed to him where was the Well of Zemzem about five hundred “ Years after the Gjoramites had thrown into it the Swords and Armour of Kolaab,
 “ the two golden Antelopes^a, several other precious Things, filled it up, and fled “ into Arabia Felix. Abdo'l-Motalleb went about digging up the Earth, with his “ only Son Al-Hareth ; the Work was interrupted by the Koraisbits, he made a “ Vow to God that if he sent him ten Sons more to help him, one of them should “ be sacrificed, in the mean while he kept Possession of the Place, and having had “ eleven Sons more, he began to dig again in Spight of all Opposition, he found
 “ the above-mentioned Treasure, and at last the Spring of Water^b, of the Swords
 “ and Armour he made an Iron-gate to the Ca'aba, and melting down the golden “ Antelopes, he covered the Gate with gold Plates^c . . .

“ 29. Abdo'l-Motalleb's Son in the Genealogical Line of the Prophet was Ab- “ do'llah, the handsomest of all the Koraisbits ; all the Women were deeply in “ Love with him, infomuch that Joseph's History with Potifar's Wife was often “ renew'd, and the Night in which he consummated his Marriage with “ Amenab, two hundred Arabian Women died (of Grief) without having ever “ been married. Abdo'llah had twelve Brothers and six Sisters, but four of the “ Brothers only, viz. Abu-Taleb, Abdo'l-Ca'abah, Haniza and Al-Albas, and one “ Sister named Safia, lived to the Time of the Islamism^d.

“ The Time of Mahomet's Birth drawing near, all the Arabian Witches spoke
 “ of it ; Satan's Throne was destroyd, all the Idols were thrown down, a great “ Famine with which the Koraisbites had long been afflicted, ceased by a sudden “ Fruitfulness of the Earth, and that Year was named the Year of Liberty and “ Joy ; all the Arabian Women desired Male Children, in hopes of bringing forth
 “ the so long expected Prophet ; lastly, God^e destroyed the Masters of the Elephants
 “ . . . in the following Manner.

“ The Abyssins or Ethiopians, (having over come the Hemiarits, and forced their “ last King Dhu-Nowas, a Jew and a cruel Persecutor of the Christians, to fling him“ self into the Sea,) were at that Time Masters of the South Part of Arabia. One “ Abrahah sent by Negus King of Ethiopia to be Governor of that Country, grew “ jealous of the Glory of the Temple at Mecca, he therefore built a magnificent “ Church in Sana'ab, the Place of his Residence, and Capital Town of Arabia “ Felix, and ordered all the Arabians to come to it in Pilgrimage instead of going “ to Mecca. But an Arabian of the Tribe of Kenan came privately into the Tem“ ple and did his Occasions in it ; Abrahah highly incensed at this Insult and “ Prophanation, swore he would revenge that Affront by destroying the Temple
 “ at Mecca ; he took the Field with a powerful Army, which was still more “ formidable by a prodigiously large Elephant^f, on which Abrahah himself was ^a A wild Beast in the Indies about the Bigness of a Roe-buck.

^b The same which the Angel shew'd to Agar, Ishmael's Mother.

^c The first Gold with which the Ca'aba was adorned.

^d See hereafter the Establishment of Mahometism.

^e See the Koran, Sur. 105. v. 2.

^f Some Authors say there were thirteen Elephants in that Army.

“ mounted

“ mounted ; But when he was come within a Day’s Journey of Mecca ac“ cording to Abdo’l-Motaleb, his Prediction and Prayer The Elephant “ would not go towards Mecca, but turned his Back to it, all possible Means were “ used without Success to make the Beast advance towards Mecca; Part of the “ Army was drowned by a Torrent which drove them into the Sea, the rest were “ killed by an Army of Birds black and white, with a Mixture of green and “ yellow, which held in their Claws and Beak three Stones which they darted “ upon the Head of the Men, and pierced them through from Top to Bottom ;
 “ Abraham was struck with a Distemper which caused his Body to fall in Pieces:
 “ One Man only, viz. Abu Yaksum escaped to bring the News to the King of “ Ethiopia, which he had no sooner done, but he was killed by one of the said “ Birds”. Such are the Wonders which, if we credit the Arabian Legendary Authors, God wrought for the Preservation of the Temple of Mecca; and were the Fore-runners of Mahomet’s Birth, who was Abdollah’s Son by his Wife Amena, and was conceived on a Friday Night in a Country-house, within the three Days on which Sacrifices were offered in the Vale of Muna, at the Time precisely when the Arabians performed the Ceremony of throwing Stones against Satan, in the 881st Year of the Æra of Alexander the Great. We cannot doubt but most of our Readers will look upon this Account as fabulous, yet some Facts may be true which a Man of Mahomet’s Turn of Mind might easily improve into Miracles, as others have done, and will appear by the following Dissertations.

A DISSERTATION.

The Life of MAHOMET.

WE shall follow in this and the following Dissertations the same Method of which we have made use in the whole Work. To a faithful Account of what has been related by Historians, we shall now and then subjoin our own Reflections; and as we cannot but condemn this Impostor, whose Religion has like a furious Torrent laid waste Asia, Africa, and a great Part of Europe; we shall likewise impartially consider, the artful Proportion of Mahomet's bold Undertaking, with the common Notions of Mankind, (chiefly of his Countrymen the Arabians) with their predominant Passions and Customs, with the then divided State of Christendom; and to what Purpose he has employed Enthusiasm and Miracles.

The foregoing Introduction is a Heap of Fables, or at least of uncertain Facts, to which the Mussulmen give Credit, as most other Nations do to the Accounts of their Origin fetched from the most remote and dark Recesses of Antiquity. Our Readers must not expect to meet with exact Truth in this Abstract of Mahomet's Life ^a. This new Lawgiver like Numa and some others, without any other Miracle, has settled his Religion by a due Regard to the Dispositions, Ignorance, Prejudices, Interest and Policy of the People, helped with no small share of Enthusiasm. Fabulous, uncertain, erroneous Stories, are necessary to a Worship so human and carnal: But that such unwarrantable Means should ever have been used for the Sake of vile Interest and Lucre amongst Christians, is a deplorable Misfortune, no ways to be imputed to our Holy Religion, but to the rapacious Avarice of some Miscreants, and the over credulous Disposition of the People.

Mahomet was born at Mecca, in the Year of the Elephant ^b, the 571 of Christ, the 4th of Justin the Younger at Break of Day, on a Monday the eighth of the first Month Raby which answers the ninth of April of the said Year 571 ^c, according to Boulain Villiers. The Historians who are so exact in setting down the Day and Hour of his Birth, relate several Wonders with which it was accompanied: As a Star notified the Nativity of Christ, they likewise relate that all the Cities and Villages of Arabia and the neighbouring Countries, were dazzled with an extraordinary bright Light: The new Prophet was no sooner born, but he knelt down, and raising his Eyes and Hands to Heaven, distinctly pronounced these Words, "God is great, there is no other God, and I am the only Apostle of God": He had no Foreskin, an evident Proof, they say, that he was a true Faithful; Satan and his Angels were cast down into the bottomless Pit, and their Oracles, Divinations, and Witchcraft ceased^a; the sacred Fire kept up by the Wisemen of Persia was extinguished; a large Lake dried up, and the Walls of the Palace of Chosroes King of Persia, were thrown down by a violent Earthquake, which fore-boded the Overthrow of the Persian Monarchy by an Arabian.

^a The Mussulmen have invented innumerable Fables to honour their Prophet, and some Christians have imitated them, in order to blacken his Character.

^b See Gagnier in the Life of Mahomet. See the foregoing Dissertation at the End.

^c See Mahomet's Life, p. 194. See also Bayle in the Note (a) on the Article of Mahomet, about the various Opinions concerning the Year of his Birth.

On the seventh Day, his Grandfather Abdēt Motaleb gave an Entertainment to the Koraishtes, and named him Mohammed, or as we pronounce it, Mahomet^b. About the same Time the young Prophet's Father died without leaving him any Patrimony; but Halima nursed him, and received many signal Favours from God upon that Account, and the whole Country had a Share in those heavenly Blessings. The Babe was endowed with a constant Cleanliness, which other Children never have, and was an Emblem of his religious Purity: This last Virtue he was possessed of in an eminent Degree; and it was bestowed upon him by the Ministry of two Angels, who whilst he kept Flocks in the Country with his Foster-Brother, took hold of him, laid him on the Ground, ripped up his Belly and Breast, from whence they took out a black Spot, washed him all over with Snow-water, filled his Breast with Light, closed it up, and he was healed in an Instant. This Story may be allegorically explained, and the black Spot mean Original Sin, of which the Coran makes mention^c, as of a heavy Load which weighed down Mahomet's Back, till he was thus freed from it. However his Companion surprized at this wonderful Event, acquainted his Mother with it:^d She found Mahomet standing in the same Place, with his Eyes lifted up to Heaven, and his whole Body darting forth Rays of Light: She told her Husband the whole Story; he took it as a Fit of the Falling-Sickness, and was the first Author of the Report, so much spread since, that the grand Prophet of the Mussulmen was afflicted with that Distemper: Others pretend that he was either hypocondriack or possessed; and his Nurse Halima parted with him, and gave him back to his Mother; saying, She was afraid the Devil was in him. 'Tis more likely that Mahomet was an Impostor and an Enthusiast, who knew when and how to counterfeit Inspiration and Prophecy, than that he could himself make use of his Fits at every proper Occasion, or that the Arabians were such Fools or Bubbles as to mistake a natural Distemper for a Divine Inspiration. Be that as it will, the Scar of this angelical Wound reached from the Pit of his Stomach, to the Bottom of his Belly, and he had it to his Dying-day, if we believe the Arabian Legends.

Mahomet being six Years old lost his Mother, and two Years after his Grandfather, and was under the Tuition of an Uncle^e, who carried him some Years after into Syria, where Bobaira with another^f wicked Monk named Sergius owned him as God's Apostle, and entered into a close Confederacy to propagate this new Fanaticism. Sergius is supposed to have lent a helping Hand in the Com-

^a The Heathen Oracles have also been said to have ceased when Christ was born.

^b Mohammed signifies praised or glorified. He was the fourth Ishamite of that Name.

^c Chap. 94.

^d Maracci relates this Story in a different Manner:

^e his Name was Abu-Taleb.

^f Some are of Opinion Sergius and Bobaira were one and the same. See Boulain Villers, p. 264, and Prideaux in his Life of Mahomet.

position of the Koran ^a. Bohaira pretended that a Cloud shaded the young Prophet from the Sun, that when he sat down, the Trees put on a new Verdure to cover him; and that he had seen the Seal of Prophecy imprinted on his Shoulders: Go back, "said he to Abu-Taleb, Uncle and Tutor of the Child, and take Care " he does not fall into the Hands of the Jews, for this Child is to perform great Things " by the Appointment of God." Abu-Taleb followed the Advice, and went back to Mecca.

Beauty, Wisdom, Modesty, Wit, and a decent Behaviour were the Ornaments of Mahomet in his Youth, and acquired him the Name of Al-Amin, that is the Faithful. At fourteen Years of Age, others say at twenty, he served under Abu-Taleb in the Wars of the Koraisbites. When twenty-five Years old, he was Factor or Agent for Khadigia a rich Widow of the same Tribe, who drove a great Trade, and he undertook a second Journey into Syria to manage her Affairs. At Bosra in which Town was Bohaira's Convent, he wrought new Miracles before him, and another Monk called Nestor; these Monks struck with Amazement, and two more Persons of the same Stamp believed in Mahomet, tho' not yet manifested to the World, and became the first Mussulman.

Khadigia's Affairs being dispatched, Mahomet went back to Mecca, guarded by two Angels, who covered him with their Wings; the Widow saw them, and shewed to them her Companions: This wonderful Vision, or rather a Passion which sometimes seizes amorous Widows upon the decline, and makes them see every thing in a different Light from other People, joined to the Beauty and promising Strength of Mahomet, and to some other Miracles of which one of his Slaves was Witness, made her court him in plain Terms to marry her, which he did two Months and twenty Days after his Return: So far the new Apostle had only Monks, Slaves, and Women for Witnesses of his pretended Mission.

This Marriage made the Prophet very easy in his Circumstances, for fifteen Years or thereabouts he enjoyed the Leisure which accompanies Riches; his Wife brought him four Boys who died under Age, and four Girls who were afterwards married: He often retired during that time, like Numa and other Legislators, into a Cave in the Neighbourhood of Mecca, and there framed the System of a Religion, which has spread itself and done infinite Mischief throughout the East: At last in the fortieth Year of his Age he became a Prophet, and in that Quality preached to the Red and the Black, that is, to all Nations ^b. He was ordered to establish the Law of God as it is contained in the Koran, and to abolish the antient Religions chiefly Paganism. Judaism and Christianity he only intended to reform according to Gagnier ^c, tho' for want of having a right Notion of the Trinity, he and his Followers have, and do still, give to Christians the Name of Infidels: On the other side Boulain Villers ^d gives such a description of the Christianity of those Times, as makes it highly probable Mahomet aimed at the Destruction of it; and Gagnier ^e, seems to be of Opinion, that Boulain Villers himself preferred Mahometism to it: These two Writers may be easily reconciled if we consider the vast Distinction which is betwixt professing Christianity, and living as a Christian ought to do. Be that as ^a See Boulain-Villiers, p. 222. who tells a Story which he does not believe himself.

^b See Gagnier, in his Life of Mahomet, Book 1. Chap. 7.

^c See Gagnier in the same Place.

^d See Boulain Villers in his Life of Mahomet, p. 237. and following.

^e See Gagnier in his Preface to the Life of Mahomet.

it will, the new Apostle in his motley spiritual and carnal Religion, has borrowed some few good Things from the Christians, which he blended with many bad ones of his own Invention : But he never allowed the Appellation of true Believers to any that did not receive the Koran, by which he pretends to have restored the Ijhlamism, that is, the Religion of Abraham and the Prophets, as it is written in the said Koran, Chap. 2. This pretended Prophet received his Mission and the true prophetic Gifts by a Vision which he had in the Night, called of the Decree. He retired usually to his Cave in the Month Ramadhan, in the Night betwixt the three and four and twentieth of it, which was about the Middle of our January, Gabriel appeared to Mahomet and said to him, ^a Read. The Prophet answering, I cannot read; the Angel replied, Read in the Name of God who has made the Posterity of Adam from a little congealed ^b Blood, for your Lord deserves infinite Veneration, he has taught Man the use of the Pen, he has taught him what he knew not. This happened in the Mountain Hora ^c, in which was the above-mentioned Cave : Going up to the Middle of the Mountain, a Voice came from Heaven to declare to him that he was the Apostle of God, and that Gabriel was the Person who spoke to him. After this Vision Mahomet fainted, being unable to bear the Glory of the Angel ^d, to prevent which, he appeared in a human Shape. Kbadigia was made acquainted of this Apparition by her Husband, her Love for him made her easily believe it, and spread the News with Joy and Zeal : She told it to Waraka, who became a Witness for and a Forerunner of the new Prophet and his Law. God and his Angels conversed familiarly henceforth with Mahomet, who having received in the fore-mentioned Vision the Rite and Ceremony of Ablution with Prayer; Kbadigia was the first who complied with these religious Customs in the Presence of her dear Prophet.

Profelytes came on apace, Ali Zaid, Mahomet's Slave, Abu Becre and several others mentioned by the Writers of Mahomet's Life, were the first. Yet the new Prophet did not publish his Mission till three Years after, either because he was then contriving how to succeed in his Designs, or rather because Historians have concealed several Facts, which if known might have discovered the secret Springs of this now seeming wonderful Revolution : But at the Expiration of that Term, a new Apparition was seen, by which he was so much frightened, ^e that he came hastily down from the Mountain Hora, crying out to his Followers, Wrap me up. But Gabriel stopt him in God's Name, and put into his Hands these Words of the Koran ^f.
 “ You who are wrapped up, rise, go and Preach, give Glory to the Lord, purify your “ Cloaths, avoid Abomination, (that is Idolatry) hope not to receive much more than
 “ you have given, rest in (or trust to) God.” Hitherto Mahomet had only exhorted mildly and as a Friend, but after this Order he preached publicly and with Authority; some of his own Family opposed his Mission, he nevertheless taxed his Countrymen of Idolatry, and threatned them with eternal Damnation; they re-

^a The Angel held the Beginning of the 96th Chapter of the Koran.

^b One easily guesses what is this congealed, or rather coagulated Blood. See the Note of Sale on the 96th Chapter of his English Version of the Koran.

^c This seems an Imitation of Moses on Mount Sinai.

^d In all Mahomet's Visions Gabriel represents the Holy Ghost, being the Dispenser of the Mysteries of God, and of all his Graces. See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient.

^e See Boulain Villers, p. 280.

^f These Words are the Beginning of the 74th Chap. of the Koran. See Sale's Notes on that and the foregoing Chap. 73.

jected him, declared themselves his Enemies, and persecuted those who paid any Submission to the new Apostle.

This is the Epocha of the first Hegira or Flight of the Mussulmen, who being persecuted by the Koraisbites, fled into Ethiopia: Mahomet himself staid at Mecca, and received in a Vision the 53d Chap. of the Koran,^a his Countrymen still took all Opportunities to treat him ill, which obliged him to retire into a House, which is become a Chapel called the House of the Reed^b, and held in great Veneration, for having sheltered Mahomet and his Disciples, who, besides a small Number gone to Ethiopia, were only thirty-nine. In this Retirement he gained over many Profelytes, notwithstanding the daily Affronts put upon him, and his being accused of Witchcraft. This last Imputation is not wonderful in a Country, where the Power of Magick was thought to be very great; yet several Authors have been of Opinion that this Calumny is copied from the History of Christ: But whence comes this Fondness of finding so many Passages of Mahomet's Life like unto those of Moses or Christ? The Progress of the Christian Religion is owing to Causes so different from the Means used by this Impostor^c, the Religions themselves are so opposite one to the other, the Account given by Arabian Legends so over charged with hyperbolical Expressions, so distant from the beautiful and persuasive Simplicity of the sacred Penmen, that it must be owned, the Arabian Prophet bears a nearer Resemblance to the Sybils and other deceitful Oracles of the Heathens, than to Christ, to whom he can be compared but in this one Circumstance, that both being descended from antient and noble Families, were reduced to Poverty: In a Word, Humility, Patience, Long-sufferings, and Preaching, converted the World to Christianity; whereas the Force of Arms proved necessary for the Propagation of Mahomet's Doctrine,^d and without it he never could have been a Prophet in his own Country. Till then his Religion had but few Followers, he daily suffered new Persecutions, but was comforted by the Promises and Prophecies of Gabriel, one of which foretold the Conversion of the Arabians and Barbarians, amongst whom it is likely he reckoned Part of the Asiatick Romans, tho' some time before he greatly rejoiced at a Victory obtained by them over Cbofroes King of Persia, but his Joy was chiefly occasioned by the Overthrow of the Persians and of their Religion; by which Means he hoped to raise his own. Accordingly the Daughter of Habib, who was deaf, dumb, blind, and had by a Palsy lost the Use of her Hands and Feet, being cured, or thought to be so, according to a Prophecy of Mahomet, which he made at the Time of an Eclipse of the Moon, so many were converted, that they soon became superior to the other Arabian Idolaters, Jews or Christians.

Khadigia died in the tenth Year of Mahomet's Mission: He supplied this Loss, by taking more Wives than one; it is also related that he then brought over from Judaism the Geniuses of Nisibis, who, as the Arabian Writers say, are spiritual Beings^e inferior to Angels, superiour to Men, free Agents, capable of Good and Evil, and by consequence may be converted and repent.

In the following Year the Chasfregites who were pure Arabians, embraced the Religion of Mahomet; he gave them the Name of Ansarians or Auxiliaries^f, be^a Gabriel is said to have brought this Chapter from Heaven.

^b This House stands on Mount Safa, and is named Baith Soran.

^c See Boulain Villers, Pag. 145, 176, 243. and in several other Places.

^d God said to Mahomet, I send you with a Sword. See Gagnier, Pag. 241.

^e See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient Article Gen. and in other Places.

^f See Gagnier in the last Chap. of the first Book of Mahomet's Life.

cause they powerfully helpt him to settle his Doctrine. In the twelfth Year he was, as he says in his Koran, carried from Mecca to Jerusalem, and from thence to the highest Heavens in one Night : Gabriel accompanied him, holding the Bridle of Alborack on which Mahomet was mounted ^a. At Jerusalem he met Abraham, Moses, and Jesus ; having before that been invited by several Voices to become a Jew or a Christian, or to give himself up to the vain Amusements of the World : Under the Conduct of Gabriel he avoided those Snares. The account of this nocturnal Vision ^b is so interwoven with witty Turns, wild and ridiculous Fancies ^c, and downright fanatical Notions ^d, that we shall not tire our Readers with it. The Arabian Authors are not agreed whether this Journey was performed by Mahomet in his Body or only in Spirit, we might even take the whole for an Allegory if the new Apostle had not proved himself an Impostor or a Fanatick by endeavouring to convince the incredulous Arabians of the Reality of this Voyage ^e.

About the same Time, Mahomet, having engaged his Followers by a new Oath of Fidelity to fight for him against the Black and Red, that is against all the World, was nevertheless obliged by the Koraiskites, who endeavoured to kill him, to leave Mecca ^f, and fly to Medina, where the Inhabitants received him with Respect and Veneration. He built there a Mosque, and a House for his Wives, one of whom was but nine Years old ; he established a Confraternity betwixt the Mobagerians who fled with him from Mecca, and the Ansarians or Auxiliaries of Medina, who were to look upon and help one the other like true Brethren. Then he began with his Disciples to wage War against the Unbelievers of Mecca, without neglecting the spiritual Part and the Ceremonies of his Religion. He settled the Kebla ^g, that is, whereas he himself used before to turn towards Jerusalem when he prayed, he now ordered his Followers to turn their Faces towards the Ca'ab or Temple of Mecca. Again he ordered that the Faithful should be called to Prayers with a loud Voice from the Top of the Mosques, whereas before he was out of Policy inclined to the Jewish Horn, and had actually made use of the Rattles as Christians did. He likewise ordained the grand Fast of Ramadhan, in which Month the Koran came from Heaven, and made several Regulations about Alms, things lawful or unlawful, Policy, &c. all which were either inspired or confirmed by Miracles.

A Victory obtained against the Koraiskites proved invincibly, in the Opinion of the Arabians, the Justice and Truth of Mahometism. The Battle was fought on a Friday the 17th of the Month Ramadhan, near Bedre, a Well on the Confines of Arabia. The Prophet, in Imitation of Moses ^h, sat in a Lodge made for him, and prayed for those that fought ; towards the End of the Battle, he rushed impetuously out of the Lodge, but Gabriel did not let him engage, he led him to a Ditch, ^a Mahomet's white Mare was called Al-brack, for being swift as Lightning.

^b See Gagnier in the first twelve Chapters of the second Book.

^c See in Chap. 10. Mahomet's Dialogue with God.

^d See in the same tenth Chapter how God disclosed himself to the Prophet, after the Angels had by the Order of God, taken off the Veil of Unity.

^e See what Gagnier relates in the 13th Chapter of the said second Book.

^f Herbelot in the Article Hegrah fixes Mahomet's Flight to the 14th Year of his Mission, but Historians differ about the Year of Christ to which it answers ; it happened they say at Noon, in the Month Moharrem, (which begins about the Middle of our July). See in Herbelot the wonderful Circumstances of it, the Plots of Satan, and his conspiring with the Inhabitants of Mecca against Mahomet. See also Sale's English Translation of the Koran.

^g Herbelot on the Word Kebla, which literally signifies that Part of the World towards which we turn our Faces at the Time of Prayer : Whence a Persian Poet says a true faithful has no Kebla, God being a Spirit.

^h Exod. Chap. 17.

where

where finding small Gravel, the Angel ordered him to throw it in the Faces of the Koraisbites, saying, Let their Faces be confounded. The wonderful Gravel blinded their Eyes, stopped their Breath, put them into Confusion, and the whole Army was destroyed; several Squadrons of Angels with Gabriel at their Head joined themselves to the Mussulmen, if we believe the credulous and enthusiastick Arabians. Abu-Gjckel (who commanded the Koraisbites, and maintained both the old Religion and the Liberties and Properties of his Countrymen, against the Usurpation of Mahomet) was killed in this Battle; want of Success has made him as odious to the Mahometans, as Pharaoh was to the Jews ^a. Those who lost their Lives on Mahomet's Side, were looked upon as glorious Martyrs. So it happens generally in all great Revolutions either in the Church or State.

In another Battle between Medina and Mount Obod ^b, the Koraisbites got the better at first, but a panick Fear seized them, and they ran away; after which Mahomet pushed on his temporal and spiritual Conquests. He broke the Alliance contracted betwixt the Jews and the Mussulmen ^c, and destroyed the Nadbirites who professed the Jewish Religion: They had entered into a League with the Koraisbites, and renewed the War against Mahomet, this is called the War of the Ditch. Mahomet prayed again, again Angels fought for him, the Confederate Army broke into Factions, an Easterly Wind with Rain and Hail proved the more likely and natural Cause of their being totally defeated, and accordingly there is a Tradition that Mahomet himself said, “ I overcame by the Easterly Wind, and was worsted “ when the Wind blew from the West.” In the Course of this War and of the Destruction of the Nadbirites, an Order came from Heaven to forbid casting Lots, (Games of Hazard are comprehended in that Word) and drinking Wine ^d. The last mentioned Law was grounded on the Danger which Mahomet had run of losing his Life at a Feast of the Nadbirite ^e Jews.

Gabriel inspired the Arabian Apostle to undertake a new War against the Koraidbit Jews; the Mussulmen were ordered as from God, to pray against them, like the rest of Mahomet's Enemies they had Angels to encounter, so the War proved fatal to them, they were defeated and put to Death, as their Forefathers had treated the Canaanites: This appears by the Words of the Koran ^f, which seem to be copied from Deuteronomy, “ You have killed Part of the Koraidbites and made the rest “ Slaves, God has given you their Country, &c.” This Expedition was followed by several others, which we omit to hasten to give an Account of the first Attempt made by Mahomet, in the sixth Year of the Hegira to bring over the Christians to his Islamism or Belief, not by Force of Arms, (his fanatical Visions and Revelations could not have supported him against the Power, tho' so much decayed of the Christian Emperors) but by Persuasion. He chose Abdol-Rahman for this Mission, and put him in Possession of that Office by these Words, ^g which evidently prove that his Weakness or Policy only, hindered him from making War. “ Go and make a “ holy War in the Name, and for the Voice (that is the Religion) of God; “ whoever shall deny God, you shall fight him; behave not like a perfidious Man,

^a See Gagnier in Mahomet's Life, Book 3. Chap. 4.

^b Obod, so called because it stands alone amongst the other Mountains of Arabia.

^c See in the above cited Chap. 4. of Book 3. in Gagnier, what occasioned this Breach.

^d See Chap. 2, and 5. of the Koran.

^e See Gagnier's Life of Mahomet, Book 3. Chap. 11.

^f Chap. 33.

^g Gagnier, Book 4. Chap. 5.

“ kill not young Children for the Time will come when they shall be “ obedient, &c.”

Mahomet had resolved to go in Pilgrimage to Mecca and encouraged his Followers to undertake it, by a Dream ^a which he contrived for that Purpose ; but the War or sacred Visit of Hodaibia, a little Town subject to Mecca, and distant a Day's Journey from the Ca'aba, and some other Events retarded this Pilgrimage. The Prophet being come to Hodaibia, appeased the Sedition of his Men, who suffered much by Drought, and procured Water for them out of a Well, into which he ordered an Arrow to be thrown: So many Wonders encreased his Disciples Confidence and respect for him to such a Degree, that they preserved the Water in which he had bathed, the Hair which fell from his Head and Beard, even his Spittle, &c. Such Marks of a profound Veneration and religious Submission struck all the Beholders with Astonishment, and in particular two Deputies of the Koraishtes, one of whom named Ariva, told his Masters at his Return, “ I have seen Kesroes of Persia, the “ Emperors of Rome, Negus of Ethiopia, in all their Glory ; but nothing comes “ up to Mahomet amongst his Companions, happen what will, his People will never “ leave him, so look to yourselves.” These Reports spread far and near, lost nothing in the telling, brought many Profelytes over to the new Religion, and prepared the Hearts and Minds of those whom the force of Arms had not yet subdued to that blind Faith which is so conspicuous amongst the Mahometans. Mahomet and his Followers bound themselves to stick together by a mutual Oath, this is called by the Arabian Historians the Voluntary Inauguration, and was done near a Tree called Hodba, from which Hodaibia took its Name: A Peace soon followed, occasioned by the generously sending back to the Koraishtes eighty of their Men who had been taken Prisoners. The Conditions were, that the Prophet should defer his Pilgrimage a whole Year, after which he and his might perform this Act of Devotion, but should not stay above three Days in the Town, and have no Arms but their Swords in the Scabbard. The Discontent of the Mussulmen at these Articles, might have proved fatal to Mahomet, had not some new Wonders and Revelations reconciled them to him, chiefly ^b the Chapter of the Conquest or Victory by which he promised them the Possession of Mecca, which however they did not obtain till two Years after. In the Interim many Women ran over to Mahomet, and he did not send them back to the Koraishtes as had been stipulated in the Treaty, under Pretence that they were not specified by Name. A Recruit of Women was very useful in these hot Countries, in a Religion which admits Plurality of Wives, and under a Leader naturally addicted to Women; and all Antient and Modern History informs us that they have many Wiles to win over to, and retain Men in their Party. Yet the new Apostle took Care to try their Vocation, and not to trust blindly to such Conversions ; he therefore made them abjure solemnly the old Religion, and swear that they left it to embrace the new, merely out of a Principle of Conscience : This being done, he parted the Woman now become faithful, from her unfaithful Husband, and gave her Leave to marry another.

A new Profelyte left the Koraishtes ^c, became a Leader of Mussulmen, with whom he pillaged the Country : No doubt he was privately encouraged by the Prophet, who

^a The same, Book 5. Chap. 1.

^b Chap. 48. of the Koran. He speaks as Prophets often do, as if it had already happened.

^c See Gagnier in his Life of Mahomet, Book 5. Chap. 3.

got his Ends by it, and obtained that Clause to be revoked, by which he was obliged to send back the Koraisbites who should come over to him, and he was allowed to keep them.

In the seventh Year of the Hegira, Mahomet in one of his Sermons acquainted his Disciples with the Resolution he had taken to send Ambassadors to foreign Princes, in order to invite them in a solemn Manner to become Mussulmen. These Words Mahomet Apostle of God were ingraven on the Seal of those Letters. The first was sent to Kosroes King of Persia, who tore the Letter without reading it, and ordered his Viceroy of Arabia to bring Mahomet to his Senses, or to put him to Death : Mahomet prophesied, they say, ^a That God would tear to Pieces the Kingdom of Kosroes as he had torn the Letter ; the Viceroy became himself a Mussulman being convinced, by the Accomplishment of the Prophet's Predictions, ^b that his Mission was from God. They pretend likewise, that he wrote to the Sultan of Egypt, to Negus King of Ethiopia, to the Sultan of that Part of Arabia which bordered upon Syria, to three or four petty Arabian Princes, and even to the Emperor Heraclius ; and that the last mentioned Prince received his Letter with Respect and embraced the new Religion.

The Historians of Mahomet's Life mention his being bewitched by the Jews ; at least this was made the Pretence of a new War against them, called the War of Khaibar ^c, in which Ali and other Mussulmen Heroes did such Wonders as served for a Pattern to the Romances of subsequent Ages, and were according to all Appearances but made up Stories. We are likewise told, that the Prophet had like to have been poisoned by a Jewish Woman, who gave him some roasted Mutton : The prophetick Instinct ^d was of no use to him, tho' it helpt him so far as not to eat much of it, yet he tasted it, and felt the Effects of it the three Years which he lived after it.

Much about the same Time, tho' he was not young, he had many Wives, and expressly prohibited Fornication in his Koran, yet he committed that Crime, and instead of shewing any Marks of Repentance, he pretended a Revelation which dispensed him from that Law : This may be seen in the 24th and 66th Chapter of the Koran ^e, and no doubt his Example like that of the Heathen Gods and Goddeses ^f made deeper Impressions than all the Laws against that Vice.

At last in the seventh Year of the Hegira, the Year stipulated in the above mentioned Treaty being elapsed, Mahomet and his Followers made the Al-Kadba or his Visit of Consummation or Accomplishment, and Pilgrimage of Mecca. At the Distance of six Miles from that Town, they all took an Oath to perform religiously all the Ceremonies and Rites prescribed in that Visit : Being come nearer they left their Arms and Baggage, and entered the holy City in Triumph ; devoutly kissed and embraced the black Stone of the Ka'aba, and went seven Times round the Temple : “ The three first Rounds they made ^g running, jumping, and shaking their Shoulders, to shew their Vigour after the Fatigue of the Journey ; the other four, walking gravely, not to over tire themselves, and this Custom is kept up to this Day.”

^a See Boulain Villers, Pag. 354. This Prophecy is in the 30th Chapter of the Koran, called the Greeks or the Romans. Boulain Villers owns at last, this was only a Consequence of Mahomet's sagacious and penetrating Genius. See likewise Sale in his English Translation of the Koran.

^b Mahomet they say, told the Viceroy that Siroes had killed Kosroes a few Hours after it happened.

^c See Gagnier, Book 5. Chap. 6. and following.

^d The Sheep tho' roasted spoke, according to an Arabian Legend.

^e See likewise Gagnier, Book 5. Chap. 9.

^f See Terentius in Eunuch, Act 3. Scene 5. Virgo in Conclavi, &c.

^g Gagnier, Book 5. Chap. 10.

Then Prayer was proclaimed, and the Prophet mounted on a Camel, ran seven Times between two Hills, on which were to be seen at that Time two Idols of the Koraishtes : The Mussulmen were shocked at it, but their Scruples were laid by a Passage of the Koran ^a sent from Heaven, in which God declared that those two Hills were a Memorial of him, and that the Pilgrims who should visit them, ought not to be looked upon as guilty of any Sin. This same Custom ^b is still in Use amongst the Arabians, who pretend it is as antient as their Patriarch Ishmael, and look upon it as Part of the religious Worship practised by Abraham : The Whole concluded with a Sacrifice of seventy Camels, and the Mussulmen shaved themselves. Mahomet complied in the same Place with another Sort of Devotion, which was familiar to him, by consummating Marriage with a new Wife, who was so devoted to him that, as the Arabians say, She ordered her Corpse to be buried at the Root of the Tree, under which the Deed was done.

Historians place in the eighth Year of the Hegira, the first War of the Mussulmen against the Romans, by which then were meant all the Nations subject to the Grecian Empire; the Destruction of which was then begun by the Mussulmen, who from that Time raised themselves upon its Ruins. A Battle was fought near Muta, a Town in Syria; Victory at last declared itself for the Mahometans. Their next Exploit was against the Koraishtes : The Prophet foresaw, it seems, that they would soon break the Peace, and sent Troops towards the Sea, to beat Hand to surprise and carry off the Caravans. This amongst us would be looked upon as the first Step to a Rupture; yet we are told that the Allies of the Koraishtes began it. Mahomet would not receive their Submission, being glad of the Opportunity of becoming Master of the holy Place, under the specious Pretence of revenging the Injury offered to his Allies. Accordingly he advanced towards Mecca, found all in Consternation, increased his Army with those who daily flocked in to him; by Force, Threats, or Persuasions, he brought over to his Party many Profelytes of Note, who were likely to procure the Conversion of others. . . . Then he attacked the Koraishtes, not like an Apostle, but as a Conqueror, and gave the Signal saying, " This is a Day of Slaughter, in which the most sacred Place of Refuge may be " violated if requisite". His Orders were obeyed, they entered Mecca Sword in Hand, and killed all the Koraishtes they could find; but Mahomet pretended this barbarous Execution was made against ^c his Intentions.

The Apostle made his publick Entry next Morning at Sun-rising, repeating aloud, with an affected Humility, the Chapter of the Koran called ^d Victory, which came down from Heaven at Hodaibia; he went directly to the Ca'aba, and without alighting from his Camel, devoutly performed the seven Rounds, and touched the black Stone with his Staff; then he dismounted, went in, and pulled down all the Statues, amongst others that of Ibrahim or Abraham, in the Hands of which were the Arrows or Rods used by Arabian Idolaters in their Divinations by casting Lots : At going in he often repeated the Words, God is great, &c. turning to every Side of the Temple, he said Prayers with various Bowings, and fixed the Kebla; the 360 Idols which were round the Ca'aba, and that which was on the Top, underwent the same Fate in a wonderful Manner, according to Arabian Writers; Mahomet only ^a See Chap. 2. of the Koran.

^b See Herbelot in the Article Hagge or Pilgrimage of his Biblioth. Orient. in which he relates the various Ways of performing it, and the Rules prescribed by the Mahometan Doctors concerning it.

^c Gagnier's Life of Mahomet, Book 6. Chap. 1.

^d Chap. 48. of the Koran. See Saie's Note on that Chapter.

touched

touched them with his Cane, saying, Truth is come, let Falshood disappear, Lying is mere Vanity, and down they fell: He went in and preached in a Pulpit ^a, made for that Purpose, which the Kalifs, who succeeded him, used likewise. The seven Rounds were repeated, after which he went to the Well of Zem-zem ^b, made a Stop at Ibrahim's Foot-step, drank large Draughts of that sacred Water, washed himself, and the Mussulmen followed his Example.

Mahomet made a Speech to the Inhabitants of Mecca, on the Favour which God bestowed upon them by his Means in freeing them from Idolatry; he let them know they were become his Slaves, but restored to them that Liberty, which by the Right of Conquest they had lost.

Many Wonders and heavenly Oracles accompanied this Ceremony, the Apostle disposed of the several Offices of the Temple, renewed the Oath to the Believers, and they mutually took an Oath to bind themselves to him: The other Idols throughout Arabia were likewise destroyed by his Officers. Thus most of the Arabian Tribes left Idolatry, but probably might have as easily relapsed into it, had the remaining Idolaters won the Battle of Honaim, of which the Mahometan Historians ^c, according to their Custom, give a wonderful Account.

The Fame of Mahomet's Victories and of his Clemency, made such an Impression upon his Neighbours, that several of them on their own Accord embraced the new Religion; such is the Effect of Prosperity! The ninth Year of the Higira is remarkable, by being called the Year of Embassies: Many Deputations were sent to pay Homage to him in Medina, the Place of his Birth. As he had overcome the Koraishtes, who were the chief of the Arabians, being Masters of Mecca, of the Temple, and the holy Territory, the genuine Posterity of Ishmael, and by Consequence were also esteemed the most learned; the rest easily perceived that Mahometism would get the Mastery, and prove the best to follow. The Proclamation of the holy War against the Romans is of the same Date, tho' no actual Rupture ensued, for Reasons unknown; yet the Mussulmen Historians call it the War of Tabuc ^d: This was followed by the Conversion of the Tbakisits, a People bordering upon Arabia. At first they desired to keep their Idol, and to be exempt from Prayer, but Mahomet rejected this Proposal, and said these remarkable Words concerning Prayer: Nothing can be good in a Religion, which does not prescribe Prayer. So much Prosperity emboldened the Prophet to repeal in the same Year, all the Privileges enjoyed by Idolaters; this he did by a pretended Order from Heaven, contained in the Koran ^e; but the Truth is, he thought himself strong enough to use Force instead of Reason: He therefore threatened all Infidels, meaning Christians as well as Heathens, with approaching Destruction, in these Words: "When the sacred Months, (which were in Number four) are elapsed kill Idolaters wherever you find them, besiege them, and lay all Sorts of Snares to entrap them". This Order was publicly read at Mecca, in the Time of the holy Pilgrimage, to which all the Arabian Tribes were met, and Ali declared that no Infidel should ever be admitted to Paradise; all

^a Gagnier, Book 5. Chap. 11.

^b See Herbelot in the Article Zem-zem, of Biblioth. Orient. it is also called the Well of Mecca. See likewise the foregoing Dissertation. This Well is said by the Arabians, to be the same which the Angel shewed to Hagar for Ishmael, and that its Water restores Health, strengthens the Memory, blots out Sins, &c. for this Reason Mahomet paid Respect to it, to draw in the People.

^c See the Account of this Battle in Gagnier, Book 6. Chap. 5.

^d Tabuc is half way between Medina and Damascus.

^e Chap. 9. which is intitled of Immunity.

such were forbid to approach or visit the holy Temple, the House of God, being unworthy of it: Hence is derived the Custom of putting to Death every Infidel, that is every one, who not being a Mabometan, dares come to the Ca'aba.

The tenth Year of the Hegira produced likewise many such other Embassies and Conversions. Ali was invested with the Dignity of a Missionary, the Prophet gave him a Standard, put a Turbant upon his Head, and sent him to Yemen or Arabia Felix. Ali went at the Head of three hundred Men, defeated the Idolaters, and by Consequence made Converts of them. History informs us that he preached to them, but the same Writers own that his Sword was more persuasive than his Sermons.

We have already acquainted our Readers that the Pilgrimage to Mecca is looked upon by the Mussulmen to be of such Importance, that whoever is able to do it, and does not perform it once, at least, in his Life-time, is reputed an Infidel. This Custom was complied with long before Mabomet, and the Arabians say it is as ancient as the Patriarchal Age. Mabomet had visited the Ca'aba twice before, as we have related it; ^a but in this Year he vowed ^b and performed it in a magnificent Manner: A hundred thousand Men accompanied him, all his Wives followed him in Litters, many Camels crowned with Flowers, and adorned with Ribbands, were led for the Sacrifice. During the Journey he often said Prayers with the usual Bowings. He entered the holy City at the same Place as when he took it, the religious Ceremonies were the same; as to going seven Times round the Ca'aba and kissing the black Stone twice: He from a neighbouring Hill pronounced this Form of the Profession of the Unity of God. God is great, there is no God but he only, he has no Companion, the Power of governing belongs to him, Praise be given to him alone, he is powerful above all, he only strong. The Sun being near setting, he instructed the People, and taught them the Rites to be observed in the Pilgrimage, and stood till the Close of the Day; said Vespers or Evening Prayers . . . lay on the Ground, slept till the Time of the Aurora, said Morning Prayers a few Minutes before the rising of the Sun. He ran through the Valley of Mohasser to that of Mina, in which are the Pebble-stones, took up seven of them, and threw them one by one against Satan, repeating each Time the said Form of Unity. At the Place of Sacrifice he made a Discourse to let the People know the Ceremonies of it; He killed with his own Hands and offered sixty three Camels, as many as he was Years old; Ali killed thirty-seven to make up the hundred. Then these Words, which are the Ratification of the Koran, were heard from Heaven: "Wo
"be this Day to those who have denied your Religion, I have this Day brought
"it to its Perfection, and have fulfilled my Grace upon you . . . 'Tis my good "Will and Pleasure, that Islamism be henceforth your Religion." The Mussulmen Doctors say, that the Word Religion comprehends all the Decisions, Statutes, and Precepts of the Law; and that since that Time, no positive or negative Command is come down from Heaven. This being over, Mabomet shaved his Head, the right Side first, then the left, threw away his Hair, of which Khaled one of his Officers tied part to his Turbant, and was powerfully helped by those precious Relicks in all the Battles in which he was afterwards engaged. The Whole concluded with a holy Repast, in which they eat what remained of the sacrificed Camels; the Prophet said a Prayer, drank some Zem-zem Water, and once more made the seven Rounds. Within a Mile of Mecca, is Mount Araa, a Place much respected by the Mussulmen, because, as they would have us believe, Adam and Eve after their Sin, were condemned to a Separation for one hundred and twenty Years, which being expired, they met by God's Appointment, on the Top of this Hill, and complied with the so long interrupted conjugal Duty. In Memory of which, the Place is dedicated to Penance and Retirement, of both which Duties Mahomet acquitted himself; prayed for his own Sins, and for those of his Followers, and recommended the same Acts of Devotion in the Koran ^a.

^a See above. See likewise Herbelot, &c.

^b See Gagnier, Book 6. Chap. 16.

The Prophet on this Occasion of the said Pilgrimages, undertook to reform the Arabian Calender. Before his Time, the Arabians, to bring their twelve Lunar Months to an Equality with the Solar Year, added every third Year a thirteenth Month: This they had learnt of the Jews, and made use of this Intercalation, chiefly with an Intent of fixing the Pilgrimage to the Autumn Season, in which the Weather is temperate, and the Fruits of the Earth in full Maturity. But Mahomet abolished this Custom, ordered there should never be but twelve Lunar Months in the Year, so that to this Day, as Father Maracci observes, their Rhamadan or Fast, their Dbul-Hagija or Pilgrimage falls successively in every Season of the Year. He likewise altered another of their Customs: Four Months called Moharran, Regjeb, Dbil-Ka'ada, and Dhu'l-Hagija, were to be kept holy by the Arabians: They were forbid fighting or committing any Acts of Hostility at that Time; but in Case of a War, they eluded the Precept by transferring the sanctifying of one Month to the next, this they called Al-Nafa or a Delay: The Apostle forbid such Translations; but to avoid the fatal Consequence of too scrupulous and nice observing the said Law of not fighting, he gave the Mussulmen Leave to defend themselves in those sacred Months. "Fight, says he in the Koran, against the Infidels all the Months of the Year, since they do not scruple fighting against you, even in the holy Months."

We are now come to the last Period of Mahomet's Life, the last Embassy he received was from the Arabians of Yemen in the Month of Moharram, the eleventh Year of the Hegira; and the last Expedition which he ordered, was in the following Month of Safar. Two Days after he fell into a Sickness occasioned by the Poison he had taken three Years before. He called his Wives together, entertained them, chiefly the most beloved of them, and his Daughter Fatima with such Discourses as shewed his fanatical Enthusiasm, or were the Result of the senseless Fancies of a distempered Brain by the Violence of the Fever. But to be able to speak more sensibly to his Followers, he ordered a prodigious Quantity of cold Water ^b to be thrown upon him, to recall his wandering Spirits: Then being carried to the Mosque and set in the Pulpit, he recited aloud the above-mentioned Form of Unity, begged God's Pardon, profered to make a publick Reparation for all the Injuries he might have done to any Body, and actually paid to a particular Person the Principal and Interest of a small Sum of Money which he pretended was due to him; Saying at the same Time, "It is much more easy to bear Shame in this World than in the next." A truly Christian Sentiment! He then said the Prayers for Noon; he likewise prayed for the Dead, according to the Agreement and Communion which subsists between the Living and the Dead. These and other devout Actions he performed as long as he had any Strength left. The Mussulmen religiously observe as part of his last Will, some Orders he gave in the Height of his Sickness; as 1°. Drive Idolaters out of Arabia; accordingly no other Religion is tolerated there. 2°. Let the Profelytes enjoy the Privileges I have granted to them; in Consequence of which, Renegadoes are employed by them, and sometimes raised to the highest Posts in their Empire, yet they are not much esteemed by them; Reason and Experience teaches them, that Prejudices of Education, and Habits contracted, are scarce ever rooted out; and that most Renegadoes often become such, by the Motive of Interest, or to gratify vicious^a Inclinations. 3°. Be constant and assiduous in Prayer; this Exercise is so highly valued by the Mussulmen, that they do not esteem as a true faithful any one, who does not pray at the Times appointed, and even in those Actions of Life, which seem most opposite to Prayer. This may have been borrowed from the Christian Religion, which strongly enforces that Duty. St. Paul after the Example of Christ, bids us pray without Intermission. The new Apostle gave a last Testimony of the Hatred he bore to the Jews. “May God, said he, Curse the Jews, for they have made Temples of the Sepulchres of their Prophets,” after which he constantly prayed the whole Time of his Agony. A surprizing Change in such an Impostor! But a Man in his Death-bed sees Things in a different Light, and neither thinks nor acts, as he did, when he expected to live twenty or thirty Years longer.

^a Chap. 2. See Mr. Sale's Note on that Passage.

^b Seven large Skins or Measures full of Water. See Gagnier, Book 6. Chap. 18.

We shall only mention the Mahometan Fables concerning Gabriel's being often sent by God to enquire how the Prophet did, his introducing the Angel of Death to the Apostle, having first obtained his Leave, the pious Discourses of all three. At last Mahomet died on a Monday the twelfth of the Month called Rabbi the first, in the eleventh Year of the Hegira; being about sixty three Years old. Historians take Notice that he was born on a Monday, began his Apostolical Functions, fled from Mecca, made his Entry into Medina, took Mecca, and at last died likewise on a Monday. His Death was thought so extraordinary, that it was called an Assumption. Some said, he is not dead, he is only taken up, or like Jesus in an Extasy. Others said, He is gone to his Lord, as Moses who left his People for forty Days and came again. And they disputed with Warmth about his being dead or not: But Abu-Beker who succeeded him, put an End to those Quarrels; he gave a final Sentence that Mahomet was dead, as all other Apostles and Prophets, &c. This Decision being unanimously received, his Body was washed and perfumed, specially those Parts which touched the Ground at the Adoration paid to God, viz. the Feet, the Hands, the Knees, and the Forehead: The Ablution called^b Wodhu, was also performed on the Face, the Arms, the Palms of the Hands and Soles of the Feet. Lastly, the whole Body was embalmed by Ali, whom Mahomet had ordered to do it; those who helped him, were hoodwinked, because the Prophet had foretold that Blindness would be the Fate of any other who should see him naked. Strange Wonders and sweet Odours, accompanied this Ceremony, at least the Mussulmen Writers have borrowed such Stories from Christian Legends. Ali dipped some Cloths in the Water, with which he had been washed; they imbibed the Virtues of it, and Ali who kept them and wore them, became a Parta-

^a England and Holland are full of such Profelytes who leave their Religion, and take up no other; and whose Moral, Civil, or Religious Behaviour, is a Shame to whatever they profess.

^b We shall hereafter speak more at large of the Wodhu, in the Sequel of this Work.

ker of them : His Memory and penetrating Wit had already been increased by the Ablutions. Prayers were said for him and his Family by all the Faithful in Order ; then his Body was put in a Grave, and not hung up in an Iron Chest, ^a as is generally reported.

The Sorrow and doleful Complaints of the Mussulmen on this Occasion, were no doubt very great ; but we shall omit the Enthusiastick Description of them given by Arabian Historians, to give the true Character of this Prophet, or rather Impostor. As to his Person and outward Appearance, he was of a middle Stature, neither endow'd with extraordinary Beauty, nor any ways deformed, except that the prophetick Light, which descended lineally from Adam to him, made his Face as bright as the Sun, according to the Arabian Writers. We must not forget what they say of his Spittle, viz. that it was so sweet and of so good a Taste, that Children might have been fed with it. A Wen which he had between his Shoulders, and which disappeared at his Death was, they say, the Seal of Prophecy, to which they add that Flies and other Insects were never troublesome to him, and that by Consequence his Skin was always soft and shining.

Those Authors are as extravagant in their Description of his Mind ; but what may be credited is, that he was far more ingenious than his Countrymen, upon whom he prevailed by his subtle Devices, a natural Eloquence, and much Affability, yet not without a Mixture of Severity. He affected to be thought a great Lover of Justice and Truth. He was so liberal to the Poor, as to be called their Father, never refused to give Alms to them, and maintained constantly forty at his own Charge ; and tho' he was Master of an immense Estate, he often had nothing left but what was absolutely necessary for the Support of his Family. He was very sparing in his Diet, eat only some Dates, and drank nothing but Water for several Months of the Year ; he took his Meals standing, or in an uneasy Situation, with his Servant, made his own Shoes, his Clothes, swept the House, and prepared himself Victuals for his Men. So far the Austerity of his Life seemed to imitate the Severity of the Anachorets and Solitaries of Egypt, and in the Neighbourhood of Arabia, in order to dazzle the common People, and inspire them with the highest Opinion of, and Veneration for his Sanctity.

But with all these Hardships, he indulged himself in a Seraglio of eleven, some say fifteen, seventeen, twenty-one ^b, or even twenty-five Wives : Women it seems, to use his own Expression, rejoiced his Sight, and raised his Fervour at his Prayers. Too great an Abstinence may, according to some, cause Obstructions ; these are apt to raise Vapours, which disturb the Imagination, hinder due Attention, &c. The Mahometan Doctors ^c excuse their Prophet with a much more grave and serious Air.

Such was the Life, such the Death, such the Character of Mahomet, a strange motly Mixture of Good and Bad, of penitential Works and carnal Pleasures, craftily adapted to Seduction : if he had even Cunning enough to persuade his Followers that Fits of his Distempers, and of the Falling-sickness were heavenly Trances, during which his new fangled Religion was revealed to him : However,

we

^a See Gagnier in his Life of Mahomet, Book 6. Chap. 20.

^b See Boulain Villers, Pag. 257. Five of these Wives died before him ; six he was divorced from, and ten remained in the State of Widow-hood after the Prophet's Death.

^c See Boulain Villers, Pag. 261. They gravely tell Mahomet's Inclination to Women was a Gift of God, both for his Comfort in the Persecutions he underwent, and to discountenance Adultery and Fornication, we have endeavoured to do him Justice, as is daily done by Historians to the Heathen Princes or Philosophers.

At the Time of his Death he had with him one hundred and twenty thousand Mussulmen, divided into several 'Classes' ^a, of which the most remarkable were the Affessors, poor Strangers who having no Relations or Place of Habitation of their own, were protected by Mahomet, and subsisted by him; the Appellation of Affessors was given them, because they sat upon Benches round his Mosque, and at his Table, unless their Number happened to be too great, in which Case he recommended them to be taken Care of by some of his Companions or Officers. The Arabian Historians mention also the Tabeits, who embraced his Religion without following him in his Expeditions, or helping him as Friends : They had never seen or conversed with him, but corresponded by Letters, and were highly valued upon that Account, as having such precious Remains of the new Apostle. The same Sentiment of Respect and Veneration, which the Generality of Mankind conceive for every Thing belonging to great and holy Men, has engaged the Mussulmen Writers to give us a long Detail of Mahomet his Servants, the Names of his Mules, Horses, Asses, Camels, with the Particulars of their Age and Death, not even forgetting his white Cock, who sung every Morning a Hymn to the Creator. His wonderful Armory has not escaped their over nice exact Description, particularly a Sword which had been used by Goliath and King David. The Jews had preserved it with the utmost Care, but Mahomet defeated them, and took it as Part of the Spoils ^b.

The wonderful Privileges granted to Mahomet and his Followers, have been sufficiently taken Notice of in this Abstract of his Life ; but his Biographers have mentioned two which this carnal Prophet had reserved for himself. The one was to kiss Women even on a Fasting-day, and to proceed to further Liberties, if the Occasion was pressing. The second was, that he not only might have more Wives than four ; which Number the Mussulmen themselves say, was as much as former Prophets could well manage ; but our new Apostle had another Prerogative, which intitled him to cast amorous Glances at other Women, and to be with them in private. All this he was allowed to do, not only without Sin, but without the least Detriment to his Angelical Purity. And accordingly his Body, they say, did not corrupt; the Prophet still lives in his Tomb, an Angel keeps it, and lets him know what Prayers his faithful Disciples say for him, as likewise what Faults they commit, that he may intercede for them, and obtain their Pardon.

The mention of these Particulars, naturally introduces the Account of the Visit of Mahomet's Tomb, with which we shall conclude this Dissertation. All Mussulmen look upon it as one of the chief Duties of their Religion. The Arabian Doctors allow that Mahomet enjoined it, and 'tis well known that superstitious Religions lay a great Stress upon such outward Ceremonies. Whoever undertakes to perform it, even upon the Road, must often turn himself towards Medina to pray ; as soon as he sees the Tops of the Trees about the Town, he ought to renew his Devotion, and repeat without Intermission the appointed Form of Prayers, to beg of God that as also, as they call it, the Superstition of those Christians who lived in Celibacy, and did not people the World. Yet there are Adulterers, Fornicators, and worse among the Mahometans, and great Numbers who pretend to live chaste.

^a See Gagnier's Life of Mahomet, Book 7. Chap. 5.

^b See Gagnier's Life of Mahomet, Book 7. Chap. 8.

this Visit to the Holy Sanctuary of the Prophet may be acceptable, and deliver him from Hell. Before he enters the City, he is enjoined to wash himself, to use Perfumes, put on his best Apparel, and give Alms. When entered he says a Prayer, another when he comes into the Mosque; this last is for Mahomet and his Family. The Pilgrim then goes towards the Tomb, makes some Stay at the Place where the Prophet prayed, and at some others as his Devotion suggests to him: Being at last arrived near the holy Place, he first prostrates himself on the Ground, pays his Adoration to God, gives him Thanks for having conducted him safe thither; then standing up with his Face turned towards Mecca he prays for the Prophet and his two Successors, Abu-Beker and Omar; he does not even lean against the Wall which encloses the Monument, that would be undecent and a Profanation: But says Gagnier ², “The Pilgrim looking on the Ground, and there fixing his Eyes salutes the Prophet, with the utmost Veneration and Respect, withdrawing his Thoughts and Affections from all worldly Concern, as becomes one who is in the Presence of God and his Apostle, &c.” The Friday following he goes to a Church-yard called Al-Baki, where several of Mahomet’s Companions lie interred, visits the Tombs of the chief Ladies and others of his Family, Servants, or Successors; as of Fatima his Daughter, Ibrahim his Son, and the Mussulmen Martyrs Then he washes himself in, and drinks some of the Water of the Well called Aris, into which the Prophet did spit and performs several Stations at other Mosques, Oratories, and Wells of Medina, &c. Mahomet himself having said that one Prayer in his own Mosque, is better than a thousand any where else, and that he would intercede for all those who die at Medina.

² Life of Mahomet, Book 7. Chap. 19.

A DISSERTATION.

On the Rise of Mahometism, and the Causes of its Progress.

THE foregoing Abstract of the Life of Mahomet has furnished our Readers with several Occasions of taking Notice, that the Rise and Progress of his new modelled religious System was favoured and forwarded by the Circumstances of the Times. One of these very much insisted upon by many Authors, is the Corruption of Christians, who having got the Superiority over the Pagans, but being still desirous of enticing the rest, adapted some of their superstitious Customs into the Christian Ceremonies, not without great danger ^a of countenancing Abuses. Moreover Disputes ran very high among Christians, about Controversies which were carried on with all the Rancor and Animosity, with all the sophistical Subtilties, so deservedly condemned in Heathen Philosophers; these were not backward in recriminating, and censuring those Excesses ^b.

A late Writer, as much distinguished by his Wit, as by his high Birth, ^c has given us such lively Descriptions of these Disorders, that he has been accused of Irreligion even by Protestants. Mr. Salé ^d likewise says, the Worship of Saints and Images surpassed then what is now practised by Catholics: Both these Authors mention a Custom then in Vogue, of presenting Officers of Note with an Image, to preserve them from Dangers, and direct them in the Discharge of the Trust reposed in them: Be that as it will, the Heresy of the Collyridians, (so named from a Cake ^e, which they offered in Sacrifice to the blessed Virgin Mary as to a Goddess) some Remains of which might still subsist in Arabia, or the neighbouring Countries: The Tritheists, who believed three Gods, probably gave Mahomet a Pretence to introduce his Religion and abolish the Belief of the Trinity ^f, by inveighing against Idolatry, and preaching up the Unity of God.

The Spirit of Persecution which began to rule amongst Christians proved likewise a favourable Circumstance for the Advancement of Mahometism. Some Years before Mahomet ^g, Justinian persecuted Hereticks, and destroyed the Samaritans in Palestine, and probably their Posterity embraced the new Religion, out of Hatred to Christians, whose Yoke they resolved to cast off, and free themselves from the

^a See Ep. 71. Lib. 9. in operibus, S. Greg. Magni. he forbids offering Oxen to Devils, but gives the English Leave to eat them. Well he might. What is an Idol?

^b See Claudian's Epigram. per Cineres Pauli, &c. See likewise Ammian. Marcellin. towards the End of Book 21.

^c See Boulain Villers from Pag. 224. to 244.

^d In the Dissert. before his Translation of the Koran. Sect. 2: Pag. 33.

^e Called Collyris or Collyra in Greek.

^f In the Koran. Chap. 6.

^g In the sixth Age.

Mahometism, and the Causes of its Progress, 31

Hardships they were daily exposed to, on Account of the severe Edicts published against them by the Emperors. And we have seen that Mahomet borrowed some of their Tenets, and inserted them in his System.

All these Occurrences might still have been useless, if Mahomet had not broached his new Religion, at a Time when both the Roman or Grecian, and the Persian Monarchies were upon the Decline ; had those two Empires retained their former Glory and Power, Mahometism must inevitably have been destroyed in its Cradle : Tho' supported by pretended Miracles and Revelations, tho' its Moral Precepts appeared grounded on specious Arguments, yet it was evident nothing but superior Force could introduce it, and the Sword only could be the most prevailing Argument for it. The Weakness of the Persians contributed most to the new Prophet's wonderful Success, and the first Conquests of the Mussulmen were over Persia. The Overthrow of that Empire seems owing to the intestine Broils occasioned by the Doctrine of Manes or Manicheus, and of one Mazdac ^a, to which if we add the frequent dethroning of their Kings, by the Rebellion and Parricides of Children who imbrued their Hand in the Blood of their Parents ; it will not appear so strange that a contemptible Agent of a Widow should, by reuniting the Arabians, Occasion the intire Ruin of the most powerful Kingdom of the East. This Re-union proved the more fatal to Persia, because even before it was brought about, their flourishing Condition ^b drew the Respect of their Neighbours ; they were accustomed to a hard laborious Life, exempt from, and averse to, the Luxury and Softness of the Grecians and Persians, temperate in their Diet, they drank no Wine ; besides their being a populous Nation, they were still become more numerous by the Refugees from Greece and Persia, whom Persecution had drove out of their own Country ; thus they were qualified to overcome and conquer a great Part of the World !

Mahomet had Wit and Luck to turn all these favourable Opportunities to his own Advantage ; even the Division of the Arabians into so many Tribes proved useful to him : This enabled him to overcome them all, and his Enemies became the Instruments of his Greatness. The Heat of Imagination, so common in that warm Climate, some Sentiments of Piety and Zeal against Disorders, with a proper Mixture of Enthusiasm and Fanaticism, prompted him to undertake the Restoration of the Faith of Abraham and all the Prophets, even ^c of Jesus Christ, and to become the Reformer of all Abuses ; Ambition, and a Desire to be at the Head of Affairs both spiritual and temporal, might also egg him on ; but it must be owned, there appears so much Art and Prudence in the Execution of his Projects, that we cannot persuade ourselves, that they were only Consequences of an hypochondriacal Distemper, of Convulsions, &c. Neither can we embrace the Opinion of a late Author who seems to insinuate, that Mahomet ^d wanted only some acquired Learning, and a thorough Insight into the Grounds of Christianity, to be an excellent Reformer. On the contrary he is looked upon as the chief Enemy of the Christian Religion next to the Devil : The dreadful Devastation of the Oriental Churches, ^a This Mazdac under Pretence that Men are all Brethren and Children of one Father, and to put a Stop to the Divisions caused by Women and Riches, preached a Community of both ; he had many Followers, and amongst them Cabades King of Persia, who profered his own Wife to Mazdac as an Earnest of his Conversion. After the Death of Cabades all Children so born were made Slaves, and this Edict was the cause of new Broils. See Sale's Dissertation Pag. 36. and Pocock's Specimen, Pag. 10.

^b Sale in his Dissertation, Sect. 2. Pag. 37.

^c The same on the second Chap. of the Koran.

^d The same in his Dissertation, Sect. 2. Pag. 40.

the Usurpation of the most sacred Monuments of our holy Profession, render him odious ; but on the other side the Christians themselves were guilty of introducing the Mahometans into Spain and France either to revenge private Quarrels, or upon other Motives as opposite to the Gospel of Christ. However, as we hinted before even the Persecutions of his own Countrymen helped to advance him ; they forced him to take up Arms, to fly and seek a Refuge and Protection against those who endeavoured to oppress him : This succeeded beyond Expectation ; he fought in his own Defence, he beat his Enemies, his Party increased, and in a few Years he was at the Head of a powerful Army, able to make farther Conquests. Thus Opposition and Contradiction becomes a Nursery of Heroes and great Men ! Thus Mahomet rose to the Dignity of a Prophet, a Legislator, a General and a Conqueror ! Having once gained the Applause of his Friends, and Admiration of his Enemies, all his Actions were looked upon as mysterious and supernatural. If he retired in private, he then received, they thought, new Revelations or Inspirations from God : Enquiries were made into antient Oracles and Prophecies, which foretold his coming. To this Purpose they searched the Psalms^a, and found him in the Word^b Crown of Glory ; a Passage of Deuteronomy in which 'tis said that God came from Mount Sinai, that he rose from Seir, and manifested himself in Pharan, was construed in the same Sense : These three Apparitions signify, according to the Mahometan Doctors, the Law of Moses, the Gospel of Christ, and the Koran revealed to Mahomet. They likewise pretend he is the Paraclet^c whom Christ promised to his Disciples. 'Tis also highly probable, that the Prophetick Light^d, often mentioned to have shone on his Ancestors, tho' in a much inferior Degree, is a mere Fiction of his Disciples to distinguish him from, and raise him above all other Prophets : Lastly not content to justify his Vices and Defects, they have even transformed them^e into Virtues.

We have sufficiently enlarged in the foregoing Dissertation, on the Character of Mahomet, to conclude that his Fanaticism was voluntary, and did not proceed from Epileptick Convulsions. He began gradually to propagate his Religion in his own Family, first by the Conversion of his Wife and of those who were most in his Interest : Then Abu-Becre a powerful Man in Mecca came over to his Party ; he gained afterwards Ali a near Relation of his, a young Man of a bold, presumptuous, and enterprising Genius ; and by the heat of his Temper fit for undertaking and promoting Novelties in Religion : When Mahomet published his pretended Apostleship to his Kindred, desiring their Concurrence, the others remaining silent, Ali alone accepted to be his Second, he rose up, and promised to assist him on all Occasions, threatening at the same Time to destroy all Opposers : Having thus secured some trusty Friends upon whom he could rely and depend, he made use of several other Means, which are evident Proofs of his political Capacity.

Divinations and Astrology were always highly esteemed by the Nations of the East. This Weakness he improved to his own Advantage, he prevailed upon an

^a Ps. 50. See Pecock's Note on Abulphar. de Orig. Arab. Pag. 183. and following.

^b Corona Laudata, which in the Syriack Language is Mahmud.

^c Comforter. See Herbelot in the Article Parachitha.

^d This prophetick Light seems to be the Light of Reason, which before Christ supplied the want of Revelation amongst the Gentiles. See Boulain Villers, Pag. 201.

^e Witness his Polygamy, which they pretend was in order to people the World with true Believers. See on this Subject Sale, Pag. 40, 41. and Boulain Villers, Pag. 168. and following.

Arabian ^a Astrologer to foretel that great Revolutions were to happen, and a new Religion be established : This disposed the People to receive Mahomet, and prepared their Minds to look upon his System as the Accomplishment of the Prophecy.

The Koraishtes entered into a League against this new Apostle, the Deed and Ratification of this Treaty was deposited in the Ca'aba, to render it more solemn, and make it more respected: The Worms, (or some of Mahomet's Emissaries) destroyed every Letter of this Writing, except the Name of God : Mahomet could not be supposed to know this Accident; he told it to his Uncle Abu-Taleb, (or heard it from him) Abu-Taleb published this as an evident Token of Mahomet being a Prophet, and of the Displeasure of God against this Treaty. Upon Enquiry the Deed was found to be in the fore-mentioned Condition. Thus an Agreement, which might have been fatal to Mahomet's Designs, was broke by this pious Fraud or political Trick.

The pretended Order from God of defending themselves and attacking their Enemies, was not published by Mahomet to his Followers, till he had by repeated mutual Oaths of Allegiance and Protection bound them to himself; and this he did in such Circumstances as made it absolutely necessary to put his Mussulmen to that Trial, and when he himself knew 'twas too late to draw back, being too far engaged, and likely to succeed and prosper : Then Revelation came in a proper Juncture to authorise his taking up Arms against his idolatrous Countrymen, and all Infidels, amongst whom he reckoned also the Christians, as every body knows. He carefully avoided being looked upon as a Persecutor, especially by the last mentioned, tho' their daily persecuting one another might justify him in following the Example they set him, his Reformation being about Matters of the highest Importance, such as Idolatry and Morality. Therefore as Ricault relates it, ^b he made with them a Treaty, the Original of which was found ^c in the Monastery of the Monks of Mount Carmel, near Mount Libanus: It bears Date the last Day of the Moon of the fourth Month, in the fourth Year of the Hegira, and was signed at Medina. But the said Writer who gives us the whole Treaty at Length, takes Notice that the Islamism was then in its Infancy, " Mahomet was then at War with the Arabians, " and was afraid the Christians might otherwise have declared openly against him." For as Salé judiciously observes, ^d the Patience and Humility of this new Apostle decreased in Proportion as his Power increased; well knowing that such Undertakings as his never succeeded but by the Sword, without which their Advances are but flow and precarious, and the Whole in a continual Danger of miscarrying: To which Purpose the famous Machiavel says, Armed Prophets as Theseus, Cyrus, Romulus, &c. have brought their Designs to a good Issue, whereas those who did not back their Prophecies by the Force of Arms are disappointed ^e.

Mahomet after his second Flight to Medina, built a Temple in that Town, for the publick Worship of his new Religion, probably not so much out of Piety; but with a political View, not unlike what the Scripture mentions of Jeroboam; with this Difference, that Mahomet pretending a Mission from God to restore the Reli-

^a Bayle in his Thoughts on Comets, Article 81. mentions this Fact.

^b See Ricault in his State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 2. Pag. 306. of the Edition of Roan in Normandy 1677.

^c The Turks disown this Treaty, and we are inclined to believe it spurious, because Mahomet seems to be over tender and careful of Monasteries, Chapels, and in general of the temporal Interest of the Clergy.

^d See Salé, Pag. 49.

^e Except Christ, and this is a strong Proof of his divine Mission and Authority.

gion of the antient Patriarchs, could not avoid aiming at the Conquest of Mecca, and the Ca'aba, which was the most antient Monument of the Islamism: Neither can it be questioned that Jeroboam, had he been able, would likewise have made himself Master of Jerusalem and Solomon's Temple, which was as much held in Veneration by the Jews, as Mecca and the Ca'aba was by the antient Arabians, and is to this Day by all Mussulmen ^a.

We shall not defer any longer entertaining our Readers with the Description of this famous Temple of Mecca; several Authors call it the Square House, the Arabians always give it the Name of Ca'aba, and the Mussulmen that of ^b Mezged Al-Haram, the sacred House, or Beit-Allah, the House of God; to distinguish it from the above-mentioned Temple at Medina built by Mahomet, which is called Mezged-Al-Nabi, or the House of the Prophet, and is always visited by the truly devout Pilgrims after the Ca'aba. This, according to the Arabian Tradition, has from Time immemorial been the Place appointed for Sacrifices, Prayers, and the most solemn Ceremonies of the antient and modern Islamism; and was built by Abraham and Ishmael: Could this be proved, it would be of an older Date than all the remaining Monuments of Antiquity, even the Egyptian Pyramids. However we shall now introduce the Description of this Temple, as delivered by a modern ^c Writer.

“ We are indebted, says he, to a Swedish Missionary ^d, who by his curious “ Enquiries and Observations in his Travels through Egypt and Arabia, has brought “ from thence an exact Plan of this famous Temple, which no Christian ever “ entered; Reland published it in Latin, with a Print to represent it. On the “ South Part of Mecca, towards the bottom of a Hill, a large Spot of Ground
 “ is enclosed by Porticoes, which on the Outside appear only like a Wall of white “ unpolished Marble, about fifteen or twenty Feet high; each Stone is two “ Cubits square, two of them make up the Thickness of the Wall to be four Cu“ bits: Within the Porticoes the Marble is polished; the Entablature of this Wall “ is only the Quarter of a Circle, a Cubit and a half thick, on which rest the “ gilt Cupola's which are on the Top, and cover all the Porticoes within. The “ Space enclosed is a perfect Square of eighty Fathom on each Side, yet in the “ Inside each Side is but seventy-five Fathom; but at each Corner there is a Build“ ing like a Steeple raised to the Height of three Stories, with a Balcony in each, to “ which a Stair-case, contrived within, does lead. The use of these Steeples is to “ call the People to Prayers at set Times of Day or Night.

“ Each of these Steeples has a Spire two hundred Feet high, gilt at the Top,
 “ and adorned with a Half-moon like unto our Weather-cocks. In the Night“ time there are always Lamps lighted in the Balconies, both for Decency, and in “ Favour of the Pilgrims who may arrive then. In the Middle of each Side of “ the Out-wall, a square Basin twelve Fathom long and broad, and some Feet “ in Depth is kept full of Water for the various Ablutions used by Mussulmen in “ their Prayers. Kalif-Moktader, the eighteenth Emperor of the Race of Abassi-

^a See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient. Article Ca'aba, where he mentions two other Temples built, one out of Envy in Yemen, the other in Chorasan out of a Principle of Superstition.

^b Mezged, from which is derived the Italian Word Mesquita, the French Mosquee, and our English Mosque, for a Turkish Church.

^c Boulain Villers, Pag. 59. and following: The Print here joined is a Representation of the Ca'aba from what Reland has published.

^d Michael Eneman who taught at Upsal.

LE TEMPLE D.

A. La pierre noire enchassée dans le mur de la Cuaba.

B. Endroit où l'on montre des vestiges des piés d'Abraham.

C. Bâtiment qui renferme le p.

LA MECQUE

de Zemzem .

D . Porte de la Caaba.

E. Endroit où l'on donne de l'eau du puits de Zemzem aux Pelerins .

“ des, conveyed Water to these Basins by an Aqueduct, from a Snow-water-house
 “ made in the Mountain of Gassouan: Each Facing of the Wall has three Gates “ leading to the Porticoes, one in the Middle, the other two at the End close to “ the Steeples; the Folding-doors are of Brass or Copper, of an immense Weight, “ adorned with various Sorts of Leaves, from which each Door has its Name. These “ Gates are open or shut at set Times, yet so as to leave one always opened on “ each Side, that Sinners may come at all Times, and from all Parts of the “ World to this universal Place of Refuge, and as they call it, the Seat or Bosom “ of Mercy. From the Porticoes a hollow square Place is seen of twelve hundred “ Fathom in its Superficies; they go down into it by sixteen large and easy Steps “ of Marble, all round the Porticoes.

“ In the Middle of this Space a square Building is raised, the Walls of which “ are entirely covered with Black; the Top of it is flat, and covered with massy “ Gold This is the so much famed Edifice, valued above all the costly “ Palaces raised by the Masters of the World: This the lowly and humble House “ of Abraham, the Friend of God, built in the Time of his being persecuted, a “ Pilgrim wandering on the Earth; God revealed to him, that he had from all “ Eternity made choice of that Place to bestow his Blessings, to receive the “ Vows, and hear the Prayers of all those, who should own and worship his “ supreme Being, and ask of him what is necessary for their everlasting Happiness.
 “ This same House Ishmael received of his Father as his Inheritance, and the “ Portion due to his Eldership, in which he lived to his Dying-day, and near “ which he chose to repose till the general Resurrection in his Tomb, which is still “ to be seen, and has suffered no Change through so many Ages. This is the “ holy House towards which not only the Arabians, but all the Nations of “ the World, who own the Existence and Unity of God, turn themselves and “ direct their Intention at the Time of their most fervent Prayers. . . . The Ca'aba
 “ is only built with the Stones of that Country put together, and cemented “ with Mortar made of a red Earth, which is hardened by Length of Time: It is “ situate exactly to the four cardinal Points of the Globe; the Height of it is “ twenty-four Cubits, besides the Rails on the Top; from North to South it is “ also twenty-four Cubits, and only twenty-three from East to West; four Cubits “ are supposed to be the Height of a Man of an ordinary Size. The Covering “ of the House is of flat Stones, over which is laid massy Gold, with a Spout of “ the same Metal to throw off the Water towards the North, directly upon the “ Stone which is over the Tomb of Ishmael. The Rails about this Terras are of “ massy Gold likewise, and three Cubits high, a vast Load for any Wall to bear,
 “ if less strong than this.

“ On the East Side of this House, at three Cubits Distance from the South- “ East Corner, is an Opening like a Door, through which alone Light can come “ in, raised four or five Cubits from the Level of the Ground; the Floor is like“ wise raised to that Height according to antient Architecture, in order to render “ the Dwelling more wholesome. This Door has two Leaves of massy Gold fixed
 “ to the Wall with Hinges, and Supporters of the same Metal, but the Threshold “ is one single natural Stone, before which all the Pilgrims bow their Heads and “ kiss it with Veneration. The Eastern Monarchs complied heretofore with this

^a What follows is according to the Opinion of the Mussulmen.

“ Ceremony, and the other Customs used by ordinary Pilgrims, but of late they “ send others to perform it in their Stead. Haron who was Contemporary with “ Charles Magne, is the last Kalif who did it in Person eight Times: But some “ great Princes have visited this House since, the chief of which is Bajazet the “ Second, in 1483, and in his Journey received the Account of the Death of his “ Father Mahomet the Second. The Door of the Ca'aba is seldom opened, because “ it contains nothing that can raise the Pilgrims Devotion; nothing is to be seen “ there but the Gold which covers the Floor, the Ceiling, and the Walls: The “ Arabians had placed some of their Idols in this holy Place, but since Mahomet no “ such Profanation has happened in the Temple of Mecca, tho' otherwise defiled “ in the Civil Wars.

“ The Outside of the Building is hid by a black Silk Covering, which is re“ newed every Year at the Feast of Beiram, and the greatest Monarchs of that “ Persuasion furnish that Expence each in his Turn: But the golden Rails at the “ Top are not covered, in order to strike the Pilgrims with Admiration; for which “ Reason likewise, all the Space within six Foot under the Rails is covered quite “ round the Building with gold Tissue, of exquisite Richness and Workmanship.
 “ The above-mentioned black Colour, furnished Mahomet with a Pretence to change
 “ the Colour of his Standards, which was white before he took Mecca; and the “ Kalifs his Successors in Imitation of that black Cover, put some of the same Stuff
 “ at the chief Entrance into their Palaces; it reached from the Top to the Bot“ tom, and covered the Threshold of the Door, which all Mussulmen, even Kings “ and Princes, were obliged to touch with their Foreheads before they could be ad“ mitted into the Presence of the Kalifs.

“ Reland's Description of this House informs us farther, that all round it is a “ narrow Pavement of Marble, near which about the South-wall, towards the “ South East Corner, lies a huge black Stone, which seems to be unhewed and “ unpolished black Marble, and is called the Holy Stone; but in the Arabian “ Language it is named Brachtan, that is, shining, bright, or white, for they sup“ pose it lost that Quality upon Account of the Sins of Men. 'Tis very likely “ this is only a Remnant of some Idol, kept there out of Superstition by the an-“ tient Inhabitants of Arabia; for both Scripture and prophane History shew that “ some Idols were without any Shape: Some are of Opinion this was consecrated “ to Saturn, who is called Remphan, and was honoured to avoid the Evils of which “ he was supposed to be the Author. Others pretend it was dedicated to Venus, “ who was always highly worshipped in the East; not that Venus whom the Greeks
 “ and the Latins honoured, but the bright Star which goes either before, or fol“ lows the Sun, and is called by that Name. Be it as it will, Mahomet spared this “ Idol when he destroyed the rest, being afraid of offending the People, but he “ gave another religious Turn to their Imagination; assuring his Followers, that it “ had lost its primitive Colour for the Sins of Men, and should not recover it till
 “ all Nature was purified by the last Judgment.

“ Over-against the middle Part of the same East-side, at the Distance of three “ Cubits, stands another square Building ten Cubits long, broad and high; the “ Roof of it is supported by four Pillars, one at each Corner; it has three Stories,
 “ the last of which has a small Cupola, ending in a Half-moon of Silver double “ gilt, which looks like pure Gold; and was given by one of the Kalifs as a Cover

“ to the famous Stone highly honoured there, which they pretend was made soft
 “ by a Miracle, to receive the Impression of Abraham's Feet, still to be seen at this “ Day, as a standing Proof that God has made choice of this Temple to hear the “ Prayers of his Servants. On the North Part of this Building stands another, in-
 “ to which they enter by a large Door, a Stair-case of eighteen Steps leads to a co“ vered Gallery, over which is a Pyramid. The Imans or Priests of that Temple, “ preach from thence to the People, and to the Pilgrims ; Mahomet published from “ this Place the greatest Part of the Koran: At a small Distance from this Gallery
 “ or Pulpit towards the North, ends the magnificent Row of Pillars which forms
 “ the inmost Enclosure of the Ca'aba, which we shall mention shortly, and at the “ same Place begins a Wall Breast high, made of Marble, as all the rest is, which “ makes an oblong Square, and encloses the fore-mentioned Gallery, Abraham's “ Monument, and a wooden Stair-case upon Wheels, by which they go up to “ the Door of the Ca'aba when some zealous Pilgrims are desirous of seeing the In“ side of it. In the Middle of this Square facing the East-side of the Ca'aba, “ stands an old Gate supported by two thick and massy Posts about fifteen Cubits “ high, ending in a Vault made Archwise, but so thin in the Middle, that it is not “ half a Cubit thick : This is called the old Gate, and was heretofore the only En“ trance to the holy House. Mahomet caused all his Civil and Religious Edicts to be “ posted up there, and the Key of it was in the Custody of the ^a Koraisbites : It “ had thick Copper Foldings, which Kalif Moktadir took away to make a Coffin
 “ for himself, and instead of it, gave the gilt Silver, which covers the Monument “ of Abraham.

“ On the left of this Gate, at thirty Cubits Distance from it, still joined by the “ said Breast-high Wall, is a large square Building, the Corner of which is opposite “ to the South-East Angle of the Ca'aba : Each Side is adorned with two Doors,
 “ and two Windows, being a foreign Architecture, in Imitation of the Grecian.
 “ The Roof of it is gilt, and has a Cupola and a Half-moon on the Top : It covers
 “ the chief Opening to the Well called Zem-zem, which Mussulmen pretend is the “ same which the Angel shewed to Agar, Mother of Isbmael, in the Desert. There “ are two more such Buildings turned the same Way, which cover the Openings
 “ to the same Well, contrived for the Use and Convenience of the many Pilgrims “ who come thither from all Parts : Each of these Buildings are of an equal Height, “ and their Roof according to the Model of the first ; all are of white Marble. On “ the North-side a Marble Wall six Cubits high, is raised in a semicircular Form, “ so as to exceed the Breadth of the Ca'aba three Cubits on each Side. Within “ this Wall is the Tomb of Isbmael, being a Marble Stone laid flat on the Ground “ without any Inscription. This is all on the East and North-side of the holy “ House, nothing is to be seen on the West and South-sides.

“ The Beholder's Admiration and Attention are chiefly raised by the magnificent “ Row of Pillars, ranged about the Ca'aba, yet not so as to enclose it quite ; it “ begins at the South-east Point over-against the black Stone, and ends at the North“ east near the above-mentioned Gallery or Pulpit, so that it only fills up three “ Quarters of the Circle, and is 780 Cubits, or 1365 Feet long. In this Space

^a Mahomet was of that Tribe, but they persecuted him, and obliged him to fly from Mecca, yet when he took that City and Temple, he restored the Key to them, and refused his Son-in-law who desired to have it, Saying, Justice and Truth must be the Support of my Family, not Acts of Violence and mere Force.

“ are set up fifty two Pillars of white Marble twenty Cubits high, without Proportion of Chapiters or Bases, having only a Turbant at the Top, and being joined by a Set of Rails, in which they are mortised ; on these Rails two thousand Silver Lamps are set to burn in the Night : The said Pillars are also joined at the Top by strong Silver-bars, on each of which hang by golden Chains more Lamps, which being lighted also, make a glorious Illumination, besides the Lights about the Monument of Abraham, and the other Buildings of this Sanctuary.

“ Three other Edifices are raised on the Outside of this Row of Pillars ; they are square, open, supported by Pillars, and their Roofs are of a different Form. They are the Mosques belonging to the three orthodox Sects of Mahometism. The first is that of the ^a Hambalites, a plain Building on the South-side where the Row of Pillars ends, and leaves an empty Space to the Well of Zem-zem, The second is for the Malekites, it stands West, and is supported by eight Pillars. The third has two Stories, adorned with Pillars above and below ; it stands North, over-against Ishmael's Tomb, and belongs to the Disciples of Kanifah. Beyond this is a large empty Space paved with Marble, where People meet to pray : Slaves bring in Carpets for the Ease of the Faithful, who come into it without Shoes or any fine Clothes, keep a deep Silence, and are so neat, that though Mussulmen are famous for a decent religious Behaviour in their Mosques, one may easily perceive that they have a particular Veneration for this, as being the chief Object of their Faith.

“ The Porticoes through which People enter, serve also to go out ; First, they ascend a Flight of large fine Steps, which leads to them ; then on each Side fifty five Pillars distant eighteen Feet from one another, and as high to the Arches which they support : The Galleries are likewise eighteen Feet broad, but the Roof and the Arches are too low, according to the modern Notion of Architecture. This Defect is in some Measure supplied by the Cupola's above : They are only of Lead gilt, and each of them covers two Arches, and ends with a Half-moon of three Feet. There are twenty-seven of them on each Side, so that the whole Height from the Bottom of the Steps is twelve Fathom : The Beauty of the Prospect is raised by Bars of gilt Metal, which cross every Arch, and support Lamps of the same Kind with several Matches in them, both to give Light to the Galleries, and answer the Illumination about the Ca'aba. All these are lighted when the first Star appears in the Evening, and are kept burning till Day-light eclipse them. Two hundred and twenty Pillars form two hundred and sixteen Arches covered by one hundred and eight Cupola's, besides the four high Spires. This is Reland's Description of this famous Temple ; no Christian was ever admitted into it. The Turks are not able to give us a compleat Representation of it, being intirely ignorant of the Art of Painting or Drawing, so that this is only what an ingenious Swede could gather from his Conversation with several Pilgrims, during the Time of a long Residence he made at Cairo.

We have mentioned before the Opinion of the Arabians concerning the Antiquity of it ; its Enclosure at first was only a strong Wall of a small Extent, with one only Gate. Kalif Omar the First enlarged it, upon Account of the Increase of the Number of Pilgrims in Proportion to the Progress of Mahometism. He did not employ any Part of his immense Riches in adorning it ; being per-

^a We shall mention these Sects in the Sequel of this Work.

“suaded (such were his simple and plain Notions of Religion) that God’s Honour “could not be promoted by adding new Embellishments to this old Building, more “than by leaving it in the Form which he had for so many Ages approved.”

Mahomet has every where recommended to his Followers to look upon this Temple as being the Center of his Religion, to prize and value it, as the Jews did Jerusalem, and to repair thither: He has annexed many Privileges in Favour of those who should perform this Pilgrimage, both temporal^a and spiritual Blessings are plentifully bestowed in that holy Temple. The wonderful deep and lasting Impression of Abraham’s Feet in a hard Stone^b, is highly extolled; every Thing is mysterious even in the Road which leads to it^c. The very seeing this Temple is according to some Mahometan Doctors, equally meritorious in the Sight of God, as if they had complied with all the inferior Duties of Religion. The black Stone is a standing Proof of the Hainousness of Sin, Mount Arafat in the meeting of Adam and Eve, is a Representation of Man’s being reconciled to God. The Ca’aba itself, (but not the Porticoes) is a Place of Refuge to all Criminals^d; and exemplary Punishments have overtaken the wicked Violaters of the sacred Asylum, and this is a lively Emblem of the Pardon obtained from God in any Part of this holy Place. The Birds of the Air^e have a Respect for the Roof of this Sanctuary; the Hearts of all Mussulmen have a natural Bent and Affection for it. A devout Mahometan melts into Tears of Joy or Compunction at the Thought of, or looking towards it. The Prophets and Patriarchs go thither in invisible Processions; Angels guard and protect it. Lastly, every Mussulman who performs this Visit, or is born during his Mother’s Journey thither, is intitled to the Privilege of wearing a green^f Turbant. After all, the Mahometans themselves own, that this Pilgrimage is often accompanied with various Disorders and criminal Excesses; and seldom followed by real and sincere Conversions^g. The Manner of performing it has been related in the foregoing Dissertation; we shall therefore conclude this with the Opinion of Hallage^h. He was so bold as to pretend, that those whose Circumstances did not allow to go to Mecca, might represent the sacred Temple in any Part of his House consecrated to that Use, keep it very clean, perform in it privately all the Ceremonies prescribed by their Law in the Pilgrimage. Take thirty poor Orphans, give them Victuals and Clothes, and some Money: This, Hallage pretended, was of equal Merit as to perform the Pilgrimage, and much more agreeable to God, than pretending as some Men do, to meet in a Place to hear the Word of God, and forget his Orders the Moment they go out.

^a See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient.

^b See the same Author in the same Work.

^c See Boulain Villers, Pag. 87.

^d See Herbelot as above.

^e Chiefly Pigeons descended lineally, says Gabriel of Sion and some other Christian Authors, from the Pigeon who spoke to Mahomet in the Ear; but whatever may be the Origin of that Story, it is certain that Pigeons are often used as Messengers.

^f This Privilege belongs also to all those who are, or pretend to be Descendants from Mahomet.

^g See Herbelot in the Article Hagge, so the Pilgrimage is called.

^h See Herbelot’s Article Hallage. This Man lived in the eleventh Age of Christianity; he was put to Death for these Opinions. Some think he was a Christian.

A DISSERTATION

On the false Notions generally entertained concerning Mahometism.

S E C T. I.

Most Religions have been misrepresented by Adversaries, first the Jewish.

AL L antient and modern Religions have had the common Misfortune of being first ill understood, not well explained, and then persecuted, with an additional Weight of Injustice and Calumny from their respective Enemies. The Jews, who had received all their Laws and Customs from God, the Author and Fountain of all Justice and Holiness, underwent the same Fate, and though they might glory that their Worship was not unworthy of the supreme Being ; yet Lies were told, and Calumnies spread against them by their Enemies ; who, in other Respects, were Persons of Merit and Worth.

Tacitus was an Historian of Penetration and Judgment ; he had frequent Opportunities of being rightly informed by the Jews themselves : He nevertheless is guilty of gross Mistakes in the Account he gives of them. He says they were called in Latin, Judæi instead of ^b Idæi, from Mount Ida ^c. He pretends they were expelled out of Egypt by reason of a loathsome Distemper to which ^d they were subject. He affirms that in Remembrance and out of Gratitude towards ^e an Ass, who had shewed them both where they might have Water to drink, and the right Road through the Desert in which they had lost their Way ; they erected a Temple, and paid religious Worship to that Animal, &c.

Plutarch did not take more Care to be rightly informed in his Table Talk, he ventures to affirm that the Jews adored a Boar, as being the Inventor of Husbandry and Tillage ; that their Feast of Tabernacles was kept by them in Honour ^f of Bacchus, as likewise the Sabbath. The Heathens in general made a Laughing-stock of the pretended Idleness of the Jews on that Day, and of several other harmless Customs

^a This Dissertation is only an Abstract of Reland's Preface to his Latin Treatise of Mahometism : We hope it will give Content to our Readers.

^b Hist. Book 5. Chap. 2.

^c A Mountain in the Island of Creta.

^d The severe Laws published by Moses against Lepers, are a Proof that many Jews were infected with that Distemper.

^e Effigiem animalis, quo monstrante, errorem sitimque depulerant, sacrare. Ibid. Chap. 4.

^f This was occasioned by the Feast of Tabernacles which happened about that Time.

of that Nation, which they thought frivolous. The Poet Rutilius ^a in particular jeers them for lighting no Fires on the ſaid Day, to comply literally with a Paſſage in the Book of Exodus ^b: He reproaches them with their cold Sabbathſ, their colder Hearts, and pretends their Repoſe is a Figure of a God tired with Labour. He did not know or was wilfully ignorant of the true Reaſon of that Inſtitution, which was not for Idleneſs, but to be free from all worldly Cares, in order to ſerve the Creator who made the World in fix Days.

S E C T. II.

Chriſtian Religion has not been more ſpared than the Jewiſh.

When the Primitive Chriſtians ſeparated themſelves from the Jews, from whom they drew their Origin, Heathens loaded them with infinite Calumnies, and entertained the loweſt and moſt deſpicable Notions of them. They never would make any Diſtinction between the two Religions, and reproached both alike with the ſame Crimes: The Chriſtians moreover were upbraided for the Follies and baſe Lewdneſs of the Doctrines and Practice of the Gnoſticks and other Hereticks of the firſt Ages. It was reported that their God had a Hoof like an Aſs ^c; that they paid a ſhameful Homage to the Privy-parts of their Priests; that they did eat the Fleſh of a Child covered over with Paſte ^d, and after that deteſtable Meal, put out the Lights, and promiſcuouſly knew one another criminally, without Diſtinction of Age or Sex; and that they ^e threatned the World with Fire and Deſtruction. The Apologiſts for the Chriſtian Religion complain of theſe and ſuch like Calumnies, grounded only on the Ignorance of the true Doctrine and Ceremonies of Penance, Eucharift, and concerning the Day of Judgment, as then taught and performed. This Miſrepresentation was carried to ſuch a Height, that even the Belief of the Unity of the Godhead was made a Pretence to accuſe Chriſtians of being Atheiſts, and the Form uſed in the Pagan Sacrifices was levelled againſt them ^f. This Ill-treatment is pathetically complained of by Tertullian ^g, “ We are, ſays he, looked upon as “ Murderers, inceſtuous, ſacrilegious Perſons, as the Scum and Plague of Mankind, “ wicked to the higheſt Degree, and guilty of all Sorts of Crimes, Enemies to
“ the Gods, to the Emperors, to all good Morals, to the whole Frame of Nature, “ ſo far that the very Name of Chriſtian is odious and become criminal.” Pliny ^h, who was a Man of the greateſt Probity in his Age, gave to the Emperor Trajan a different Account of the Chriſtians; ſome few others had ſo much Moderation as not to vilify the Chriſtians and their Myſteries, but gave a tolerable Deſcription of them, and ſomewhat approaching the Truth. But how ſmall is their Number,

*a Reddimus obſcenæ convicia debita Genti,
..... Cui frigida Sabbata Cordi,
Sed cor frigidius Relligione ſua eſt.
Septima quæque dies turpi damnata veterno
Tanquam laſſati mollis imago dei, &c.*

^b Chap. 35. Ver. 3. Ye ſhall kindle no Fire upon the Sabbath-day.

^c Ononychites.

^d This ſhews that the Primitive Chriſtians expreſſed their Belief of the Eucharift in different Terms from thoſe uſed by the late Reformers.

^e A wrong Notion drawn from the Doctrine of the laſt Judgment, which the Chriſtians thought would happen ſoon.

^f Expel the Atheiſts.

^g In his Apology towards the Beginning.

^h Pliny the younger in the tenth Book of his Letters. Letter 97.

when compared to those who have delighted in casting the most odious Colours upon Christian Doctrine !

S E C T. III.

The same Misrepresentations still practised.

If we now consider what has been done in the unhappy Divisions of Christians within two Centuries, and what is still practised by some fiery Controvertists, we shall meet with the same Complaints on all Sides, and not without some Ground. Protestants accuse Genebrardus, ^a Saunders, ^b Maracci, ^c and several others of throwing Dirt, and charging them wrongfully with blasphemous Opinions, as being Consequences of their Principles, tho' flatly denied by them. But above all, they are highly affronted at being called the Descendants of Mahomet. One Vivaldo ^d a Dominican Friar, has diverted himself with drawing a Parellel betwixt the Mahometans and Protestants, and another betwixt the Mahometans and the Catholicks ; as if every Opinion or Custom of Mahometism was to be condemned ; Mussulmen have spoke of some of the divine Perfections and Attributes conformably to Truth ^e and right Reason : Must those Truths be rejected because uttered by Mahometans ? 'Twould be Madness. But Catholicks recriminate also against Protestants for misrepresenting their Tenets, calling them idolatrous, &c. ^f The Truth is, ancient and modern, sacred and prophane Histories furnish us with innumerable Instances of wilful or involuntary Ignorance of ones own Religion, and much more of the Tenets of other People ; so that it is not surprizing we should find that the Mahometan Religion has undergone the same Fate.

S E C T. IV.

The Reasons why Mahometism is so much misrepresented.

The chief Cause of this Injustice proceeds from not understanding the Arabick Language, without which it is impossible to have a true Notion, and by Consequence to judge rightly of that Religion : Yet few, if any of those who have wrote on that Subject, were acquainted with the Arabick. Moreover the Genius of the Mahometans is averse from talking to Strangers of, or disputing with them about Religion ^g. These two Reasons have concurred to the Misrepresentations, Contempt, and infamous Character of Mahometism. Mahomet has been compared to the Devil ^h, and his Religion thought unworthy of being confuted. If any young Student in Divinity is desirous of being thoroughly informed of his Tenets ; instead of advising him to study Arabick, to read Mahomet in the Original, to be conversant with his Commentators and Apologists, in order to inquire, without trusting to others, into what he must know, before he can be qualified to refute it ; his Ignorance and Laziness are indulged, he is either made to believe that it is downright losing of ^a Genebrardus Archbishop of Aix, in his Chronology, Pag. 107.

^b In his Book de Schismate, &c.

^c In his Predrome or Preliminaries on the Koran. Pag. 70. of the third Part, &c.

^d In his Notes on a Book of Pedro dela Cevalleria, intituled, The Zeal of Christ against the Jews and Saracens. This Book is not to be met with, and the Loss is not great.

^e See Herbelot's Biblioth. Orient.

^f See Papist represented and misrepresented, and most Controversy Writers.

^g See Boyle in the Article of Mahomet concerning his Apologists.

^h Bibliander, a Reformer of Zurich, is the Author of this Parellel.

Time to confute such absurd Notions, or directed to peruse only some smattering, superficial and blundering Controvertist.

But we must own, that the Mahometans are not so foolish and mad as we imagine ; common Sense is of all Countries and Climates ; and their Religion could not have made such astonishing Progress in Asia, Africa, and Europe, if it had been so full of Absurdities, as most Christians suppose it to be. 'Tis bad, 'tis sensual, and therefore the more dangerous. All true Christians ought to detest it as the Bane and Scourge of Christianity, all this is true : The Conclusion we draw from thence is, that our utmost Endeavours are to be used to find out the Wiles of Satan, to sift this Religion to the Bottom, and thus prevent its dangerous Consequences. “ Believe me, says Maracci, ^a more Venom lies hid in that Sect, than is generally “ believed How could it otherwise happen, that such a Number of Men, “ not only of the remaining Idolaters, but of Jews and Christians, and even Religi- “ ous, should fall off to embrace Mahometism ; you'll say they are enticed by Li- “ bertinism ; I believe it, but they are farther deceived, by an Appearance of Good- “ ness and Truth. This Superstition has retained every Part of the Christian Reli- “ gion which seems plausible, probable, and agreeable to the Light and Law of “ Nature, and intirely rejects the Mysteries of our Faith, which seem at first “ Sight to be incredible and impossible, and chiefly such as are thought too hard “ for human Nature ^b Reason and Experience have always made me “ believe, that if the Koran and the Gospel were at the same Time proposed to those “ (idolatrous) Nations, unless they are first well instructed and convinced of the “ Truth of the Gospel, and of the Lies and Frauds of the Koran, they will con- “ stantly embrace the Koran and Mahometan Superstition ^c, preferably to the Gospel “ and Christian Religion. For the Koran proposes such Tenets as are more propor- “ tioned to the Dictates of Nature in this corrupt State ; that there is one God, Al- “ mighty, All-knowing, who has created and governs all Things that fre- “ quent and fervent Prayers are to be addressed to him, Alms given to the Poor, “ Our Bodies mortified by Fasts, Justice observed, Modesty, kind Offices, “ Piety, and other Virtues practised ; that no Man is to be injured, Thefts, Adul- “ teries, Murthers, and other Crimes avoided ; that worldly Goods, as being tran- “ sitory, are to be despised, and good Works performed. Moreover, that all are to “ give an Account to God of their Deeds, the Just to meet in Heaven an eternal “ Happiness in the Enjoyment of what human Nature most earnestly desires, and “ the Wicked to be eternally tormented in Hell If on the other Side a Mini- “ ster of the Gospel proposes to a Heathen the Trinity, Incarnation, Poverty, Death “ on a Cross, and Burial of God, the Mystery of the Eucharist, Necessity of the Sa- “ crament, of Penance, Indissolubility of Marriage with one Woman only “ doing good to our Enemies, an everlasting Happiness in the Enjoyment of Goods, “ which neither the Eye has seen, &c. . . . the said Heathen will turn away from “ these and embrace Mahometism.

^a In the Preface to his Preliminaries on the Koran.

^b The same in the Preface to his Confutation of the Koran.

^c See Bayle's Article of Mahomet in the Note (DD.) why Mahometans do gain more Profelytes than Christians.

S E C T. V.

On the Necessity of inquiring into the Tenets of Mahometism.

Some are of Opinion, that as we are at so great Distance from the Mahometans, and they are not willing to enter into Dispute, we need not trouble ourselves with inquiring nicely into their Opinions ; or that even in case we should be obliged to confute them, we may easily do it by the Help of several Latin Books, without spending our Time in poring over Arabick Characters to no End or Purpose.

We shall examine in the following Paragraphs the Strength of the two last Pretences : As to the first, it must be owned, that some other Christian Nations are nearer to Mahometans, than we are. Moreover, it is not here insisted, that Divines ought to go about confuting the Tenets of the Koran, preferably to the erroneous Opinions of our own Countrymen, Neighbours, Relations and Friends : This to be sure must be the first Care of Pastors and Doctors ; but it cannot be said with Truth, that we have no Commerce, or Correspondence with Mahometans ; we have great Dealings with them at Constantinople and other Countries subject to the Turks, on the Coasts of Africa, in Syria, in Persia, and in the East-Indies, where all the Towns are mostly inhabited by Mussulmen : The Seamen are often taken and reduced to Slavery by their Pyrates ; to what Dangers is not their Faith exposed to, unless they are well instructed in the Grounds of our holy Religion, and forewarned of the Errors and Contradictions of the Koran ! Besides, if we should maintain that the studying and diving into false Opinions, is to be neglected, how detrimental would this Opinion prove to all Arts and Sciences ? The Knowledge of learned and foreign Languages, of the Manners, Customs, and Religion of antient Nations, or even of the Modern, if at any Distance from our Country, will immediately be censured as useless : Such a Discourse cannot proceed from any Wiseman, whose Life and Actions shew that he sets a just Value upon every Subject, and making an exact Difference between the more or the less important, applies himself to the Study of each, in Proportion to the Advantage which may be reaped from them. If all those who censure such Studies, would themselves mind only what is necessary, if they did not sow Dissentions and encourage Disputes about trivial and useless Questions of the School, Christianity would be restored to its primitive Splendor and Dignity : If they did not use base unworthy Means to obtain Preferments in the Academies, in the Church, in the State, to satisfy their Pride, Avarice or Ambition, they might then discountenance such Studies, and pretend they are not necessary for Salvation ; but they find it an easier Task to blame others, than to mend themselves ; though the latter would be more conducive to their own eternal Happiness.

We are far from thinking, that inquiring into Mahometism is of no Advantage ; we rather believe, that it cannot but excite in us deep Sentiments of Gratitude towards Almighty God, when we find, by a strict Examen, that a Religion so full of Superstition, contradictory and absurd Notions, is embraced by so many Millions of Men of bright Genius's, and better Morals than is to be found amongst some, and those not a few, Christians. We ought to be thankful for being delivered from such a Misfortune by the Grace of God ! What are we ? That God should prefer us before them.

S E C T. VI.

Whether Mahometans are allowed to dispute about Religion?

We freely own the Mahometans are not inclined to Disputes, and when attacked by Christians, give them generally no other Answer, but that they believe and practise punctually what the Koran teaches, esteeming that Book as inspired from God. Therefore 'tis to no Purpose to enter into Particulars with them, since they constantly alledge the Koran as a convincing Proof of the Truth of what they hold: The only Way of confuting them is to attack the Authority of that Book, and to demonstrate by the Blasphemies it contains that it cannot proceed from God. For Instance, Mahomet^a was so impudent as to make God the Abetter of his Crimes, by pretending he had an immediate Revelation from him, which allowed him to indulge his brutal Appetite, and even to take criminal Liberties with other Men's Wives^b. Again Mahomet acknowledges the Truth of the Gospel, which nevertheless the Koran contradicts in many Points; one might by Consequence prove to them first, that the Gospel has not been altered,^c but their Koran contradicts itself; and then convince them that their Distinction of Things abrogating and abrogated is absurd, and opens a broad Way to justify every silly, ridiculous, and self-contradicting Book. How few have a sufficient Tincture of Arabick Learning, to be able to draw out of the Mahometan Books the false, doubtful, or absurd Opinions which they contain, and make a proper Use of them against Mahometism?

But on the other Side, if it was absolutely true that Mussulmen are quite Strangers to all religious Disputes, how could the Missionaries, sent by the Pope into Persia and the Indies, bring over so many to the Catholick Faith, as it is undoubted they do? We shall not mention the Acts of Raimond Lully, published by Sollerus, by which it evidently appears, that he had often disputed against them in Africa and other Places: We have a more recent, and less doubtful Authority, the above cited learned Maracci, in the Preface to his Translation of the Book of Mahomet. “ I know certainly, and all those who are rightly informed are likewise fully convinced, that Christians may dispute with the Mahometans even in their own Dominions, provided this be not done publicly, (tho' even that is allowed in some Places) nor with any opprobrious Language against Mahomet and the Koran, but with Friends and others with whom one is familiarly acquainted. On such Occasions you may propose to them, modestly, and under Colour of informing yourself, many Points concerning their Law, and their Sect, which they have taken from our holy Scripture in a wrong Sense; inquire into the Reason of it, object without wrangling what may confute them; answer with Prudence what they may say against our Religion; explain and prove the Truth of our religious Mysteries. This our Missionaries perform daily, with Impunity and good Success. This is not all, Christians not only dispute by Word of Mouth, but even write Books of Controversy. One of them had published a Book in Favour of the Catholick Doctrine, under the Title of A Looking-glass which shews the Truth.

^a See the 33d Chapter of the Koran.

^b See the Notes of Sale on the said 33d Chapter.

^c See Bayle's Article on Mahomet; wherein he cites a Passage from Pocock, Pag. 186. of his Specimen.

“ A noble Persian named Abmed, Son of Zin Alabedin, surprized at the Title and “ Doctrine of the Book ^a, wrote against it, and called the Book which con“ tained his Objections, The Polisher of the Looking-glass, endeavouring to overthrow “ the Catholick Doctrine, chiefly about the Trinity and Divinity of Christ, and to “ establish the Errors of Mahomet.”

In this whole Question we must take Notice of the Time, the Place, and the Method of such Disputes. The Freedom has heretofore been greater than it now is, as appears evidently by Abbé Renaudot's History of the Patriarchs of Alexandria. This learned and judicious Writer, Pag. 377. says, “ The Christians of the East were formerly allowed to speak and write openly in Defence of their Religion, as may plainly be proved by the Controversies of those Days still extant in Manuscript. Such are the Disputes of Abraham of Tirbane with Abdel Rakman, of two Monks with a Jew named Amram; of Elias Metropolitan of Nisibis, in the Diarbekir, with the Vizir Abulkacem, Son of Huccin the Megrobite; of Isa, Son of Zaraa, with Abulbacer the Balchite; of Abuccra or Abucaras, by way of an apologetical Conference in Favour of Christianity, held in the Presence of the Kalif Almanion; another Conference at Cairo in the 639th Year of the Hegira, of Christ 1270, about Trinity and Incarnation besides many other Writings of which we might give a long List.” This Liberty has been enjoyed in former Times, and they may obtain it again, tho' at present, throughout the Ottoman Empire, Christians are strictly forbid speaking against Mahometism. But, 2. as to Place, Christians are not used in all Places with the same Severity: For Instance, they are allowed more Liberty in Persia than in Turky, both as to Religion and every other Concerns, of Life: Besides, our Merchants traffick with the Mahometans in several Parts of the East-Indies, where the latter are not so powerful, and cannot do much Harm: In such Places no doubt religious Controversies might be carried on successfully and without Fear. 3. As to the Manner of disputing, Maracci has advised Modesty, Prudence, Secrecy; he has excluded all injurious Language, all Spirit of Contention; he has mentioned an insinuating Behaviour, seeming only to desire to be instructed; if, to all this, we add the Motives of Credibility of the Christian Religion, the convincing Proofs of the Scriptures being divinely inspired; it might not be impossible to convince, and with God's Help to convert those seduced Nations.

But, we must own it, the greatest Obstacles to this glorious Work, are first the Ignorance (a sure and infallible Consequence of Slavery) of the Christians of the East: They are not acquainted with the true Grounds of Christianity, how then can it be expected they should speak or write well in its Defence, or confute the Mahometans? Secondly, the European Christians who travel or settle in the East, are induced to it chiefly by Curiosity or Interest, Salvation of Souls is the least in their Thoughts; neither are they endowed with any of the Qualifications which are requisite for such an Undertaking: And after all the bad Example, the criminal, lewd, and disorderly Lives of the Christians; their Lies, Cheats, and other shameful Practices, are the greatest Impediment to their being the happy Instruments of this good and holy Work. This casts a Blemish upon the Religion, and has occasioned an invincible Aversion for embracing it, and for its Professors: It has given Birth

^a These are the Words of Guadagnoli who wrote an Apology, printed at Rome, in which he confutes the noble Persian's Book.

Mahometism, and the Causes of its Progress. 47

to a common Saying, When a Mussulman is suspected of any Lie, Cheat, or other shameful Action, What, says he, with Anger and Disdain, Do you take me for a Christian ! We cannot but blush that such Things are said, and cannot be confuted^a.

S E C T. VII.

Most of the Latin and other Books against Mahometism are not sufficient to give us a true Notion of it.

'Tis confidently asserted, that we have Books enough wrote in Latin, or in modern Languages, by which we may both know exactly, and powerfully defeat Mahometism : This is a groundless Surmise, most of those pretended Confutors have rather attacked the Shadow of that Religion, than the Reality of it. Some of them labour to prove that God is a pure Spirit without any Mixture of Matter, others that Devils are not God's Friends, but his Enemies. Many have endeavoured to demonstrate, that bodily Ablutions and Purifications are no ways conducive to the Holiness of the Soul : Several such Opinions have been learnedly confuted in long elaborate Treatises, the Authors of which have applauded themselves, as if they had obtained a full Victory over Mahomet and his Doctrine : Whereas these Tenets never were any Part of the Mussulmen's Belief. And after all, such Writers are guilty of that Sort of Sophistry which is called the Ignorance of the Question^b, and instead of destroying real Errors, have only fought against the senseless Fictions of their own Brains.

S E C T. VIII.

On the Usefulness of the Arabick Language.

'Tis often alledged that the Advantage which may be reaped from the Oriental Languages and the Arabick in particular, is not worth the Trouble and Time spent in, and required to learn them, unless for those who intend to settle amongst the Arabians or other Mahometans : The Lives of several Christians having been endangered upon Account of their not pronouncing well some Arabick Words : This is only a Subterfuge to favour Ignorance, and flatter the Laziness of young Students. What useful Discoveries have not learned Men made by their Knowledge of those Languages ? Pocock, Bochart, Erpenius, Goliush, Catellus, Hottinger, and several others, have found out by that Means the genuine Sense of several Words and Sentences, which the Jewish Doctors themselves did not understand, as being to be met with only once in the Scripture, in the Book of Job for Instance, or in some Prophecy. Dictionaries may supply that Defect, if we credit these Advocates for Ignorance ; but such Books often differ one from the other, according to the different Parties which the Compilers of them have embraced, and by Consequence we are as much at a Loss as before we had Recourse to them. As to the Jewish Dictionaries, all we can learn from them is, that such a Word is expressed and understood in such a Sense in the Targum, that the Signification of it has some

^a Some body said wittily that Christians intended to convince the Turks, that our Religion is divine, since it subsists in Spite of all our Impiety and Wickedness.

^b Ignorantia Elenchi, that is proving or disproving what is not the Question:

Affinity with another Word, and differs from it only by the Transposition of a Letter, &c. But if we understand the antient Greek Versions, if we are versed in the Oriental Languages or Dialects, the Samaritan, Syriack, Arabick, if a Word is not found in the Hebrew, we look for it in the other Dialects: As even now we are often obliged to have recourse to the French and Saxon, and even Welsh Languages to find out the true Meaning and Origin of some English Words.

To this our Adversaries object, that the same Word has different Significations in the same Language, and much more in the various Dialects. We must own this does happen sometimes, but for one such Word there are hundreds which have not altered their first Signification, and this may be evidently proved by the other Parts of the Discourse, at least so far as is consistent with such Enquiries which are not susceptible of mathematical Demonstration. But say they, all these grammatical or critical Remarks, the Affinity of some Hebrew Words with their Dialects, by which we pretend to clear up the Difficulties which occur in the Scripture, are already set down in the Works of the Learned; we have correct and approved Versions of the sacred Writings, we may without farther Trouble find there what we have occasion for. We answer first, that 'tis more satisfactory to see with one's own Eyes, than to trust to the Eyes of others. Besides, we ourselves may make new Discoveries, all is not done, there are still many difficult Words and Sentences not clearly explained; and to trust blindly to others in such Matters, is the ready Way to fall back into that State of Ignorance from which the Enquiries of the Learned have rescued us in these latter Ages. So much we thought fit to say about the Arabick Language, which is the holy Language of the Mahometans.

But to conclude this Dissertation, we must take Notice, that the Study of all polite Learning, of antient Authors, Greek, Latin, and others, of History, Chronology, Geography, Medals, &c. has been, and will ever be useful to, if not necessary for the Religion we profess: Ignorance is the chief Support of Mahometism, whereas Truth will always shine the brighter, the more it is exposed to the Light. How many Fables and Superstitions, how many supposititious Facts and Books, have not been expelled by the Help of Learning? Chronology has fixed the Time of the Prophecies concerning Christ being accomplished, the same may be said of other Sciences^a, but this is not to our present Purpose.

We from the bottom of our Hearts detest the Superstition of Mahomet, so we hope our Readers will do us the Justice to think, that when we give the Title of Prophet to Mahomet, we only mean he pretended to be so, as likewise some of his Followers, Salich Dulkebel and others. Upon the Whole, we shall neither charge that Religion with Errors which it does not teach, nor palliate the Venom of his Doctrine. Impartiality is what we profess, and shall do our utmost to preserve that amiable Character.

^a See Vaillant's Dissertation on the Year of the Birth of Christ, found out by Medals in the History of the Royal Academy of Inscriptions, &c. Tom. 2. Pag. 532. of the Paris Edition, or Tom. 4. Pag. 181. of the Amsterdam Edit. of 1719.

A

DISSERTATION

On the K O R A N.

THE Mahometans ^a have as great a Veneration for the Koran, as Christians profess for the Bible. Both these Words equally signify ^b the Book by way of Preference to any other. Alforcan, which signifies Distinction, is another Name of the Koran, because it distinguishes, as they pretend, Truth from Falshood, and what is just from unjust : Or rather in the same Sense as Jews employ the Word Perek or Pirka, to signify a Part of holy Writ. It is likewise called Kitab and Al-Moshaf, the Book, the Volume, or Code, by Excellence; Abu-Becre ^c who gathered the scattered Leaves of it, as they say, and re-united them into one Book, gave it that Appellation. Lastly, it is also named Al-Dhikr, that is an Exhortation or a Remembrance, and Tanzil ^d which signifies a Present from Heaven ; upon which Account it is writ on the Koran in gold Letters : “ Let none but those who are “ pure be so bold as to touch this Book ; ’tis a Gift from Heaven sent from the “ King of all Ages.” These are but so many Epithets or Encomiums of the Koran, not unlike the various Names which we use in speaking of Scripture ; in which Sense they bestow upon it the Words Kelam Scherif, a noble Word, and Ketab-Afiz, a precious Book : This we learn from Herbelot, who assures us in the same Place, “ That when the Mussulmen cite the Koran in their Writings, they “ put in large or red Letters, God says.”

One hundred and fourteen Chapters, some longer, some shorter, make up the whole Book, these are called by the French Surates, from the Arabick Word Sura, in the Plural Sowar, which signifies Order, or a Series or a File, and answers to what the Jews call Seder, of which they reckon fifty three in the Pentateuch. Each Chapter of the Koran has a particular Denomination taken from the Subject of which it treats, or from some Person mentioned in it ; but oftner ^e from the first Word which those who have put it in Order have thought worthy of Notice, tho’ it occurs sometimes only towards the End of the Chapter. This may have happened, ^a This Dissertation is chiefly copied from Sale’s Preliminary Discourse on the Koran, and from Herbelot’s Biblioth. Orient.

^b Koran comes from the Hebrew Word Cara, to read ; Al signifies the, and Koran Reading, so the Jews call the Bible Micra. Other Arabian Doctors say it is derived from Caraa, to gather, because having been given by Portions, it was put into one. This is against the Opinion of those who think the Koran was forged all at once, which seems to be the Sentiment of Maracci in his Preliminaries on the Koran. After all it may have been forged all at once, and published only by Parcels.

^c Abu-Becre was the immediate Successor of Mahomet :

^d See Herbelot’s Biblioth. Orient. in the Article Alcoran.

^e This confutes those who think it Madness to give to the Chapters of the Koran the Names of a Cow, a Camel, or a Fig, &c.

says Salé,^a by reason of that Part being first published, tho' the Connexion has since required that other Verses should be placed before it ; which is also the Reason of several Chapters having more than one Title ; or it may be occasioned by the differing Manuscript Copies. Some of the Chapters were published at Mecca, some at Medina, others partly in one of these Towns, partly in the other ; and accordingly either Mecca or Medina, or both, are mentioned in the Title. Moreover, each of the Verses is looked upon as a Sign or Repository of Graces and Wonders, and is called by a Name^b which in Arabick and Hebrew answers to our Word Sign, and like the Chapter has its own particular Appellation.

The Commentators of the Koran mention seven chief Editions^c of it, two made at Medina, the third at Mecca, the fourth at Cufa, the fifth at Besra, the sixth in Syria, the seventh is called the Fulgate. They differ in the Number of Verses, but all agree in the Number of Words and Letters. For the Mussulmen have been as nice in the Supputation of the Words and Letters of the Koran, as the Jews about the Old Testament, and some Christians^d about the New : They have even computed how often particular Letters occur in the Koran. Thus Excess of Respect turns to Superstition and Trifles, as an over fiery Zeal turns to Cruelty and Persecution.

The Koran is also divided into sixty equal Parts, each of which is sub-divided into four, in Imitation of the Jews. These sixty Portions, says Herbelot, are a Kind of publick Service performed in the Mosques, on various Occasions, by Persons hired for that Purpose. Salé informs us, that the Persons so appointed and hired, are called Mocris. That there are thirty of them in every Mosque or neighbouring Chapels in which Princes and great Men are buried. Each of these Mocris reads one of the thirty Portions, into which, he says, the Koran is most commonly divided, so that the whole Book is read every Day in all the Chapels. This reading they pretend is beneficial to the Souls departed : It is performed at Medina even at Mahomet's Tomb, and the Mocris pray for him as for other Mussulmen. Another of their Functions is to teach in what Manner the Koran is to be read. Every Chapter (except the ninth) has these Words at the Beginning. In the Name of the most merciful God. This Form of Words is called by the Mussulmen Bismillah, and used by them as a publick Profession of their Religion in all their publick and private Deeds or Writings. It answers to the Jews Expression, In the Name of God, &c. to the Christians Saying, In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, and to a common Custom in Spain and Italy, in putting the Sign of the Cross, and the Words Jesus Maria, at the Top even of their private Letters about Trade and Commerce. The above-mentioned Salé is of Opinion, that Mahomet borrowed this Expression from the Magi of Persia. 'Tis certain however, that he made no Difficulty of taking from other Religions what he thought might contribute to perfect his own System. Such Particulars may seem to be of little Importance, but this Work is an Account of religious Ceremonies and Customs ; they may seem to us inconsiderable, and are so, yet some Mahometans, and most Commentators of the Koran pretend this Form of Words, the Titles of the Chapters and Verses, were immediately revealed by God : The Jewish Rabbins have also said that God himself was the Author of the ^a In the third Section of his Preliminary Discourse, &c.

^b Ayat in Arabick ; Ototh in Hebrew.

^c Or seven chief Manuscript Copies.

^d See Leusden's Supputations in his Co:pend. N. T.

Points, Accents, and other Divisions of the Old Testament : But the most rational Jews and Mahometans own them to be of human Institution.

Twenty-nine Chapters of the Koran begin with the same Letter : This the Musfulmen looked upon as mysterious, they racked their Brains to find out the Meaning; the wisest soon gave over the Pursuit, owning the Secret impenetrable to any but Mahomet himself. Some either more proud, or more curious, or more zealous, and following the Example of Jewish Cabalists, have discovered some Name, Attribute, Work, or Ordinance and Decree of God in those, and every other Letter of that Book ; by which Means not only the Chapters and Verses, but the Letters are become Signs. One Instance of these witty Conjectures may divert our Readers, and give them a Notion of these mysterious Methods, which they may apply to what is taught by some Jewish or Christian Divines. There are five Chapters in the Koran which begin with these three Letters, A. L. M. They have several Expositions of this Wonder. 1. They are the Initials of three Arabick Words, which signify God is favourable or merciful, or praise worthy. 2. They mean to me, and from me, in which Case God is supposed to speak. 3. I am the most wise God ^a. 4. Some find in those Letters God, Gabriel, and Mahomet. A, is Allah God : M, may very well be Mahomet : But how L. can be Gabriel our Author does not explain: We must suppose they had in View the last Letter of the Name Gabriel. 5. A, they say, is the Beginning of Speech, and is pronounced in the Throat: L, is the Middle, being pronounced by Help of the Roof of the Mouth: M, is the End, being a Labial Letter. Now who can be so stupid, as not to find out, that this is a Representation of God, the Author, Preserver, and End of all Beings ; for whose Glory we ought to begin, continue, and end all our Actions? 6. Mahomet's Secretary who wrote them put the initial Letters of three Hebrew Words ^b, Mahomet ordered him ; if so, this Scribe might probably be a Jew, and this Accident have given Rise to the Report spread since, that a Jew helped Mahomet in the Composition of the Koran.

The Musfulmen know no Bounds in the Praises which they bestow on this Book ; it is written with the greatest Elegancy of Style, in the purest Arabick Dialect used by the Koraishtes, intermixed now and then with other Dialects, as is seen in Homer ; which was not an Effect of Neglect, or of a lazy Disposition, as some rash Criticks have said it was in that Poet ; but in order to give the Discourse a greater and more lively Strength of Expression, or to make it more harmonious : For all those who are versed in the Arabick Language unanimously agree, that the Koran cannot be the Production of an idle and lazy Author : Though it is written in Prose, the Energy and Harmony of its Style must have cost the Writer greater Labour and Industry ; and raises the Work to the sublime Character of Poetry : Yet the Difficulty of finding out those witty Turns, often interrupts the Thread of the Discourse, and by Consequence renders it obscure, which has obliged Mahomet not to be so concise and short, but to use frequent Repetitions. His Figures are bold in the Oriental Taste, his Expression strong and pithy ; the Turn of his Phrases, in Imitation of the Prophets of the Old Testament, is full of Interruptions ; and it appears throughout the Whole, that all the Art and Eloquence of which Mahomet was Master, has been employed in the most proper Places : The mention of God,

^a Ana Allah Alem, in which Words regard is to be had to the first Letter of the first Word, the middle Letter of the second, and the last of the third, A. L. M.

^b Amar li Mohammed.

the Description of his Attributes is always lofty and majestic: Oracles are pronounced with a raised and elevated Style, proportioned to the Dignity of the Subject. To be short, the Arabians ^a are so charmed with the Beauties of the Koran, that in all their Writings they endeavour to copy that perfect Original; and without a competent Knowledge of this one Book, all the others become unintelligible.

Besides all these Perfections of the Koran, which make the Mussulmen look upon it with the utmost Veneration, those who are called Sonnits or Orthodox maintain that the Koran is eternal and uncreated, ^b existing in God as the essential Part of his Decrees, &c. Others are of Opinion ^c 'tis an Abstract of those Decrees, made as soon as the World was created, deposited in Heaven, from whence it was brought down to Mahomet, &c. All his Followers esteem it as a standing Miracle, greater than raising the Dead, above all human Understanding, and stamped with the undeniable Characters of divine Authority. Mahomet himself brought it as a Proof of his Mission from God, and bid Defiance to all the Wits of Arabia, to compose any Thing that might deserve to be compared to any one Chapter of the Koran. Labid a Poet answered this Challenge, and fixed to the Gate of the Temple of Mecca a Poem of his Composition: Mahomet opposed it by the second Chapter of his Koran. Labid, on reading a few Verses of it, owned himself overcome, and that such sublime Expressions, could not but be inspired from Heaven; he embraced Mahometism, and was one of the most zealous Assertors of it. This eloquent and noble Style, says ^d our Author, who searched the Springs of all these Particulars, was the chief Cause of the Progress of this new Doctrine; such is the Strength of Rhetorick, even weak Arguments proposed in harmonious Phrases, joined to a melodious Voice, and pronounced with a graceful Deportment or Carriage of the Body, produce in the Hearers Sentiments of Admiration, and obtain a Victory over the Understanding ^e so as to bring about the most unexpected Revolutions.

The Usefulness and Necessity of the Koran is sufficiently proved by the foregoing Dissertations, to which we must add, that the Project of Mahomet could not succeed without a Law superior to all human Laws, and by Consequence revealed; such a Design might have probably miscarried, if set up in Opposition to the three Religions then the most powerful in Arabia. Mahomet therefore to win them all ^f, made up his Compound of all the three, which was an easy Task, if we consider that the Professors of those three Religions living together were closely united in several Particulars, and easily imbibed the Notions, Tenets, and erroneous Opinions one of the other. He re-united them all in the Belief of one only God ^g; he allowed to some their most essential Customs, ^h with some outward Marks of ^a See Sale above cited.

^b Consult the same Writer.

^c See Herbelot.

^d See Sale above cited.

^e Eloquentiam quæ admirationem non habet, nullam Judico. Cicero in Epist. to Brutus.

^f See a Citation in Sale much to this Purpose.

^g The Unity of God and of Religion is often recommended in the Koran, in order to remedy the Disorders introduced by various Worship. God sent Moses, Christ, and Mahomet: Moses chiefly promised temporal Goods, Christianity spiritual and everlasting, Mahometism both. Because, as Herbelot says, "It is most likely . . . that several Bishops, Priests, and Monks, being banished into the Deserts of Arabia and Egypt for Herefy, . . . some of them were so wicked as to furnish Mahomet with corrupted Extracts of the Old and New Testament; . . . and accordingly the Koran is full of the erroneous Opinions of Nestorians, Eutychians, &c." See likewise Sale on the 16th and 25th Chapters of the Koran.

^h See Boulain Villers in his Life of Mahomet, where he shews that Circumcision forbidding some sorts of Meat, and the Use of Baths were practised by the Arabians before Mahomet: The same Author may also be consulted on the Plurality of Wives.

Respect towards their antient Lawgiver ; others he indulged in the Practice of moral Precepts, ^a with the same Respect for the Author of them : Victory and Force of Arms cemented this Union, as we have seen.

The most artful Contrivance of this subtle Impostor, for the Establishment of his Doctrine, was to pretend that the Koran was revealed to him by Piece-meal, every Verse being adapted to the Circumstances of the Time and Place in which it was published. If this Book, formed as they pretend in Heaven, ^b deposited in one of the ^c seven Heavens, instead of being brought Verse by Verse ^d to the Prophet, and communicated thus by him ^e to his Followers, had been produced and published all at once, the unconnected System had infallibly been rejected. Whereas by supposing these various Portions were sent from Heaven, as God himself found it requisite for the Conversion or Instruction of Nations, he screened himself under the Dispensation of Providence, and gave that Answer to the Unbelievers: And if that seemed to contradict the Notion of the Koran existing from Eternity, this Objection was solved by the Doctrine of Predestination, by which God is said to predetermine from all Eternity all those Events which occasioned the publishing the various Parcels of the Koran. This Sale tells us, and we leave it to the Reader's Judgment. But it is highly probable that Mahomet, in that Particular, endeavoured to imitate the ancient true Prophets amongst the Jews, who did not pronounce all at once their various Predictions, as we have them now collected in the Bible ; they published them as occasion served, in the publick Places, and before Witnesses, &c. but without Connexion. And as they delivered them in the Name of God and by his Authority, Mahomet likewise pretended his Inspirations fell from Heaven. The Heathenish Oracles affected the same Want of Connexion, as appears by the Prophecies of the Sybills : 'Tis a received Opinion, that having been a long while dispersed, they were at last collected at Rome ^f, and deposited in the Capitol ^g with several such Books ^h which were looked upon as sacred, and had in equal Veneration with those of the Sybills, as being the Fundamentals of Religion, and Prop of the State.

These Words of the eleventh Chapter of the Koran, with which God put a Stop to the Deluge, are cited as an Instance of the sublime Style of that Book : O Earth, swallow up thy Waters, O Heavens, keep up the Rain; immediately the Waters subsided, the Decree was fulfilled, the Ark rested on Mount ⁱ Al-Judi, and these Words were heard, Wo to the wicked Nation ! It must be owned this is eloquent, and that Chapter, as likewise the third, seventh and thirteenth, and several others, contain excellent

^a It must be owned the Koran enforces many of the strictest Precepts of Christian Morality ; on Charity, forgiving of Injuries, &c.

^b We have observed before that some Mahometans pretend the Koran is eternal and essential to God, taking it to be the Word, which in the Beginning was with God, and was God.

^c A Copy of the Koran was brought by Gabriel to the lowest Heaven in the Month Rhamadan in the Night, called the Night of the Decree. See the 97th Chapter of the Koran. See likewise Herbelot. Nine Nights of the Month Rhamadan are kept solemn in Memory of that Event.

^d This Publication of the Koran lasted 23 Years, but Mahomet, as they pretend, saw it whole once a Year, and twice in the last of his Life.

^e His Confidants used to write them as Mahomet pronounced them ; yet Abu-Beker who collected them, had recourse to the Memory of those who conversed more familiarly with the Prophet to make his Collection compleat.

^f The Romans delighted in wonderful Stories, as much as any other Nation ; they averred that the Woman who brought to Tarquin the Elder, or the Proud, the Sybilline Books disappeared immediately.

^g Te quoque magna manent regnis Penetralia nostris.

Virg. Æn. Lib. 6.

^h Such were the Verses of the Nymph Bagot, or of the Erythræan Sybill, teaching Divination by Lightning, the Oracles of the Martian Brethren, the Books of Tages, the Sacra Aruntia, &c.

ⁱ A Mountain between Armenia and Mesopotamia.

Rules of Morality: On Patience, Humility, Liberality, Perseverance, and against Usury, &c. in the third; the seventh has these Words; Forgive easily, command nothing but what is just, dispute not with the Ignorant. Herbelot informs us, that Mahomet received a paraphrastical Exposition of the said Sentence in these Terms: Seek him who thrusts you away, give to him who takes from you, forgive him who offends you, for it is the Will of God that you should have in your Souls the Seeds of his highest Perfections. Again in the thirteenth Chapter, a long Enumeration of various Duties is concluded thus; They who do Good for Evil shall obtain Paradise for their Reward: Many other such Passages might furnish out some Parallel betwixt the Christian and Mahometan Religion, as the last mentioned has often been compared to that of the Heathens. But the World is full of such Allusions^a.

Notwithstanding all these Encomiums of the Koran, “Many Mussulmen Doctors, “says our Author^b, have been so bold as to say that other Books may be more “learned and eloquent: They find in it palpable Contradictions not to be solved^c The Copies vary some Laws are annulled by other Laws “this has occasioned so many Commentaries and Expositions of the Koran, that “the bare Titles of them would make up a large Volume.” No doubt amongst so various Explications, Paraphrases, Extracts, and subtle Devices, Mahomet has been made to say many Things which he never thought of. We shall pass over the Disputes concerning the Eternity of the Koran; but we must not omit mentioning a Sect which maintained it to be an animated Being,^d sometimes a Man, sometimes a Beast. The Founder of that Sect was Al-Jahedh, but, after all, this Opinion^e seems only an Allegory, to signify that the Koran became good or bad according to the true or false Explications given to it; in which Sense the most Orthodox Mussulmen often say it has two Faces, of a Man and of a Beast, meaning the literal and spiritual Sense of it.

The Mahometans call their Religion Islamism, from the Word Islam, which signifies^f the Submission of the whole Man to the Service of God, and to his Commandments: The same Word may also be translated^g, A saving Religion or State of Salvation. It is the Opinion of the Mussulmen that all are born in the Islamism, but swerve from it by a wrong Education, bad Examples, false Notions, &c. This Opinion they ground on the Plainness of natural Religion, which teaches every one the Unity of God, and common Rules of Morality. In Consequence of this Principle, they own as Mussulmen, all those who before Mahomet believed the Unity of God and avoided Idolatry; there were such Men from Adam to Noah, in whose Time their Number was reduced to eighty. At the Death of Abraham, two Preachers of Islamism remained, Ishmael and Isaac; and God never permitted the World to be without some such Men. Compare these Tenets, with what some People think of the Perpetuity of the true Church, in the Ages the most noted for a general Corruption.

^a See the Turkish Spy, Letter 19 of the second Volume.

^b Herbelot.

^c The Mussulmen Doctors in answer to this, say, that God has commanded several Things only for a limited Time, &c. Some Laws are abrogated both as to the Letter and as to the Sense; some only as to the Letter, others as to the Sense, the Letter still remaining. Sale brings Instances of each Sort.

^d See Sale and Herbelot.

^e The Kalif Al-Whalid was not a Jahedite. See a Story of him in Pocock, Pag. 223. of his Spec. Hist. Arab.

^f See Herbelot.

^g See Sale.

Islamism has two Parts : The Iman which is the Theory of Faith; and the Din which prescribes the practical Rules of Morality, and the Ceremonies peculiar to Mahometism : Some Mussulmen are so punctual in complying with those moral Duties, that we are often forced to say of them what they themselves say of good Christians; 'tis pity they are Infidels. They are not always subject to the Yoke of an outward Regularity, but though blinded in their Faith, they soar up now and then to the sublimest Notions of Divinity, ^a and exceed in spiritual Knowledge many Books of Devotion, highly valued amongst common People.

The Mahometans look upon their Religion as the last of all Revelations; these were contained, as they pretend, in one hundred and four sacred Books, ten of which were given to Adam, fifty to Seth, thirty to Edris, that is Enoch, ten to Abraham : The four last are the Pentateuch given to Moses, the Psalms to David, the Gospel to Christ, and the Koran to Mahomet, who is the last of all Prophets, after whom no other is to be expected. The first mentioned hundred Books are, they say, quite lost, and no one knows what they contained; except a Fragment of an Apocryphal Book called the Apocalypse of Enoch, to which Fragment St. Jude gave a Sanction by citing it in his Epistle. As to the Law, the Psalms and the Gospel, the Jews and Christians are accused in the Koran of having corrupted them, they still contain some Truths, but very much disfigured : This Opinion of the Mahometans seems grounded on the Fables of the Jewish Rabbins, and the wilful Corruptions of some Hereticks. However the Mahometans Books of Scripture are only an Apocryphal Medley : Their Pentateuch is corrupted ^b, their Arabick and Persian Psalter which they call Zebour ^c does not contain the same as ours, only some Extracts of them with a Mixture of other Things quite foreign to David; and Reiland says they have added to it some Prayers of Moses, Jonas, and others. They know no other Gospel ^d but that which Mahomet made use of in his Koran, and bears the Name of St. Barnaby; 'tis wrote in Arabick, and widely different from ours ^e, but bears a near Resemblance to the false Traditions of which Mahomet made use concerning Christ, &c.

The Mahometans own likewise the Prophets of the Old Testament, and cite them, yet do not believe their Authority is from God : They aver that God has sent thousands of them, ^f amongst whom they reckon three hundred and thirteen Apostles appointed to withdraw Mankind from Corruption; six published Laws which were abrogated one after the other, viz. Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus Christ and Mahomet, all the Prophets were exempt from capital Errors or Crimes; and though their Laws and Ceremonies differed, yet all of them made Profession of the Islamism.

^a Lord, says a Persian Poet in the Fervour of his Repentance, I present you with four Things which are not in your Treasures, Nothing, Poverty, Sin, and Sorrow. "The Kebla of Kings, says another, is their Crown of the Admirers of Beauty, Earth and Corruption of good Men, Prayer the Love of God."

^b Sir Edward Terry cited by Sale, informs us of this.

^c Herbelot Art. Zebour.

^d The same Herbelot's Art. Engil. that is Gospel.

^e This Gospel is an Italian Manuscript in the Library of Prince Eugene, and seems to have been translated from the Arabick about the Middle of the fifteenth Century. It says the Jews did not take Christ in the Garden; that Christ was not crucified, but Judas instead of him; that Christ is not God, nor Son of God; that Mahomet was to be sent from God to reveal these Truths : This Translation they pretend was made for the Use of the Italians, who should embrace Mahometism; but sure such Profelytes must be supposed to know no more of the Christian Religion, except making the Sign of the Cross, and saying their Beads.

^f One hundred and twenty-four thousand, or two hundred and twenty-four thousand. See Sale.

The Mussulmen look upon Religion as a publick Good, without which Society cannot happily subsist, and one of their Poets calls Religion and the State inseparable Twins, ^a born together; the Death of the one is destructive of the other; yet another Turkish Poet says, Do not trouble yourselves if the State is undone, if Religion subsists, but it cannot be said, Do not mind if Religion is lost, so the State be safe. Their Doctors say that Reason cannot without the Help of Faith distinguish Error from Truth, they even give it the Name of Error, and add that a steady Adherence to its Dictates is the Road to Impiety. Religion is also compared by them to a Palm-tree, the Boughs of which reach to Heaven, to God who is the chief Happiness of Man. Notwithstanding all these Encomiums on Religion, Mahometism abounds, as they say, with Deists and Latitudinarians, who compare the Religion of Mahomet to a high Road leading to God, besides which there may be Foot-paths or By-roads on the Right or Left, to the same Place. Mahomet himself ^b seems to favour Libertinism, since he does not exclude from Salvation those who lead a good Life in the Religion in which they are born and brought up: Yet in other Places he says Islamism is the only strait Way or Line to be followed, ^c all others to the Right or Left being bad Roads, and under the Direction of Devils.

Other Mahometan Doctors embrace a dangerous Pyrrhonism, and say nothing is certain but the two Ends of the Line, meaning the Beginning of our Lives, and Death, in which all the Religion of a spiritual Man consists: But this may be explained in a good Sense, for certainly it is Part of the Duty of a wise and prudent Man to humble himself under, and submit to the Misfortunes consequent to our Birth; and to hope for a happy End of all our Miseries and Uncertainties at our Death.

Lastly, others are accused of disguising wicked Opinions under this noble Description of God's Immenfity. Lord, we are every where with you, we thought there might be a Road which would lead us elsewhere, but what Road can we take that does not lead to you? These fine Words to which they add ^d, that God is a Circle in the Center of which all the various Religions meet; are said to cover the same Opinions which our European Deists or Spinozists hold: Yet they are not very different from some Expressions of David: ^e and might be interpreted in a favourable Sense, as St. Paul did a Passage of the Poet ^f Aratus.

The Truth is, they are the wisest who submit human Reason to the eternal Reason of God, when duly manifested to us by the Motives of Credibility, and are disposed to forego all temporal Advantages for its Sake, in order to be perfectly at Rest.

^g Flattery, Policy, and Punishments or Rewards, produce the same various Effects about Religion in Turky, as in other Places: They hold for a Time Opinions which they afterwards find out to be erroneous, when the Court-party ceases to enforce them: There, as elsewhere, the Religion of the common People is often grounded on Custom ^h, that of the great is meer Hypocrisy. They own, as Christians do,

^a See Herbelot, Pag. 296.

^b See the Notes of Sale on the second Chapter of the Koran.

^c Biblioth. Orient. of Herbelot.

^d See the last mentioned Author, Pag. 296.

^e Psalms 139.

^f For we are his Progeny, Acts 17. Ver. 28. See likewise Psal. 104. Ver. 27, 30. Job 34. Ver. 14. Ecclesi. 3. Ver. 19, 20, 21. and other Places, very like some Expressions rashly censured in other Writers.

^g See Herbelot, Pag. 297. Men follow the Religion of their Princes, say the Arabians; the Persians pretend that the Faults of Princes are Virtues in their Subjects.

^h See an Italian Author Diworz Celest. Book 1.

that Religion gives Glory to God, and is necessary to Men who otherwise would become Brutes. If one of their Poets says, that Religion is a Jest to the wicked^a and prophane, another of them says with Reason, that it leads to God wise Men by Obedience, Penitents by Fear, Men truly devout by Desire, and just Men by the Love of God.

We shall conclude this Dissertation, by copying from Herbelot the various Distinctions of the Things allowed or forbid by the Law (of Mahomet and its Commentators). “^b What is clearly declared in the Word of God (the Koran) is called “Fardh; and he is an Infidel who rejects it.

“ What is evident by Reason is named Vageb, he is an ignorant Wretch who does “ not follow its Dictates, but he is not an Infidel.

“ Mostehab is what deserves to be observed, but if neglected, does not deserve “ either Punishment or a Reprimand.

“ Mobah is what may be omitted or done, as being indifferent.

“ Maçtoub is what no one is praised for abstaining from, nor blamed for using “ it.

“^c Haram is what deserves a Reprimand or Punishment, being expressly forbid “ by the Law : It is the opposite of Halal which is whatever the Law allows.

“ Adab^d is whatever Mahomet has done once or twice.

^a The Sense of the Arabian Poet is the same with this of Lucretius.

Religio peperit scelerata atque impia facta.

^b See Herbelot. Art. Ferbaidh.

^c Haram signifies also a sacred Thing from which Infidels are to abstain, as the Temple of Mecca or Mahomet's Tomb at Medina, &c. also the Women's Apartment or Seraglio.

^d See Herbelot: Art. Adab. that Word signifies Manners, Customs, Methods.

T H E
 MAHOMETAN^a Profession of FAITH;
 O R, A
 T R E A T I S E

On the Articles which every Mahometan is obliged to receive and believe to be a good Mussulman.

I.

On the Existence of God.

TH E Articles of our Faith, which every good Mussulman is obliged to believe and receive with a steady Adherence, are thirteen in Number, the first and chief of which is this.

To believe with the Heart, to confess with the Tongue, and freely, constantly, and willingly to affirm, that there is but one God, Lord and Governor of the World; who has drawn all Things out of nothing, in whom there is no Image or Likeness; who has not begot any Person, as he himself was not begot by any Person; who never was a Son, as he never was a Father. We Mussulmen are bound to adore and serve this Master and Sovereign Disposer of all Things. Let no one therefore swerve from this Article, but imprint it deeply in his Heart, as an undoubted Truth.

II.

On the Prophet Mahomet, and his Koran.

The second Article and the chief Inferences from it. We must believe with the Heart, and confess with the Mouth, that the most high God, having revealed himself to Men by his antient Prophets, has at last sent us his own Elect, the blessed Mahomet, with the holy and divine Law created^c by his Grace, and contained in the venerable Koran which has been delivered to us from him. God has ^a This was translated into French by Mr. D * * *, who made likewise the Notes, which we freely own to be his.

^b This is the Title of the Latin Manuscript, the Original in Spanish, but wrote in Arabick Characters: It seems to be the Work of some Renegado, made for the Use of his Countrymen: Reland often cites it, and uses it with good Success to explain the Mahometan Catechism.

^c The Mahometan Catechism teaches the Koran is uncreated.

abrogated by this holy Book all former Laws, and has freed all Nations from their Doubts and Errors, to bring them to a lasting and permanent Bliss. We are therefore bound strictly to observe all its Doctrines, Rites and Ceremonies; and to quit every other Sect or Religion established before or since this last Revelation: This Article is our distinguishing Mark, and keeps us at a Distance from Idolatry, all lying Rhapsody, all false Prophecy, all those Societies, Religions or Sects different from ours, which are either erroneous or abrogated, or exaggerated beyond all Bounds of Faith and Truth: As we may daily see by the various Notions ^a of Unbelievers, who reject the Rules they themselves had established, who change Principles every Moment, and cast a Blemish on their own Ceremonies, by continual Innovations and Reforms ^b, because they are Strangers to the Goodness of God.

III.

On Providence and Predestination.

The third Article and the chief Inferences from it, we must heartily believe and hold it for a certain Truth, that except God himself, who ever was and will be, all Things shall one Day perish, and that the Angel of Death shall take to himself the Souls of Men appointed for a total and universal Destruction, from God our Master and potent Lord, who could and would produce out of nothing, and set in Order this whole World, and its Contents good or bad, sweet or bitter; who likewise could, would, and did, set two Angels, one on the Right, the other on his Left, to keep a Register of all our Works good or bad, to try them and pronounce Sentence upon them at the Day of Judgment. Predestination therefore we must believe, but not speak of it, unless we are well versed in both our written Law the Koran, and our oral Law the Sonna ^c. But since all Things are to have an End; let us do good Works, and behave ourselves ^d so as to live eternally a real and essential Life, which is to be obtained only by the Practice of Virtue, as the ancient Prophets have preached, before the sacred Volume of the Koran was sent to us from Heaven.

IV.

On the Examen of the Grave.

The fourth Article and its Consequences. We must believe with the Heart, and hold as sure and certain, the Examen of the Grave, which each of us is to undergo after Death by two Angels on these four chief Questions. Who was our Lord and God? Who was our Prophet? Which was our Religion? And where was our Kebla? Whoever can answer that God has been his only Lord, and Mahomet his Prophet, shall find his Grave enlightened, and he himself shall rest in Glory: But those who shall not be able to give a good Answer to these Questions, shall be ^a These biting Strokes against the Christians of latter Ages, shew the Author to be a Renegado, still angry with those whom he had left.

^b This is another Proof of the same Opinion.

^c See more hereafter. The Author is very reserved on Predestination, but his Morality and preaching at the End of every Article betrays him to have been some Renegado Spanish Friar.

^d This is plainly borrowed from 2 Pet. Chap. 3. Ver. 8. to the End.

wrapped up in Darkneſs till the Day of Judgment. Let us fear this dreadful Lot, which will be without Help or Comfort : Let us look upon it as an Effect of God's Goodneſs, that all Things are thus diſpoſed for the Comfort of the Juſt, and the Dread of Sinners ; for if we carefully examine ourſelves in this Life, God will give us his Grace after Death till the Day of Judgment ^a.

V.

On the future Annihilation of all Things.

The fifth Article and its Conſequences. We muſt believe with the Heart, and hold it for certain, that all Things ſhall be deſtroyed and annihilated, Angels, Men, Devils, &c. at the End of the World, when the Angel Iſrafil ſhall ſound the Trumpet, ſo that except the ſupreme God, no living Creature ſhall ſubſiſt in the Univerſe after the dreadful Noiſe which ſhall make the Mountains ſhake, the Earth ſink, and turn the Sea into a Blood-colour. Aſariel the Angel of Death ſhall periſh laſt in this total Deſtruction, and then the great Power of the moſt high God will be truly manifeſted. Who can forbear trembling at ſo dreadful and unheard of Noiſe and Deſtruction, at ſuch a frightful Solitude ? Who would not endeavour to lead a good Life, to abound in good Works, in Hopes of a juſt and glorious Compensation ^b ? Who can help of the Sun and Moon ? Who will not from this Moment begin to repent of his Sins, and deplore his laſt End, whether it happens by Night or by Day ? Let us entertain ſuch Thoughts, and go on armed with Hope and good Works, beſides which every Thing elſe is only lent us in this tranſitory Life, and renders us guilty of Death and Punishment. Happy ! if we give due Attention to thoſe Truths, all Things will prove favourable and advantageous to us ; Poverty as much as Riches, Bitterneſs equally with Sweetneſs, Adverſity as well as Proſperity ; all will raiſe us, and bring our Souls to the noble Perfection. ^c

VI.

On the Reſurrection to come.

The ſixth Article and its Conſequences. We muſt heartily believe, and hold it as certain, that after the total Deſtruction of the Univerſe, God will firſt raiſe again in Heaven the Angel of Death, then recal all the Souls and re-unite them to the Body which belongs to them, ſome for Glory, ſome for Punishment. The firſt raiſed on Earth will be our bleſſed Prophet Mahomet ; the Earth ſhall open itſelf on all Sides, be changed in an Inſtant, and by God's Command, it ſhall be ſet on Fire, which will reach its utmoſt Bounds then God ſhall prepare an even Place fit to contain all Creatures, who will be called upon to give an Account of their paſt Conduct. May this ſolemn, ^d definitive and irrevocable Judgment rouse us

^a This alſo is borrowed from Scripture, and ſhews the Author had been a Chriſtian. St. Paul had ſaid before, that if we judge ourſelves, we ſhall not be judged.

^b See on this Compensation the Art. 9. where the Author clearly expreſſes his Meaning.

^c This, the foregoing and ſubſequent Gaps, are in the Latin Manuſcript ; the Author ſeems in this Place to mean the Agility of the Soul to croſs the ſharp Bridge, which will be mentioned in the 11th Article.

^d This Morality and many others is copied from Scripture, the Author had ſome Senſe, and before his Apoſtacy had been a tolerable Preacher.

from our lethargick Security, for nothing created shall be spared, every Soul shall be judged by the same Rule, without any Exception of Persons.

VII.

On the Day of Judgment.

The sixth Article and the Inferences from it. We must believe with the Heart, and hold it for certain that a Day of Judgment will come, in which God will bring all Nations to a Place appointed, where he will appear in Majesty, and his Sentence be heard by every one in this magnificent Place, all Creatures will meet about Noon-day, then God with his Prophet the blessed Mahomet, in the Sight of all Men, will judge all Nations of the Earth in general, and every particular Person, with Justice and Equity. To this End each of us will receive a List of his Works, the Good shall receive and hold it in the Right-hand, the Bad in the Left ^a, That Day will be as long as this Age, a Day of Sighs and Sufferings, of Tribulation and Distress, in which the Cup of Sorrows and Torments must be drunk to the Dregs, chiefly by those who are wicked and of a perverse Disposition; Mourning and Grief will be their constant Attendants, all will become to them Aloes and Bitterness; they shall not have one Moment's Rest, they shall not see any Thing but what is disagreeable, the tormented in Hell hear nothing but what is harsh, the Howlings ^b of Devils, and their frightened Imagination shall represent to them horrible Apparitions and the most cruel Punishments.

VIII.

On the Intercession of Mahomet.

The eighth Article and its Consequences. We must believe with the Heart and hold it for certain, that at the great Day of Account, our venerable Prophet Mahomet will intercede and be heard in Favour of his People in this their bitter Affliction and great Distress: He will do it once, and at the second Intercession God will be appeased, and all faithful Mussulmen shall be admitted to Glory, whilst no Prayers or Excuses shall avail those of other Nations. As to the guilty amongst us, who have broke the Commandments of the Koran, God only knows how great and how long their Sufferings shall be; whether they shall continue longer or shorter Time than the Day of Account and Judgment. 'Tis our Duty to shorten it by good Works, Alms-deeds, and by our utmost Endeavours, calling ourselves to a strict Account, before we are cited for our Crimes before the Tribunal of God; since he preserves us by his Mercy, and gives us that Delay, that we may put ourselves in a Condition of appearing before him by a virtuous Life ^c.

^a The Catechism has added behind their Back, their Hands being so tied, and probably this Gap was left for those Words.

^b The Latin has Satanarum, which proves the Author to be a Spaniard and a Friar.

^c All these Strokes of Morality are borrowed from Scripture.

IX.

On the Compensation of the last Day.

The ninth Article and its Consequences. We must believe with the Heart, and hold it for certain, that each of us will give an Account to God of all the Good and Bad done in this World. The first called upon to be examined will be the People of Mahomet, because they are to be Witnesses against all other Nations. On that Day God will take good Works from the Scale of him who has been injured in his Reputation ; and if he finds no good Works in the Detractor, he shall take off Punishments from the Person defamed, and add them to the Detractor's Account, this will be a convincing Proof of God's infinite * Justice. We must therefore carefully avoid doing Wrong to others in their Goods or Reputation, under Pain of bearing that dreadful Compensation. For we may depend upon it, that if we wrong our Brethren, so much will be taken from our good Works, or so much added to our Debts, which must be liquidated at the Time of the last Affliction, when to quench our Thirst or even cool our Tongue, we should be glad if possible to part with the most beautiful or richest Things we ever saw in this Life.

X.

On the Scale and Purgatory.

The tenth Article and its Consequences. We must believe with the Heart, and confess with the Mouth, that all our Actions, good or bad, will be weighed one against the other in the Scale ; those whose good Works shall out-weigh the bad, will enter Heaven, and on the contrary they whose good Works shall be out-weighed by the bad, shall be condemned to the Flames of Hell ; as to those whose Scale shall be even, the good being equal to the bad, they shall be detained in a middle Place, where their Merits and Demerits shall meet with due Reward, they being deprived of the Glory of the Just, without enduring any other Pain, except this Detention. But all Mussulmen of that Rank shall be delivered from their Captivity, and introduced into Heaven ; at the second Intercession of the blessed Prophet Mahomet, whose Piety will gloriously shine in engaging the Power and Mercy of God to relieve us, after his Justice has been fully satisfied by the long Confinement of the Guilty. We ought therefore to weigh our good Works in this Life, and constantly endeavour to render them more heavy than, and victorious over the bad, lest we should after Examination be excluded from the Seat of Bliss. Let us not which is the Height of our Souls Happiness, lest we should be obliged to shed Tears and lament in that Day of Darkness. Once more, we ought rather to adorn our Souls now with the attractive Beauty of Virtue, whilst we are allowed Time to do it, whilst we may avoid future Punishments, and have in our Hands, as we may say, all convenient Helps and Succours. For after this Life it will be too late to free ourselves from Perdition, Repentance will not then take Place, and we shall find no one to answer for us, till we have made full Satisfaction for our Sins.

* This is but a Fiction, yet the Morality of it includes a bright Thought, and some new Discovery to entertain the Reader.

XI.

On the sharp Bridge which must be passed over.

The eleventh Article and the chief Inferences from it. We must heartily believe and hold it for certain, that all Mankind must go over the sharp Bridge, which is as long as the Earth, no broader than a Thread of a Spider's Web, and of a Height proportioned to its Length. The Just shall pass it like Lightning, but the Wicked for want of good Works, will be an Age in performing that Task: They will fall, and precipitate themselves into Hell-fire, with Blasphemers and Infidels, with Men of little Faith and bad Conscience, with those who have not had Virtue enough to give Alms. Yet some just Persons will go over it quicker than others, who will now and then be tried upon the Commands which they shall not have duly observed in this Life^a. Good God! How dreadful will this Bridge appear to us? What Virtue, what inward Grace of the most High will be required to get over it? How earnestly shall we look for that Favour? What Defarts, what venomous Creatures shall we not find on our Road? What Hunger, Drought, and Weariness shall we endure? What Anxiety, Grief, and Pain shall attend those who do not think of this dangerous Passage. Let us beg of God to grant us with bodily Health, the Grace not to go out of this Life loaded with Debts; for the Arabians^b often say, and with good Reason, That no Obstacle is so hidden, as that which we cannot overcome by any Expedient or artificial Contrivance whatsoever.

XII.

On Heaven.

The twelfth Article and its chief Consequences. We must heartily believe, and hold it for certain, that there is with God a Heaven prepared for the Blessed amongst the Faithful; that is, to the Professors of the true Religion and Followers of our holy Prophet Mahomet: In which they shall be with him, enjoying perpetual Light and all heavenly Pleasures,^c always beautiful, in their full Strength and Vigour, brighter than the Sun, and thought worthy to see Face to Face the most high God, and to adore him. The Sinners and Transgressors detained in the Torments of Hell, who yet have believed in one only God, shall be freed at the second Intercession of the Prophet, who will immediately wash them in the sacred Font, from which coming out whiter than Snow, and brighter than the Sun, they shall be placed in Heaven, to enjoy with other blessed Men all the Glory they can desire: This will be the State of our earthly Bodies, but who can describe the Happiness of the Soul, in eternally beholding the Light and Splendor of the Divine Majesty. Let us then daily keep in our Hearts the Idea of . . . and being steady in Faith, apply ourselves to such Works, that we need not fear Hell-fire, which is so quick and piercing, that no Torment of Heat or Cold can be compared to it. Let us, I say, apply our-

^a See more of this Bridge in a Note on the 5th Chapter of the Mahometan Catechism.

^b Our Author then is not an Arabian himself, but probably an European Renegado.

^c He mentions here no sensual Pleasures, in order to draw in Christians, having probably been one himself.

64 The Mahometan Profession of Faith: Or selves to good Works, and exactly observe to the best of our Power the Fast of our venerable Month Ramadan^a, the Prayers and Ceremonies prescribed, and not defraud the Poor of the Tenths of our Goods; we know what our sacred Volume^b says on that Subject, “ Prepare for thyself future Joys from thy Riches, Praise from thy Affluence, a safe Prop even from thy Poverty, a constant Strength from thy Weakness, and from thy learning the Salvation of thy Soul.”

XII.

Of Hell.

The thirteenth and last Article, with the chief Inferences drawn from it. We must believe with the Heart, and hold it for certain, that there is a Hell prepared for the Wicked, for the refractory Transgressors of the Divine Law, cursed by God for their evil Deeds, for whom it would have been better never to have been born, or seen the Light. To all such is prepared a Place of Torment, or rather a Fire which will burn them without touching them; a Fire mixed with cold Winds, and Ice full of Worms; Serpents and the venomous Creatures which shall bite them and occasion great Pains. This is the Abode of the Wicked, and of the Devils, in which the last will torment the first without End or Intermision, with all possible Cruelty and Fury: And lest their Torments should diminish, a new Skin will grow instead of that which is burnt, or deadened. We faithful Mussulmen ought to conceive, and carefully entertain a just Idea of that horrible and infamous Place, as is the Duty of every good Man. As to other Men who have impugned our Religion, they shall be condemned to the Torments of Hell. Let us all dread this frightful Punishment, strengthen our Faith, and deeply imprint it in our Souls by repeated Acts of Faith in our Hearts, and publick Profession of it with our Mouth.

^a He slightly mentions the Ceremonies of Mahometism, not having any great regard for them. See Tournesfort's Voyage.

^b The Koran.

THE MAHOMETAN CATECHISM;

O R

An Abstract of the Mahometan Divinity, ^b from the Latin of Reland.

C H A P. I.

A general Notion of Religion, as to Theory and Practice.

1. IN the Name of the most merciful God.

2. Praise be to God who has brought us to Faith, and appointed it a Seal ^c of our Admittance into Heaven, and a Vail between us and the eternal Mansions of Hell-fire.

3. May the Peace and Favour of God rest upon Mahomet! the best of all Men, and the ^d Leader who conducts all his in the right Way; and not only upon him, but on his whole Family, and his glorious ^e Companions, may this Peace be everlasting and increase in all Ages.

4. Here begins the Description of Faith, and the Explanation of it.

First 'tis necessary to know that Faith is the first Foundation of Religion, as Mahomet has declared it. May God give him his Grace! and grant him Salvation!

5. The Religion of the Islamites ^f contains five chief Principles.

The first is the Confession of the true God, and consists in believing that there is but one true and eternal God, and that Mahomet is his Apostle.

The second is a regular Observation of the Prayers ^g as prescribed.

The third is giving Alms.

The fourth is the Fast of the Month Rhamadan.

Lastly, the fifth is the Pilgrimage of Mecca, from which no Mussulman can be dispensed, if able to perform it.

6. Let us begin by the Confession of the true God, which is properly what we call Faith. On this Head every one, at the Age of Discretion, is required to believe.

^a * This was translated into French by Mr. D  with some Notes, we shall add some marked with a Star.

^b * Mr. D  himself calls it sometimes a Translation, sometimes only an Imitation, however it contains the Mahometan Belief, and we shall add Corrections where required.

^c In 1705. Reland, instead of Seal, had put Dower.

^d Abu-Beker the fourth Disciple of Mahomet, was the first who gave him that Name.

^e Viz. Abu-Beker, Omar, Othman and Ali, &c. See Chap. 5. following.

^f * We have before explained what is Islamism.

^g The Ablutions are not mentioned, but Reland says they are a Part of Prayer.

66 The Mahometan Catechism : Or, An Abstract of the

- 1°. In God ;
- 2°. His Angels ;
- 3°. His Books ;
- 4°. His Apostles ;
- 5°. The last Day ;
- 6°. Almighty God's immutable Decree about Good and Evil ^a.

Faith consists in a firm Persuasion, and believing from the bottom of the Heart, the Truth of these fundamental Articles, to which must be added a Confession of the Mouth, as a Proof of the inward Consent of Faith.

^a Koran Chap. 4. Ver. 135.

C H A P. II.

Of Faith in God ^a.

1. TH E Faith in God consists in believing with the Heart, and confessing with the Mouth, that there is one God Almighty supreme, the true permanent, first and eternal Essential Being, which had no Beginning, and will have no End.

2. That there is not in him any Figure or outward Form, nor Place, nor Time, nor Motion, nor Change, nor Transposition, Separation, Division, Fraction, or Diminution, or failing of Strength.

3. That he has no equal or like unto him ^b.

4. That he is perfectly pure, that he is the only Eternal, Living, All-knowing, Almighty and absolute Master of his Will; that he bears and sees all Things, speaks, makes, creates, and upholds All: That he produces with an inimitable Art, gives Life and Kills, gives a Beginning to all Things, and brings all Men back when he pleases: That he judges, decrees, directs, commands, forbids, leads in the right Way, and into Error ^c, that he gives the Retribution, the Reward, the Punishment, Goodness and Victory.

5. All those eternal Attributes are contained in his Essence, and subsist in him from Eternity to Eternity, without Division or Variation. They are not God himself, yet they are not different from his Essence, each of them is connected to the other, as Life to Knowledge, or Knowledge to Power, &c.

6. They are therefore, as we said before, Life, Knowledge, Power, Will, Hearing, Seeing, Eternity, (having no Beginning or Ending) Action, Creation, Preservation ^e, Production, an ^f artful ordering, enlivening, destroying the first Formation (or rather Creation) and calling back to him ^g, Wisdom, Decrees, directing to Good, and seducing ^h to Evil; Retribution, Reward, Punishment, Favour and Victory.

^a * The Arabian Allah, answers the Hebrew Jehovah, signifying a necessary Self-existent Being. See Hutting. Hyl. Orient. Pag. 389.

^b * Gen. i. Man is said to be made to the Likeness of God, yet in another Sense no Creature can be like him.

^c That means the raising from the Dead. See Koran Chap. 6. Ver. 30.

^d This is farther explained in Chap. 7. about the Decree.

^e * Or Prolongation.

^f * Productio, Artificium, are two Attributes.

^g * Reductio is calling or bring backing.

^h See the Note on Chap. 7. of the Decree.

There

Mahometan Divinity, from the Latin of Reland. 67

These are the great and inestimable Perfections of the most high God, by which he is known and adored by all true Believers; whoever dares deny them all, or call any one of them in question, is certainly an Infidel.

O God, keep us from all Infidelity !

C H A P. III.

Of Angels.

1. OUR Faith will be perfect concerning Angels if we believe with the Heart, and confess with the Mouth, that the most high God has Servants and Ministers, whom we call Angels, who are perfectly clean from all Sin, who are always present ^a with God, who punctually execute his Commands, and never disobey him.

2. We believe Angels to be subtile and pure Bodies formed of Light; they do not eat, drink, or sleep, they are not of different Sexes, have no carnal Desires, no Father or Mother.

3. As they have different Forms, they have different peculiar Functions; some stand before God, others bow down; some sit, others lye prostrate in his Presence. Some sing Praises and Hymns to his Honour, some give him Glory in another Manner, or implore his Mercy on the Sins of Mankind. Some keep a Register of our Actions, some guard us, others support the Throne of God, or are employed in other Works equally agreeable to God.

4. Though we are ignorant of their Names or various Kinds, yet 'tis necessary we should believe them to exist; and another indispensable Duty of Faith, is to love them ^b. Whoever hates one of them is an Infidel. Let him also be looked upon as such, whoever dares say that there are Angels indeed, and of different Sexes as we are, or that they are without any Distinction of Sexes, but which soever be true, he does not trouble himself much either about believing or loving them.

O God, keep us from Infidelity.

^a See Job, Chap. xxxviii. Psal. ciii. Luke ii. Ver. 13. Mat. xviii. Ver. 10. Chap. xxii. Ver. 30. &c.

^b * The Mahometans after their Prayers salute the Angels, turning to the Right and Left, and say, Peace be with you, or Peace and the Mercy of God be with you.

C H A P. IV.

Of the Sacred or Divine Books.

1. THE Faith due to the Divine Books consists in being heartily persuaded, and outwardly professing, that God has with him Books worthy of Respect, (distinguished by their Origin, &c.) which he has sent from Heaven to his Prophets, which was performed without Creation, and is eternal without Production ^a.

^a Mahometans have been at Variance about the Creation of the Koran. The Author of this Catechism is against Creation. * See Herbelot in the Article Alcoran.

68 The Mahometan Catechism: Or, An Abstract of the

2. These Books contain the Commandments of God, and his Prohibitions, his Edicts, Promises, Threats, Declarations (of what is allowed or forbidden) of what is Obedience, what Rebellion, and the Tokens of Retribution, either Reward or Punishment.

3. All these Books are the Word itself of the most high God, openly read to the Faithful, set down in Books, and kept in the Hearts of Men.

4. But this Word of God, as residing in God, is very distinct from the Letters and Words by which it is represented; yet these Letters and Words are, by a common Metaphor, called the Word of God, because they truly convey it to us, as we call those our Words, which manifest our Thought, as one of our Poets ^a has expressed it.

*The Word in our Hearts has its Being,
The Tongue to Light does only't bring.*

(But this only regards Men) without it God knows the Heart of Man.

These sacred Books are in Number one hundred and four, of which the Almighty gave ten to ^b Adam, fifty to Seth, thirty to ^c Idris or Enoch, ten to Abraham, one to Moses, which is the Law, or as we call it the Pentateuch ^d, one to Jesus which is the Gospel, one to David, and that is the Book of Psalms, one to Mahomet, which is the Koran.

Whoever rejects these Books, or calls in Question their Divine Inspiration, either in the Whole or in Part, though but one Chapter, one Versè, or even one Word, is most certainly an Infidel.

Preserve us, O Lord, from Infidelity.

^a This Simile of the Arabian Poet is very natural; Reland does not inform us who he was.

^b See our foregoing Dissertation on the Koran.

^c Reland in his Notes proves that Idris is the same as Ouchneuch or Enoch, who was surnamed Idris from his Learning. A Tarich, (that is a History or Memoirs or Annals) says that Enoch lived 365 Years. Some Mahometans say he was taken up into Heaven, on the tenth Day of the Month Moharram.

^d See our Dissertation on the Koran. See likewise Reland and also Toland's Nazarenus, who thinks the Mahometan Gospel is that of the Ebionites.

C H A P. V.

Of the Apostles from God.

1. ON this Article it is required we should believe with our Hearts, and profess with our Mouths, that the most high God has had his Prophets (that is extraordinary Men) faithful and good Men, whom he has chosen from amongst the rest, to send them to Men; they are true in whatever they say, and are to be credited in whatever they command or forbid, or when they declare to us the Orders of Heaven, its Canons and Constitutions, or reveal to us hidden Things, as the Nature, Attributes and Works of God, the Resurrection or restoring to Life, the Punishment, Interrogation and Examination ^a of the Grave, ^b the Scale, the sharp Bridge ^c, the ^d Fountain, the ^e Intercession, Heaven and its Joys, Hell and its Torments.

^a The Sunnites who are the most orthodox Mussulmen, believe that two Angels named Monkir and Nakir, will give to the Dead a new Life, examine their Faith and Works, and punish the guilty.

^b They believe God will weigh Men's Works in a Scale, and judge them by it.

^c See Chardin's Travels into Persia, Tom. 4. of the Quarto Edit. of 1735.

^d Piscina a Fountain where the Just are to drink after passing the Bridge, before they enter into Heaven.

^e Mahomet's praying for those who are but half virtuous. See Chap. 6.

Mahometan Divinity, from the Latin of Reland. 69

2. All these Prophets are exempt from capital Errors or great Sins, they are of the same Religion, viz. that of Mahomet^a or the Islamism, though they have had different Customs. They are elect amongst all Creatures, having had the Honour to converse with God, to receive from him Deputations of Angels, their Mission was confirmed by evident Miracles superior, or even contrary to the natural Order of the Creation : Some have^b raised dead People to Life, others have entered into Discourse with, and been saluted by Beasts^c, Trees^d, and other inanimate Beings. I omit many other^e Prerogatives, to which ordinary Men cannot pretend.

3. They are subordinate to one another, those who have been sent by God, are above those who had not that Honour, those who have made new Regulations^f are superior to those who did not.

4. Adam is the first Prophet, the last and most excellent is Mahomet, to whom God be merciful, and grant him his Blessing, and to all his Predecessors.

5. The best of Creatures (that is of Mahomet's first Disciples) and the nearest to a Prophet, is Abu-Beker,^g and after him Omar, Othman and Ali.

6. Next come the six venerable Companions of Mahomet : Talcha Alzobeir, Saad, Scio, Abdorrachman, and Abu-Obeida, and some other who likewise deserve to be reckoned amongst his Companions.

7. These are followed by the People to whom the Prophet was sent, (and who obeyed him) God bless the Prophet, and may his Grace protect them all.

8. Lastly, we reckon all those who do good Works, we call them wise, because their Life is conformable to their Discourses^h.

9. One Tradition reckons two hundred and twenty-four thousand Prophets, another only one hundred and twenty-four thousand ; amongst whom three hundred and thirteen were Apostles, and six only brought new Laws,ⁱ Adam, Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus and^k Mahomet.

10. God be merciful to them all, and bestow upon them his Favours !

11. 'Tis not absolutely necessary to know precisely the Number of those extraordinary Men, but we must love them, and whoever loves them not, or hates them, or even one of them, or rejects or questions the Truth of the Prophecy of one only, is to be thought an Infidel.

O God, our God, keep us from Infidelity !

^a See the Koran, Surat or Chapter 2. All Prophets were Mahometans.

^b See the Koran, Chap. 5. Ver. 110. Christ raised the Dead ; Dulkephel a Prophet before Christ raised 30,000, Mahomet raised the Daughter of a chief Shepherd.

^c Solomon knew the Language of Beasts, Mahomet heard a Camel's Complaints. * See above the Story of the poison'd Shoulder of Mutton.

^d See the Koran, Chap. 24.

^e See Reland's Notes about one Salieh.

^f The Mahometans are of Opinion, that some Prophets were not Apostles ; that of these, some had Books from Heaven, yet made no new Constitutions, as may be seen by what has before been said of the sacred Books, and now of those who brought new Laws ; that is only new Additions, for they think all the Prophets were Islamites.

^g This is the Order of most Mahometans, but the Persians and Indians reckon Ali first ; these are called Schiites, the other Sonnites.

^h These Words are added as being the Definition which they give of wise Men, amongst whom they reckon one Algazali.

ⁱ Mahomet was not the first who said Adam was a Prophet. See Epiph. Hær. Pag. 6. * Reland also names many others who are accounted Prophets by the Mussulmen.

^k See Reland concerning the fabulous Account given by the Mahometans of Jesus Christ.

70 The Mahometan Catechism : Or, An Abstract of the

C H A P. VI.

On the Last Day.

1. FAITH on this Article obliges us to believe with our Souls, and profess with our Hearts, that there will be a Last Day, the Day of Resurrection, in which Almighty God will destroy this World, and kill ^a all Creatures except a few which shall be preserved, as the Throne of his Glory, the royal ^b Seat on which this Throne is placed, the ministring ^c Spirit, the Table of his Decrees with the Pen with which ^d they are written, Heaven and Hell with what they contain.

2. After this, God will bring back all Creatures, which he had annihilated, he will awake them with the Sound of the Angel's Trumpet, raise ^e them again, give them a new Life, ^f assemble them all ^g in one Place, examin them, and take a strict Account of what they have done ^h.

3. Each shall receive a Book ⁱ of their good and bad Actions, of the good in the Right-hand, of the bad in the Left behind their Back: Then the most high God will judge them with Justice and Equity, weigh ^k all their Actions, good or bad, in the Scale, and reward every Soul of them, according to their Works.

4. His Goodness and Mercy, will admit some into Heaven, whilst others go to Hell. No Believer will remain eternally in Hell-fire; but shall enter into Heaven after undergoing Punishments proportioned to their Sins. Thus the Faithful shall remain for ever in Heaven, and the Unbelievers when once cast into Hell, shall never come out.

5. To render the Belief of the Resurrection profitable, we must reflect upon it with Fear and Trembling: Whoever, lives in Security, denies the Resurrection, doubts of it, or says, "I fear not the Resurrection, I am in no Concern about Hell, and "care not for Heaven," is an Infidel.

O God, keep us from Infidelity! ^l

C H A P.

^a See Reland, and what we have said on that Article in the Confession of the Mahometan Faith. * Not only Christians, but Jews, Sabeans, and even Heathens, have had a Notion of the World's End, or Last Day.

^b See Reland's Note, who proves from the Talmud, that the Jews reckoned the Throne of God as one of the seven Things created before the World, Mahomet borrowed this from the Jews.

^c This Angel carried the Throne upon the Waters, and has Wings innumerable. See Reland, likewise the first Chapter of Genesis, with the Jewish Interpreters.

^d The Table is a Pearl immensely big, the Pen Diamonds, the Slit of it diffuses Light instead of Ink: As the Jews say the Tables of the Decalogue were of Sapphire, created before Heaven and Earth. See Ovid's Metam. Book xv. V. 109.

^e See the Profession of Mahometan Faith. See Mat. xxiv. 31. also 1 Thes. iv. The Mussulmen think all Beasts, Fowls, or Fishes, are to rise again to be judged and destroyed, and that the As of Esdra, and Camel of Mahomet, are to be admitted into Heaven.

^f To raise again and give a new Life, seem the same Thing, yet our Author by using both Expressions, may be understood, so as raising again will be a Re-union of the Parts of the Body, and giving a new Life will be re-uniting the Souls to their proper Bodies.

^g * In Syria (according to some Mussulmen) there to be kept (may be for several Ages) by Angels appointed for that Purpose to see that none of them escape: The Wicked will then begin to undergo the eternal Torments.

^h Beginning with the Mahometans, seventy thousand of which will be saved without giving any Account, to which Reland adds that they shall undergo a much milder Examination, who shall have read attentively the sixty-ninth Chapter of the Koran, the Title of which is, The infallible. This Epithet is also given to the Day of Judgment. See Salé.

ⁱ See what has been said in the Profession of Faith of Mussulmen.

^k The good Works of the Pious shall outweigh the bad, and they go to Heaven; the bad Works of the Wicked shall outweigh the good, and they shall be cast into Hell; those whose good and bad Works are found equal, shall be in a middle Place, till by Mahomet's Intercession they shall at last be admitted into Heaven. Some Mahometans do not believe Punishments to be eternal, as contrary to the Goodness of God. See Chardin's Travels, Tom. iv. Pag. 24. Edit. of 1735. 4to.

A Farther EXPLANATION of this CHAPTER VI.

* The Mahometans think, that when the Body is in the Grave, two Angels examine it, if the Answers

C H A P. VII.

On the Decrees of God.

1. TH E Faith about the Decree of God, obliges us to believe with our Hearts, and confess with our Mouth, that the most high God, has not only ordered all Things, but their Manner of Being, so that nothing happens in the World, either as to the Situation or Operations of Things, Good or Evil, Obedience or Disobedience, Faith or Infidelity, Health or Sickness, Riches or Poverty, Life or Death, but what is in the Decree of God, according to the Order of his Providence, and proceeds from his Will and Judgment ^a.

2. But we must not forget, that the Decree of God, about Good, Obedience, and Faith, is such, that those Things must remain in the Order settled, and are absolutely subject to his Will, his saving Direction, his Approbation and Command; whereas Evil, Disobedience, Infidelity, is willed, ordained, resolved, and fixed, if we may use that Expression, by a meer Privation of God's saving Direction, Approbation and Command. Men fall into those Crimes by a Seduction ^b which they have deserved, without God's saving Direction, Approbation, or Command.

3. Whoever therefore is so bold as to say, that God delights in the Good done by Men, and in their Faith; or that he does not hate Evil and Infidelity, or that Good and Evil come from God, so as to be both fixed and willed by him with an equal Approbation; he is most certainly an Infidel. For it is true, that God orders the Good, yet so that he always approves it; and is true likewise, that he orders Evil, yet so as always to hate it.

O good God, direct us constantly in the right Way ^c.

are good, they let him lye down to rest, if not, they punish him. See Chap. 8. and 47. of the Koran. This is borrowed from the Jewish Rabbits. See Buxtorf in his Judaical Synagogue. Chap. 49. Both answer as well as they can to the Objection of the Bodies burnt, devoured by wild Beasts, or otherwise destroyed.

As to the Souls, they are in a State of Separation called Al-Berzakh. See Sale on the 23d Chapter of the Koran. The Prophets go to Heaven directly, the Martyrs are in the Throats of Birds, who live only upon the Fruits of Paradise; the Souls of the common Faithful either are about the Graves, or in the Well Zemzem, or with Adam in the lowest Heaven, the Wicked are cast into the Barhut, a noisome Place in Arabia, or under Satan's Jaw, where they undergo grievous Torments till the Last Day.

As to the Resurrection, some think it only spiritual, most believe also the raising of the Body from the Bone called Al-Ajb in Latin Coccyx, they mention Signs Forerunners of the Last Day. See Koran. Chap. 32. and 70. and 81. Sale in his Preliminary Discourse, and in his Notes. See also Maracci's Refutation of Chap. 32. of Koran.

^a * Reland cites here some Arabick Verses, to maintain the Certainty and Necessity of the Divine Decree, &c. they conclude by condemning Astrology.

^b The Words which they have deserved are added, because the Author seems by the whole Context to have been of that Opinion, though it must be owned his Expressions are very obscure: After all it is certain likewise that St. Paul, Rom. i. teaches, that God withdraws his Grace from those who have abused it, and permits them to fall into great Sins, in Punishment of former Transgressions.

EXPLANATION.

^c * The Mussulmen are divided in their Account of this Article of their Belief: However they own generally, that whatever happens, without Exception, proceeds wholly from the Will of God, and is irrevocably decreed; which Predestination, they pretend, reaches to the minutest Objects, and can by no Means be avoided. See the Koran, Chap. 3. and in other Places. Mahomet is taxed with teaching this out of Policy, to make his Followers fight desperately. But the Mahometan Teachers have invented many Solutions to soften this Doctrine. See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient. Article Cadha, and in other Places.

72 The Mahometan Catechism : Or, An Abstract of the

C H A P. VIII.

Of Ablutions and Purifications.

1. AS to the Purifications prescribed, it must be known that seven different Sorts of Water may be used in them : Rain-water, Sea, River, Well, Spring, Snow and Hail-water.

We admit three Sorts of Ablutions and Purifications.

The first we call Gass, 'tis a kind of Immersion. The second named Wodou, concerns particularly the Hands and Feet. The third is made with Earth or Gravel, instead of Water.

I. Of the Ablution called G A S S.

2. Three Rules are to be observed in this Ablution of the Body. 1°. Those who do it must resolve to please ^a God. 2°. All the Dirt of the Body must be washed off. 3°. The Water must touch the whole Skin, and all the Hair of the Body.

3. Our Senna (which is our ^b Oral Law) requires five Things more. 1°. That the usual Form in the Name of God, &c. be recited. 2°. That we should wash the Palms of our Hands before the Jugs are emptied into the washing Place. 3°. That before the Prayers, some Expiation (Lustration) should be made with peculiar Ceremonies. 4°. That to take off all Dirt, the Skin should be rubbed with the Hand. 5°. That all this be continued to the End of the Ablution.

4. This Ablution becomes necessary upon six Accounts ^c : Three of which are common to both Sexes, 1°. unlawful Embraces in Thoughts, &c. without other Consequences ^d. 2°. The voluntary or involuntary Consequences of unlawful Embraces. (Fluxus Seminis) 3°. Death : The other three are peculiar to Women, 1°. Their Courses, 2°. The Flowing of Blood after being brought to Bed, 3°. The being brought to Bed.

II.

Of the Purification called Wodou, which chiefly belongs to the Hands and Feet.

1. Six Things are to be considered in this Kind of Purification. 1°. It must be performed with an Intention to please God. 2°. The whole Face is to be washed :

^a This is strongly recommended to Mussulmen by their Poets. See Reland, he cites a Persian Author who says that the Actions of a Man, without the Love of God in his Heart, are like Wind. Chardin likewise owns that their Behaviour at Prayers are a severe Censure of the want of Devotion so common in Christian Churches.

^b The Senna is the Mahometan Tradition, and with the Koran makes up their Civil and Canon Law. It means also Works of Perfection, rewarded when done, not punished when omitted.

^c The Persians reckon six principal Reasons as follow. 1. Every Uncleaness whatever. 2. Women's Courses. 3. Lying-inn. 4. Loss of Blood after it, 5°. touching a dead Corpse. 6. Death. But besides these, their Senna prescribes forty more.

1. Every Friday for celebrating their Sabbath. 2. Every odd Night of the Month Rhamadan, first, third, &c. 3. The Night before the Feast of the same Month. 4. The Feast of Offerings. 5. The 14th Night of the Month Rasseb. 6. And the 27th Day of the same Month. 7. The 14th Night of the Month Sabaan. 8. The 17th Day of the Month Rebia the first, being the Birth-day of Mahomet. 9. the 28. of the Month Dilhaja. 10 and the 24th, 11. the 25th of the Month Dilkaada, the others are most of them already mentioned in the Pilgrimage to Mecca and Medina. * But we must not forget that the Turks neglect some Ablutions practised by the Persians, and these omit some performed by the Turks.

The Latin has sine Emissione Seminis, which cannot be translated, Modesty and the Purity of our Language forbids it; another Occasion of Ablution was Circumcision, which our Author after Gal. Lib. 15. De usu Partium, and others, informs us was done to Girls also about 14. The Arabians have a particular Name for the Matrons employed to circumcise the Girls.

3°. The Hands and Arms up to the Elbow. 4°. Some Parts of the Head are to be rubbed. 5°. The Feet and Heels are to be made clean. 6°. The Ceremonies prescribed must be exactly complied with.

2. Besides which, the ten Institutions of the Sonna must be followed. 1°. The Form in the Name of God, &c. must be used. 2°. The Palm of the Hands washed before the Jugs are emptied into the washing Place. 3°. The Face cleaned, 4°. Some of the Water drawn up the Nostrils. 5°. The whole Head and Ears rubbed. 6°. Thick and long Beards must be parted, to be better cleaned. 7°. The Toes washed one after the other, each singly. 8°. The Right-hand and Foot to be washed before the Left. 9°. All these Things must be repeated thrice. 10°. There must be no Intermiſſion in this Performance.

3. This Kind of Purification becomes necessary on five Occasions. 1. When any Excrement is voided (excepto Semine). 2. After a profound Sleep. ^a 3. When any one has lost the Use of Reason by drinking Wine ^b, or by Sickneſs or any other Way. 4. After touching the naked Skin of an unclean Woman. 5. Or touching one's ſelf immodeſtly.

4. Moreover it is alſo preſcribed to clean one's ſelf after voiding Excrements, and this is to be done with the Left-hand, little Stones are uſed ^c for that Purpoſe, after which Water is uſed to compleat the Work, till the Colour, Taſte, and Smell of the Water ^d ſhews all is clean.

III. Of the Purification with Earth or Gravel.

1. Four Rules are preſcribed in this Purification ^e 1. It muſt be performed with an Intention to pleaſe God. 2. The Face ought to be well rubbed. 3. The ſame is to be done to the Hands and Arms, and Elbows, and to the Feet. 4°. The ſaid Order muſt be exactly kept.

2. Add to this the Precepts of the Sonna. 1. The Form in the Name of God, &c. muſt be recited. 2. The Right-hand muſt be rubbed before the Left, and ſo of the Feet. 3. There muſt be no Intermiſſion in this Rite.

^a Because it is ſuppoſed that in a profound Sleep, ſome Uncleanneſs may have been contracted and forgot.

^b The Koran, Chap. 2, and 5 forbids Wine, but ſeveral Mahometans drink it, and ſome of their Doctōrs pretend Mahomet has only forbid Drunkenneſs. Policy may encourage that Liberty to draw off their Attention from ſerious Affairs. And Experience teaches that the Meetings of ſober diſcontented People are more dangerous than thoſe of Drunkards.

^c This Cuſtom of uſing little Stones is proved by the Plutus of Ariſtophanes, in which one of the Actors complains there was ſuch a Scarcity of Pebbles, that they were forced to uſe Garlick Skins. Reland cites alſo Florent. Chriſtian. The Mahometans never uſe Paper, becauſe it may have been, or may be uſed to write holy Things upon it.

^d Rich or Poor, all uſe Water; Reland derives the Latin Word Latrina, from Lavatrina, if ſo, the Romans uſed Water likewiſe to clean their Poſteriors. An Arabian Author tells us gravely, that an Angel taught Adam and Eve how to uſe Pebbles and Water for that Purpoſe.

^e This is uſed only when Water is wanting, or a ſick Perſon cannot bear it, Mineral Earth may be uſed. The Jews in Gemara Beracoth, Fol. 15. admit it; and ſome Chriſtians in Africa for Baptiſm. See Cedrenus, Pag. 250.

C H A P. IX.

On Prayers.

1. THIRTEEN Rules are prescribed concerning Prayers. 1. The ^a Intention. 2. The Greatness of the Names of God. 3. The Form of the Unity of God, God is great, &c. 4. The right or streight Position of the ^b Body. 5. Reading the first Chapter of the Koran ^c. 6. Bowing the Body towards the Earth ^d. 7. Raising from that first Bowing. 8. A second Adoration or prostrating with the Face to the Ground ^e. 9. Sitting down ^f. 10. A second sitting down. 11. The second Form about Mahomet, the first was about God himself. 12. The Words of it, which are to be repeated. 13. The observing punctually each of these in their Order.

2. The Senna requires four Things more, 1. That the People be invited to Prayers ^g. 2. That this Invitation be repeated with a Form ^h not much different. 3. The first Confession about God. 4. The Words or Form of Prayer of that Confession.

3. Five Dispositions are necessary for Prayer. 1. The Body must be entirely clean. 2. It must be decently clad ⁱ. 3. In a clean Place ^k so as to contract no Uncleannefs. 4. At the exact Time appointed. 5. Not forgetting the Kibla, which is turning towards Mecca.

4. There are also five Sorts of Prayers to be said daily ^l. At Noon with four Inclinations of the Body. 2. In the Afternoon with four also. 3. In the Evening with three. 4. In the Night with four. 5. In the Morning with two only. In all seventeen ^m for the whole Day.

^a See Chardin's Travels into Persia, Pag. 120. Tom. 4. Edit. in 4to. of 1735. where he gives great Encomiums to the Devotion of the Mahometans.

^b See the Print here annexed : The Body standing is to be streight without Motion, the Feet close together, the Hands raised up to the Head, or joined and laid upon the Breast, or each apart on the Knees bending the Body, or without bending it as in the Print. The Adoration is made with the Face to the Ground. They sit with their Hands on their Thighs; saying, Lord accept of our standing, bending, adoring and sitting.

This Chapter is highly valued by Mussulmen, as the Lord's-Prayer by Christians. Maracci and Sal- command it likewise.

^c Those who by Sickness are hindered from bending, only look down or up, or raise their Head, or squeeze their Lips, as a Sign of Humiliation.

^d Both Knees, both Hands, both Feet, and Forehead touch the Ground at the Adoration.

^e To be more recollected in Meditation, they sit on their right Heel.

^f * They are called to Prayers from the Top of their Meyques as we said before.

^g * Some make an Adoration betwixt the first and second sitting.

The Men hide what is betwixt the Belly and Knees, the Women show only the Hands and Feet, (not the Face, as Roland says by a Mistake) they also put off gaudy Apparel; for Prayer requires Humility in God's Presence.

^h They use a Mat or Carpet to pray upon.

ⁱ They look on these Prayers as of Divine Institution, but they have five more. 1. Those of the Plumation. 2. To avert God's Anger and Punishment. 3. In the Time of an Eclipse. 4. To ask for Rain. 5. At a Funeral. Moreover, Friday is kept by them, as an Order given by Adam, because on that Day the Angels prostrated themselves before Adam by God's Order.

^k Travellers may without Sin reduce them to eleven

C H A P. X.

On A L M S.

“ SOME Alms are left to the free Choice of every Particular, others are prescribed by the Law: This Chapter treats of these last mentioned.”

1. Alms are given out of five Sorts of Goods ^b. 1. Of Cattle, Camels, Oxen, Sheep. 2. Of Money. 3. Of Corn. 4. Of other Fruits of the Earth. 5. Of Goods in Trade.

2. Six Conditions are required in the Giver. 1. He must be a Mussulman, that is, a true Believer. 2. A Freeman. 3. Lawful Possessor of what he is to give away ^c. 4. His Patrimony must be encreased ^d. 5. He must have been in Possession about a Year ^e. 6. He must not give his working Cattle, but one of those who are at Grass ^f.

3. The same Conditions are required for Alms, of Money, Corn, other Fruits of the Earth, &c. only about Corn and Fruits it is to be observed, 1. That they must grow from our Labour, as sowing, &c. 2. They must have been laid up in our Store Rooms or Barns. 3. There must be a convenient Quantity left, so that the Giver may not be reduced to Want.

4. But we must chiefly take Notice, that in the aforesaid Alms given by those who are easy in their Circumstances; and in other Alms (if that Name can be given to a Tax annually levied by a Capitation at the End of the Fast of Rhamadan, ^g) the first and best Principle ought to be the Intention of giving this or that Alm as a Debt we pay ^h.

^a This is supplied from a Note of Reland, who cites an Arabian Author, averring that a Serpent is to bite the Hands of those who did not give Alms, &c.

^b Others reckon eight Sorts of Goods, but there is no Difference in the Main.

^c 'Tis an Injustice, and not Charity, to give what does not belong to us.

^d As Riches increase, Alms should increase at two and a half per Cent. those who have not twenty Pieces of Gold, or two hundred in Silver, or five Camels, or thirty Oxen, or thirty Sheep, are not obliged, they think, to give Alms.

^e At least eleven Months without pawning it.

^f Because Alms are to be out of what is not necessary.

^g Every one whether they fast or no, pays in Money or in Goods the Value of a small Piece of Silver.

^h See Herbelot's Art. Ferraiddh. that is an indispensable Duty: Whereas the Precepts of the Sonna are not so strictly obligatory. The Mahometans call Alms Zakat, which signifies Increase, because it draws God's Blessing. Zaka is also the Name of a Dervis, who gives Water by way of Alms. See the Print. Uhardin, Ricault, Thevenot, and all Travellers, give great Encomiums to the Mahometans upon Account of their Alms.

C H A P. XI.

Of F A S T S.

1. THREE Things are required in the Person who fasts ^a, to make it acceptable to God. 1. He must be a Mussulman. 2. At an Age of Ripeness, (fourteen in Men, twelve in Women.) 3. In their right Senses.

^a Their chief Fast is that of Rhamadan, (which Travellers may put off to another Time:) After it, is kept the Feast of the Great Beiram. The Little Beiram is kept on the tenth of the Month Dilhazja, in Memory of Abraham's Sacrifice. Those are the chief Feasts of the Mahometans.

76 The Mahometan Catechism: Or, An Abstract of the

2. The Conditions of the Fast are five. 1. An Intention of the Heart to please God. 2. Eat nothing in the Day ^a. 3. Drink nothing of any Sort. 4. Have no Commerce with Women, not even by Kisses, &c. 5. Not throw up what has been eaten, which supposes both that the Stomach is good and that no Excess is committed, or at least nothing taken which may give a Disgust.

3. Ten Defects break the Fast, and render it useless. 1. When any Thing is taken back willfully into the Head or Stomach ^b. 2. Taking a Glister, &c. 3. Or some such Thing before, &c. ^c Wilfully throwing up any Thing by the Mouth. 5. Having Commerce with a Woman ^d. 6. Or a worse Crime against Chastity. 7. The Courses in Women. 8. Loss of Blood after Lying-in. 9. Madness. 10. Apostasy.

^a From Sun-rising to Sun-set, at which Time a Signal is given to take their Meal. Some are very scrupulous, some not so precise, others spend the whole Night in Riot.

^b They are not allowed to swallow their Spittle, or to smell Flowers or Perfumes, &c. nor to wash their Faces, or go into the Water to cool themselves.

^c The Latin has Simile quid anteriori parti applicitum.

^d The Latin Word is concubitus. Chardin, Pag. 162. of Tom. 4. of his Travels in Persia, intimates that the Persians are of Opinion that only Sod . . . cal Practices are forbid on Fasting-days. The Turks and Persians, &c. are very much addicted to that detestable Crime.

C H A P. XII.

On the Pilgrimage of Mecca.

I N performing this devout Ceremony, five Things are commanded by Divine Institution. 1. The Intention and religious Vow of going to Mecca. 2. Spending a Day on Mount Arafat. ^a 3. Shaving ^b the Head in the Valley of Mina ^c. 4. To go seven Times round the Ca'aba, ^d that is the square Enclosure in the Temple of Mecca. 5. Run seven Times between ^e Safa and Merva, two holy Places, one hundred and eighty Cubits distant one from the other.

^a This is done on the ninth Day of the Month.

^b The Men shave themselves, the Women cut their Hair close to the Head.

^c They throw seven Stones one after the other in the Valley of Mina, after which the Men (not the Women) offer Sheep, Goats, Oxen, or Camels in Sacrifice; then shave and pare their Nails: The Hair and Parings are buried in that Valley.

^d They pretend this is the most holy Place of the Temple, built by Abraham himself. It is square twenty-seven Cubits high, twenty-four in Length, and twenty-three in Breadth. The Grand Signior sends every Year a black Covering for it. The Arabians and Persians call it the House of God. Some Patriarch of Ismael's Family may probably have lived there; but we have mentioned this before.

^e At first they walk slow, then run faster between two Pillars; then walk again, looking on all Sides as if seeking something lost. This is to represent the Anxiety of Agar, when she endeavoured to find Water in the Desert for her Son Ismael. All these Ceremonies were in use long before Mahomet, who made them an Essential Part of his Religion, both in order to draw in the superstitious Inhabitants, and to make his Law seem venerable for its Antiquity.

E X P L A-

EXPLANATION OF THE MAHOMETAN RELIGION.

SECT. I.

The Drift of this Treatise.

SINCE the Religion of Mahomet has spread itself and infected a great Part of the known World, several Authors have endeavoured to refute and stop the Progress of this pernicious Doctrine ^a fatal to Christianity, and at the same Time very apt to make Impression on the Minds and Hearts of Mankind naturally averse from any Mortification; such an Undertaking was necessary to prevent the Growth of Error from the Ignorance of the People, but it was not of an easy Execution.

The Knowledge of the Arabick Language was and is still requisite in those who would confute Mahometism; for as the Impostor wrote in that Tongue, his Religion cannot be thoroughly known without being Master of it. Yet most of those who have attacked his System, were intirely deprived of that Help, and ignorant of it: This has led them into numberless Mistakes, and made them charge boldly the Mahometans with Opinions which they never held, and which could not come into the Head of any sensible Man. Thus the imprudent Zeal of some Greeks ^b has made them reproach Mahometism with several Tenets which it expressly rejects: A melancholy, but too common Effect of Prejudices and Heat of Disputes! We intend therefore to examine and inquire into the Grounds of such Mistakes, lest Christians should be still fighting against Chimeras, or deceived by a false Account of the Mahometan Belief. This is the Drift of this Treatise, in which we shall explain forty Articles laid falsely to their Charge. We shall cite those who accuse them wrongfully, and then produce our Vouchers for what we affirm; hoping that Christians will learn by it, to judge with more Equity one of the other, and of their Enemies, and not be misled by false Representations.

SECT. II.

Whether Mahometans believe that every one may be saved in his Religion, if he leads a moral good Life?

The common Opinion taxes Mahomet and his Followers, with maintaining that every one may be saved in his Religion, if he leads a moral good Life. Cardinal Cusa^c, ^a This is an Addition of Mr. D, so we use a different Letter.

^b Fervor imprudens Græculorum, are the Words of the Original.

^c In Cribratione Alcorani, Lib. 3. Cap. 2.

Hoornbeck^a, Voetius^b, Selden^c, Hornius^d, Vigenerius^e, Artus Thomas^f, Cardinal Bellarmin^g, Gualterius^h, *Thomas of Jesus*ⁱ, the Author of the second Discourse^k against Mahomet, and several others, flatly accuse Mahomet of having held and taught that Latitudinarian Principle. Moreover a Writer^l who lived fifteen Years in Asia, and had great Opportunities of learning the Oriental Languages, and was a great Proficient in that Study, as appears by the Persian Dictionary which he published in the Year 1684, says likewise that the Koran in the Chapter of the Cow, promises that all those who shall have believed, and lived piously, whether Christians or Sabaites, and shall believe in God, and a Day of Judgment, and perform good Works, shall receive the Reward from the Lord their God, and at the Day of Resurrection, no Fear or Affliction shall fall upon them.

It must be owned that the second Chapter of the Koran, Ver. 59. and the fifth Chapter, Ver. 73. contain such a Promise; We likewise acknowledge that some Mahometans, especially in Persia^m, are of Opinion that Mahomet intended at first to admit into Heaven all those who should lead moral Lives; but then, say they, he soon altered his Mind, and abrogated those two Verses, by others brought to him from Heaven, in which it is clearly decided, that the Gates of Heaven are shut to all Sects except his own. Even this shews that it is not a Point of the Mahometan Belief, that every one may be saved in his Religion; and that Mahomet might only have contradicted himself.

'Tis highly probable after all, that the forementioned Authors mistook Mahomet's Meaning, which was no other, than that every Mussulman who should join the Practice of good Works to his Belief in God and of the Day of Judgment, would receive his Reward from the Lord; and as to other Sects, even the Idolaters of Arabia, they need not despair of Salvation, there being a Way to Heaven opened for them, which is to become Mussulmen, and believe the two chief Articles of Mahometism, the Unity of God, and a Day of Judgment, and practise the Ceremonies and Customs of that Sect, which they take to be good Works. The Jews, Christians, and Gentiles, cannot be saved as long as they remain in Infidelity and Idolatry, of which last they accuse the *Christians*ⁿ. This appears by the 64th Chapter of the Koran, Ver. 9. and 10. God, says Mahomet, will forgive all the Sins of those who believe in God and do good Works; but all those who remain in their Incredulity and disown the Truth of my Miracles, they shall be cast into Hell. Who but a Mahometan believes Mahomet's Miracles? The second, fifth, and ninth Chapters openly declare that a Believer is one who embraces the Mahometan Religion and practises

^a Summa Controvers. Pag. 188.

^b Disputat. Theolog. Part 2. Pag. 665.

^c De jure Nat. & Gent. Lib. 6. Cap. 2.

^d In Hist. Eccles.

^e In his French Notes on Hist. Byzantin. Pag. 505.

^f In his Triumph of the Cross. Pag. 24.

^g Tom. 2. Controv. Pag. 294.

^h In his Chronology. Pag. 547.

ⁱ In his Book of the Conversion of Gentiles, Pag. 644. and 677.

^k Bibliander published the Koran in 1550. with some Discourses against Mahomet. See Pag. 321.

^l Angel, a. s. Joseph, or La Bresse. See his Persian Dict. printed at Amsterdam in Fol. 1684. Pag. 365. See also Repub. of Letters for March. 1684. Pag. 66. It is called Al-Bakar.

^m Chardin mentions such Mahometans in the 4th Vol. of his Travels, Edit. of 1735. in 4to.

ⁿ See the Chapter of the Den, which is the 8th. There is no Contradiction in this Book, (literally) nothing crooked or perverse; it teaches the right Way, it preaches to the Wicked that they shall suffer great Torments, it powerfully exhorts those who say that God has begot a Son . . . unless they believe the Koran they shall repent it. See the Translation of Sale, and the Latin of Maracci.

^o * Mr. D says, but against common Sense, that this might be translated Standards.

its Customs and Ceremonies; Faith and Islamism are two Words which signify the same Thing among Mussulmen, and believing in God, is not only believing that he exists, but that he is such as described by Mahomet. Hence it is that in Chap. 5. Ver. 74. we read, If Jews and Christians believe, they shall be admitted into Paradise. Mahomet could not but know that the first Article of both the Jewish and Christian Faith is the Belief of a God; and their first Rule of Morality is to do Good; therefore when he mentions their believing, he means their embracing the Mahometan Faith and Practice.

This becomes still more evident by comparing the various Passages of the Koran on this Subject. In the second Chap. Ver. 15. Those to whom we have given this Book, says Mahomet, and shall not believe it, they shall perish. Again in the third Chapter, Ver. 84. Whoever shall have professed any Religion except Islamism, his Belief shall not be acceptable to God, and in the Life to come; he shall receive Damage by it; that is, he shall have no share in Happiness. We have before cited the 74th Verse of the fifth Chapter. Who can believe that Mahomet should teach Latitudinarian Principles in the 73d Verse of the fifth Chapter, and in the fifty-ninth Verse of the second? Hinckelman^a is of that Opinion, but we must say Mahomet was never looked upon as a Fool, void of common Sense, so far as to be guilty of such palpable Contradictions, and within so few Lines.

. Credat Judæus Apella, non ego.

Moreover Mahomet foretells that his Followers will be divided into seventy-three different Sects, of which he declares^b that one only shall be saved. Is it probable that he would damn seventy-two Sects of his own Disciples, and open the Gates of Heaven to all Religions? How could he so earnestly recommend his own Religion, without exposing himself to be a Laughing-stock to all Nations; if at the same Time he had allowed Salvation to every good Liver in any Religion? This is enough to convince any rational Man, that this Latitudinarianism is wrongfully imputed to Mahomet, by a Mistake grounded on a false Interpretation of a Passage, in which he says no more concerning his new System of Religion, than St. Peter had said before of^c Christianity, that in every Nation he that fears (God) and works Righteousness, is accepted with him. God forbid we should conclude from thence, that every one may be saved in his Religion^d!

S E C T. III.

Whether Mahometans believe that God is corporeal?

They are accused of holding this erroneous Opinion by Pope Pius II. in his Letter to Morbisane, Prince of the Turks, (or as it is in the Manuscript and the first

^a In Præf. ad Alcor. Fol. Edit. Col. 2.

^b See Maracci in the Pref. of his Preliminaries to the Refutation of the Koran, Pag. 2.

^c Acts of the Apostles, Chap. x. Ver. 35.

^d We must not omit mentioning in this Place the four chief Sects of Mahometans (mentioned in an Arabian Manuscript) of which the Saying of Mahomet that one only should be saved is not to be understood to be meant: They are the Hanifeans, Schafeans, Malikeans and Hambelites. The Persians, the Indians of Golconda, of the Coast of Coromandel, &c. are Schafeans, holding that Ali, Son-in-law to Mahomet, should have been his immediate Successor, and are called by Derision Schiits, that is, factious and jeudicious. The Turks, Moguls, Arabian and African Mahometans are Hanifeans, hold the contrary, and are called Sonnits, that is, Traditionary.

Edition of it ^a. To the illustrious Mahomet, Prince of the Turks) the Christians and the Turks, says he, differ in many Articles concerning the Godhead: For Instance, you say that God is Corporeal, we say he has not a Body. And again, the Sarrafins describe God as having a Body, a Head, Hands, &c. we hold him to be a pure Spirit, immortal, eternal, and incomprehensible. Thomas of Jesus ^b, Gualterius ^c, Arthur Thomas ^d, Lipsius ^e, and Enthymius Zigabenus (a Grecian Monk who lived in the twelfth Century) have also imputed to Mahomet the same Absurdity. The last mentioned Author speaks thus of Mahomet. ^f “ He has been so bold as to say, that “ God is Spherical; now ’tis well known that a Sphere is a thick condensed Body ; “ from which it follows that God cannot see or hear ^g.”

This Accusation also is grounded upon a Mistake. True it is, the Arabick Word employed by Mahomet in the hundred and twelfth Chapter of the Koran, does signify a spherical solid Body ; but it means ^h also eternal, and in that Sense can be applied only to God ⁱ. This is evident by the Persian Paraphrastical Version of the Koran, in which the Explanation of that Word is, that God wants nothing, and is Self-sufficient : Again an Abstract of their Divinity ^k has these Words, “ certainly “ God is not a corporeal Being, has no Figure, his Substance is not finite, and can- “ not be measured, neither can he be compared to any Body whatsoever, because “ all Bodies may be measured or divided, which cannot be said of God.” That Part of their Divinity, in which they demonstrate that the Nature of God cannot be corporeal, is by them called the Sanctification of God. The Author of the Abstract of the Mahometan Religion excludes from the Idea or Definition of God all Figure, Colour, Place, Time, Likeness, Equality, Image, Change, Motion, Absence, Division, Labour or Fatigue. Those who have not Leisure or Opportunity of consulting Arabick Manuscripts, may have recourse to a Latin Book published at Paris in 1641. the Title of it is Synopsis Propositionum sapientiae Arabum Philosophorum, that is, An Abridgment of the Propositions of the Wisdom of the Arabian Philosophers. The Author of it, the famous Abraham Echellensis a Maronite, represents their Opinion in these Words : ^l “ Whatever is, exists either necessarily and “ of himself, and is God ; or has not its Being from himself, and does not exist “ necessarily, and is of two Sorts, Substance and Accidents again Substances “ are of two Kinds ; Abstract, as all Spirits and Intellectual Beings, or Concrete, as “ Matter and Form.” This single Passage proves evidently that the Mahometan Notions are not so confused, as is said by those who so slightly tax them with confounding God with Matter.

To conclude, the Jews have dealt with the Mahometans more equitably than the above cited Christians : In a Book highly valued by the Rabbins ^m, a Mahometan

^a This Edition is in the publick Library of the Academy at Utrecht.

^b De Conversion. Gentil. Lib. 10.

^c In his Chronology, Pag. 539.

^d In his Triumph of the Cross, Pag. 22.

^e In his Monit. & Exemp. Politic. Chap. 3. Pag. 141.

^f In his Panoplia Dogmatica, in the great Biblioth. Patr.

^g This good Monk and the Authors here cited, might have known that such Expressions are metaphorical, and not to be understood literally, but explained as we do several Scripture Phrases.

^h Mr. Reland calls it Scidum, or as Pliny has it, Hist. Nat. Lib. 33. Cap. 4. Holosphyraton, id est nulla inanitate, not hollow or empty.

ⁱ See Reland's Latin Dissertation on the Mahometan Belief, Sect. 36.

^k Reland had it in Manuscript, and gave a Copy of it to his Friend, Sike.

^l Synopsis, &c. Pag. 5.

^m Cosmi, Pag. 12.

is introduced giving this Account of his Faith, the more to be regarded in this Point, as it is a Testimony for them given by their Enemies.

“ We Disciples of Mahomet, firmly believe the Unity and Eternity of the supreme Being ; that the World has had a Beginning, and all Men proceed from Adam : We exclude from God all kind of Body or corporeal Modality ; if we drop any Expression which might give Occasion to suspect the contrary, we explain it immediately, and take Notice ’tis only a Metaphor, made use of to proportion the Majesty of the infinite Being to our narrow human Conception.” The rest does not touch this present Enquiry, and is only a Repetition of what has been said before. How different is this Exposition of the Mahometan Belief, from the Notion so many Christians have hitherto entertained of it ?

S E C T. IV.

Whether God is the Author of Sin according to the Mahometan Doctrine ?

This Blasphemy is laid to their Charge by Cedrenus^a, Evodius^b, Damasceus^c, an anonymous Author in the Saraceniana of Sylburgh^d, Arthur Thomas^e, Gualterius^f, and besides many others of the above-mentioned Grecian Monk^g, who alledges for a Proof these Words of the Koran. He whom God directs is led in the right Way, but he whom he leads into Error, is forsaken.

We own frankly these Words are in the Koran ; but shall we infer from thence that Mahomet made God the Author of Sin ? By no Means. It is said in his Favour, that this is only an Eastern Expression, to signify that the Divine Providence^h governs Good and Evil ; that in many Places the holy Scripture says that God creates Evil, Hardness, Sinners, &c.ⁱ Our Divines explain those Passages in a Sense agreeable to the Divine Majesty and Sanctity ; they maintain that both Physical and Moral Evils are under the Direction of Providence, that unless we deny, as some have done, the^k All-knowing, and All-foreseeing Science of God ; we must own that from all Eternity God has foreseen the Character, Time, Place, Circumstances and Sins of all Men, which by Consequence will certainly happen, tho’ freely on their Part. This is sound Christian Doctrine, this does not make God the Author of Moral Evil, yet some Doctors accuse those Divines of teaching Mahometan Doctrine, as if the Unity and Eternity of God were not Divine Attributes, because the Arabian Doctors teach them ! We ought from such Examples to learn more Equity and Candour in representing the Doctrine even of Mahomet.

An Arabick Manuscript calls God the Creator of Good and Evil, meaning Physical Evil, for a few Lines after he says of God, that he is the Creator of Heaven

^a In Histor. Compendio, Pag. 348.

^b In his Acts of the forty-two Martyrs inserted in the sixth Vol. of Art. 55.

^c In his Book of Heresies.

^d Pag. 67.

^e In his Triumph of the Cross, Pag. 11. and 22.

^f In his Chronology, Pag. 539.

^g Euthymius Zigabenus, in his Panoplia Dogmatica.

^h Hic loquendi modus notat Providentiam Dei versari circa mala & bona.

ⁱ See Isa. Chap. xlv. Ver. 7. Amos Chap. iii. Ver. 6. Rom. Chap. ix. Jerem. Chap. iv. Ver. 10. Psal. xxxi. Ver. 13.

^k Omniscientiam.

and Hell. We must do the Mahometans this Piece of Justice: They highly praise the Holiness of God, they exclude from him every the least Defect or Imperfection: They never own him to be the Author of Evil or Sin, which they say is displeasing to him, though subject to the Order of his Providence; in a Word, amongst the adorable Perfections of God, they expressly require his infinite Sanctity should be owned: This is their known constant Doctrine, by which it is plain they are unjustly accused of making God the Author of Sin.

S E C T. V.

Whether the Mahometans pay Adoration to Venus?

There is at Mecca a black Stone fixt in the Wall of the Ca'aba, about two Cubits and a Quarter from the Ground; it is as big as a Man's Head; to this Day all those who go in Pilgrimage to the Temple at Mecca kiss this Stone, and hold it in great Veneration as a sacred Thing. This Ceremony has probably given a Handle to this Accusation, which was so far credited, that in the Abjuration of the Mahometans who became Christians, it was heretofore required they should say, "I anathematise those, who adore the Morning Star or Venus, who in Arabick is called Chabar, that is the Great." The learned Princess Ann Comnene who lived in the twelfth Century, mentions the same Goddess^a by the Name of Chobar, and says that the Saracens adored Astarte, that is the Moon; which she inferred from the Crescents in their Colours^b or Standards: Glycas likewise in his Annals^c relates the same, and says that the Mahometans adore Venus in private. This he endeavours to prove from their pronouncing these Words in their Prayers, Alla, Alla, Oua cubar Alla. Another Writer published by Le Moine in his Varia Sacra,^d says also that they adore Venus or the Phosphorus, which they call Oua: (This Word in Hebrew denotes the true God, but the poor Grecians did not know that.) Besides Venus, the Centuriators of Magdeburgh^e mention an Idol, and give a long Description of it. The so often cited Euthymius avers, that the Arabians pay a great Respect to the Morning Star, and is followed in that by Selden^f, who endeavours to prove that the Mahometans adore Urania (which is another Name of Venus at Tyre and at Carthage) by the same Form of Prayer alledged by Glycas: In these Words Selden pretends to discover a great or a powerful Goddess.

But the Mahometans have certainly no Gods nor Goddesses; the Words Allah and Cubar are of the Masculine Gender, and cannot be adapted to Goddesses: But our learned Selden was misled by an incorrect Writer of the eleventh Century^g, who gives this Interpretation of the said Form: Alla, says he, signifies God, Oua great, Cubar great Moon or Venus, so the whole put together, signifies God is the great God, and the great Venus is the great Goddess. A strange and impertinent Interpreter! The Truth is, St. John Damascene informs us, that the antient Arabians adored openly^h

^a In the Alexiad, Pag. 284.

^b The Mahometans, says she, have Images of the Moon.

^c Part fourth, Pag. 277.

^d Pag. 444.

^e Cent. viii. Pag. 511.

^f In his Syntag. de diis Syris, Pag. 116, and 212.

^g Cedrenus, Comp. Histor. Pag. 245.

^h Relind thinks that by this openly, St. John Damascene means that they adored it openly before Mahomet, and privately since.

Lucifer or the Morning Star, named Chabar, till the Reign of the Emperor Heraclius : And St. Ferome had related the same long before Damascene ^a. However, 'tis beyond Dispute, a certain and notorious Fact, that Mahomet destroyed all Idols : A publick Writing sent to Pope Gregory IX. in the thirteenth Century, and mentioned by Matthew Paris ^b in his History of Henry III. King of England, expressly says that the Mahometans have learnt of Mahomet to detest all Idols.

To this it is objected, that the Crescent in the Standards of the Mahometans seems to be the Remains of some idolatrous Worship paid to the Planets : But they took up this Custom from the Time of Mahomet's Flight from Mecca, which was at the first or last Quarter of the Moon, from which Flight (called Hegira) they compute the Time of their History. Some have been of Opinion that they put a Crescent in their Colours after the taking of Constantinople, the antient Medals of that City being stamped with that Figure : But these Authors are mistaken, for it is certain that the Turks used it some Ages before, by the Testimony of Anne Commene ^c, James of Vitry ^d, Albert of Aix ^e, who lived in the eleventh Century, and of all the Historians of the Holy Wars or Crusades.

As to the Form of Prayer, or Profession of Faith, Alla Achbar, &c. which has occasioned so many Mistakes, it means only that God is great. But we must here caution those who intend to settle or travel in the Countries subject to Mahometans, not to read or speak aloud any Arabian Words which they do not understand, though it should be only in Jest, or by Way of exercising one's self in the Pronunciation of that Language. For should they by chance or unthinkingly pronounce or read aloud in the Presence of some Turks, a Form of Prayer or Profession of Faith which only a Believer has a right to pronounce, such as there is no other God but God, and Mahomet is his Apostle, or some such, it would cost them their Lives, or they must lose their Religion and embrace Mahometism. We are told ^f that the Child of a Grecian of Constantinople, hearing in the open Street the publick Cryers, who from the Steeples called the People to Prayers, mimicked their Voice as Children are apt to do, and pronounced aloud Alla achbar, &c. though a meer Child, he was taken up, and no Choice left him but the Koran or Death : He chose the last, and was beheaded.

This Story might persuade our Readers that the Mahometans are very tyrannical in religious Concerns, so to prevent such a mistaken Notion, we must inform them, that except the above-mentioned Case, and a few others, such as being too free with a Mahometan Woman, entering Mecca, or one of their Mosques, (in which last Particular they are not equally severe in all Places) no one is forced, not even their own Slaves, to embrace their Religion : Several Villages and Country Towns in Turky are inhabited by Christians only. There are above sixty thousand Jews in their capital City ^g, besides an infinite Number of Christians of all Denominations. There Prophet Mahomet earnestly recommends Toleration, " If it pleased God, " says he, ^h all living Men would believe, (that is become Mussulmen :) Why then

^a He lived before Mahomet, so speaks only of his own Time. See his Comments on the Prophet Amos, Chap. v. Ver. 26.

^b Pag. 411.

^c In the Alexiad.

^d In his Histor. Orient. Lib. 3. in the Year 1218.

^e In his Histor. Expedit. Hierosolimitanæ, Lib. 5. Cap. 43. He was present at it.

^f Grelot in his Voyage to Constantinople.

^g Stamboul, which we call Constantinople.

^h In the Koran, Chap. 10. Ver. 98.

" should

“ should you, a wretched Mortal, be so foolish as to pretend to force other Men to believe? No, the Soul believes only by the Will of God.” A good Lesson to Christians! not to deprive other Christians of that Liberty, and oblige them by ill Usage to take Sanctuary amongst Infidels, where they meet with better Treatment than from their own Brethren. Yet the Turks were guilty in the Severity used against this poor Infant; Mahomet declares that God ^a will not punish an Oath uttered by Inadvertency. Why then were they so cruel against a Child who imprudently said, what he should not?

S E C T. VI.

Whether Mahometans adore all Creatures?

This Wickedness is laid to their Charge by Thomas of Jesus ^b, who says their thirty-fourth erroneous Practice is the Invocation of all Creatures. Euthymius ^c, argues upon the same Topick, “ Their Prophet, says he, swears by the Sun, the Moon, the Stars, the Light of the Fire, Beasts, as running Dogs, Plants, and other unknown Things, and by strange barbarous Words, which is a sure Proof that he looks upon these Creatures as Deities; for no one swears but by one greater than himself.” If so, Jeseph who swore by the Life of Pharaoh ^d, the Jews who swore by the Temple, by Jerusalem, by their own Head, the Primitive Christians who swore by the saving of Cæsar ^e or his Health, may also be thought guilty of Idolatry. ’Tis more likely these Authors were mistaken in their Way of Reasoning.

The same Euthymius by a strange Blunder mistakes two Hills near Mecca mentioned by Mahomet ^f; he says that “ Safa and Merva are holy Places, where we may give Proofs of our Obedience to God, and therefore every one who goes to the Temple of Mecca, or makes any Stay in that Place, will do well to go round them.” Now Euthymius says that Txit-Safa and Merva are two barbarous Words which Mahomet orders to be honoured as a chief Point of Religion. Another Writer of the same Stamp ^g tells gravely, that Safa and Merva are two Angels in high Favour with God, and to be held in great Veneration by Mussulmen. A third Author ^h cites an Anathema pronounced by new Converts against Mahomet’s Angels, Arot, Maroth, Safa, and Merva. The two first are mentioned by Mahomet, as being Angels, but the two last are only two Hills near Mecca, at seven hundred and fourscore Cubits distance one from the other. What Credit can be given to such Writers?

S E C T. VII.

Whether Mahometans deny Providence?

Pope Pius the II^d. in the above-mentioned Letter to the Turkish Prince, You believe, says he to him, that every Thing happens on Earth by Chance, and that God does

^a In the Koran, Chap. 5. Ver. 98.

^b De Convers. Gentil. Lib. 10.

^c In his Panoplia inserted in the great Biblioth. Patrum.

^d Genes. Cap. 42. Ver. 15.

^e Juramus, sicut non per Genios Cæsarum, ita per Salutem eorum, quæ est augustior omnibus Geniis. Tertulli. in Apologet. Chap. 32.

^f In the Koran, Chap. 11. Ver. 154.

^g Cited by Silburgh in his Saracenic.

^h Nicetas in his Thesaur. Orthodox. Lib. 20.

not interfere in any Thing, &c. Thomas of Jesus ^a reckons this as the fourteenth Error of the Mahometans. This Accusation has not been often objected to them, being as illgrounded, as it is odious; for if any Thing, the Mahometans are rather too rigid on this Article, as may be seen above in the Abstract of their Doctrine, Chap. 7. where every Thing is said to be subject to the Decree of God, Time, Place, Persons, Things, and their Modus; all are directed to the End designed by God. This Article might therefore have been omitted as a plain Calumny.

S E C T. VIII.

Whether the Mahometans hold that God himself prays for Mahomet?

The two Cardinals Cusa ^b and Bellarmino ^c, pretend that by the Koran itself, the God of the Koran is Mahomet's Servant, since he and his Angels pray for the Prophet. The Author of the second ^d Discourse against the Impostor, Martin Martinus ^e, Abraham Ecbellensis ^f, tax the Koran with that Absurdity, and the last mentioned in particular translates the usual Blessing of the Mahometans thus: May the Prayers of God be upon them. But they are all mistaken for want of understanding the Arabick Language, and trusting to a wretched Version of the Koran ^g published above one hundred and eighty Years ago. The same Arabick Word applied to God signifies Blessing, if to Men Prayer. So the Dictionaries of the Oriental Languages inform us, so the Persians and Malaises ^h have translated it; and Du Rier, perceiving the Blunder, put in the Margin of his Version, bless the Prophet ⁱ. So necessary is the Knowledge of Languages in Controversy!

S E C T. IX.

Whether the Mahometans deny Hell?

Maccavius ^k a famous Protestant Divine of the Low Countries, and some others, say that Mahomet does not own any Hell: But there is scarce any Point more insisted on by the Koran; it is named the great Chastisement, the great Punishment of the Life to come, the Torment of Fire, Hell Fire, Prison of Hell, or Rack and Torture itself. We need but open the Koran to be convinced of this Truth, or turn back to the sixth Chapter of the Abstract of the Mahometan Faith, where eternal and irrevocable Torments are denounced against Infidels ^l.

^a De Convers. Gentil. Lib. x.

^b De Crib. Alcor. Lib. iii. Cap. v. Pag. 97.

^c Controvers. Tom. 112. Pag. 294.

^d Printed at Zurich with the Koran.

^e Lexicon Etymol. on the Word Mahomet.

^f In the Preface to his Work de placitis Philos. Arab. printed at Paris 1641.

^g By Robert. Retencus and Hermann. Dalmat. published by Bilander in the Year 1550.

^h Indian Mahometans in the Kingdom of Malacca.

ⁱ Koran, Chap. xxxiii. Ver. 56.

^k Theolog. Polemic. Pag. 119.

^l The Jews, the Magi, and Mahometans agree as to the Preliminaries of eternal Rewards and Punishments: As to the Scales and the Bridge, see Salé in the Preface, and Herbelot in the Article Gebennem; the seven Gates of Hell mentioned in Chap. 15. of the Koran, are an Emblem of the seven deadly Sins, and of their various Punishments, the chief of which is the Privation of seeing God. They also own eight Heavens, or different Degrees of Happiness, the chief is to see God, and the Way to it is to return earnestly to him by Repentance.

S E C T. X.

To what Part do the Mahometans turn their Faces at their Prayers?

Euthymius Zygabenus ^a, and after him Gualterius ^b, and Arthur Thomas ^c, say that, when at their Prayers, they turn their Faces to the South. Bradwardin ^d in a Book, otherwise excellent, tells us that the Mahometans adore the Devil, because he pretends that the Sun rises between the two Horns of that evil Spirit. But the eighteenth Chapter of the Koran, which is cited to prove this, speaks only of two Hills: Besides, who told him that the Mahometans turn themselves to the East? The Truth is, Mahomet in the second Chapter of the Koran, bids his Followers more than once, in what Part of the World soever they are, to turn towards Mecca. From whence it follows, that as they are differently situated in respect of Mecca, they accordingly turn towards the East, West, North, or South. And they chiefly recommend raising one's Thoughts to God, which makes an Arabian Poet say, O God, you are my Kebla in my Prayers. And it were to be wished, as Grelot takes Notice in his French Account of a Voyage to Constantinople, Page 312. that Christians would imitate the Mahometans in the respect for Places of Worship, the Humility and serious Attention to their Prayers, the Silence, Modesty, inward as well as outward Cleanliness, so contrary to what we see in our Churches.

S E C T. XI.

Whether Mahometans believe that their frequent washing of the Body can blot out Sins?

Several Authors pretend that the Morals of the Mahometans are so loose as to think that frequent washing of the Body is enough to remit Sins and Stains of the Soul. Bartholomew of Edessa ^e is of that Opinion. Rabbi David Kimchi, in his Comment on Isaiab ^f, applies on that Account to the Persians, (and according to some Copies to the Islamites, that is, to the Arabians) a Passage of that Prophet, which Aben Ezra applies only to the Idolaters about Palestine. Polidore Virgil ^g, and John of Spain ^h, repeat the same Accusation, in which they are followed by Dr. Hyde in his Notes on the Turkish Liturgy ⁱ, as Gabriel Sionita had committed before the same Fault in his Treatise of the Towns and Manners of the Eastern People ^k, which is printed after the Geography of Nubia. Lastly, Du Ryer in his French Translation of the Koran, and Monsieur de St. Olon ^l the French King's Ambassador at Maroc, say expressly that the Mahometans often wash their Heads and Feet, and Hands, and maintain that by so doing they are purified from all their Sins. Du Ryer adds their saying some Prayer, and this is a Proof, that they are not so foolish, as to believe

^a In his Panoplia.

^b In his Chronology, Pag. 539.

^c In the Triumph of the Cross, Pag. 23.

^d De Causa Dei, 58.

^e In Confutat. Hagaren, Pag. 360.

^f Chap. 66. Ver. 17.

^g De Inventione Rerum, Lib. 7. Pag. 475.

^h In his Sermons.

ⁱ Pag. 1.

^k Chap. 15.

^l In his Description of the Kingdom of Maroc, Chap. 2.

that the washing alone can take away their Sins : This Favour they expect only from God, and therefore after the Ablution, the Sonna enjoins the Saying; O God, cleanse me, and purify my Soul. Such a Prayer would be uselefs, if they believed the washing alone would do it. Moreover their Books teach them, that the washing of their Clothes is like washing the inward Shell ; but purifying the Heart, is like washing the Kernel itself, and this purifying the Heart from the Stain of Sin is chiefly to be minded. This they pray for. No Wonder the Opinion of the Mahometans should be misrepresented, since Baptism itself has not escaped the Censure and Scoffs of the Heathens.

S E C T. XII.

Whether Mahometans believe that the Devils are Friends of God and of Mahomet ?

“ Philip Guadagnole ^a proves that the Koran is full of Contradictions, by what it teaches of the Devils. At first, says he, Mahomet teaches that they are Liars, Enemies to Men, and long since delivered up to the eternal Torments of Hell : He adds in the Chapter of Poets, that they are wicked and deceitful ; that their chief Leader is a declared Enemy to Mankind, and uses his utmost Endeavours to draw us into Hell : That by Consequence we ought to resist and oppose him in all Things, and at all Times, and in all Places. Yet in the Chapter of Devils, he (Mahomet) says, they have believed the Koran, are become faithful Friends to God and Men, shall be saved, and obtain Happiness and Glory.” John Andrew Maurus, who had been a Mahometan, reproaches them with the same Contradiction ^b. But this is an unpardonable Fault in the Profelyte ; for he should have known that this Chapter is by several Mussulmen called the Chapter of Spirits ; and Du Rier owns it, yet was not so candid as to put the Word Spirit in the Body of that Chapter. The Fact is thus : Mahomet and his Disciples admit three Sorts of created Spirits, (besides the Souls of Men) some called Angels, who are good and confirmed in Grace, others called Devils, who are bad and condemned to eternal Torments in Hell ; and a third Sort of Spirits called Genius's, some of whom are good and serve God freely, others as freely become bad. There are three different Words which the Arabians use to denote those three Sorts of Spirits ; Mahomet never employs one instead of the other, but those who have translated the Koran, generally mistake one for the other : In the Title and Body of that Chapter, the Word by which Genius's are peculiarly denoted, is made use of. So this Accusation is only grounded on Ignorance, or a malicious Design.

S E C T. XIII.

Whether Mahometans admit Female Angels ?

Euthymius whom we have so often cited, accuses Mahomet of teaching this Opinion, but the good Grecian Monk only betrays his own Ignorance. The 37th Chapter of the Koran ^c which he cites, says quite the contrary : “ The Infidels have ^a In his Apology for the Christian Religion, Pag. 291.

^b In his Confusio Sectæ Mohammedanæ.

^c Intituled of Orders, Ver. 150.

“ enquired whether your Lord has Daughters, as they themselves have Sons ? What “ a Question ! Have we created female Angels in the Presence of these Unbelievers, “ to make them say such Things ? In Truth they lie whenever they say, that “ God has a Son, or Children, or any Posterity : Would God have preferred “ Daughters to Sons ? How can you utter such Blasphemies ? Will you never think “ and consider that God is alone and without Posterity ? God be praised,
 “ he has neither Son nor Daughter, except good People who adore him and “ keep his Commandments.” All the Mahometan Doctors have embraced the same Opinion, as appears by the preceding Abstract of their Faith^a : And though Ma- homet and his Followers believe that Angels are not pure Spirits, yet they maintain that their Bodies are thin, formed of “ Light and perfectly holy, that they neither “ eat, drink, nor sleep ; that they are without Father, Mother, Difference of “ Sexes, or any carnal Inclinations who ever should be so bold as to admit “ in Angels any Difference of Sex, would soon be condemned and looked upon as “ an Infidel.” This is the Doctrine held by Mahometans, and all Euthymius’s Endeavours to prove, that Angels are pure Spirits, and cannot be of different Sexes, is useless, at least as to the latter Part, which Mahometans own, though they are in an erroneous Opinion as to the first.

S E C T. XIV.

Whether Mahomet teaches that the blessed Angels can commit Sins ?

Thomas of Jesus taxes Mahomet with this Opinion, but ^b he is likewise in a Mistake. The Angels are always represented by him, and in the Abstract which we have before given of his Religion, as holy, free from Sin, constant Attendants on God, ready to put in Execution all his Orders, and never disobeying his Commands. That pretended Prophet and his Followers have borrowed their Doctrine about Angels from the Christians. They own that from the Beginning of the World, one Angel headed several others in a Defection from, and Rebellion against God ; to wit, Iblis who was before that called Azazel, and that amongst others, two other Angels named Arot and Marot were his Accomplices. “ Envy, says an Arabian “ Author, was the first Rebellion against the supreme Being, the first Sickness or “ Depravity of the Soul, at least such is the Opinion of a very learned Doctor of “ the Schafean Sect, who informs us that Envy is the first Crime committed in Hea“ ven against God, and proved the Forerunner of Infidelity and Rebellion. Iblis
 “ (that is the desperate, or Devil) envied Adam our Father, (to whom God grant “ Peace) and refused to adore^c him, as God had ordered all Angels to do, by “ which he became unfaithful in three Respects: First he designed to diminish the “ Glory of a Prophet^d, which of its own Nature is an Act of Infidelity : Second“ ly, he tacitly condemned God as tyrannical and unwise, in ordering him who was “ made of Fire, to adore the first Man who was made of Earth, now said the “ Wretch Iblis, it is not just that the superior Being should honour the in“ ferior : Therefore, &c. Thirdly, he opposed the general Consent of the Angels,

^a Chapter 3d, which speaks of Angels.

^b De Conversione Gentil. Pag. 644.

^c In the Arabick to adore, is only to honour or pay Homage. See Mat. Chap. 112.

^d Adam, who according to the Mahometans, is the first Prophet.

“ and ’tis an Act of Infidelity to dissent from those good Spirits. Envy was also
“ the first Sin committed by Adam’s Children on Earth. Kabel and Habel^a offered “ Sacrifice to God ; the Offerings of Habel met with a more favourable Reception ; “ Kabel envied him, and killed him. So Envy occasioned Infidelity in Heaven,
“ and Murther on Earth.”

Now the Difference is plain betwixt saying that the good Angels sin, and holding that at the Beginning of the World some Angels rebelled and sinned against God. No Mahometan ever said the first ; the second is maintained both by Mahometans and Christians, and it is a Truth which he borrowed from Christian Religion and Scripture. We cannot help putting our Readers in Mind of the Contradictions into which the Mahometans often fall : They hold Adam for a Prophet ; they own that he sinned, and that by his Sin all Mankind was lost ; and yet they maintain that Prophets either commit no Sins, or not grievous Crimes.

S E C T. XV.

Whether the Devils hear?

Robert de Retz, who first translated the Koran into Latin, and whom Du Ryer follows in his French Translation ; made a great Blunder in the Version of the 26th Chapter. Mahomet proves in that Place, that the Devils could not be Authors of his Book : First, Because their Intent is to pervert the whole World : Secondly, By reason of their own Wickedness : For says he, They are disobedient to God, and give no Attention to the Word of God^b. These last Words are render’d by the two above cited Translators, as if the Devils had no Ears. Yet they themselves had before taxed Mahomet with saying, that the Devils heard the Koran read to them, and that some were converted ; whereas in Reality the pretended Prophet did not say either.

S E C T. XVI.

Whether Mahometans are Origenists?

Origen has been accused of teaching, that the Torments of Hell would have an End, and that after some limited Time, the Devils and the Wicked were to be saved. Some learned Men think this Accusation unjust : Be that as it will, Mahomet has been taxed with holding the same Error by Thomas of Jesus, and several other Writers, chiefly by the Author of the second Discourse before-mentioned^c against Mahomet. “ He boldly^e maintains, says this Disclaimer, that the Devils themselves will be saved one Day ; and in this undoubtedly he followed the Doctrine “ of Origen : In his new fangled Law, in his Koran, we read these Words, A great “ Number of Devils, having heard these Things, were ravished with Admiration, “ highly rejoiced, and those who believed obtained Salvation. Such a good Opinion of the Devil, his true Son Mahomet entertains.” But we have already confuted this Objection^f, and taken Notice that this 72d Chapter of the Koran does

^a Kabel and Habel, that is Cain and Abel, they strangely disfigure Scripture Names by their Ignorance.

^b Remotos ab Obedientiâ, & Dei dicto parum audientes.

^c Reland cites amongst others Pic. Mirandol. & Cælius se.undus Curio.

^d Pag. 337.

^e Summâ dicendi Libertate.

^f See above in Sect. XII.

not treat of Devils, but of Genius's, of whom some are faithful, some Unbelievers. We own that out of Policy, and to win over to his Party more People, Mahomet has of his own special Favour freed his Disciples and Followers from eternal Torments. But the very Name of Iblis, which is given to the chief of those evil Spirits, and which signifies Despair, shews that their Salvation cannot be expected; and he says the same of all wicked Men who are not of his Sect, as may be seen in several Chapters of the Koran^a.

S E C T. XVII.

Of Mahomet's Paradise, and his Notions about supreme Happiness.

Mahomet and his Mussulmen are taxed with proposing no other Happiness in Heaven, but sensual and carnal. Thomas of Jesus^b, Richard le Moine^c, Peter Abbot of Clugny^d, and every one who speaks of the Paradise of Mahomet, reproach him; "for admitting corporal Pleasures as the supreme Felicity, like Cerintus: "Luxury, they say, is the sole End and Aim of the Koran, and of those who follow it: Instead, says a third, of representing Heaven, as the happy Society of "Angels and Saints, as the Possession of the supreme Good which the Eye has not "seen, the Ear has not heard, and has not entered into the Heart of Man: He "only proposes such a Heaven, as Flesh and Blood, or even the basest of Brutes "could wish."

It must be owned, that Mahomet perceiving his Countrymen were much given to carnal Pleasures, ^e allowed his Followers the Privilege of having several Wives, and of being divorced from them; and not content with this Indulgence, he made Heaven itself the Seat of such Pleasures, of which, not only the Primitive Christians were ashamed ^f even under the Restrictions of an honourable Wedlock; but even a Heathen Philosopher ^g being asked whether he still used conjugal Liberties, answered, He had for some Years freed himself from the Yoke of that furious and tyrannical Master, and was highly pleased his Iron-fetters were broke: Being sensible that the Imperfections and Slavery of human Nature is conspicuous, even in the lawful and moderate Use of the Marriage-bed, which is a continual Snare to intice us from the Pursuit of true Wisdom. Mahomet therefore and his Religion ought to be despised and detested upon that shameful Account by every wise Man.

But we must on the other Side with Cardinal Cusa^h do him the Justice to own, that Mahomet says in his Koran, The Height of Happiness will consist in seeing God Face to Face; that this Pleasure will be the greatest, and make us forget all the other Pleasures of Paradise, and amongst others, those which are common to Men and Beasts. These Words are to be found in Arabick, amongst Pocock's miscellaneous Notesⁱ, where another Passage is cited to the same Purpose: Therefore it is not true, that the

^a Chap. 74. Chap. 43. and Chap. 40. of the Koran.

^b In his Convers. Gentil. Lib. 10. Pag. 644.

^c In his Refut. Relig. Mahomet, Pag. 147.

^d In his Compend. Mahom. Pag. 4. before the Latin Version of the Koran by Rob. de Rets at his Request

^e This is attested by the most impartial Historians. Incredibile est quo ardore apud eos in venerem uterque solvitur Sexus. Ammian. Marcellin. Lib. 14. Cap. 4.

^f See Minut. Fel. in his Octav. Chap. 31. Casto Sermone, corpore castiore plerique inviolati corporis virginitate perpetuâ fruuntur ut nonnullis rubori sit etiam pudica Conjunctio.

^g Reland mentions Socrates, but Cicero's Passage alludes to the Poet Sophocles.

^h In his Alcor. Confut. Pag. 87.

ⁱ Ad Portam Mosis.

Mahometans propose to themselves no other Pleasures in Heaven, but what are carnal and sensual, as Herbelot has judiciously observed in his Biblioth. Orient.

Moreover, we think ourselves obliged to inform our Readers, that all the Mahometans do not admit of carnal Pleasures in Heaven. “ All those sensual Descriptions of Mahomet, says a learned Author, ^a are merely allegorical, and looked upon as such by the most rational Mahometans which is so true, that having an Occasion to write to the Ambassador of Maroc about a delightful Garden, which I compared to that in Paradise, he gave me a Reprimand, and answered, That Paradise could not be compared to any Thing in this World, but was such a Place as the Eye had not seen, the Ear had not heard, and the Likeness of which never entered into the Thought of Man.” Herbelot likewise tells us, that the Union with God, the Sight of his Glory Face to Face, is the only Thing in which Mahometans say Paradise consists. The rational Soul, says an Arabian Author, cited by Echellensis, ^b which is endowed with these Perfections, Wisdom, Temperance, Fortitude, and Justice, as soon as it leaves the Body, which detained it, will find in itself an infinite Pleasure and immense Satisfaction, and will become like one of those Angels who are nearest to God : And as those Virtues are more or less perfect, the Soul will more or less approach to God, who is the Fountain of all Truth and Perfection

Thus Mahomet, as well as Homer and Plato, ^c has found Commentators, who have softened by witty Allegories, the harsh and gross Expressions of their Author. Some Mahometans have allowed sensual Pleasures in the lowest Degree of Happiness in Heaven, others have excluded them entirely from that blessed Mansion. But with Submission to our deceased Author ^d, such licentious Allegories are not to be used, they only raise the Passions of Youth, without letting us into the Secret ; so the Evil is certain, and the Remedy hidden and doubtful : And after all, why should such shameful Passions be made the Subject of these Allegories ? If it should be alleged, that some Places of the New Testament, and of the Apocalypse in particular, seem to give a Sanction to a figurative Representation of heavenly Happiness, we easily answer, there is not a Word, not one Idea or Representation, which may offend even an angelical Chastity : St. Paul says expressly, ^e that God will destroy whatever is sensual ; and Christ himself ^f assures us, that we shall be in Heaven like the Angels. But this Subject of licentious Allegories is excellently treated in a Dissertation ^g on Homer's Iliads, which is one of the best Performances in Poetry and Literature.

S E C T. XVIII.

Whether Women are to be saved according to the Mahometan Religion.

Hoornbeck ^h gives us to understand that Women are not to be admitted into Heaven, but very handsome young Virgins to supply the Place of Women : The Author of ^a Hyde in his Notes on the Turkish Liturgy, Pag. 21.

^b In his Synops. Proposit. Sapientiæ Philosophor. Arabum, Pag. 75.

^c Aul. Geil. Lib. 18. Cap. 2. See likewise Gronovius on that Passage.

^d Reland.

^e See 1 Cor. Chap. vi. Ver. 13. Meat is for the Belly, and the Belly for Meat, but God shall destroy both it and them. See also Chap. 15.

^f Mat. Chap. xxii.

^g Abbot Terrason is the Author of that Dissertation.

^h Summ. Controvers. Pag. 16.

a Journey to Constantinople,^a so curiously written, that Reland could never peruse it without conceiving a longing Desire of seeing that great City : This Author, who must have been acquainted with these People, says that, “ The Mahometans do not “ allow the Women to pray with them in their Mosques, nor to be buried in the “ same Grave ; no doubt, says he, because ’tis their Belief that Women shall not be
 “ with them in Paradise, but that instead of them, they shall find young Vir-“ gins infinitely more beautiful and accomplished.” This Expression, Women shall not be with them in Paradise, may seem equivocal, being susceptible of this Sense, that though not with the Men, yet they may have there some Apartments for themselves. But Ricault^b is more plain. “ The Women, says he, are brought up in “ Retirement, seldom see any Men, they have no moral Virtue to keep them “ modest and chaste, no Principle of Religion to intice them to good Actions by “ the Hopes of future Rewards in another Life, or to fright them from doing Evil
 “ by the Dread of future Punishments, they are by Consequence the lewdest Wo“ men in the World.”

But Reland maintains that Mahomet has not been so unjust as to exclude Women from Heaven. “ As I was, says he, talking to my Friend Sikes, who had often “ been consulted on that Subject both in Italy and elsewhere, and wondered so ab“ surd a Tenet should be laid to their Charge ; he told me, that he had long before “ taken Notice of three Passages of the Koran, which decides the Question in Fa“ vour of the Women. The first is Chapter xl. Whoever shall believe and do good “ Works, whether Man or Woman, shall enter into Paradise. In the same Chapter
 “ the Angels pray that God would open the Gates of Eden, prepared for the Faith“ ful, for their Parents, Wives, and Children. Sikes’s two other Passages are in the “ Chapter xiii. and in the xvi. to which may be added the Chapter xlviii. and lvii.
 “ in which it is expressly said that the faithful Men and Women shall enter into “ heavenly Paradise.” Chardin^c likewise, who lived many Years amongst them, frees the Mahometans from that Aspersions, and avers, that they allow Women a Place in Heaven, not with their own Husbands, who will be provided with more accomplished Ladies, but in a separate Place, where they shall enjoy perfect Happiness. The Opinion of some, that Women are not admitted into the Mosques, is also groundless : There is a Place allotted for them in their Temples, but where they cannot be seen by the Men, to preserve both the Purity of the Heart, and the Sanctity of the Place of Worship^d.

S E C T. XIX.

Whether the Mahometans go to Mecca, in order to visit the Tomb of Mahomet?

A Crowd of Authors aver, that this is the Design of the Pilgrimage of Mecca, which all Mahometans are indispensably obliged to perform once in their Lives, unless prevented by insurmountable Difficulties. Grelot^e and Chalcondylas^f give a long De-

^a Grelot, Pag. 275.

^b Hist. of the present State of the Ottoman Empire, Lib. 2. Cap. 21.

^c Voyage to Persia by Chardin. Tom. 4. of the Edit. in 4to.

^d Sigismund Feyerabendt, Histor. Turcic. Tom. 1. Pag. 87.

^e Grelot in his Voyage to Constantinople, Pag. 109.

^f Laonic. Chalcondylas, Histor. Lib. 3. Pag. 66, and 67.

scription of this pretended Tomb, raised by Kalif Omar in the middle of the Temple of Mecca, and suspended in the Air by the attractive Faculty of a Load-stone placed in the Roof, as the famous Statue in the Temple of Serapis; Suidas^a, a Writer of the twelfth Century; Polydore Virgil^b, who pretends also that Mecca is in Persia, instead of Arabia near the Red-sea; Volaterranus relates, that Mahomet foretold to his Disciples, that he should rise again, and go up into Heaven, which they expected for a considerable Time to no Purpose, and were forced at last by the Stench of his Corpse to bury it at Mecca, to which all Mahometans resort, as Christians to Jerusalem. Orosius^c, and Thuanus^d, otherwise excellent Historians, and Theodorus Rickius^e, are all unanimous in the same Story. Yet it is undeniably true by the History of Mahomet, of which we have given an Account in this Volume, that Mahomet was buried at Medina, that the Pilgrimage to Mecca, the going seven Times round the Ca'aba, the running round the Hills of Safa and Merva, the throwing small Stones in a certain Manner, and at a set Distance, were Ceremonies older than Mahomet, which the Arabians performed even, as they pretend, from the Time of Ismael. But as we go to Jerusalem to visit the holy Sepulcher of Christ, our Legendaries have fancied the Mahometans go to Mecca to visit Mahomet's Tomb.

S E C T. XX.

Whether the Koran confounds the blessed Virgin Mary, with Mary Sister to Moses?

Mahomet is accused of this gross Ignorance in Chronology, by an anonymous Author amongst the Saracens of Sylburgh^f, who relates this Form of Abjuration: I detest the Imposture of Mahomet, who pretends that Jesus Christ our Lord and God, was born of Mary, Sister to Moses and Aaron. Euthymius Zygabenus^g, John Andrew Maurus^h, Cardinal *Cusa*ⁱ, Hornbeck^k, and many others, reproach Mahomet with the same Anachronism. This is looked upon as an unanswerable Argument against the Divine Authority of the Koran; and it is grounded on a Passage in the 19th Chapter of that Book, where Mahomet having given an Account of the Birth of St. John Baptist, and of Jesus Christ, much the same as we have in St. Luke, adds to it several Circumstances, and amongst others, that the Relations of Mary met her carrying her Child, and reproached her with it saying, O Mary, this is a strange Thing, O Sister of Aaron, your Father did not command you to do Evil, and your Mother was not a Prostitute. Mary upon this made a Sign to the Child to answer for her, and he justified her fully from that Accusation: The rest of the Chapter mentions other Prophets, as Abraham and his Posterity, Moses and his Brother Aaron, Enoch, Ismael, &c.

^a In his Lexicon on the Word Magnetis.

^b De Invention. Rerum. Lib. 7.

^c Orosius in the 4th Book of his History.

^d Thuan. Hist. Lib. 37.

^e In Oratione de Gigantibus.

^f Pag. 61. and 82.

^g In his Panopl. Dogmat. above cited.

^h In his Confus. Sect. Mahomet, Pag. 51.

ⁱ Cribrat. Alcor. Pag. 44.

^k Summ. Controv. Pag. 128.

It must be owned, the sacred History mentions no other Aaron than the Brother of Moses: But then the Blessed Virgin might have a near Relation, such as in those Days were called Brothers of that Name, and the Memory of him reach till the Time of Mahomet by Tradition, and be lost since: Might it not be said, as some Mahometans do ^a, that Mary, Sister of Moses and Aaron was miraculously preserved to the Time Christ, in order to become his Mother. Moreover Herbelot ^b relates “ that the best Interpreters of the Koran say, that the blessed Virgin was of the “ Family of Amram, Father of Moses and Aaron by her Mother’s Side, and this “ agrees with the Gospel which attests that her Cousin Elizabeth was of the Daugh- “ ters of Aaron; that is, of a sacerdotal Family. They add that her Father “ Amram was Son of Mattheus (or rather ^c Matthan) and by Consequence dif- “ ferent from Amram Father of Moses and Aaron; so that in the Opinion of Mus- “ fulmen, the second Amram is the same Person whom we call Joachim, St. Anne’s “ Husband and Father of our blessed Lady.” This appears evidently from the fol- lowing Genealogy ^d, in which we find two Amrams or Imram, the one Father of Mary, Sister to Moses and Aaron, and the other Father of Mary, Mother of Christ.

1. Jesus ,	15. Salmon ,	29. Phaleg
2. Mary ,	16. Abuan ,	30. Schaleg ,
3. Imram ,	17. Imram ,	31. Arphaxschad ,
4. Matthan ,	18. Daram ,	32. Sem ,
5. Philicos ,	19. Amrou ,	33. Noach ,
6. Jehosca ,	20. Káz ,	34. Lamech ,
7. Asa ,	21. Jehuda ,	35. Metkuschalah ,
8. Abia ,	22. Jacob ,	36. Idris ,
9. Rehoboam ,	23. Isaac ,	37. Jared ,
10. Salomon ,	24. Ibrahim ,	38. Mabaleil ,
11. David ,	25. Azer ,	39. Kainan ,
12. Esche ,	26. Nachor ,	40. Enos ,
13. Oun ,	27. Serug ,	41. Seth ,
14. Zjabaz ,	28. Argou ,	42. Adam .

S E C T. XXI.

On two other Anachronisms with which Mahomet is reproached.

The first is, that in the 29th Chapter of the Koran, he says expressly: We have destroyed Core, Pharaoh and Haman; Moses preached to them my Commandments, they did despise them, they were proud, but they did not escape the Punishment due to their Crimes. This Madman, says Peter Cevalier ^e, places Haman in the Time of Pharaoh, which is such a flagrant Proof of his Ignorance, as ought to put him and all his beastly Followers to an eternal Silence. These are hard Words which Cevalier and his Commentator Vivaldo lavishly bestow on Mahomet; but they are not con-

^a See Guadagnolus in his Apolog. pro Relig. Christi. contra Ahmed. Pag. 279.

^b In his Biblioth. Orient. Pag. 583.

^c According to the Taarich which Reland had seen.

^d This Genealogy is taken Word for Word from the above-mentioned Taarich.

^e In his Zelus Christi contra Saracenos. Pag. 137.

vincing

vincing Proofs. For how does it appear, that he means here the same Haman who is mentioned in the Book of Hester? And who can prove that there was not in Pharaoh's Time a Man named Haman, who gave him bad Advice, Chap. 66. who had Orders to build a high Palace, from whence Pharaoh might get to a Place where he should convince of Falshood the God of Moses, Chap. 40. who is mentioned also in Chap. 28. as a wicked Minister and Courtier of the Prince, whose History he relates much as Moses himself does. Add to this, that all the Mahometans, all the Commentators and Translators of the Koran, have many Traditions about this Haman, and represent him as Pharaoh's General. After all, Mahomet might miscall this Man, as he gives to Pharaoh the Name of Walid, and to several other Persons wrong Names. Such Disputes are trifling, and decide nothing in Controversy.

The second Anachronism is charged upon Mahomet by Herbelot^a, because he says, that the Successor of Ezras was Simeon the Just; now this is not true, says Herbelot, since St. Luke informs us, that this Simeon received Jesus Christ in his Arms^b and blessed him. But this learned Man is likewise mistaken, and did not take Notice that the Jews themselves give us an Account of a Simeon who was High Priest at the Time of Alexander the Great.

S E C T. XXII.

Whether Mahomet denied the Death of Christ?

The Modern Mahometans are divided in their Opinion on this Subject, as may be seen in Pocock's Observations on the History of the Arabians^c. But as to Mahomet himself, though he does not believe that Christ was crucified, or put to Death by the Jews^d; yet he plainly asserts that Christ died, for in the third Chapter of the Koran he introduces Christ praying thus; May the Peace of God be upon me on the Day of my Death, as on the Day of my Birth; to which God answers, O Jesus, I shall make you die, and raise you afterwards. Whatever may be the Sentiments of the modern Mahometans, which may be seen in Maracci^e, they swerve from the Doctrine of their Prophet if they deny the Death of Christ. Yet Euthymius and Gabriel Sionita, cited by Reland, say that Mahomet taught that Christ was not crucified, and did not die.

S E C T. XXIII.

Whether the blessed Virgin became pregnant by eating Dates?

Bartholomew of Edessa^f reproaches Mahomet with this ridiculous Accusation; and in Reality the third Chapter of the Koran says, that Zachary often found in the blessed Virgin's Oratory or praying Place, several Sorts of Meat, which she said God sent her; and in the nineteenth Chapter of the same Book, "remember, says Mahomet, what is written of Mary we sent to her our Spirit (or our Angel)

^a In his Biblioth. Orient. Pag. 698. and 787.

^b Luke, Chap. ii. Ver. 25.

^c Specimen Hist. Arabum, Pag. 179.

^d See the 4th Chapter of the Koran.

^e In the third Part of his Preliminaries to the Koran, Pag. 63, 67.

^f Bartholom. Edessenus, Pag. 442. of the Varia sacra, published by Stephan. le Moyne.

“ in the Shape of a Man ; she was frightened but the Angel said to her,
 “ O Mary, I am the Messenger of your Lord and your God, who will give you “ an active and prudent Son : She answered, how shall I have a Son without know“ ing any Man ? the Angel replied, God has said it, the Thing shall hap“ pen as I told you, 'tis easy to your Lord, and your Son himself shall be a Proof “ of the Almighty Power of God Then she conceived, and retired for some “ Time into a lonesome Place and felt the Labour Pains near a Palm-tree But “ the Angel said to her, do not afflict yourself, Shake the Foot of this Palm-“ Tree, gather the falling Dates, eat them, drink and wash your Eyes, &c.” Now
 'tis probable the above-mentioned ^a Grecian Writer took the Meats spoke of in the third Chapter for the Dates mentioned in the nineteenth, and after all, neither Passage attributes the Pregnancy of the blessed Virgin to those Meats or Dates ; and though the Impostor Mahomet has falsified the History of Mary, yet he constantly asserts the miraculous Conception and Birth of Christ, as the Effect of the Almighty Power of God, and of the Operation of his Spirit, for which Reason Christ is called by him the Word of God: And this is also the common Belief of the Mahometans.
 See Warner ^b, Hottinger ^c, and Sike in his Gospel of Childhood ^d.

S E C T. XXIV.

Whether Mahometans reckon Dogs amongst the clean Beasts.

“ Mahomet, says Euthymius Zigabenus ^e, abhors only Hogs, and forbids eating “ them : But as to Dogs, Wolves, or any other Beasts, he is not so nice, eat, “ says he to his Followers, what is found upon Earth ; for all Things are clean and “ good.” Chalcondylas ^f and others are of the same Opinion.

But this Accusation is also without Foundation. The Mahometans abominate Dogs and Hogs, and look upon them as unclean, they are not to touch them, and if they do it, though by chance, they are defiled by it. This is proved by an Arabick Manuscript ^g, in which are these Words, “ Whatever has Life is clean, except a “ Dog and a Hog, and what comes from them . . . if either of those Animals “ drink out of any Cup or Vessel, it must be scoured seven Times with clean “ Sand : Whereas any other defiling is remedied by washing it once.” Another Manuscript, which treats of several Points of the Mahometan Theology, decides that all Skins of Beasts become clean and may be used when they are tanned, except the Skins of Dogs and Hogs. Busbequius ^h likewise assures us, in the Account of his Embassy to the Porte, that a Dog is an unclean Animal in the Opinion of Mussul- men, and that for this Reason they keep none. Chardin who lived so long in Persia ⁱ, is also a credible Witness of the same. A third Manuscript, wrote in the same Language, about sacred Rites, observed chiefly in their Churches, relates this saying of Mahomet, no Angel comes to any Place where a Dog is. Indeed some few rich

^a Barthelm. Edessen.

^b Compend. Mohammed. de Christo.

^c Hist. Oriental, Book 1. Chapter 3.

^d In the Notes, Pag. 16.

^e Panopl. Christian. Pag. 33.

^f Lasne. Chalcondylas de Rebus Turc. Book 3. Pag. 65.

^g It is in the Library of Amsterdam : Schaak lent this and the next mentioned Manuscript to Reland.

^h Gulielm. Busbequius, in his Epist. 3. Legationis Turcicæ, Pag. 178.

ⁱ In his Travels through Persia. Tom. 7. Pag. 229. of the Edit. in 12ves.

LE ROI GEORGE TROISIÈME qui porte au Bœuf de la Tour de Londres pour nourrir les écoliers

Men amongst them keep hunting Dogs. But they do not eat Hares, Dogs, Cats, Wolves, or any Animal forbid by the Mosaic Law; nor amphibious Creatures, amongst which they reckon Lobsters, all other Fish they eat without Scruple. As to Cats, though they do not eat them, they are very careful to preserve them; they carry them about in the Streets, in the publick Places, in their Walks, even into their Churches to keep from Rats and Mice the rich Carpets on which they kneel^a.

S E C T. XXV.

Whether Mahometans believe it as a Point of Faith, that they may lawfully break Treaties made by them with those whom they call Infidels?

Ricault in his Ottoman Empire^b assures us, that the Mahometans “do not think themselves obliged to keep the Treaties or Alliances made with Christians, and have no Regard to Justice or Injustice, when by breaking them, they can agrandize their Monarchy, and by Consequence spread their Religion They follow, says he, the Example of their Prophet, who did the same at Mecca, when he was forced to raise the Siege of it He made Peace with the Inhabitants, promised to keep it faithfully, but he took it the Summer following, whilst they trusted to his Word, and had no Suspicion of his Treachery He gave Leave to all his Followers, in the Book Kitab Hadaia, to do the same Breach of Faith was never publickly allowed till Mahomet broached that Doctrine.”

But Bespier, who published Ricault with Remarks and Amendments, has cleared Mahomet from that Imputation: And in Reality the Koran^c says expressly “as to those with whom you shall make a Truce, who perform what they have stipulated, and protect no one to your Prejudice, do you punctually observe, till the Time limited, the Engagements you have entered into with them.” The same is repeated some Verses after. However we must own, that the Mahometans hate the Doctrine and the Persons of those whom they call Infidels; that they are not over scrupulous in performing their Treaties with them: But we may also justly censure the Christians, who so often unjustly infringe the most solemn Treaties, both with other Christians, and with the Turks. Witness Uladislaus King of Hungary in the fifteenth Century; who having made Peace with Amurath Emperor of the Turks, and taken an Oath to keep it faithfully, moreover having given a consecrated Host^d as a Pledge and Hostage for the Performance of the Treaty, broke it at the Instigation of some Christian Princes; but was defeated, and lost both his Kingdom and his Life: And Cardinal Julian, who advised him to that perfidious Breach, was killed likewise^e.

^a See in the Print, how the Mahometans feed their Cats.

^b In the 22d Chapter of the first Book.

^c Chapter ninth of the Koran.

^d Reland cites Leunclavius Pand. Histor. Turcic. Book 1. Sect. 116. but some Authors deny the giving the Host as a Pledge, though all own that Amurath asked it, and that Uladislaus took the most sacred Oaths to perform the Treaty.

^e He fled into a Wood, and was murdered, as the Author of all the Mischief. See Ghron. Turci Tom. 1. Pag. 519. Edit. Wccb. 1584.

S E C T. XXVI.

Whether the Author of the Koran contradicts himself with regard to the said Koran?

Philip Guadagnole in his Apology for the Christian Religion^a, John Andrew Maurus also^b, accuse Mahomet of saying that God gave him the Alcoran, and in another Place, that he had before given the Alforcan to Moses. But this seeming Contradiction is easily reconciled by observing that the Word Alforcan signifies any Book whatever, which gives Rules to distinguish Good from Evil. In that Sense the Torat^c or Pentateuch, the Gospel and the Koran, are all three called Alforcan: By Consequence Mahomet might well say^d we have given to Moses (an Alforcan) the Book which distinguishes Good from Evil; and give the same Name to his Koran as being in his Opinion the last and best Rule given by God, to distinguish Good from Evil.

S E C T. XXVII.

Whether Mahomet has thought that Pharaoh under whom Moses had been brought up, was the same who was drowned in the Red-sea?

Cardinal Cusa^e, and a modern Author of a French History of the Turkish Religion^f, tax Mahomet with this Chronological Mistake^g; but they themselves are mistaken by a false Translation of the Koran, “Are you not that Moses whom I have brought up in your Infancy?” Whereas it should be, Are you not that Moses whom we have brought up in our Bosom? Such figurative Speeches are daily used in common Conversation, and by all antient and modern Writers. Thus we may say, that we beat the French at Agencourt, though it happened some hundred Years before our Time: Thus the great Lawyer Paulus^h says, We have seen the three Horatii Senators at Rome. Thus Ciceroⁱ comparing the Greeks and Romans says, We understand better the Rules of Morality, &c. where it is plain he means the Romans in general by the Word we, in Opposition to the Greeks.

S E C T. XXVIII.

Whether Mahomet placed Mecca in the Country of the Hammonites?

In the fourteenth Chapter of the Koran, Abraham begs of God in favour of Mecca to protect it, to make it a safe Place of Refuge for all the World, &c. So Du Ryer and Reland translate it. But as the Arabick Word which signifies a safe Refuge, a privileged Place, is Amin; the Author of the Version of the Koran published in the sixteenth Century, under the Name of Robert of Retz, has ren-

^a Printed at Rome in 1631.

^b Confus. Sectæ Mahometanæ:

^c Torat is the Name which the Arabians give to the Law of Moses.

^d See the Koran, Chap. 2.

^e In his Cribrat. Alcoran, Pag. 43.

^f Michel Baudier. See his Book, Pag. 499.

^g See Exod. Chap. ii. Ver. 23. by which it appears that the Pharaoh who brought up Moses was dead.

^h Lib. 3. De Petitione hæred.

ⁱ Tuscul. Lib. 1. Cap. 1. nam Mores & Instituta vitæ . . . nos & melius tuemur & lautius.

dered that Word Anan or Ammon ; which the Writer of Remarks on that Version has mistaken for the Country of the Hammonites, and reproaches Mahomet with gross Ignorance of Geography : As if Mahomet could possibly mistake the Place of his Birth, where he had lived so long, which he had conquered, from whence he had made so many Incursions against his Neighbours, and where he had published this very Chapter of his Koran, for any other Country : What Man of Sense can believe such an Absurdity ?

We must conclude from this, that Amin does not mean the Country of the Hammonites, but a sure Place of Refuge for all Sorts of Creatures: 'Tis forbid under pain of Death, to kill any Beast, either by hunting or otherwise, even a Worm or Pismire ; fishing is allowed, but amphibious Creatures, such as lay their Eggs on Shore, as Geese, Swans, &c. are not to be molested, or shot at under Pretence that they live in Water. The whole Territory of Mecca enjoys this Privilege twelve English Miles to the North, twenty-eight to the East, thirty-six to the South, and about forty towards the Red-sea. And in order to render this privileged Place more venerable, all Christians, Heathens, or others, whom soever they look upon as Infidels, are not allowed to set their Foot on this Ground, which they pretend Abraham designed to be an Asylum only for Mussulmen.

S E C T. XXIX.

Whether Mahomet contradicts himself in his Koran, by saying sometimes that he could read, and sometimes that he could not ?

Mahomet, either out of an affected Humility, or to cheat his Followers, represents himself in most Places as an Idiot who could not read. Yet in the forty-seventh Chapter, the above-mentioned Version of Robert of Retz introduces God as saying to Mahomet, God knows what you do, and what you read : And the said Writer of Remarks upbraids Mahomet with this Contradiction ; This is the Man, says he, who pretends throughout his Koran that he cannot read, and knows not the Letters. But the whole is a Mistake of the Version, and of the Annotator ; for in the Original Arabick, God does not speak to Mahomet, but the pretended Prophet speaks to other Men, and repeats to them what he had so often said : God knows all your Affairs, and all which you do, whether you employ yourself, or take your Rest. No mention of reading, Who can trust to Translators ?

S E C T. XXX.

Whether Mahomet has said in some Places, that he led Men in the Way of Salvation, and at other Times that he did not know whether he and his Disciples were in it themselves ?

Savanorole ^a says, “ That Mahomet contradicts himself grossly, when he declares “ that he knows not whether he and his are in the Way to Salvation, and that no “ Man in the World can understand the Koran . . . ”. The Author of the fourth

^a In his Commentaries on the Sect of Mahomet.

Discourse prefixed to the Koran ^a, Cardinal Cusa ^b, and the Annotator on Robert of Retz's Version, are unanimous in the same Accusation; and upbraid Mahomet with Self-contradiction, Madness, even Blasphemy, upon this Account; they cite for Proof, the third and forty-sixth Chapters, but they mistake the Sense of both Places. In the third Chapter Mahomet says, "There is but one living and eternal God. He sent you the Book which contains Truth, and confirms the former Scriptures The Old Testament and the Gospel but to you he has sent the Koran, which distinguishes Good from Evil; those who will not believe the Law of God, shall be severely punished for it God has sent you this Book, the Precepts of which are most necessary; they are the ground Work and Origin of the Law, of equal Purity, and without Contradiction: Those who are inclined to swerve from Truth, fall into seditious and curious Desires, and would know the true Explication of the Koran, which God only is Master of. But those who are truly wise, say we believe in God, all Things proceed from his divine Wisdom." Again, in the forty-sixth Chapter it is written, as Reland translates it, "As for my Part, I know not what is to happen either to you or to me: I only follow what God has revealed to me." Moreover, Mahomet saith in several Places of the Koran, that it is a plain Book which brings to Light hidden Secrets, leads Men in the right Way, and brings Salvation to all those who follow his Ordinances. From all which it evidently follows, that Mahomet only owned that he could not foretel what was to happen, and that the Koran contained many deep Mysteries known to God only; which too curious and inquisitive Readers endeavoured to fathom, but to no Purpose, or rather to their own Perdition.

S E C T. XXXI.

Whether the Koran mentions an immortal God and Creator?

Bartholomew of Edessa ^c is so impudent as to pretend that he has read the whole Koran and all the Books of that Sect, and yet insults Mahomet in these Words: I have not found in thy Koran the Name of the Creator, nor that of a rational and immortal God, only the Morning Star, which was the Divinity of the antient Arabians. Yet every Page of that Book contains glorious Descriptions of the most essential Perfections of the Godhead, borrowed from our holy Scriptures. He justly blames Mahomet for swearing by the Morning Star. But the rest is downright Calumny.

S E C T. XXXII.

Whether Mahometans are allowed by their Religion to keep as many Wives as they can maintain?

Olerius ^d, Peter Gregory of Thoulouse ^e, and many others, reproach the Mahometans with it: Bayle ^f and a modern Author ^g say the Number is limited; and the ^a In the Edition published at Zurich by Bibliander, Pag. 356.

^b In Cribratione Alcorani, Lib. 4. Chap. 2.

^c See Le Moyne in his Varia Sacra, Pag. 324.

^d In his Itinerary.

^e In his Syntagma Juris, Lib. 9. Chap. 2. Sect. 22.

^f In his Diction. Hist. & Crit. Article Mahomet.

^g Septem Castrensis in his Work de Moribus Turc, Pag. 24.

last mentioned Writer fixes it to a Dozen. The Truth is, the Koran says expressly ^a, receive in Marriage such Women as you like, two Wives, three Wives, or four at most, if you think you cannot maintain them equally, marry one only. The Jews, who think Polygamy no Sin, do the same; when they live amongst Christians or other People who allow but one Wife, they marry but one, and have recourse to other Ways of satisfying their Passions. This is also practised by Mahometans in their own Country; most of them have but one Wife, but they buy Slaves whom they use as they please, and who are not so chargeable to them as Wives; who must have a suitable Maintenance, certain Honours and Regards paid them, and the Marriage-contract complied with, which is not the Case of the Slaves.

Mahomet indeed seems by his Example to have authorised unlimited Polygamy; he had, as some say, seventeen Wives, or twenty-one according to others; the least Account gives him fourteen, though not all living together; but the Mahometans pretend this was a peculiar Privilege granted to their Prophet, for the Propagation of the Doctrine he received from Heaven, and accordingly every Tribe out of which he took a Wife embraced his Party, and promoted his Interest. Yet he would now and then play the Hypocrite, as Reland observes: He was on the Point of taking a new Wife, but her Father assuring him that she had never been sick: How then said the Impostor, can I believe she is, or can be agreeable to God, since she never felt any Pain? This Moderation raised their Respect toward him.

But since we are mentioning Mahomet's Wives, it may be agreeable to our Readers to mention the six first which he married, in order to clear up a Passage of Sylburgh, which is very obscure, if not intirely corrupted. The first was the famous Widow Chadisja, who took him as a Servant when he was twenty-four Years old, sent him into Syria about her Trade, and married him a Year after: This Woman was the first of his Profelytes, when being forty Years old, and being grown rich, he left off Commerce, and commenced Prophet. The second was Sawda, of whom we have no particular Account. The third Aischa, Daughter of the famous Abubeker, one of his first Disciples. Mahomet married her when she was but six Years of Age; but as Historians relate, bedded her only three Years after. The fourth Chajsa, Omar's Daughter. The fifth Om, Selma's Daughter. The sixth Zaineb, or Zenobia, all which had been married before, except the third.

Now the Passage of Sylburgh is in his Saracénica, and contains an ancient Form of Abjuration pronounced by those who renounced Mahometism to embrace Christianity. I anathematize and detest with all my Heart Zadoza, (it should be Chadisja) and Aize, (Aischa Daughter of Abubeker) and Zaineb and Omeltheim, (Om Daughter of Selma) the first and most execrable Wives of the false Prophets. Such Abjurations were required, because those Wives and their Tribes had highly advanced the Power of Mahomet, and the Propagation of his erroneous Doctrine.

After this short Digression we return to our Subject, the Polygamy of the Mahometans: Ricault ^b represents these Wives as having no Education, Religion, or Modesty. On the contrary, Bellon ^c assures us the Union and good Harmony of all these Wives and Concubines, free or Slaves, Favourites or not, are surprizing: Wonderful! says he, Envy and Quarrels are banished from Turkish Families.

^a Chap. 4.

^b See the foregoing Sect. 18.

^c In his Observation, Lib. 3. Chap. 8. and 16.

As this might indeed seem strange, and not to be credited upon his bare Word ; he alledges several Reasons for it. The first is, That Antiquity and Distinction of Families are not regarded amongst the Turks : If a Man should marry first a Duke's Daughter, and afterwards the Daughter of a common Tradesman, both Women are equally treated ; both have the same Regard paid them in the House of their common Husband. Both in Men and Women nothing is considered but their personal Merit. All the Women in the Seraglio, says a late Author, are Slaves, and therefore all the Ottoman Princes are the Children of Slaves. The same happens in Persia ; The Sophi does not make any Marriage-contract with the Woman whom he takes to himself, he makes choice of what Woman he likes best, and like the Grand Seignior has a Seraglio, which is increased, or thinned, as he pleases. The Antiquity of this Custom in the East is evident from the Book of Hesler, in which we find that even the chief of those Women, whom they called Queen, and who wore the Crown might be deposed, and another taken in her Stead, without any regard to Country, Family, or Religion, as Hesler was. No Wonder then that Women submit quietly and peaceably to so antient and so well settled a Custom. This is the first Reason given by Bellon.

The second is, That both the Wives and Slaves are the Men's own Property, purchased with their own Money : The more Daughters a Man has in Turky, the richer he is, if they are handsome ; he need not trouble himself to provide Portions for them, on the contrary he receives rich Presents for parting with them. This makes the Wives more submissive, and not try for Mastery, and often get the better.

A third Reason is, That they have nothing to do but to please their Husbands, bring up the Children, and live peaceably together : The Management of the Household, all Money Matters, the Care of providing all Necessaries belongs only to the Husband ; the Women make no Visits abroad, and by Consequence are not exposed to that great Incendiary of all Family Disputes, the Backbiting and idle Stories of their Neighbours ; so different are in all Respects the Mahometan Customs from ours !

S E C T. XXXIII.

Whether the Mahometans wash their Faces without proper Precautions ?

Bartolomew of Edessa pretends that the Mahometans perform five Times a Day the Ablution mentioned above in the eighth Chapter of the Mahometan's Catechism, and that immediately after each Time, with the same Finger they wash their Mouth and Face. This is a senseless Calumny ; like other Nations they comply with that animal Function, but when 'tis necessary, and then they carefully wash their Hands from all Filth. As to their Faces, they only wash them before they go to Prayers, publick or private.

* See the two Prints representing an Agar, and the Grand Seignior as born from them ; to shew that the Turks are not displeased at being called Agareniens.

S E C T. XXXIV.

Whether Moses is a Reprobate according to the Mahometans ?

This is said by two Grecian Controvertists ^a, who pretend that Mahomet in his Koran placed Moses amongst the Damned : But whoever has the least Knowledge of the Koran, and has read any Part of it, must know that he is mentioned there with great Respect ; and the Mahometans look upon him as the greatest of Prophets, next to Jesus and Mahomet. See in the foregoing Abstract the Article concerning those whom God has sent.

S E C T. XXXV.

Whether the Mahometans own only three Prophets, Moses, Christ, and Mahomet ?

Volaterranus ^b maintains the Mahometans own no other Prophet, whereas they are rather to blame for admitting so many thousands as may be seen in the said Abstract concerning those whom God sent. They likewise mention in particular six Legislators, Adam, Noe, Abraham, Moses, Christ, Mahomet.

S E C T. XXXVI.

Whether according to Mahomet Man was made of a Leech ?

Mahomet in the xcvi Chapter of the Koran says, that God made Man of some Blood congealed ; so the French Version of Du Rier, printed in Holland in the Years 1649, and 1733, renders the Arabick Word, which with a small change signifies also Semen genitale and a Leech. But Euthymius Zigabenus, not being acquainted with that Language, has accused Mahomet of saying that God made the first Man of a Leech. The same Ignorance has betrayed others ^c to say, that according to Mahomet, “ A wild Cock and some Gondies taught Solomon all the Wisdom he was “ Master of.” Whereas the Arabick Word signifies Spirits : Yet so that Solomon still is said, in the 27th Chapter of the Koran, to have received his superior Knowledge from God. Though it must be owned that same Chapter contains many senseless and absurd Notions.

S E C T. XXXVII.

Whether Mahomet denied the Immortality of the Soul ?

Polydore Virgil ^d taxes the Mahometans with believing that the Souls do not subsist after Death. But the Koran expressly teaches in many Places that the Just and the Wicked shall live for ever ; the first in Heaven, where they shall see and love God,

^a Euthymius Zygapenus and an anonymous Author, who wrote Mahomet's Life in Sylburgh's Saracen. Pag. 60.

^b In his Refutation of Mahometism at the End of the Koran published by Bibliander in the Year 1550.

^c See Evodius in the Acts of the 42 Martyrs, Vol. 6. of Acta Sanctorum.

^d De Inventionem rerum, Lib. 7. Chap. 8.

with the utmost Joy and Content, which Dispositions belong only to the Soul, which by Consequence does not die: The Wicked on the contrary shall be tormented in Hell-fire without Intermiſſion. See the 6th Chapter of the Mahometan's Catechiſm. However Polydore might have heard, that they believe Souls cannot ſubſiſt without Bodies: Which in Reality is their Opinion, but they at the ſame Time teach that after the Examination of the Grace, our Souls are received into other Bodies, and kept there till the Day of the Reſurrection, when they are to be re-united to their own Bodies: This Opinion, though falſe, is not ſo abſurd as that of the *Seculians, who pretend the Souls are in a State of Sleep and Inaction; as if the Soul, which gives Life to the Body, could not think without it.

S E C T. XXXVIII.

Whether Mahomet teaches that whoever kills his Enemy, or is killed by him, is undoubtedly ſaved?

Conſtantine Porphyrogenet, a learned Emperor in the tenth Century, tells us in a Book^c published by Maurſius above a hundred Years ago, that Mahomet opens the Gate of Heaven to every one of his Followers who ſhall have killed his Enemy, or been killed by him: Anaſtaſius^d in the ninth Century ſays the ſame, and the Chronicle of Theophanes, who lived in the eighth, contains the ſame Accuſation. The Truth is, Mahomet, being attacked by the inhabitants of Mecca, who would have deſtroyed him and his Religion, exhorted his Diſciples to defend themſelves, to kill them wherever they found them; and promiſed them that, if they fell in the Way of God^e as Martyrs for his Unity, they ſhould infallibly enter into Heaven. But he never allowed them to fight and quarrel amongſt themſelves: Accordingly we find by Bellon^f and Chardin^g, that they live friendly and peaceably together, and have moral Precepts about forgiving Injuries, though no Ways to be compared to the Commands which we find in the New Teſtament^h.

S E C T. XXXIX.

Whether Mahomet had brought up a Pigeon, to come to his Ear, when in Fits of the Falling-ſickneſs?

The learned Mr. Ockley, Profeſſor at Cambridge, in his Introduction to the Oriental Languages, Remarks, that even the incomparable Grotius, in his excellent Work on the Truth of Chriſtian Religion, Book the 6th, which is wholly againſt Mahometiſm, relates that Mahomet had taught a Pigeon to come to his Ear, in order to perſuade his Followers that he was divinely inſpired: Yet this Story is not mentioned in any Arabian Author, who certainly would not have omitted a Fact ſo much to the Credit of their Prophet. The laborious Pocock, who tranſlated the above-

* See Herbelot in the Article Gehennem.

^b See Velkellius, Pag. 501. Edit. Racov. De Invocat. Sanctor.

^c De Adminiſtratione Imperii, Cap. 14.

^d Hiſtor. Eccleſiaſt. Pag. 104.

^e The Way of God, is the Battle againſt the Inhabitants of Mecca.

^f Obſervat. Rerum Memorabil. in Græc. Aſia & Ægypto, &c. Lib. 3. Cap. 18.

^g Tom. 8. Pag. 204. Edit. of 1711.

^h Mat. Chap. v. Ver. 44. Ephes. Chap. v. &c.

mentioned Work of Grotius into Arabick, has omitted that Fable : And in his Essay on the Arabian History, he tells us, that being in Company with Grotius, he enquired of him, whether he had found that Story in any Arabick Author, or only in the Writings of some Christian Controvertists? Grotius ingeniously owned, that he had not read any Thing like it in Arabian Authors, but had taken it upon Trust from Christians. From all which, Reland concludes this is only a Fiction to be rejected : So true is this Observation of Maracci ^a, “ If I was to write the History of Mahomet by the Memoirs furnished by Christians, I should deservedly be laughed at by the Mahometans. For their Accounts are so widely different from ours, that no one could imagine they are of the same Person ; so I shall omit, or only slightly touch what our Authors mention, and stick to what his own Disciples relate : Not out of Regard to their Veracity, or as giving any great Credit to them, as to the History ; but because our Design is to convert them if possible, to the Christian Religion, which is more easily and gloriously performed, by using their own Arms, and turning them against themselves. Add to this, that most of the Christian Authors in handling that Subject, have related such ridiculous and ill-grounded Stories about Mahomet, which make his Followers laugh, and take Occasion from those childish and unheard of Relations to remain obstinate in their Superstition.”

S E C T. XL:

Whether the Mahometans believe a Plurality of Worlds?

Notwithstanding the above cited wise Observation of Maracci, that learned Author taxes ^b Mahomet with teaching a Plurality of Worlds, because he gives to God the Name of Lord of the Worlds : Which, says he, is the erroneous Opinion of the Manicheans, of Democritus, of Metrodorus, and some other antient Philosophers. And in another Place ^c he accuses him of multiplying Easts and Wests, which, says he, is an absurd Notion derived from the false Opinion of the Plurality of Worlds.

But this Expression of Mahomet is only a peculiar Way of Speech used by the Jews and other Eastern Nations, to signify the various Kinds of Creatures. When they call God the Creator of Worlds, they only mean a World of Angels, a World of Bodies, a World of Men : The Samaritans use also the same Expressions, as Reland has learnedly demonstrated it, in another of his Works. ^d This is farther proved by an Arabian Manuscript, which is a Comment on the Manual of Borbaneddin, and vouches that one may reasonably distinguish a World of Angels, a World of Men, a World of Genius's. Maracci himself tells us, that Said Almosaieb, a Mahometan Author, said there are six hundred Worlds in the Sea, and four hundred in the Earth; which shews he meant only various Kinds of Creatures: Moreover, the best Versions of the Koran into Oriental Languages, such as that in the Malayan Tongue, and that of the Island Java, translate the said Passages, as Maracci has also been forced to do very often, thus Praise be to God, who is the Lord of all the World, or the Master of the whole Universe.

^a In his Preface to the Life of Mahomet, Pag. 9.

^b In his Preface to the Refutation of the Koran, Pag. 76.

^c The same in the same Work, Pag. 121.

^d See his Dissertat. Miscellan. Tom. 2. Diss. 7. 13.

S E C T. XLI.

Whether Mahomet borrowed the Circumcision from the Jews of his own Times?

Theophanes in his Chronicle, and Anastasius who copies him in his Ecclesiastical History, relate that the Jews fancied Mahomet was the Messiah, some of their Chiefs embraced his Religion, but seeing him eat the Flesh of a Camel, they conceived such a Detestation of it, that they returned to Judaism: And says Theophanes, these Jews taught us that Mahomet followed several Customs of the Mosaical Law; as the Circumcision and other Ceremonies. But Origen^a assures us, that the Ishmaelites who inhabit that Country (Arabia near which he lived) were circumcised at the Age of thirteen. St. Jerome likewise, in his Comment on the tenth Chapter of Jeremiah, says, Most of the Nations about Palestine were circumcised, chiefly the Egyptians, Idumæans, Ammonites, Moabites, and all the Saracenes who dwell in the Deserts. The learned Lexin Warner wrote a Manuscript on the Customs and Manners of the Arabians before Mahometism, which has been stoln from the publick Library of Leyden: This Book might be of great Use in clearing up the Antiquity of several Rites observed by Mahometans, which are thought to be instituted by their Prophet, though they are of a much earlier Date: But since it is lost, our Readers we hope will be pleased with what Spanheim^b copied out of it in his Introduction to the History of the New Testament, as to what belongs to the seventh Age.

Having consulted the said Manuscript, he there found, 1°. that the wisest amongst the Arabians, and in particular the Koraiskites, (who called themselves the People of God, as being different from other Nations, and always near the Temple of Mecca) adored one only God, held Idols in Detestation, did not eat of the Sacrifices offered to them, and often used this Expression; Shall I have but one God, or pay my Adoration to a thousand Gods? 2°. That they had used Circumcision ever since the Time of Ishmael. 3°. That many of them believed the raising of the Dead, and a Day of Judgment, in witness whereof they tied a Camel to the Tombs of those they had buried, without giving it any Victuals or Drink; to signify that the deceased should rise again, and ride on a Camel, as the Arabians did. 4°. That they earnestly recommended Alms and Works of Charity. 5°. That they often prayed, and constantly turned their Faces toward the Temple of Mecca. 6°. That they punctually performed the Pilgrimage of Mecca, as they still do. 7°. That they believed the Devils had been changed into Serpents^c and called the Devil the Serpent, which Name, if we mistake not, is also given him in the Koran. 8°. That the most religious amongst them drank no Wine. 9°. That their chief Sacrifice was the first born of a Camel. 10°. That they valued most the green Colour: The white being appropriated to God, whom they called white Face, and the King named a white Porringer. 11°. That they were very religious in keeping their Oaths^d.

^a In his Philocalia, Chap. 23.

^b Frederick Spanheim died at Leyden, at the Beginning of this Century. He was Professor of Divinity and of Ecclesiastical History, and Library-keeper of that Academy.

^c They might know by Tradition the Means used by the Devil to tempt our first Parents.

^d The List of Manuscripts used by Reland, we omit as unnecessary.

A DISSERTATION

On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs, directly or indirectly authorised by the Koran.

THE foregoing Dissertations are chiefly concerning the Grounds of Mahometism. We now enter upon the Manners and Customs in the civil Life, which flow from, or have some Relation to that Religion. We must take Notice that the Koran contains some Negative Precepts concerning such Things which become evil or scandalous only by the Abuse of them. Such as the forbidding Wine, and other intoxicating Liquors, which seems enforced in several Passages of the Koran, for Instance in the second Chapter, where Mahomet says exprelly, that the Sin^b committed by drinking Wine, is much greater, than the Advantage reaped from the Use of it; and in the fifth Chapter he reckons Wine amongst the Abominations which are the Works of Satan. Some have pretended that the Excess only is forbid, but the general Opinion is, that it is not lawful^c to drink any of those Liquors, and that whoever does it, though never so little, commits a Sin. Those who have performed the Pilgrimage of Mecca, are the most scrupulous in this Point, and will neither drink any Wine, nor make it, buy or sell it, or what is necessary to make it, in order to live by the Profits of such a Traffick. Yet all the Mahometans are not so exact in observing this Law; and when reproached with the Breach of it by Christians, they use Recriminations, and upbraid us with our Violation of the Gospel Precepts.

Some Mussulmen have doubted whether Coffee is not comprehended under the general Denomination of intoxicating Liquors: Because they say, it disturbs the Imagination of those who use it. Be that as it will, Coffee, though now universally allowed in Mahometan Countries, has been heretofore forbid, and is now a mere Toleration, not a religious Permission; which nevertheless very few abstain from. But the scrupulous Mahometans, whom a judicious Traveller^d represents as proud Men and full of Contempt for others, (as are most Bigots of all Religions) are still more averse from Tobacco, both because it has the same Effect as Wine and Brandy, and much more upon Account of a pretended Prophecy of Mahomet, that “in the latter Days some shall call themselves Mussulmen (Moslems, that is Faithful) without being really such, who will suck in through a Pipe, and blow out the Smoke of a Plant called Tobacco.” This Qualification of false Brethren could not but render ^a The first Part of this Dissertation is extracted out of Sale’s Preliminary Discourse, which contains many curious Observations.

^b See the Latin Translation of the Koran by Maracci, and that into English by Sale.

^c See Chardin, Tom. 4. Pag. 148. of the 4to. Edit. in 1735. Thevenot says the Turks think it a Sin to wear Clothes spotted with Wine.

^d Ricault in the 25th Chapter of the second Book of his State of the Ottoman Empire.

108 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

Tobacco odious to scrupulous People; yet the constant Practice is for Coffee and Tobacco, without which no Treat is thought completely polite in the East, and the Persians in particular say that Tobacco is to Coffee, as Salt to Meat.

The same Rigorists condemn also the Use of Opium, or Heng,^a or Treacle, though nothing is more common. But as we have observed before^b Policy as well as Religion, might induce Mahomet to forbid whatever may occasion Drunkenness, or disturb the Brain: The Koran does not mention Tobacco, or Opium^c, or Heng, but as they produce the same Effects as Wine, are apt to cause Quarrels, neglect of their Duty, several Irregularities, and shameful Disorders; all these Reasons prove the Necessity of abstaining from all such Liquors or Drugs. Upon the same Account the Jews (from whom, and from the ancient Arabians, the Magi and the Christians, Mahomet has borrowed many of his religious Precepts) did not allow the Priests to drink Wine when they were to officiate in their Turn. Not to mention the Nazarenes, the Rechabites, or even some Christians in the first Ages, who condemned the Use of Wine as sinful.

The second and fifth Chapters of the Koran forbid also Games of Hazard, under the general Denomination of Al Maisair, which strictly means the Art of Divination by Arrows. Herbelot in the Article Acdah, Sale in his Preliminary Discourse, Pag. 124, and 126. and Pocock in his Specimen, Hist. Arab. Pag. 324. give an Account of this Custom; but not to our present Purpose since it was abolished by Mahomet. We must only take Notice that this Kind of Witchcraft is very like Rhabdomaney, that is the Art of Divination by Rods, and is mentioned in the Prophecy of Ezekiel^d, which is an evident Proof that both the Arabians and their Neighbours undertook no Affair of Moment^e without consulting their Arrows. Mahomet forbid all these Customs, with an Intent, as he said, to take away all Superstition. But others have come in their Places, as may be seen in^f Chardin and Therrenot^g, and which are too many to find room in this Work. For the Eastern Nations are still more infatuated than those of Europe, by Prodiges, Charms,^h Enchantments, Astrology, Amulets, Talismans, derived from the ancient Arabians and Chaldeans, and taken up by Mahometans. The Persians have also a great Veneration for old Treesⁱ, such as we see amongst the ancient Heathens, where Oracles were given, and Idolaters met to worship their Gods.

Now to return to the Games of Hazard; they were likewise prohibited under the Name of Superstition, to remove all Occasions of Quarrels and Cheating, which generally accompany those Diversions, and may be thought of more dangerous Consequence in those hot Climates. However the Civil Law enforces the Authority of Mahomet and of the Koran, infomuch that Games of Hazard are in Disrepute,

^a Some pretend that this Heng or Benge, or Benghe, is Hen-bane, or Hugs-bane; but the Arabians give that Name to Hemp Leaves preserved and to Treacle, which they use as much as the Hen-bane, and are of a stupifying and soporiferous Quality.

^b See above in the Mahometan Catechism.

^c In Persia and Arabia, Opium is pronounced Amphisun, those who take it, or Benge or Treacle, are called Theriaki, which signifies also a Debauchee: A Mahometan Preacher inveighed strongly against those Drugs, some of which in the Heat of the Discourse dropt out of his Bosom. The Application is easy.

^d Chap. xxi. Ver. 26.

^e Pocock in his Specimen, Hist. Arab. Pag. 327.

^f In his Voyages, Tom 4. Pag. 148. Edit. in 4to. of 1735.

^g In his Voyages, Book 1. Pag. 112. Edit. of 1727.

^h See Chardin in his Voyages, Tomb. 2. Pag. 57.

ⁱ They pray, put up Lights, hang their Clothes, spend the Nights under those Trees, and the Sick devote themselves to the Saints, who, as the Persians say, inhabit there.

and the Testimony of those who are addicted to them, is of no force ^a in Courts of Justice.

Most of the Mahometan Doctors allow the Game of Chess, as depending wholly upon Industry and Cunning, but they forbid playing 'too long at it, or for Money, or laying Wagers about it, or at the Hours appointed for Prayer: These Restrictions are observed more exactly by the Turks, than by the Persians or Moguls. Some are of Opinion, that Mahomet forbids Chess, under the Name of ^b Images, because amongst the Arabians, as with us, most of the Pieces represented Men, Elephants, Horses, Camels, &c. others think Mahomet put that Restraint only upon the Pawns, which in Turky are made quite plain: But the Mahometans generally abstain from Play more easily than from Wine, chiefly in Persia, where Drunkenness prevails as much as in Russia, or Germany. Yet some Writers assure us, that the Turkish Mobility is much addicted to Gaming.

This Subject naturally leads us to give an Account of the Diversions and Exercises used by Mahometans; but not to exceed the Limits of this Work, we shall only mention those, which have some Relation to Religion by the good or bad Use made of them, or even are admitted as a Part of their religious Ceremonies. Such are Poppet-shows, with which the Turks entertain their Guests in private after their Meals ^c, notwithstanding Mahomet's Prohibition of Images. This Diversion is publicly exhibited in the Rhamadan when the Hour of fasting is past: For then they allow themselves as much sensual Pleasure, as the Christians do in the Carnival, or the Heathens during the Solemnity of their Saturnalia, the two last Days of which were spent in Poppet-shows ^d. “ The Jews, says Thevenot, are commonly employed in giving “ that Diversion, . . . they place themselves in the corner of a Room, hang be“ fore them a large Carpet, the Top of which is cut in the shape of a square Win“ dow, covered with a white Cloth, behind this they light many Candles, and be“ twixt them and the white Cloth, they represent the Shape of various Creatures, “ either with their Hands, or by some Figures, which they move to and fro so dex“ terously, that they are more diverting than our Poppet-shows: At the same Time
“ they sing either in the Turkish or Persian Languages shameful lascivious Songs.” They have also Jugglers, Quacks ^e, and publick Dancers of both Sexes, called Tchinguis ^f, which are represented in the Print here placed. Dancing has certainly no essential Influence on Religion; one of the greatest Men amongst the Heathens ^g affirms, that no sober Man dances; most Nations, though they are diverted by that Exercise, at the same Time are unanimous in despising those who have no other Way of earning a Livelihood: The Turks, Persians, ^h Moguls, as well as the English, French, and other Nations of Europe, look upon Dancers by Profession, as People of loose Lives and Morals: Yet it must be owned, that those Disorders are not always the Consequence of dancing; and several Nations have made use of it in their religious Worship ⁱ. Poetry and Musick raise the Affections of the Soul, and animate it, both to speak and act with Zeal and Fervour, which na-

^a At least the Rigorists pretend such Witnesses may be rejected.

^b In the above cited fifth Chapter of the Koran, where Wine, Hazard, &c. are forbid.

^c Thevenot. Tom. 1. Book 1. Chap. 25. of his Voyages.

^d Sigillaria. See Suetonius and Macrobius.

^e See Chardin, Tom. 3. of his Voyages.

^f See Thevenot above cited.

^g Nemo saltat sobrius, said Cato.

^h Chardin above cited says, That in Persia Women only dance, and the Men sing to them:

ⁱ So David danced before the Ark.

110 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

turally shews itself in the Tone of the Voice, and measured Situation or Motion of the Body^a. Nothing therefore but the Abuse has rendered dancing contemptible amongst Mahometans, who nevertheless admit it in their Religion; as appears by the Turnings of their Dervises, which most Travellers^b represent as a solemn Act of Worship performed every Tuesday and Friday. The Superior of these Dervises preaches a Sermon on some Text of the Koran, which is followed by some Prayers out of the same Book, sung by all of them together: Then having made a low Bow to the Superior, they begin to dance, or turn about^c, whilst some play on the Flute, or other Instruments: This Ceremony was invented, says Thevenot, by one Mewlana, whom the Dervises honour as a great Saint: And Ricault assures us, that this Man, whom he calls^d Mevelava, by a Miracle turned fourteen Days together without eating or taking any Nourishment, whilst another Dervis, named Hamzé, his Companion, played on the Flute: After which he fell into an Extasy, and received wonderful Revelations, and was very instrumental in founding the Order of Dervises. The Flute is, they think, a sacred Instrument of Musick, sanctified by Jacob and other holy Shepherds of the Old Testament, who made use of it: Yet the Rigorists condemn both the Dance, and Instruments of Musick, as contrary to Religion.

As to the Distinction of Meats, we shall only add to what has been said before, that the Koran in several Places^e forbids Blood, and the Flesh of Beasts, either offered to Idols, or which died naturally: And some Mussulmen, are so cautious in that Point, that unless the Butcher^f pronounces the Prayer Bismill'ah, or in the Name of God, &c. whilst he kills any Beast, they do not think it lawful to eat of it.

Usury is also condemned in the second Chapter of the Koran,^g and ranked amongst the most enormous Sins. Mahomet does not allow it, as the Jews do, even towards Infidels: Yet there are some Mussulmen, who are Usurers and Extortioners, and give what Interpretation they think fit, in order to elude the Precepts of the Koran, as too many Christians do with respect to the Gospel. The same Chapter which forbids Usury, enjoins Mercy and forbearing with a Debtor, who is not able to pay, without depriving himself of the necessary Means to subsist himself or Family; in which Case Mahomet orders his Followers not to begin any Prosecutions for such Debts, but to reckon them as an Alms given to the Debtor. He may have borrowed this from the Law of Moses and of Christ, and the Dictates of Humanity may also have inspired him to make that Law, both to avoid merciless Law-suits, and to prevent his Subjects from being ruined. So we see the Romans, who lived before the Gospel, and were but little, if at all, acquainted with the Law of Moses, had such an Abhorrence of Usury, that they obliged Usurers to restore four Times as much as they had thus unjustly gained^h: Whereas Thieves were only condemned to pay double what they had stole. Prudence and Equity convinced them, that an Usurer was more pernicious to Society than a Thief, for Reasons easy to be guessed.

^a Such was the Chorus in antient Plays.

^b Thevenot Book 1. Chap. 40. Ricault Book 2. Chap. 13. and Tournefort in his Letter 14:

^c See the Print here annexed.

^d Besnier says that Mevelava is a Corruption of Mewlana, and signifies any religious Superior. See hereafter what we shall say of the Dervises.

^e Chap. 2. Chap. 5. Chap. 6. and Chap. 16. in the two last Mahomet excuses those who are forced to eat.

^f See Sale in his Notes on Chap. 2.

^g And in the 3d Chapter which forbids Interest upon Interest.

^h Majores nostri, says Cato, in legibus posuerunt furem dupli condemnari, facneratorem quadrupli.

DERVICH ou. Moine Turc qui tourne par devotion. ||

SAKA Charitable Derviche qui porte de l'eau par la ville et la donne par charité.

TURC qui fait sa prière. ||

DERVICH des Indes.

AMANT TURC qui se cicatrise le bras devant sa Maîtresse pour preuve de son Amour.

ENFANT TURC que l'on mène à la Circoncision.

L. Picart 1764 d'apr. 1731.

TCHINGUI Danseur Turc.

TCHINGUIS ou Danseuse Turque.

H. P. Scott del.

M. R. L.

TURC.

The same Sentiments of Humanity, and the common Good of Society, prompted Mahomet to abolish the barbarous Custom of the Koraisbites and other Arabians, to bury Girls alive; which they pretended was in order to prevent the Shame which they might cause to their Parents by an evil Conduct, and the Slavery and Miseries to which they were exposed: Moreover, they had no Regard for Women, but upon Account of Propagation and Pleasure, and looked upon their Birth as a Misfortune, their Death a Happiness. Therefore when a Woman was in Labour, she was led to a Grave, and if delivered of a female Child, it was thrown in: Others say it was done with more Decency^a; however they were the Victims of these false Reasons, or of some unknown Superstition^b.

The Chinese still take the Liberty of killing their Children, Girls especially, when they cannot maintain them, but this they seldom do to Boys, because they say, with all other Nations, that Men are the Strength of a State: Polidippus likewise, a Grecian Poet, informs us, that “a Father, though ever so poor, breeds up his Sons, but though in the greatest Affluence, he cruelly exposes his Daughters.”

As we have treated at large in the foregoing Dissertation, of the Polygamy of the Mahometans, we shall only observe, that the Countries, in which it is allowed, are generally less peopled, than those where the Laws oblige Men to rest satisfied with one Wife at a Time^c: And that the Mussulmen are the most passionate Lovers, exceeding even Don Quixot in their Adventures^d and the Dangers they run for the sake of their Mistresses, whom they endeavour to convince of their Love by cutting and slashing their own Bodies^e; though at other Times they are brutish and tyrannical.

This mention of Polygamy naturally draws on a Description of their Marriages: This Ceremony is in high Esteem amongst the Mahometans^f; yet it is not celebrated in the Presence of the Priests, nor an Act of Religion^g, as with the Jews and Christians, and heretofore with the Romans^h and Grecians. The Cadi or civil Judge gives it a Sanction; “as to an Act purely relating to Society, which is not valid without his Presence The Husband acknowledges that he has obliged himself to marry such a Woman, to give her such a Dowry, to dispose of at her Pleasure in case of Divorce.” The Woman is not present at this Acknowledgment; but the Father, or some of the Relations, assist at it: Which being done, the Husband takes Possession of his Wife, who is brought to him under a Canopy veiled, accompanied with Friends, Relations, Slaves and Musick, as represented in the Print. All these Ceremonies having been treated on at large by all Travellers,ⁱ we shall only mention some particular Points worth Notice.

1. Ricault says, that “Wives are not jealous of Concubines, if they are not deprived of the Right which they claim, and the Law gives them, to be admitted once a Week to their Husbands Beds: On Failure of this, they may demand it on the Thursday Night of the following Week, and even go to Law

^a Perfume and adorn her, &c. says Pocock in his Specimen, Pag. 336.

^b Thus the Egyptians buried Girls alive every Year, that the Nile might kindly overflow the Lands. The Persians did it to Boys and Girls. The Romans to a Gaulish and to a Grecian Man and Woman.

^c Ricault, Book 2. Chap. 21. speaks of the ill Consequences of Polygamy, and is of Opinion that jealous Women give to their Rivals Things to make them miscarry.

^d See the thousand and one Nights, and other Oriental Romances.

^e The Print here represents a Turk doing this. See Sale on Chap. 12.

^f See Ricault in the Place above cited.

^g Yet Tournefort, Let. 14. Says the Marriage is blest by the Imam or Priest.

^h The Romans made Vows and Prayers, the Greeks offered Sacrifices to Venus, Juno, &c.

ⁱ Ricault, Tournefort, Thevenot, Chardin, Olearius, and others.

112 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

“ with their Husbands if they do not grant it . . . If any are so bashful, as to neglect this publick Way of obtaining Justice, they endeavour to find out some other Way of recompensing that Loss^a. ”

2. Chardin^b, having mentioned the Age at which Boys and Girls are set free from Tuition in Persia, relates that the Judge asks the Boy^c, Whether the Devil has jumped upon his Body : To which he replies, More than once. We mention this only, because some are so foolish as to ground upon this silly Custom their Opinion, that the Devil, in the Form of a Serpent, excited those carnal Motions in our first Parents, which they pretend was the Cause of their Sin.

3. Most Travellers affirm, that the Turks have a kind of half Marriage, called Cabin ; which consists in taking a Wife for a Time limited. This Agreement is made before the Judge, who, in the Presence of the contracting Parties, writes it down, and the stipulated Sum of Money is paid to the Woman when the Time is elapsed. Such Marriages were in Use amongst the Romans, and are so still in China and both Indies. The Turks^d reproach also the Christians with them, and it must be owned, this infamous Practice is but too common amongst Catholicks and Protestants^e.

4. Ricault mentions likewise a Marriage allowed to Eunuchs, who may keep several Women :^f But to omit these Abominations,

5. The Mahometans are allowed to make use of their female Slaves ; and here we must take Notice, first, that Mussulmen may marry Women of any Religion, the Tenets of which are written : And secondly, That all the Children, whether by Wives or Slaves, equally inherit their Father's Substance ; if by Will or otherwise the Father has declared them free, for want of which, the Children of a Slave still remain Slaves to the eldest Son of the Family.

6. Thevenot,^g who is an exact and judicious Traveller, writes, “ That the Turks never marry their Relations, unless they are more distant than eight Generations.”

7. The same, and most Travellers witness, that the Mahometan Women study to embellish themselves by all the Arts in use amongst our European Ladies ; false Hair, Paint,^h rich Clothes, often to the Ruin of their Husbands and Families. These Particulars are to be found in Books which are very common, so we shall only set before our Reader's Eyes, Prints which represent a Persian, African, and Arabian Man and Woman.

8. The forementioned Liberty, to sue for the Marriage-duty, the Dowry stipulated to be given to Wives after a Divorce, are not easily reconciled with the retired Lives Women lead, nor with the general Opinion of the Mahometans, that Women are but half rational, and made for the Use of Man, as a Horse : But in most Countries and Religions the Law is widely different from the Practice.

^a See the History of Thamar in the Book of Genesis.

^b In the 3d Vol. of his Voyages, Chap. 17.

^c He adds that the Mahometan Priests ask the young Man whether he has the Water of Man upon him ? This needs no Interpretation.

^d Tournefort, Let. 14.

^e How many Travellers of all Religions do the same ? How many in all Countries that are not Travellers ?

^f See Bespier's Remarks upon Ricault, Pag. 373. See Juvenal. Satyr. vi.

^g In his Voyages, Book 1. Chap. 41.

^h They call it Surma.

AFRIQUAINE en habit de Cérémonie.

AFRIQUAINE en deshabille.

FEMME MORESQUE.

FEMME d'AFRIQUE allant par les rues.

FEMME PERSIENNE

PERSIAN

11. - BE du Dervé.

HABILLÉMENT des principaux Barbaresques.

9. The Koran ^a inveighs strongly against Adultery, and orders that a Husband, who accuses his Wife of that Crime, and does not prove it, shall be bastinado'd. When there are no Proofs nor Witnesses, as we are informed by Travellers ^b, the Husband swears five Times that what he alledges is true, and to the last Oath adds a Curse, wishing he may be cursed by God and Men if he lies : On the other side the Woman is believed, if she sweats as often, and adds to the last Oath a Prayer, desiring God to destroy her, if her Husband speaks Truth. This is a Privilege which no doubt will seem extraordinary, even to many Christians. However if the Adultery is fully proved, the Husband has her Life in his Power, and if revengeful, puts her in a Sack full of Stones, and drowns her ; so says Tournefort : But then he adds, that “ they are so cautious in their Amours, that few die in the Water, “ and if the Husband spares their Lives, they are happier than before, because she “ is obliged to marry her Gallant . . . who, if a Christian, must embrace Mabo- “ metism or die.” As to the Adulterer, he is often condemned to ride on an Ass, with his Face towards the Tail, which he holds as a Bridle. He is crowned with Tripe and Guts, and has a Neckcloth of the same, and at last is bastinado'd upon the Reins and the Soles of his Feet.

10. The jealous Care with which the Women are kept by Eunuchs, who though incapable to please them are scarce permitted to look at their Prisoners, is mentioned by all Travellers, and our Readers may consult Tournefort ^c to see the Precautions and Formalities used, in bringing a Physician to them when they are sick.

We must not omit the curious Particularities related by ^d Ricault, when the Princesses of the Ottoman Empire are married to some powerful great Man ; this pretended Honour is the Effect of the Jealousy, which the Emperors of Turky conceive of their Power, and the Forerunner of their Ruin. Let us hear Ricault. “ When “ the Grand Seignior is apprehensive of the great Power of a Bashaw, he makes “ him marry one of his Sisters, or Relations, under Pretence of doing him more “ Honour : But instead of being greater, he becomes the most abject Slave, to the “ Pride and Tyranny of a Woman who treats him like a Footman : Yet he dares “ not refuse or seem to undervalue this Token of his Master's Favour : He must re- “ solve to devote himself wholly to her, and renounce all other Wives or Slaves, who “ might draw off any Part of his Love : If he has already a sweet tempered Wife “ and Children by her who engage his most tender Affection, he is obliged to turn “ her out of his House, and every other Person who might be displeasing to this “ Sultana yet unknown to him. If before the Wedding she sends to ask of him “ Money, Jewels, rich Furs, he must send them to her with a shew of Pleasure “ and Thanks, this is called Agbirlic. He is moreover obliged to settle upon her “ what Dowry the Match-makers are pleased to appoint. This Dowry or Cabin “ been stipulated before a Judge, he is led by a black Eunuch to the Sultana's “ Chamber to give her Thanks. When he enters the Room, she draws her “ Dagger, and haughtily demands who made him so bold as to approach her : He “ answers with a profound Respect, and shews to her the Emmery Padshah, or the “ Grand Seignior's ^e Order for the Wedding. She then rises, mildly receives him,

^a See Chap. 4, and 5. with the Notes of Sale and Maracci.

^b See Tournefort and other Travellers.

^c The same in the 13th Letter of his Voyages.

^d In his State of the Ottoman Empire, Book 1. Chap. 16.

^e Bespier in his Notes says, that Padshah, or Padishah is King, Emmery from the Hebrew Amar, Word, literally the King's Word.

114 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

“ and allows him to entertain her with more Familiarity : Then an Eunuch takes “ his Slippers and sets them at the Door as a Token of his meeting with a kind “ Reception. A few Minutes after the Bashaw makes a low Bow down to the “ Ground, and drawing back makes a Speech, to testify how happy he thinks him“ self for the Honour she intends to do him. This being over, he stands silent in “ an humble Posture with his Hands across his Breast, till she orders him ^a to bring “ her some Water. He obeys readily, and kneeling, presents to her a Water-cup “ prepared for that Ceremony : She ^b raises a red Vail embroidered with Gold and “ Silver Flowers which covered her Face, and drinks : Her Women immediately “ bring in a low Table on which are set two roasted Pigeons, and some candid “ Sugar on a Plate ^c. The Gallant desires her to eat, which she refuses till he has “ made her some rich Present. This calms her Anger, overcomes her Modesty ;
 “ she sits down to the Table, graciously receives from his Hand the Leg of a Pigeon,
 “ and having eat some, puts into his Mouth a piece of Sugar, then rises and goes “ back to her Place : All the Company withdraws and leaves the new married “ Couple alone for the Space of an Hour, that he may freely converse with her.
 “ Then his Friends come with Instruments of Musick playing, they invite him to “ come to the Anti-chamber, where he spends the Night with them in drinking “ and Diversion : The Sultana does the same in her Room with her Ladies. At “ last the Princess being tired, goes at Break of Day to ^d lie down in a Bed ex“ quisitely rich, well perfumed, and every Way fit for the Ceremony. An Eunuch “ gives Notice to her Husband by a Sign, and introduces him without Noise into “ the Bed-chamber. He puts off his upper Garments, kneels for some Time at “ the Feet of the Bed, then growing bolder, raises softly the Covering, softly “ touches and kisses the Feet of the Princess, and slides into her Arms ; she receives “ him with Pleasure, and wishes that God may grant them a happy Offspring.
 “ In the Morning his Friends come again to conduct him to the Bath, and his “ Spouse presents him with all the Linen requisite in that Place. After this they live
 “ more familiarly within Doors ; but in publick she is more reserved, and shews “ her Superiority. She wears a Changiar or Dagger by her Side, and requires of “ him so many Presents, that soon or late she empties his Coffers.”

We must now entertain our Readers with an Account of the Divorces, which so often break their Marriages. Mahomet in order to hinder his Followers ^e from putting their Wives away too often, expressly forbids the taking of them again, after a third Repudiation, unless they have been married and repudiated by another Man: This, they say, ^f has had so good an Effect, that very few Mahometans are divorced from their Wives, and the Number of those who take them again is still less, by reason of the Shame which is the Consequence of it, because she either has had another Husband ; or as Ricault says ^g, she must by the Law be enjoyed by another Man in the Presence of the Husband before he can take her again ; which the Woman liked so well, that she would not go to him again ^h. But this is not required

^a The same says that she speaks in the Imperative Mood ; Bring Water. (Son Ghetir).

^b Bespier cites a Passage in his Notes on Ricault, by which it appears that the Man raises the Vail.

^c Or a Plate of Sweet-meats.

^d One of her Women remains, who is called in a Citation by Bespier, the Gossip of the Wedding.

^e See the Koran, Chap. 2.

^f See the 6th Sect. of Sale's Preliminary Discourse on the Koran.

^g State of the Ottoman Empire cited before.

^h Ricault cites an Example of a Woman, who upon this Trial would not go to her first Husband.

till after the third Divorce called Ouch-talac,^a which Bespier explains three or the third Separation; of which the Turks have three different Sorts made before the Cadi, and registered by him. By the first the Husband and Wife are parted from Bed and Board; she receiving from him a Maintenance: The second is a total Separation of Body and Goods, the Husband must then give her the stipulated Dowry, after which she has no Claim to his Person or Goods, and may marry another, three Lunar Months after the Divorce, for fear she should be with Child, in which Case she cannot marry, and may even remain in her Husband's House, and be maintained at his Cost till she is delivered. The Ouch-talac is the most solemn Divorce, but not practised by the Persians.

The Women do not enjoy the same Privilege of parting with their Husbands, unless for want of Necessaries, (as Rice, Coffee, Wood, Money to go to the Bagnio, Flax to spin their Clothes, which the Law supposes they are industrious enough to make) or for not performing conjugal Duty.

Children come next under our Consideration, as being the Fruits of Matrimony. They become Members of Mahometism by Circumcision, which they derive from the Ismaelites, who as well as the Jews descended from Abraham, to whom God gave a particular Command of it. The Jews pretend that Adam, Moses, David, and other Saints of the Old Testament, were by a special Favour of God without a Prepuce; and the Disciples of Mahomet averr likewise, that their Prophet was not inferior to them in that Particular: "But, says Ricault, this is not extraordinary " in Countries where Circumcision is practised:" It happens sometimes in other Countries, as we are informed by Anatomists. The Arabians^b believed heretofore that Boys born under the Influence of the Moon, had no Foreskin, and when any such come into the World amongst the Jews, they content themselves with drawing some Blood from the Part where it should have been.

The Turks do not circumcise their Children till they are full seven Years old, and past that Age,^c they do it when they think fit. Chardin assures us, that the Persians perform this Ceremony when the Boys are five or six Years old: But the Mahometan Doctors say it should be done according to the Rules, at thirteen, because Ismael was circumcised at that Age; or at nine, because Children begin then to discern Good from Evil. However this is not performed in the same Manner as by the Jews; it is done by a Surgeon, not by a Priest: God ordained it as a Sign or Seal of the Justice obtained by Faith^d, but setting aside religious Notions, Circumcision is, and has long been, judged necessary in those hot Climates, both because their Foreskin being very long, becomes a Sink of Dirt and Uncleaness, and is thought by them to be an Obstacle to Generation.

The Day of Circumcision is a Day of Joy for all the Relations of the Child. He is carried on Horseback with Kettle-drums and Tabors sounding, dressed in his best Attire, followed by his School Companions, who pronounce aloud some Passages of the Koran. Being brought Home, he is directed to repeat the Profession of Faith,^e holding up one Finger, and then circumcised. Our Readers have in the

^a See Bespier on Ricault at the End of the second Tom. Pag. 684.

^b Pocock in his Specim. Histor. Arab. Pag. 320.

^c So says Ricault; but Thevenot in the first Book of his Voyages, Chap. 32. says they circumcise at eleven or twelve.

^d See Chardin, Tom. 2. Pag. 293. Thevenot above cited; and Tournefort who enters more into Particulars than the other two.

^e St. Paul iv. Ver. 11. Signaculum Justitiæ Fidei.

^f There is no other God but God, &c.

115 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

Print a Representation of a Child led to be circumcised. “ When ^a a grown up “ Person embraces Mahometism, he is led on Horseback, carrying in his Left-“ hand a Dart, with the Point turned towards his Heart, to testify that he will “ rather suffer himself to be pierced through the Heart, than renounce his new Re“ ligion.” But Tournefort says they only make their new Converts lift up a Finger, probably out of Contempt for such Persons who leave the Religion in which they were brought up : After all it is likely these Customs vary in different Countries :
 For at Algiers the Renegadoes are ^b circumcised, and led about the Town, as is said before, in the midst of a Guard of Barbarians with drawn Scymitars; to let them know, they are to be cut in Pieces, if they shew the least Inclination to return to Christianity.

Boys have a Name given them on the Day of their Circumcision, but this Custom is also subject to some Variations. Tournefort says the Father gives what Name he pleases to his Child as soon as 'tis born, holding him in his Arms, and lifting him up to offer it to God; after which he puts Salt into his Mouth, and gives him a Name with a Blessing. Superstition creeps in, for in Persia several Names taken out of the Koran are huddled together, one of which drawn by an Infant, is given to the Child. This we learn from Chardin. Another Custom worth our Reader's Notice is, that, by breaking the little Finger, of those who die without Circumcision, before they are buried, they seem to implore God's Mercy upon them. Yet several Mahometans do not look upon Circumcision as an indispensable Act of Religion, or necessary to Salvation : Whilst others think this Ceremony confers inward Faith, and that God will not hear the Prayers of an uncircumcised Man : Some Mussulmen are of Opinion that the Circumcision of the Father has an Influence on his Children, and saves them : Not unlike some rigid Calvinists, who think that Children that die without Baptism, are nevertheless regenerated, elected, and saved by the Efficacy of their Parents Faith. We must not omit mentioning the Superstition of some barren Women, who swallow a Preputium as an infallible Remedy to become fruitful.

We shall conclude this Subject, with some Remarks on the Birth and Education of Children : Some farther Account of the Mahometan funeral Rites, shall put an End to this Dissertation. 1. When the Children of Princes and great Lords are born, the Moment of their Birth is kept very secret, to avoid all Charms and Witchcraft, and to prevent Astrologers from casting their Nativity, and foretelling sinister Events; as if the Life of one Man could depend on the Guesses of another Man, who does not know what is to happen to himself the next Moment : But the Mahometans are not the only People, who are biassed by ill-grounded Hopes and frivolous Fears. 2. The Mahometans, like other Nations, admit of adopted Children : This is very common amongst the Turks. The Manner of doing it, is to make the adopted Person put on and go through the Shirt of the Person who adopts him. This Adoption is called ^c Akbrat. 3. Ricault makes very judicious Reflections on the Education of those who are to serve the Grand Seignior : And they may be applied to the bringing up other Children. Next to the chief Points of ^a This Ricault tells us.

^b Pitts in his Religion and Manners of the Mahometans, which Book was printed at London in the Year 1731.

^c See Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient. on that Word.

B. Poiret,culp. Juss. 1729.

Enterrement des Tu

res de Constantinople.

J. J. G. J. J. J.

Religion ; Beauty and Strength of Body are most minded by Mussulmen, who are persuaded a deformed Body can but cover a base Soul: The Indians even pretend that such Bodies are Prisons, into which Souls are cast for great Crimes committed in a former Life: And most Nations have imbibed the same Idea, or at least, that Beauty is a great Ornament to Virtue^a. 4. But as the same Ricault informs us^b, this Beauty, and the Love which it occasions, often degenerates into abominable Vices, too common in all Nations antient and modern, even those who are not far distant from the frozen Climates of the North.

The Mourning for the Dead begins with such loud Cries and Lamentations made by the Women, as publishes the Death to the most distant Neighbours. In Africa, besides these customary Tears and Howlings, they dawb their Faces with Soot and Oil, in which some Blacking has been steeped. Thus thirty or forty Women with dishevelled Hair, and some of them tearing and scratching their Flesh with their Nails or with Needles, enter upon the necessary Preliminaries of a Funeral.

The Custom of making loud Cries, and noisy Lamentations for departed Friends ; of rolling in the Dust, or covering one's self with Ashes, &c. is very antient in the East ; and not much altered amongst the modern Inhabitants of those Countries, as we may learn from the Accounts given by Travellers. Christians are not so boisterous and showy in their Mourning: A long Cloak with a Hatband and black Clothes are the outward Tokens of the Sorrow of a Child, a Brother, a Sister, a Husband, or a Wife, for the Death of a Parent and the other reciprocal Relations ; with this only Difference : That Widows mourn for the Loss of their Husbands longer, and in a closer Manner. This Custom is complied with, whether the Sorrow is real or only feigned ; in the same Manner as we see those who are met in a Church on some solemn Occasion seemingly praying, and repenting, as to outward Appearance, for fear of being looked upon as wanting Religion, or being Atheists or Infidels. Thevenot^c informs us, that these Turkish Women give over crying, when there are no Witnesses of their Tears, being hired for that Purpose, which lasts several Days, and is renewed at the End of the Year. In order to the Burial, the Corpse is washed and shaved, Frankincense is burnt about it, to expel the Devil and other evil Spirits, which, as the Mahometans and several other Nations believe, rove about the Dead, no less than about the Living. This Ceremony being over, the Body is put in a Burial-dress without Seam, that it may, as they pretend, kneel with less Difficulty, when it is to be examined in the Grave The Coffin is covered with a Pall, preceded by Imans who pray, and followed by the Relations and Friends of the deceased, with the Women who lament and shed Tears^d. At the Grave the Corpse is taken out of the Coffin, and put into the Ground : The Women stay there to Cry.

“ The Difference, says Thevenot, betwixt the Graves of the Turks and of the “ Christians in those Countries, consists in a Board, which the Turks put over the “ Corpse slanting, so that one End of it touches the Bottom of the Grave, and the

^a Gratior & pulchro veniens e corpore Virtus.

Virgil.

^b See Ricault in his State, &c. Book 1. Chap. 7. Thevenot assures us, this abominable Crime is the Subject of most Turkish Songs: The Grecians were also guilty of it, as appears by Anacreon: It has also found Admittance, even in Wedlock, amongst the Mahometans; in which Case the Woman may require to be divorced; and to express the Reason of her desiring a Separation, she turns her Slipper upside down before the Judge.

^c In his Voyage, Tom. 1. Chap. 43.

^d The Print here annexed represents a Turkish Funeral at Constantinople.

118 On some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs,

“ other leans against the Top of the said Grave But neither Turks nor Christians “ bury the Dead in Coffins.” Moreover the Turks place a Stone at the Head of the Corpse, for the Convenience of the Angels who are to examine the Deceased:
 This Civility paid to them will, as the Mahometans superstitiously believe, make them more indulgent: Thus they contradict themselves, Angels they own to be Spirits, yet they put a Seat for them. But God, who is merciful to repenting Sinners, is infinitely just and severe against Hypocrites.

The Palls are different, and the Tombs variously adorned, according to the Condition and State of Life of the Deceased, Soldiers, or Churchmen, rich or poor.
 The Mahometans Burying-places are by the high Road, “ to put Travellers in mind, “ says Thevenot, to offer their Prayers to God for the Dead, and obtain his Blessing.
 “ For which Reason, those who build a Bridge, or some other publick Fabrick out “ of Charity, are likewise buried in, or near them. So many large Stones are “ erected in the Churchyards, that a Town might be built with them. After the “ Funeral, the Relations and Friends of the Deceased come several Days suc“ cessively to pray on his Tomb, beseeching God to rescue him from the Torments “ inflicted by the black Angels; and calling the Deceased by his Name, they say to “ him fear not, but answer them bravely On the Friday following, Victuals
 “ and Drink are brought to the Grave, of which whoever goes by, may freely “ partake ^a. ”

The Persian Mahometans have a strange Notion, ^b that the Angel, who presides at the Birth of Children, mixes some Earth with the Matter of which they are made, and introduces it into the Mother's Womb, at the Instant of the Conception; from whence they conclude, that every one must endeavour to die in the same Place, from which the Angel took that Earth. They have a more rational Custom grounded on Principles of Humanity, which is, that whoever meets a Funeral must accompany the Corpse, and even help to carry it, if their Help is wanted.

The said Persians have retained in their Mournings that old Ceremony of tearing their Clothes to testify their Grief; and what is much more commendable, they give Alms during seven Days. But for the Satisfaction of our Readers, we shall present them with an Abstract of the Account, which Chardin gives, of what is practised by the Persians, from the Death of the sick Person to the End of the Mourning for him.

“ At the first Signs of an approaching Death small Lamps are lighted on the “ Terrass or flat Roof of the House; this puts the Neighbours and Passengers in mind
 “ to pray for the sick Person. Molla's or Priests are sent for; they preach Repen“ tance to him, mentioning all the Sins of which he may have been guilty. He “ answers Tubé, that is, I repent, to each Sin mentioned; and when he has lost his “ Speech the Koran is read by his Bed-side, till he gives up the Ghost. This is “ soon notified to the whole Neighbourhood by excessive Out-cries and Lamenta“ tions. The Relations and other Friends rend their Clothes from the Neck to the “ Girdle, tear off their Hair, scratch their Faces, strike their Breasts, and give all
 “ the Signs of Sorrow and Despair; but the Women exceed all Bounds of Mode-

^a This Custom of eating and drinking at Funerals is very antient, and may be as a Token of another Life, and of the Immortality of the Soul. So some Nations have looked upon Birth-days as Subjects of Sorrow, and the Death as joyful Festivals. See Pomton. Mela, Lib. 2. de situ Orbis, Chap. 2.

^b See Thevenot above cited, Chardin, Tomb. 4. Pag. 109. and others.

“ration in their Grief, not without a Mixture of long Complaints, tender and “moving Speeches, addressed to the Deceased.

“The Cazy or Judge is acquainted with the Death : They tell to his Porter
“such an one is Dead ; he answers, May your Head be found ; and goes to the Judge
“to get from him a sealed Piece of Paper, by which he gives Leave to have the “Body washed : The Leave costs nothing, but the Porter who delivers it has some “Perquisite more or less according to the Rank and Abilities of those who desire “it. This Paper is carried to the Mordichour or Body-washer : (Which is “an Office he alone, or those whom he appoints, can perform ; to the End that the “Number of the Dead may be known, and what Distemper carried them off.)
“The said Mordichour sends Men to wash the Corpse of Men, and Women to “wash Women. The Washer takes off the Clothes from the Corpse ; (they are “his Perquisites, for no one can touch a dead Person without being defiled) and car“ries it to the washing Place. There are such Places in every Town, situated in “a retired and covered Part of it. Ispahan, for Instance, being divided into two “Parts, has two Mordichours, and amongst other washing Places there is a very “large one in a back Court of the old Mosque, twenty Steps under Ground.
“This is done only to the Poor, for the Rich are washed at home in a Basin “covered with a Tent, lest any one should see the Corpse : When it is washed, all
“the Openings are stopt up close with Cotton, to keep in the foul Humours “which might defile it.

“This being over, the Body is put into a new Linen Cloth, on which, those “who can afford it, cause some Passages of their holy Books to be written. Some “I have seen which contained the Youchen, a Book concerning the Attributes of “God, to the Number of a thousand and one, which odd Reckoning is to shew
“the infinite Perfections of God, which are not to be comprehended by a thousand “Ideas, more than by one. The Linen about the Corpse of Saroutaky (an “Eunuch Grand Vizier, who was murdered in the Reign of Abas II.) contained
“the whole Koran wrote with holy Earth steeped in Water and Gum. They call “holy Earth that of those Places of Arabia, which the Mahometans look upon as “consecrated by the Bodies of the Saints who died there.

“In this Condition the Corpse is placed in a remote Part of the House, and if “it is to be carried to some distant Burying-place, they put it in a wooden Coffin, “filled with Salt, Lime, and Perfumes, to preserve it. No other Embalming is “used in the East. They do not take out the Bowels, this seems to them un-“cleanly and wicked. Persia being a hot dry Country, the Bodies are soon put in-
“to their Coffins, otherwise it would not be possible to do it, because they swell “immoderately in eight or ten Hours. The Funerals are not accompanied in the “East with much Pomp. A Molla comes with the Coffin of the next Mosque, an “ill contrived, rough, unhew'd and ill jointed Box, made up of three Boards, “with a Cover which turns by a Peg ; the Corpse is put into it, and if the De“ceased was poor, carried off without any farther Ceremony ; the Bearers only “go with it, very fast and almost running, and pronouncing slowly the Words “Alla, Alla, that is, God, God.

“At the Funeral of a Person of Quality, or one who is rich, the Ensigns or Ban“ners of the Mosque are carried before the Corpse : They are long Pikes of different “Sorts, some have at the End a Hand of Brass or Copper, which is called the Hand

“ of Aly ; others a Half-Moon, others the Names of Mahomet, of his Daughters,
 “ and of his twelve first lawful Successors, done in Cyphers ; these last are called “ Tchardé Massoum, that is, the fourteen pure and holy ones. There are still more “ Poles carried, at the Top of which are put some Brads or Iron-plates, three “ Fingers broad, and three or four Feet long, but so thin that the least Motion “ makes them bend ; to them are tied long Slips of Taffety, which hang down “ to the Ground. These Banners are followed by five or six led Horses, with the “ Arms and Turbant of the Deceased : Next to them comes the Sirparé or the “ Koran, divided into thirty Guifve or Parts, wrote in large Characters, each Letter “ being an Inch big : The chief Mosques have such a one ; thirty Talebelme, or “ Students, carry each one Part, and read it, so that the Whole is read over, before the “ Body is put into the Grave. At the Burial of a Woman the Tcharchadour, that is “ a Pall supported on four long Sticks, is placed over the Coffin. This is the greatest “ funeral Pomp which the Friends and Relations cannot exceed, unless by adding “ more of each Sort of Standards, &c.

“ The Neighbours or Servants of the Deceased carry the Corpse, no Bearers being “ appointed to perform that last Duty : But the Mahometan Law teaches its Follow“ ers to lend a Shoulder, and carry the Coffin at least ten Steps. I have seen Per“ sons of Note alight when they met a Funeral, comply with that pious Custom,
 “ and then get on Horseback and proceed in their Journey, They do not bury any “ one in their Mosques, because, though the Corpse is purified, yet whatever it “ touches, or the Place in which it is put, is looked upon as defiled.

“ In small Towns the Burying-places are on the Road-side, without the Gates,
 “ as a moral Instruction to the Living : But in great Towns situate in a dry Air se“ veral Church-yards are to be seen. The Graves are smaller in Persia than in other “ Countries, only two Feet broad, six in Length, and four in Depth : On that “ Side of them, which is towards Mecca they dig a slanting Vault, which is as “ long and broad as the first Grave ; they thrust the Corpse into it without a Coffin,
 “ the Face towards Mecca, and place two Tiles to cover the Head from the Earth,
 “ when the Grave is filled up : If the Deceased was rich or a Warriour, his “ Turbant, Sword, Bow and Quiver full of Arrows are set by him, and the Vault “ is plaistered up with Tiles. The Sakieds, who pretend to be Descendants of “ Mahomet, have no Earth thrown upon them, their Grave is only covered with a “ Stone or Brick, or that sort of hard brown Marble common in Persia.

“ At the End of each Tomb Stones are erected, with a Turbant if it is a Man's “ Grave ; but plain if a Woman's. The said Tomb-stones ought not to exceed the “ Height of four Feet ; commonly they are but two Feet high : The Inscription “ on them, does not declare the Name, or Praises of the Deceased, it only “ contains some Passage of the Koran. The common People begin to visit the “ Grave, at the End of eight or ten Days ; the Women particularly never fail :
 “ The Churchyards are full of them, Morning and Evening, and on some parti“ cular Festivals ; they bring their Children with them, and lament the Loss of “ their Friends with Tears and Cries, beating their Breasts, tearing their Hair, “ scratching their Faces, repeating the several Dialogues, and long Discourses, “ which they heretofore held with the Deceased : Every now and then saying, “ Roub, Roub, Soul, Spirit, whither are you gone ? Why do you not animate this “ Body ? And you Corpse, what occasion had you to die ? Did you want Gold, Silver, “ Clothes

“ Clothes, Pleasures, or tender Treatment? They are comforted, and led away by “ their Friends : Sometimes they leave there Cakes, Fruits, Sweet-meats, as an “ Offering to the Angels, Guardians of the Grave, to engage them to be favour“ able to the Deceased.

“ People of Quality generally order their Corpse to be buried near some great “ Saint of their Sect. They are seldom carried to Mecca or Medina, they being “ at too great a Distance ; but either to Negef, a Town in the Country called “ Kerbela, where Ali the grand Saint of Persia lyes interred, or to Metched, near “ the Grave of Imam Reza, or to Com near Fatimé, both were Descendants of “ Ali, or to Ardevil, near Cheik Sephy, at the Distance of two or three Months “ Journey. Whilst they prepare themselves for this long Voyage, the Coffin is put “ in some great Mosque, where Vaults are made for that Purpose, which are “ walled up, to keep the Body from being seen, and they do not take it out, till “ every Thing is ready to carry it off. The Persians fancy that such Corpse suffer “ no Alteration ; for, say they, before they putrifie, they must give an Account to “ the Angels, who stay at the Grave to examine them : But I have often met “ with dead Corpse which stunk enough to convince them of the Folly of such “ a Notion. The funeral Convoy never goes through a Town, this would be a “ bad Omen, as they think ; the dead must go out, but not come in, is a common “ Saying amongst the Persians.

“ The Mourning lasts forty Days at most ; it does not consist in wearing black “ Clothes, (that Colour is looked upon in the East as the Devil's Colour, and “ a bellish Dress) but as we said before, in loud Cries and Lamentations, in sitting “ without Motion, half clad with a brown Gown or one of a pale Colour ; in fasting “ for eight Days, as if they were resolved to live no longer. Other Friends send or “ come themselves to comfort the Mourners. On the ninth Day the Men go to “ the Bagnio, have their Head and Beard shaved, put on new Clothes, return their “ Visits, and the Mourning ceases abroad ; but at home the Cries are renewed now
“ and then, twice or thrice a Week, chiefly at the Hour of the Death : These “ Cries diminish gradually till the fortieth Day, after which no farther mention is “ made of the Deceased. The Women are not so easily comforted for the “ State of Widowhood is generally for Life in the East.

“ The Motives of Consolation alledged in Persia on the Death of Friends and “ Relations are rational, and grounded on solid Philosophy. They compare this “ Life to a Caravan, or a Company of Travellers ; all come at last to the Cara- “ vanferay or Inn, yet some arrive sooner, some later.”

A

Continuation of the foregoing

DISSERTATION;

O R, A

General Account of the Religious Ceremonies

O F

M A H O M E T I S M.

WE shall insist chiefly on the religious Ceremonies of Mahometism: But before we enter upon the Description of the Clergy of the Mussulmen, we must premise a short Account of the Power of their Monarchs.

The Sultan or Grand Seignior, whom this Print represents, is an absolute Prince, but often exposed to sudden Revolutions by the Soldiery, the Courtiers, and the People, rising in Rebellion against him, deposing, and sometimes putting him to Death. This happens likewise in Persia and Arabia, but much more frequently in Africa; the Mahometans of that Country being the most savage and cruel. The antient Custom, which makes Eastern Nations Slaves to their Princes; Mussulmanism, which submits the Subjects to the arbitrary Power of the Sovereign, may have inspired the Africans with that barbarous Behaviour which they have inherited from their Ancestors: However the Mahometan Princes, the Courtiers, and the People, are by Turns Slaves one to the other; a sad, but common Consequence of Despotism.

“ The Cadies and Turkish Lawyers ^a say, That the Sultan is above the Laws, that he may explain them, or abrogate them as he pleases, that his Word is the Law, and his Interpretation infallible. He often consults the Musti, but meerly for Form Sake, and to content the People.”

The Emperor newly chosen is led with great Solemnity to the Mosque of Ajoub or Toup, who is a Mahometan Saint, and as they say, was a Companion of Mahomet. There Prayers are offered up to God to obtain Strength, Wisdom, &c. with as little Success, as in some Christian Countries: The Musti embraces, and ^a See Ricault, Book 1. Chap. 1.

LE MOULIN de Ch. de la. 2. 2

W. P. Scott sculp. del.

LE GRAND SEIGNEUR en habit de cérémonie le jour de Beïram

B. Picart sculpt. del.

LA SULTANE JASSEK, ou SULTANE REINE

LE CADI-LESKIER, Chef des Loix. Il y en a un d'Europe et un d'Asie.

EMIR Homme de Loy de la Race de Mahomet

PASHA Homme de Loy dans son Etude.

IMAM, Ministre d'une Mosquée.

gives his Blessing to the Sultan, and girds him with a Sword, says Thevenot. The Prince takes an Oath to protect the Religion and Laws of Mahomet; the Viziers and Basha's having first made a low Bow to him, touching the Ground with their Foreheads, kiss the Hem of his Robes, &c. on their Part, this is an outward Ceremony, in which the Heart has seldom any share; and on the Prince's Side, as the Koran^a gives him the Title of the Mouth and Interpreter of the Law, the Wisdom which was begged of God in his Behalf, consists only in following his Passions, which are favoured by the Courtiers for their own Profit, without ever minding the Interest of the People, whom they think born only to be Slaves. Ricault makes some highly judicious Observations^b on the Authority of the Grand Seignior, to which we refer our Readers, who will find in them, that the Mahometan Doctors are not ignorant of the Distinction between the two Swords^c. In civil and temporal Affairs, the Prince is arbitrary, and his Will is his Law, say they, but it is not so in religious and spiritual Concerns in which his Power is confined: But they may, like other Nations, mistake the Power claimed by their Priests, for Religion's Rights; this is best known by reading their History, and being acquainted with their Politicks. Be that as it will, the greatest Lords in Turky value themselves as much upon the Title of Kouli a Slave, as any Englishman can do upon the Denomination of a Freeholder; such are the different Notions of different Countries.

The Mufti^d represented in the Print is the Head of the Turkish Clergy, and of the Doctors of the Civil Law; he is the Interpreter of the Koran, and the Governor of Religion. When consulted about Cases of Conscience, his Answers are always accompanied with this Restriction, God knows what is best; a sure Proof that he neither thinks himself, or is esteemed by others as infallible. Yet Ricault assures us, that the Cadies^e follow punctually his Decisions, by which Law-suits are soon determined without Appeal or Fraud. So far they may act better than some Christians. Tournefort informs us, that the Mufti has three Officers under him, one of which states the Question free from all Circumstances which might render it more intricate; the second Copies it out fair; the third puts the Mufti's Seal to it after he has answered it. The Mufti is wholly dependent on the Sultan, who names him, elects him, does not call an Assembly of Priests to bestow that Dignity upon him, after a long Series of Cabals and Intrigues; neither is the Sovereign afraid of deposing him. There is but one Mufti, who resides at Constantinople, and the three Cadilifquers of Europe, Asia and Egypt administer Justice under him in those respective Provinces, and the Mufties are often chosen out of these Cadilifquers.

Next to them in Dignity are the Molla's or Moula's, that is, Master or Lord in Turky; but the same Word pronounced Muley according to the African Dialect, is the Name of the Sovereigns of those Countries, and signifies King. Bespier in his Remarks on Ricault says, they are called by the Turks Moula-Cadi's, that is, Master-Cadi's, to shew their Superiority over the common Cadi's, who decide Controversies in the Absence of the Moula's. The Descendants of Mahomet are called Emirs^f;

^a See the Koran, Chap. 52. the Princes apply to themselves what Mahomet required of his Followers.

^b Ricault, Book 1. Chap. 2.

^c The spiritual and temporal Sword.

^d An Arabick Word which, they say, signifies a Doctor.

^e Another Arabick Word of the same Import as Judge or Lawyer.

^f This Word, according to Bespier, signifies any Superior, as Emperor, Prince, Captain, &c. but is particularly applied to the Descendants of Mahomet. They are likewise called Cherif, Noble, Said or Seid, Prince. Mor, Mitza, Mir, Words used by the Moguls, Tartarians, and Persians, are Corruptions of the Word Emir.

124 A Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation: &c.

They have great Privileges according to Ricault, and we learn from Bespier, that they are called Children of the Prophet; which Quality, whether they are really such or no^a, intitles them to wear a green Turbant, and no one is to beat them, or offer an Injury to them, under Pain of losing their Hand, which is often eluded by first taking off their Turbant with a shew of great Veneration, after which they may be ill used without incurring any Penalty. The chief Emir has Guards and Officers under him, as may be seen in the Print: He is called Nakib Escoref, which Bespier renders by the Word most eminent, and has Power of Life and Death over the other Emirs^b.

The Alemdar is an Officer of some Distinction amongst the Emirs; he may be called in English Standard-bearer: When the Sultan appears in publick on some solemn Occasion, the Alemdar carries Makomet's green Standard^c. We must not omit mentioning the Effendi^d, the Muefims^e, who call the People to Prayers: Our Bell-ringers and Porters or Beadles, seldom, if ever, rise higher; but the Muefims often become Imams or Parish-priests, who are generally chosen from the Muefims. A good Life, and knowing to read the Koran, are the only Qualifications required to be an Imam. The Muſſulmen of the vacant Parish present to the Vizier the Person whom they think worthy to fill up that Place: The Vizir orders him to read some Verses of the Koran, upon which he is admitted, and becomes a Makometan Priest without any farther Ceremony. They do not pretend to any indelible Character, and may become Laymen and lose their Priestly Office, so sacred amongst Christians, without any Formality.

The Imams say the Prayers aloud at the appointed Time: Every Friday they read some Verses of the Koran; they preach sometimes, but on great Festivals this is performed by the Holgias^f, who are Doctors, Preachers, and Lawyers, for the Makometans do not distinguish, as we do, the Church from the State.

The Persians had likewise heretofore their high Priest called Sedre^g, an Arabick Word^h, which literally signifies the inward Part of the Body and the Breast; but is applied as a Token of his high Dignity, to the Head of their Religion, who was the supreme Judge of all Causes Ecclesiastical in Persia, and even of such civil Causes which had any Connexion with spiritual Concerns. He had the Inspection of all the Churches Revenues, and collated all Benefices and Livings; at last a King of Persia, either upon Account of Abuses, almost unavoidable in the Exercise of so great a Power, or to diminish that exorbitant Authority, made two Sedres. One is named the particular Sedre, and takes the Administration of royal Foundations and Legacies; the other presides over the Church Income given by private Persons, and retains the general Appellation of Sedre, but gives Place to the particular Sedre. Next to them is the Cheik-el-Islam, called by Chardin the elder of the Law, after ^a The chief Emir gives a Pedigree to his Favourites. and this is liable to great Abuses.

^b They are not to be confounded with the grand Emirs of Arabia Deserta, one of whom is mentioned by La Roque (in his Voyage to the grand Emir's Camp) with large Encomiums.

^c This is very different from the other Standards mentioned by Marfigli, which may be seen in the Print, with the Half-moon, left out by other careless or ignorant Engravers. We should have placed amongst them the green Standard, which some say is Pyramidal, but as Travellers vary in their Accounts, we shall only observe, that these three Arabick Words are set upon it, Nazrum Min-Allah, Help from God.

^d Effendi, from the modern Greek Authorities, signifies Master, according to Bespier in his Notes on Ricault. See the Print.

^e Another Arabick Word which, says Bespier, signifies a publick Cryer.

^f See Thlevenst.

^g The Word Sedre is very like Sudra, which denotes the Vestments of the high Priests of the Persian Magi's. See 2d. Vol. on Persian Idolaters.

^h Chardin, Tom. 3. Pag. 397.

A. Petite Enseigne ou guidon de la Cavalerie.
 B. Drapeau des Janissaires.
 C. Etendart de Cavalerie.

D. Drapeau des Canoniers.
 E. Etendart du Grand Visir &c.
 F. La Queue de Cheval.

EMIR Chef des descendants de MAHOMET

le grand EMIR des ARABES du DESERT

|| CRIMINEL gardé en Perse au CARCAN

Especce de DERSIS qui roïage

|| RELIGIEUX de l'ordre des EDHEMITES

whom the Cazy follows, though heretofore he had a superior Rank to him. These two were Dignities belonging to the Church, but they have found Ways and Means to draw all Causes to their Tribunal : In the Main, it is not an easy Matter to give an Account of the Jurisdiction of the various Dignitaries amongst the Mahometans in Turky and Persia, or in the East-Indies : The Will of the Prince is the Rule of the Increase, or Diminution of their Power ; and Chardin himself is not very exact, or clear in the Description he gives of them.

We may easily conclude from what has been said, that the Sovereign is the Head of the Mahometan Church ; the Koran contains both temporal and spiritual Laws, and is the Rule not only of the religious Tenets in which they must all agree to be good Mussulmen ; it is likewise the Standard of their civil Proceedings. The Grand Seignior raises and deposes the Musti, the King of Persia does the same by the Sedres and Cheik-el-Islam : The Emperors of the Indies have an equal Power as to their Cazies ; but what is most conducing to this absolute Authority of Mahometan Princes is, that all Mussulmen are from their Cradle taught to pay a blind Obedience and Resignation to their Will.

The Mahometan Religious Men have a Right to be ranked amongst their Churchmen. We have several Orders of them, so have the Mussulmen, some of which live in Monasteries, others in lonesom Solitudes, to be still more retired from the World, abstaining from sensual Pleasures, free from Passions, and professed Enemies to all Factions. They are generally called Dervises ^a, which Word in the Persian Language signifies literally a poor Man ^b, and raised that Idea in the Mind ; as the Greek Word for a Monk, signified a Man who lived apart, and out of the World, to give himself up to Exercises of Piety. These Dervises are allowed to marry, from which Privilege the Christian Religious are debarred. The Reason alledged by the Mahometans for this Liberty ^c is, that Men are too inconstant to remain long in the same Disposition.

The chief Dervises are those called Mevelavites ^d, who profess Patience, Humility, ^e Moderation, and Charity. They observe an exact Silence before their Superiors, with Eyes cast down, the Head leaning on the Breast, and bending their Bodies. They wear the coarsest Shirts, and the most severe have none, but put next to their Skin, a brown Waistcoat of Woollen-cloth, which reaches below the Calf of their Legs. This Stuff is made at Cugna in Natolia ^f, which is the Residence of their General. They sometimes button this Vestment, but most of them go open breasted to the Girdle made of black Leather ; and to shew their Fidelity to God, or appear more holy than others, they burn their Breast with hot Iron, and like our Religious, practise several Austerities, too long and various to be described. To be sure several Mahometans fancy such an exterior is more likely to obtain the Graces

^a See Herbelot's Biblizth. Orient. at the Word Dervishe. The Arabick Word Fakir has the same Signification, and the Word Sofis amongst the Persians. The Institution of these religious Mahometans is not more ancient than the Kaliff Nasser the Samanide, who lived in the third Age from the Hegira. A Tradition cited in the Rehban, that is, those who fear God, says expressly there is no Monastick Life amongst Mussulmen.

^b Pietro de la Valle, Tom. 1. Edit. in 12ves. of his Travels, says the Word Dervis signifies metaphorically a meek peaceable Man, and of a good Life, such as a religious Man ought to be.

^c See Tournesfort, Letter 14. Another Reason is, that Celibacy is discountenanced in Mahometan Countries, and few Convents allowed.

^d Bespier says Mevelana, signifies all Superiors, chiefly Religious. Tournesfort says they were so called from a Sultan of Cugna, called Mevelava.

^e At least they appear so before their Superiors and Strangers, but Tournesfort says they are not always so modest : They drink much Brandy, and even Wine, often make use of Opium. See likewise Ricault.

^f 'Tis the antient Iconium.

of Heaven, than the most fervent Prayers of other Mussulmen, who are regular in their Lives, and modest in their Dress, without Singularity. But to go on with the Description of these Mahometan Religious; their Shoulders are usually covered with a white Blanket, they go bare legged, cover their Heads with a whitish Cap of Camel's Hair, in the shape of a Sugar-loaf, or somewhat in the Form of a Cupola, at the Top, yet resembling a Turbant, by the Linen lapped about it. The Print you see represents a Prior of a Convent of Dervises, another Dervis who constantly travels under Pretence of preaching the Mahometan Faith, but is in Reality a Spy and Agent to bring about Affairs of various Sorts; two other Dervises differently clad, one of which, according to Ricault, Book 2. Chap. 13. has an oval shining Stone of Marble, Alabaster, or Porphyry, which presses his Lips together, as an Emblem of Silence, Discretion and Prudence: Such was the Heathen God Harpocrates, represented with a Finger on his Mouth.

A farther Account of the Institution of these Mahometan religious Orders, of their Noviceship, their Austerities, their pretended wonderful Operations, to cheat the People, as Mountebanks do, of the Privilege which the Egyptian Dervises claim by Inheritance, of enchanting Serpents and other venomous Insects, &c. may be found in Ricault, in his Commentator Bespier, and in all Travellers before them or since, who are all unanimous in these Particulars, and in most of the remarkable Things in the East.

The said Print contains also a Deli, literally a Fool or Madman: But, as Ricault^a says, the Deli's are rather a Mixture of a Virtuoso and a Bully; of which he gives several Instances; and likewise of their Endeavours to appear the reverse of what is their real Character, not unlike the Hypocrites of all Religions.

The Santons, one of whom is likewise here engraved, are a wretched Sort of Men, as described by Olearius^b under the Denomination of Abdals, that is, according to Bespier, wholly devoted to God. They go bare headed, and with naked Legs, half covered with the Skin of a Bear, or some other wild Beast, without Shirts, having only a leathern Girdle about the Waist, from which hangs a Bag: Some of them have about the Middle of their Bodies a copper Serpent, bestowed upon them by their Doctors, as a Mark of their Learning. Ricault adds to this Representation of Olearius, that they are also called Calenders or Calenderans, but deserve better the Name of Epicureans than of Religious. They are dangerous to any Religion or civil Society, pretending that all Actions are indifferent, which opens a wide Entrance to the greatest Disorders; as does also another of their Opinions, that God is served in Stews and Taverns, as well as in the Mosques, and by Prayer, &c. They carry in their Hands a kind of Club, which they use, as our Mountebanks do their Rods: And indeed they are perfect Quacks and Cheats selling Relicks to Bigots, as the Hair of Mahomet, &c.

Lastly, the above-mentioned Print shews an Edbemite, which is an Order of Hermites in Persia, settled chiefly in the Province of Chorazan: They lead a hard mortified Life, and fancy themselves illuminated; their Imaginations being heated by their Austerities: Such fanatical Dispositions may be found in Northern Climates, as well as in these hotter Regions. However, we see there are in all Countries, Men

^a Book 3. Chap. 10.

^b Tom. 1. of his Voyages, Pag. 971. and following, in the Folio Edit. of Holland.

PRIEUR d'un COUVENT de DERVIS

DELI espèce de BRAVE qui suit le GRAND VIZIR

Diférens habillemens des DERVIS

SANTON autrement CALENDER et ABDAL who retire from the World, some to serve God in the Sincerity of their Hearts, others upon different Motives, often taken Notice of in this Work.

The Mosques have no Steeples nor Bells, as every one knows ; the Muefims supply the Want of Bells or Clocks, calling the People to Prayers, and telling the Hour from the Minarets, turning first to the South, then to the North, so to the East, and lastly to the South. Purification always goes before Prayers. They do not enter into a Mosque till they have pulled off their Shoes ; they reverently bow to the Place where the Koran ^a lyes, devoutly lift up their Eyes towards Heaven, stopping their Ears with their Thumbs, behaving with Modesty and Humility. Their Prayers are directed to God alone, as being the only lovely, the only worthy to be adored, the only Master of our Hearts and Thoughts, the only one who can forgive and shew Mercy to us, &c. They reproach too, and repent themselves of not having paid him all the Veneration due to his Eternal Majesty : The Prayer from which this Extract is borrowed ^b, contains no idle Repetitions, no senseless and dark Expressions (as many Prayers ^c in other Countries) under Pretence of a superior and more refined Spirituality. Mahometism ^d earnestly recommends Prayer, as being the Key of Heaven, if performed with a Mind well disposed, free from Distractions, with Faith, and a competent Knowledge of what we are to ask of God. To this End Mahomet forbids praying ^e when drunk, or in such Circumstances in which sensual Pleasures, though lawful, are apt to overcome, and be an Hindrance to the right performing religious Duties. Moreover Mahomet always joins Alms ^f to Prayer ; but then he recommends so frequently the Cleanliness of the Body, that his Religion becomes Pharisaical.

Besides the use of Beads, (which a Traveller, more knowing in modern History than in Antiquities, pretends ^g the Christians borrowed from Mahometans) the Perfians make use of several other Utensils, in their Devotions : First, They put upon their Shoulders the Habba, which seems to be an Imitation of the Jewish ^h Taleb or Arbananfot : Secondly, The Carpet on which they pray, must be in the Shape of a Mosque's Roof. Thirdly, On this Carpet are placed the Koran, a Comb ⁱ for their Hair and Beard, a Looking-glass, the above-mentioned Beads, some Relicks, such as Pieces of Stuffs and other Things used in publick Processions, or to cover the Tombs of Saints : Lastly, Some of the holy Earth of Mecca, about the Shape and Size of a Plate, some round, some square, &c. stampd with the Names of God, of some Saints, or the Profession of Faith, or some Sentences of the Koran : “ The use of these Plates is to put their Foreheads upon them in those Adorations, “ in which the Head is to touch the Ground ^k.”

We shall now present our Readers with an Account of their Feasts. Friday is kept holy by Mahometans, as the Saturday by the Jews, and Sunday by Christians ; either upon Account of Mahomet's Entry into Medina, or because God ended the

^a Tournefort's Letter 14. above cited.

^b See Tournefort in the same Place, and Chardin, Tom. 4. Chap. 5.

^c See many Prayers of the Mysticks and the late Quietists.

^d See the Koran, Chap. 2. Chap. 5. and Chap. 20. in which Mahomet recommends domestick Prayers.

^e See the Koran, Chap. 4. where he is more rational than many-Casuits.

^f Be constant in Prayer and Alms. Ibid. See Tournefort, ibid. and Ricault, Book 1. on their Charity even to Plants, and to the Dead.

^g ^h Chardin, Pag. 118. see the first Volume of this Work, Part 2. of Jews and Roman Catholics about Beads, Canonical Hours and the Taleb, &c.

ⁱ See in Tournefort the Respect of Mahometans for their Beards.

^k So says Chardin of whom we borrowed these Particulars.

Creation on that Day^a, or rather out of Policy; this being the Day, on which the antient Arabians held their publick and solemn Meetings; Mahomet kept to it: For as Abulpharage^b observes, the real Motive of establishing Festivals was that by publick Assemblies they might be more united, and have some Rest from their Labours. However the Mahometans are very profuse in their Praises on that Day, which they call the chief and most excellent of all Days, on which the last Judgment will happen.

Their Months are twelve, alternately of thirty and twenty-nine Days, in all 354. so their Year is eleven Days shorter than ours, which Inconvenience is, as we said before, remedied by adding a Month at proper Periods; to which we shall add here, that by the most exact Computation the Mahometan Hegira, began July the 16th in the Year of Christ 622. The Names of these Months are, 1. Moharram. 2. Saphar. 3. Rabia the First. 4. a second Rabia. 5. Sjumada the First. 6. a second Sjumada. 7. Resjeb. 8. Siaban. 9. Rhamadan. 10. Sjewal. 11. Dulkadha. 12. Djakassja, or Dulbaggia.

Four of them, viz. Moharram, Resjeb, Dulkadha and Dulbaggia were looked upon as sacred by the antient Arabians. No War, no Hostility, was lawful, if begun, or carried on in these Months, and most of the Arabian Tribes observed this so punctually, that even the Murderer of their Father, or Brother, was not to be punished, or any Violence offered to him, at that Time. Dulbaggia was sanctified by the Pilgrimage of Mecca, Dulkadha as a Preparation to it, and Moharram as coming from it. Resjeb was held still in greater Veneration, being kept as a Fast by the Arabian Idolaters, who on the contrary spent the Month Rhamadan in Debauchery and Drunkenness. Mahomet seems to approve this Institution of the sacred Months in his Koran^c, wherein he blames those Arabians who being tired with living so long without robbing, of their own Authority deferred the Sanctification of Moharram to the Month following. Against these Tricksters he enforces the keeping of the said three Months, except the Case of a War against Infidels.

The first Feast we shall take Notice of, is the Moon, of the Month Sjewal, because the Bairam^d celebrated in that Month has some Affinity with our new Year, by the good Wishes and Congratulations then in Use with the Mahometans. This Bairam follows the Rhamadan Fast, as Easter does that of Lent, and the Mussulmen begin it by a solemn and general Reconciliation, as our Easter is remarkable by the Paschal Communion. The Bairam is published, at the first Sight of the Moon of Sjewal, or if, the Weather being cloudy, the Moon cannot be seen as expected, the Feast begins on the Day following; for in that Case they suppose the Moon is changed^e. The Diversions then used are represented in this Print. Seats are set in the Streets, so contrived, that those who set in them may swing in the Air, being pushed faster or slower; these Seats are adorned with several Festoons. They have also Wheels, on which People are alternately at the Top, Middle, and Bottom; a common Emblem of Fortune, the Changes of which, though so often described ^a See Sale's Notes on Chap. 62. of the Koran.

^b See Abulphar. de moribus Arabum, Pag. 30. and Pecock's Remarks, Pag. 317, and 318. of his Specim. Hist. Arab. where he makes curious Observations on the Friday.

^c See Sale's Preliminary Discourse, Sect. 7. Pag. 147.

^d See the Koran, Chap. 5. and 9.

^e They have two Bairams, one great here described, the other less, seventy Days after it, viz. on the 10th of Dulbaggia. This last is called the Feast of Sacrifices, on Account of the Victims offered during the Pilgrimage of Mecca.

^f See Ricault, Book 2. Chap. 24. See also Thevenot and Tournesfort.

Le BAIRAM ou la Pague des MAHOMETANS

Le CARNIVAL des TURCS

La FÊTE d'JUSSEÏM.

in Prose and Verse, still overtake us when most unexpected. The Night betwixt the 4th and 5th Day of Resjeb is solemnized, on Account of the Rhamadan Fast, though it happens two whole Months After. The Night from the 26th to the 27th of the second Rabia is sacred, because Mahomet went then to Heaven upon the Borak: As that Impostor's Birth has occasioned the keeping holy the Night of the eleventh to the twelfth of Rabia the first. The Rhamadan is according to Travellers a Mixture of Devotion and Debauchery: It begins with a kind of Carnival, represented in this Place, and which Thevenot, an Eye Witness, describes ^a in the following Words. " The 12th of June 1657 was the Turks Carnival or Beginning of their " Fast it is called Laylet el Kouvat, that is, the Night of Power, because the " Mahometans believe that the Koran then came down from Heaven. After Sun- " set, Lamps are lighted in all the Streets, chiefly in that called Bazar, a long " broad, and streight Street, through which the Procession marches Ropes are hung " every ten Steps, to which are tied Iron Hoops and Baskets, holding each several " Lamps, thirty at the least. All these being in a direct Line, furnish a fine " Prospect, and give great Light. Besides these several Figures, and the " Towers or Minarets of the Mosques are likewise illuminated. An infinite Num- " ber of People crowd the Streets, and with the Santons, &c. (who make Part of " the Ceremony) go to the Cadilefquer, who lets them know whether the Ramefan " is to be kept that Evening. Being informed that the Moon has been seen, and " that this is the Night appointed for the Solemnity, about two Hours in the " Night, the Santons on Foot, and armed with Clubs, begin the March, each of " them holds a Taper in his Hand, accompanied with other Men carrying Cresset- " lights. They dance, sing, bawl, and howl, in the midst of them; Scheik-el- " Arfat, that is, the Prince of the Cornuto's rides upon a Mule; as he goes by, the " People make loud Acclamations. After him several Men come upon Camels with " Drums, Kettle-drums, &c. followed by others in Masquerade-dress on Foot, car- " rying Cresset-lights, or long Poles, at the End of which are large iron Hoops " filled with Squibs and Fireworks, thrown amongst the Mob Next to these " the Men of the Beys proceed on Horseback with their Hand-guns, &c. . . . and " the Procession is closed by other Santons who celebrate by their Songs the " Beginning of Ramefan The Whole is composed of Scoundrels met together, " yet is comical and diverting, &c. . . . " Their Fast continues the whole Moon, and whilst it lasts, eating, drinking, even smoaking and putting any Thing into their Mouths, is absolutely forbidden from Sun-rising, to Sun-set; but in Recompence they are allowed, all Night long, to eat and drink, whatever they please, without any Restraint, except Wine. . . . and heretofore the Law punished those who were convicted of drinking Wine, by pouring melted Lead into their Throats.

The Persians have, says Chardin ^b, three Feasts peculiar to themselves, viz. The next Day after their Lent, the Sacrifice of Abraham, and the Martyrdom of the Children of their great Prophet Ali. To these religious Festivals we must add a fourth, which is a civil Ceremony, at the Beginning of the New Year, and usually lasts three Days, but at Court, it is kept eight Days successively. On the first Day of the Month Zilajé, (Dulbaggia) at the Moment of the Sun's entering into Aries, this Festival is proclaimed: It is called the Royal or Imperial New Year, to distinguish it from the real new Year, which the Persians begin on the Day of Mahomet's Flight from Mecca. Chardin gives a full Account of this Feast, to which we refer our Readers ; and shall only take Notice, that having been disused for many Years, it was re-established ^a out of Policy, Superstition, or the interested Views of some Astronomers very powerful at Court, who pretended that the Beginning of a Solar Year was a better Omen than that of a Lunar Year, especially considering that the first ten Days of it and of the Month Moharram, are Days of Mourning in Memory of the Martyrdom of Aly's Children.

^a In his Voyages, &c. Tom. 2. Book 2. Chap. 14. of the Amsterdam Edit. 1727.

^b In his Voyage. &c. Tom. 1. Pag. 239. of the Edit. in 1735.

This last mentioned Solemnity is better known by the Name of Hussain or Hoffein's Feast. He was Son of Aly and of Fatima, Daughter to Mahomet, and was killed in a Battle, which he lost, disputing for the Dignity of Kalif. Hassien his Brother lost his Life with him. The Death of these Mahometan Prophets, or Heroes is still mourned for, as represented in this Print, where some are seen half naked, and dawbed over with Blood, in Memory of their tragical End, others black their Faces and loll out their Tongue, with convulsive Motions of the Body and rolling their Eyes ; because these two Brothers, as the Persian Legend relates, suffered so much by Drought, that they became black, and their Tongues came out of their Mouths : In the Intervals of those pious Contorsions, they call aloud with all their Might, Hussain, Hassien, Hassien, Hussain. These Ceremonies may have been borrowed from the Syrians and Phœnicians, deploring the Loss of Adonis, which ^b was afterwards practised by the Grecians, who were Colonies settled by the Phœnicians, and received from them their Religion, and the Worship of that Libertine.

Thevenot ^c relates other singular Customs, observed on that Feast, which must not be omitted, because they explain the Print. Some bury themselves up to the Neck, and remain a whole Day in that Posture, having their Heads covered with an earthen Pot. Others are no less ridiculous, with Colours flying, Drums beating, all in Armour, to mimic the Battle in which Hussain died. Shrines are likewise carried about, with the Figure of that pretended Saint. At last Rejoicings succeed all this Shew of Grief ; they dance and jump about the Shrines. Such Follies are but too common in Christian Countries on the most solemn Occasions.

Another devout Ceremony observed on that Festival, is the preaching on the Mysteries of the two Brothers Death. “ A Soufi, says Chardin, (a Sort of Bigot who has the Art of spiritualizing Religion to Extasies and Fanaticism) entertains the Company on the Occasion of this Festival, till the Preacher comes, who reads first a Chapter of the Book called Elkatel, or the Murder. This Book is divided into ten Chapters, containing the Life and Death of Hussain, one for each Day of the Solemnity : Then he harangues for two Hours, and omits nothing in his Power to draw Tears from the Audience.” The Women play their Part, beating their Breasts, crying and lamenting, to excite others to imitate their Sorrow. And this is all the Benefit reaped from such outward Marks of a sensible Grief, which seldom works sincere and lasting Conversions, either amongst the Persians, or in other Countries ; such passionate, religious, tender Affections seldom last longer than the Sermon, and then give Place to Passions of another Tendency.

^a The same Chardin, Pag. 240.

^b Thammuz, whom some take to be Adonis, others for Osiris, lamented by the Egyptians. See Selden. Chap. 9. Syntag. 2. de Diis Syris & Beierus in his Additions.

^c In his Voyages, &c. Book 2. Chap. 13. Tom. 3. Edit. of 1727.

CALFALCADE du

Dubouy inv.

La FÊTE du

GRAND SEIGNEUR.

IDS au MOGOL

Ch. Duglas fecit.

Forty Days after this Feast, that of Hoffein's Head is kept, they say it was miraculously re-united to its Body. The Death of Aly is also celebrated with great Solemnity.

Abraham's Sacrifice is one of the chief Mahometan Festivals: The Turks call it Behul Bayram, that is, says Chardin, the great Feast; a Description of it may be seen in that and other Travellers, whom we do not think necessary to copy. We refer our Readers to those Writers, concerning the Feasts of Adam's Death; of the Peace concluded between Mahomet and the Arabians, in the eleventh Year of the Hegira; of the Gift of the Ring, in Memory of Aly's Charity to a poor Man, to whom he gave a Ring of great Value, not to be interrupted in the Fervour of his Devotions, and of other religious and civil Solemnities. But we shall introduce an Account of two Ceremonies worth Notice, both by reason of the Stamps which represent them, and because they regard crowned Heads. The first is a Cavalcade of the Grand Scignior, which Thevenot^a describes in the following Manner. “The Sultan^b being desirous to make the Ambassador of the Mogul, a Witness of his Glory and Riches; resolved to march through the Town with Pomp. I had often seen him, says our Author, particularly on the Day, after the Night dedicated to the Birth of Mahomet. His Doliman was of a Flesh coloured Sattin, and his Vestment of near the same Colour. On his Turbant were two black Tufts of Feathers, adorned with Diamonds, the one streight, the other bending towards the Earth. Many Eunuchs richly mounted went before and behind him, two Equeries on Foot were near his Stirrups, the great on his Left, the other on his Right. He was followed by two Pages, one on the Right-side, carrying his Sword, Bow^c and Quiver, the other on the Left-side, carrying his Turbant^d. Next came the Kilar Agasi, and the Capi Agasi^e, and after them two other Pages, carrying each a Silver Pot, one full of Water^f, the other full of Sorbet, and some Pages more on Horseback, followed by the Peiks^h and *Boftangis*ⁱ on Foot. The Janizaries were ranged along the Street. The Grand Scignior having performed his Devotions in the Mosque, put on another Vest mounted a fine Horse, (the Housing was embroidered with Gold, the Bridle Gold, set with precious Stones) and returned to the Seraglio, followed by a hundred Horsemen richly equipped, besides several Eunuchs, and the same Officers as when he went. Thus I have often seen him, and when he appeared in publick, he was accompanied only by the Servants of his Seraglio. But this his Calvacade in favour of the Mogul's Ambassador, was the most magnificent, of any made on such Occasions. The whole Road from the Seraglio to Sultan Mahomet's Mosque, to which his Highness intended to go, was covered with Gravel: This is done on every solemn going abroad, and every Inhabitant takes care to put Gravel before his own House, so that in the Middle of the Street, a thick even Gravel Walk

^a See his Voyages, &c. Book 1. Chap. 57. Tom. 1. Edit. of 1727. He was an Eye-witness: All the magnificent Cavalcades are the same, as for Instance, when he has been installed by the Mufti.

^b Mahomet IV.

^c Selictar or Silendar-Aga, literally Keeper of the Sword in a red Scabbard.

^d Dulbunder-Aga, Keeper of the Turbant.

^e Chief Butler. But Kizlar-Agazi, says Bespier, is the Keeper of the Maids; Kiz signifies a Girl, Kizler Girls.

^f Capi, Capa, or Capou Agazi, is the Master of the Gates.

^h Ebrictar, or as Bespier says, Ibrick-dar-Aga carries the Water to drink, or for Ablutions. The Ischiouptar or Cubdar or Kuptar-Aga, carries the Sorbet.

ⁱ The Peiks are Footmen, says Thevenot, but Ricault says they are Pages, sixty in Number, who serve as Footmen: See Bespier's Note.

^j The Boftangis are Gardiners.

132 A Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation, &c.

“ three or four Foot wide, is made ready for the Grand Seignior and all his Court :
 “ The Janizaries lined each Side of this Walk. The grand Sous-Bachi ^a with the “ general Commiffary by him, and several Janizaries following him, led the Van.
 “ The Keeper of the Grand Seignior’s Dogs and Cranes, well mounted, came next,
 “ and after them the Janizaries with their ^b Tchorbadgis on good Horses, and wear“ ing their Silver-gilt Caps, and Feathers at the Top: In the Rear of these, the “ Janizary ^c Agafi, riding an excellent Horse, and preceeded by thirty-two Tcho- “ badgis on Foot, took his Place. The Spabis ^d with their six Captains-Colonels ;
 “ the Tchiaoux of the Guard ^e being above fifty, all well mounted, with their “ Swords by their Sides, and their Clubs in their Right-hand ; and the Mutefaraca’s ^f “ on Horseback and in good Order appeared next ; and were followed by the Of“ ficers who carry the Grand Seignior’s Dishes, when he eats out of the Seraglio, “ By the Visiers and the Caymakan, or Grand Visier’s Lieutenant, there being no “ Grand Visier at that Time : By the Peiks on Foot with their Silver-gilt Caps of “ Ceremony, shaped like Jewish Caps : By the chief Peik on Horseback : By the “ Grand Seignior’s Portmantua-bearer, on Horseback likewise, with Changes of “ Clothes for his Highness. Then eleven Spabis well mounted, led each of them
 “ a Saddle Horse, finely harnessed, with Silver, or Silver-gilt Stirrups, and a great “ lump of gilt Silver, on the Right-side of the Saddle-bow, and on the Left a broad “ Knife, somewhat longer than half the Arm : The whole set with a Multitude “ of precious Stones. Above five hundred Solaks ^g came next, on Foot ; their Deli- “ man was tucked up to the Girdle, with hanging Sleeves behind ; their Caps with “ spread Feathers like the Tchorbadgis, having a Bow in their Hand, and a Quiver “ full of Arrows behind their Backs. In the midst of these, the Grand Seignior “ rode on an exceeding beautiful Horse, all covered with innumerable Jewels.
 “ His Vest was of Crimson Velvet, on his Turbant were two Tufts of black “ Feathers, adorned with large Diamonds, to the Height of two Fingers, and more.
 “ One Tuft went streight up, the other bending downwards. On his Right-side “ walked his grand Equery, and the lesser on his Left. His Right-hand was on “ his Breast, and he bowed on both Sides to the Crowds of Spectators, who in a low
 “ and respectful tone of Voice, wished him all Happiness. His Highness was im“ mediately followed by the Selibhtar-Aga on Horseback, carrying the Sword, Bow “ and Quiver of the Sultan. On his left rode the Master of the Wardrobe, hold“ ing in his Hand one of the Grand Seignior’s Turbants. The Cavalcade was “ closed by the Kislar-Agafi, the Capi-Agafi ; two Pages carrying each a Silver-pot “ full of Water, to give his Highness the Abdest, or to drink if he happened to be “ dry ; and by a great Number of Servants of the Seraglio all well mounted. Prayers “ being ended, the Grand Seignior went back to his Palace in the same Order, “ having only changed his Vest for a Sattin one of a deep red Colour.

^a Or Su-Bachi the High-Provost of Constantinople. See Bespier’s Notes on Ricault, Tom. 2. Pag. 709.

^b Captains of the Janizaries. See Ricault.

The General of the Janizaries.

^d This Word is spelt Sefahi, according to Bespier, and is pronounced Spahi, it signifies a Soldier or a Horseman, the Spabis are Cavalry.

^e Bespier is of Opinion that the Tchiaoux or Chiaoux are Life-guard Horsemen : But Ricault says they do the Office of Tipstuffs or Serjeants.

^f Or Mutefaraca’s. They are Spabis of a superiour Rank. See Ricault and Bespier.

^g The Solaks are Janizaries who carry the Bow and Quiver on their Shoulders ; they often carry the Bow and Arrows in their Hands.

SELICTAR AGA

L'IBRIE-DAR AGA

SOLAK

PEIKOU VALET de pied

F. M. La Caze Sculp.

The second Ceremony represented in the Print, is the Manner of weighing of the Great Mogul on his Birth-day. Thevenot says this Feast is like the Turkish Zinebz or publick Rejoicings made, when a Prince is born in the Seraglio, at Constantinople, Grand Cairo, Aleppo, and all the great Cities of that Empire. At Aleppo^a, all the trading Corporations honour these Feasts by a solemn Procession. The Birth of the Great Mogul^b is kept five Days, and all that Time the Palace and the Avenues of it are adorned as in the Print. The first Mogul Kings began the Custom of being weighed at that Time; and Bernier^c says they added to it another Ceremony, no ways pleasing to the Omrahs^d, “ which is, that on this Occasion they are civilly “ obliged to make Presents to the King, in Proportion to their Salaries and “ some of these Omrahs bleed very freely.” This is the Fashion in the East, in order to prevent much worse Consequences, if they did not refund Part of their Profits in due Time. With us the Name of a Gift seems too low, and shews too great an Equality; the Kings therefore in a more polite Way Hush! Fear God, and Honour the King.

“ The Balance^e in which the Monarch is weighed, is exceeding rich, the “ Beam, the Chains, the Scales are Gold set with Jewels The King magni- “ ficently attired and loaded with precious Stones, sits upon his Heels, or stands in “ one of the Scales: In the other are placed Bales of Goods^f so well packed “ up, that none can see what is in them” They publickly declare how much “ the King weighs, and it is registered, as a Thing of great Moment to the “ State When it appears by the Register, that he weighs more than the “ foregoing Year, the People give all possible Demonstrations of Joy, by re- “ peated Acclamations, Bonfires, &c. No Doubt this will appear very absurd “ to us Europeans; but we must own at the same Time, that if an Indian was to “ give an Account of our Ceremonies and Customs, many of them would be judged “ by him, and not without Foundation, to be as extravagant, as what we reproach “ them with.”

We shall conclude our Description of Mahometan Festivals, with an Account of some Superstitions practised by the common People. The Indian Mussulmen have a Feast called Choubret by Thevenot, which begins with Fear and Sorrow, and ends in Hope and Joy. On this Day they commemorate the Examination of the Souls departed, by the good Angels, who write down all the good Actions they have done in this Life, whilst the bad Angels write all the bad ones. This they believe is perused by God, and for that Reason are afraid, and say a few Prayers, examine themselves, and give Alms, &c. But flattering themselves that their Accounts will be cleared and wrote down in the Book of Life, they end the Solemnity with Illuminations, and Bonfires, treating and making Presents to one another.

Besides the Pilgrimage to Mecca, before-mentioned at large, the Mahometans have several others to the Tombs of their Saints, and those Saints have each of them a proper Legend. Now all these Pilgrims are held in Veneration, more or less, as the

^a See a Description of those Feasts in Thevenot, Tom. 3. Book 1. of the second Part, Chap. 8: He explains the Word Zinebz, by Feast or publick Rejoicing.

^b See the same Author, Tom. 5. Book 1. of the third Part. Chap. 26.

^c See Bernier in the second Tom. of his Voyage to the Mogul's Country.

^d Mogul Lords. Omrah is in Arabick the Plural Number of Emir, which signifies a Commander, first Officer or Prince. But Thevenot, in the Preface to the third Part of his Voyages, informs us, 'tis used in the Singular by the Moguls.

^e See Thevenot as above.

^f Bernier says they are Weights which seem to be massy Gold.

134 A Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation, &c.

People stand affected, in regard of such Devotions. But nothing comes up to the Respect paid to the Pilgrims of Mecca: They are absolved from all Sorts of Crimes committed before; they even have Leave to commit new ones: For says our Author, “^a They cannot be put to Death according to Law, they are looked upon “ as incorruptible, irreproachable, and perfect Saints in this World.” Such fanatical Opinions are not confined to Mahometans, we have seen Examples of them in the last Ages amongst pretended Christians; and there are Means^b of leading the People, and keeping them in those Dispositions. Some of these Pilgrims, as we are told, wilfully put out their Eyes, lest they should be prophaned by worldly Objects, after the glorious Sight of the holy Places at Mecca. Even the Children born in that devout Voyage are reputed Saints; and ’tis looked upon as so meritorious to contribute to stock the World with such Elect, that the Women are generally willing, and charitably offer themselves to the Pilgrims, to be their Help-mates in that good Dued.

We shall give our Readers some Notion of Mahometan Saints, and of the Honour paid to them, by the Example of Ali the first Martyr for the Perſian Faith. They paint him^c with a two pointed Scymitar, and the Face covered with a green Vail, whereas other Saints have a white one: Our Author does not give any Reason for this Difference, he only says the white Vail is to shew, that the glorious and wonderful Features of a Saint’s Face, are not to be conceived, or painted. This Vail has some Affinity to the Rays of Glory about the Heads of our Saints, and still more to the Nimbus, or Cloud which covered the Heads of the antient Heathen Gods. A chief Article of the Perſian’s Belief is, that Ali is the Vicar^d of God. Some of their Doctors have even raised him above the Condition of human Nature, and by their indifere^t Devotion given a Sanction to this common Saying: I do not believe that Ali is God, but I do not think he is far from being God. We shall make no odious Comparisons; such mad Expressions^e are deservedly censured by all judicious and truly devout Persons, who have a right Idea of the supreme Being.

Besides Ali, there are many other Saints contemporary with, or who lived after him; some of these are in Veneration with all Mahometans, others only with the Turks or Perſians, or Indians or Arabians. Miracles are said to have been wrought by them, and Legends composed of their Lives for the Edification of Mussulmen, who visit their Tombs, and perform their Devotions there, yet says Chardin^f without any direct Invocation; yet he owns at last, that they venerate and call upon the Saints, because ’tis the Will of God it should be done.

^a Tournefort Letter 14. other Travellers said the same before him.

^b One of them is to lead the People blindfold, by neglecting Arts and Sciences, or destroying Books, as amongst the Mahometans; nay the last has been done by others. Cardinal Ximenes burnt five or six thousand of Arabick Books. See Arnobius in his third Book, concerning the Works of Cicero, De natura Deorum. This is often privately done to this Day by Bigots, who burn the Books they dislike, &c.

^c Chardin in his Voyages, &c. Tom. 2. Pag. 28.

^d Chardin, Tom. 4. insinuates that these three Words, Calif, Waly, and Wely, differ only in the Pronunciations. Bespier on Ricault says the Word Chalifah, or, as the Turks say, Kalfa, is a Title belonging to the Grand Seigneur, and signifies a Successor or Vicar. Platina makes a Man, and Garassè a Kingdom of that Word. See also Herbelot in the Article Khalifat, at the Beginning.

^e See Chardin, Tom. 4. Pag. 44. And Herbelot on the Word Ali. Some of his Disciples say he is still alive, will come in the Clouds at the End of the World, and fill the Earth with Justice, that he has appeared to several, &c.

^f He is a Man of Sense, but his Remarks are not always exact, and his Way of reasoning confused and not very conclusive. Being a Protestant, and willing to excuse the Honour paid by Mahometans to their Saints, at the Expense of the Roman Catholics, he contradicts himself, as in this Place.

A Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation, &c. 135

The Disciples and Followers of Aly esteem the Pilgrimage to the Tomb of Fathmâ or Fatimé ^a as little inferior to that of Mecca. She was the Daughter of Mouza-Calem, the seventh Schismatical Successor of Mahomet, in the Opinion of the Turks, without entering into an Account of her pretended Miracles, or of the Devotion shewed in this Pilgrimage; we shall only take Notice, that one of the Preliminaries of this Ceremony is to kiss thrice the Threshold and Silver Grate of the Monument. A Molla attends there Day and Night, and directs the Pilgrims to repeat Word for Word some Prayers, in which she is called the Lady and Mistress of the Soul and Heart of the Faithful, the Guide of Truth, a Spotless Virgin, &c. The Tomb is enlighthned with a great Number of Silver Lamps, the devout Mussulmen make their Offerings in Silver or other Things, which are deposited in a Trunk, and taken out from thence every Friday, to be distributed amongst the Molla's; and the Whole ends in a Gratification to the Priest, who introduced the Pilgrim; and for the further Sum of half a Pistole, obtains an authentick Attestation of his having performed that Devotion, &c.

The whole Koran is read at the Tombs of the Saints, and of the dignified Mahometans, and Molla's are hired to comply with this Duty Day and Night. Something like it is done in other Countries, but Comparisons are odious, and often carried too far. We shall set before our Readers other Practices which Christians of all Denominations will censure as superstitious.

Besides the exact Account kept of the Number of Letters in the Koran, no one is allowed to touch it, without being purified; and for this Reason, says Chardin ^b, when Persons, of a different Religion, are to be sworn before Judges, it is not done upon that Book, in which the Persians find seventy thousand Miracles; that is, as many as they reckon Words in it.

They have also a great Notion of Astrology, Charms, Amulets, Talismans, &c. making use to that Purpose of the Verses of the Koran, and of the Hadiths ^c. This will not seem strange to those, who know that the Mahometan Doctors believe the Koran to be a Treasure of Mysteries hidden from Men; and that it contains innumerable Secrets, which are to be found out, only by the different Combinations of the Words and Letters of that precious Book. Yet some more scrupulous, maintain those Mysteries and Secrets are not to be pried into; that the Subtilties of the Commentators are criminal; and that, at the coming of the last Imam, (by this Expression they mean the Last Day) all their Works will be condemned to be burnt (or thrown into Water) to shew those Authors did not understand this Book. Several ancient and modern Comments on the Bible deserve the same Fate.

Their Superstition about Eclipses is not so common as heretofore, yet that Phænomenon still affects the common People, chiefly when accompanied, or followed, by particular Events. This is grounded on the Opinion of the Persian Doctors, who, as Chardin ^d informs us, hold that the Privation of that Light is a Punishment inflicted by Almighty God, who gives that Commission to the Angel Gabriel. However that Superstition is very much spread in the East: They believe likewise that ^a This Monument is at Coons, in one of the most famous Mosques in the East. See Chardin in the first Vol. of his Voyages, and Bespier on Ricault towards the End of the first Tom.

^b Chardin above cited, Tom. 3. Pag. 411.

^c Chardin spells this Word Hadi, not Hadith; it signifies a Narration or Legendary Tradition. See Herbelot on that Word.

^d Tom. 4. Pag. 120.

136 A Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation: &c.

what we call the shootings of Stars, are so many Darts^a thrown by Angels against the Devils, who are at that Time endeavouring to get back into Heaven, from which they have been expelled.

It is likewise asserted that the Turks, Persians, and Mabometans of the Indies, use Blessings and other Prayers, and superstitious Ceremonies, to protect their Houses from the Assaults of evil Spirits. The Author of the Military State of the Ottoman Empire^b said he had seen Talismans and superstitious Billets, used in order to preserve the Grand Visier's Tent.

They are also, as already hinted, superstitiously charitable to Beasts. Ricault says, “ that they buy Birds shut up in Cages, in order to set them at Liberty “ that they buy Bread to feed Dogs who have no Masters and think it a less “ Crime to refuse giving Alms to a starving Christian, than to a Dog wandering “ about the Streets ” A cruel and inhuman Tenet, yet the too common Effect of Party Spirit! We are also assured, that they have a kind of religious Veneration for Camels, and look upon it as a Crime to over burden them. “ They are thus “ respected, says the same Author, because they are very common in the holy Places “ of Arabia, and carry the Koran at the Pilgrimage of Mecca. I have even taken “ Notice, says he, that those, who take care of that Beast, use the Froth, which “ comes out of its Mouth after drinking, and devoutly rub their Beards with “ it, saying at the same Time, Hadgi-baba, O Father Pilgrim. ” The Usefulness of the Cows has made the Indians worship them; the same Reason has influenced Mabomet to propose the Camel as an Emblem of God's Wisdom^c. Solomon in his Proverbs sends us to an Ant to learn Wisdom. After all, this general Charity of Mabometans for Beasts may proceed from the Opinion of the Transmigration of Souls, from Beast to Man, and from Man to Beast, which was universally spread through the East, and is described by the Poet in these Verses.

..... errat, & illinc
 Huc venit, hinc illuc, & quos libet occupat artus
 Spiritus, eque feris humana in corpora transit,
 Inque feras nostras, neque tempore deperit ullo, &c.

^a See Herbelot at the Word Ildiz, which is the Name of those Stars.

^b Count Marfigli said it to Monsieur Picart, and had promised him a Model of one of these Talismans, and to tell him in what Part of the Tent they were placed.

^c Koran, Chap. 8.

la Tente du grand VIZIR

A. Endroit où étoit attaché un billet superstitieux au dessus de la fenêtre.
 1. la Tente du Divan où se donne l'audience.
 2. Tente de retraite pour le grand Vizir.

B. Talisman.
 3. autre Tente de retraite.
 4. Retranchement pour certains besoins.

A DISSERTATION;
 ON THE Various SECTS
 OF MAHOMETISM.

THE Mussulmen have two Sorts of Theology, the one Scholastical and Metaphysical, called Al-Kelam ^a, that is, the Knowledge of the Word : The other is Practical, strictly connected with the Civil Laws of the State. The first is employed to treat of speculative Points, such as God's Attributes, their Nature, &c. It likewise is an Armoury of Subtilties about Religion, in order to maintain it by the abstracted Notions and Terms used in that Method of Disputing : But it is much fallen of late from its former Credit. Neither was it much valued in the Infancy ^b of Mahometism, till an Arabian ^c began to teach that any Doctor who should neglect the Koran or the Sonna ^d, to apply himself to scholastick Divinity, or Disputes of Controversy, deserved to be impaled, and thus carried about the Town as a Sight and Terror to others.

This scholastick Theology is confined to four Heads ^e. The first concerns the Nature and Attributes of God. The second treats of Predestination and the Will of Man, &c. The third contains the Questions about Faith and its Efficacy, Repentance, &c. The fourth enquires into the Credit of History and Reason, in religious Belief, the Office and Mission of Prophets, the Duty of the Imams, the Beauty of moral Virtue, Turpitude of Vice, &c.

The various Disputes on those Subjects have given Rise to several Sects and Parties, viz. 1°. The Ascharians ^f, Disciples of Aschari, who died in the Beginning of the fourth Century of the Hegira. They hold that God acts only by general Laws, and upon this they ground the Liberty of Man, and his Merit by good

^a See Pocock's Specim. &c. and Herbelot in the Article Al-Kelam.

^b See the same Pocock in the Notes, Pag. 195. Cum oriri Sectæ . . . coeperunt invecta fuit, &c. The same happened amongst some Christians.

^c Al-Schafey who lived in the second Century of the Hegira. See Pocock. Pag. 197. and Herbelot Bibl. Orient. on the Article Al-Schafey.

^d That is Tradition or the Oral Law.

^e See the 8th Sect. of Sale's Prelimin. Discourse on the Koran.

^f See Herbelot's Biblioth. Orient. &c. at the Article Ascharians.

Works: Yet being the Creator, he must concur to all the Actions of Men. “ Our Actions, say they, are really and effectually produced by the Creator, but the Application of them to obey, or disobey the Law, comes from us.” 2°. The Keramians and Mogiaffenians, Followers of Mahomet Ben-Keram, are stiff Maintainers of the Corporality ^a of God: But they were divided as to their Notion of it. 3°. The Motazales or Motazalites own for their Leader one Vassel-Ben-Altha, and believe that the Attributes of God are not distinguished from his Essence; that the Word of God (that is the Koran) is created; that Mussulmen guilty of great Crimes do not lose their Faith, yet, say they, the Name of Faithful must not be given to them, because in Reality Faith cannot subsist without good Works. They boast of being the Defenders of the Justice and Unity of God. 4°. The Cadbarians who give up wholly to Man’s Free-will all his Actions. 5°. The Nadhamians, who to soften the Opinion of their Master Nadham, that the Power of God is not to be restrained, but that he may do Evil, add to it, that he never does Evil by reason of the Imperfection and Shamefulness inseparable from it. 6°. The Giabarians, (a Branch of the much divided Motazales) deprive Man totally of his Free-will, and pretend that God is the Author and Creator of all his good and bad Actions. 7°. The Morgians ^b, whose Name may be translated the hoping Men, because they are in hopes that Faith alone will save them, from whence it is concluded that God is to do all for them, that Sin cannot hurt a Believer, and good Works are useless.

All the Mahometan Sects are either looked upon as Orthodox, or as Hereticks: These Words are equivocal in the East, as much as in the West: However those, who are reputed truly Orthodox, assume the Name of Sonnits or Traditionary. The Sonna is a kind of Supplement to the Koran; as the Mischna amongst the Jews, is to the Books of the Old Testament. Mischna and Sonna literally signify a Reiteration, and from thence, in a larger Sense, are understood as a second Law. The Sonnites are divided into four Parties, differing only in Matters of small Importance, ^c for which Reason, they are all esteemed to be in a State of Grace, and have each of them a Place in the Temple of Mecca, as being faithful Disciples of Mahomet.

These four Sects are, 1. the Hannifians ^d, their Leader Abou-Hanifa lived in the second Century of the Hegira. His Doctrine is followed by the Turks, Tartars, and the Mahometans of ^e Jerak. 2. The Malekians, from Malek-Ben-Ans, that is, Malek Son of Ans: He was contemporary with Hanifa, and the Mores of Africa are of that Sect. 3. The Schafeits, from one Schafei, who died in the Beginning of the third Century from the Hegira: The Arabians are his Disciples. 4. The Hanbalians; their Master Hanbal ^f died towards the Middle of the second Century from the Hegira. They were formerly very numerous, but are now reduced to a few Arabians.

The heretical Sects are those which err in Faith, or in the fundamental Articles of it. This is still ambiguous, for if those Hereticks had proved the most powerful, to be sure, they would have assumed the Name of Orthodox. Be that as it will, it is certain, that a too nice and subtle Enquiry into the Contents of the Koran, is the

^a ’Tis the Word used by Herbelst.

^b See the same Author at the Article Morgians.

^c Sale Sect. 8. Ricault Tom. 2. Book 2. Chap. 11.

^d Herbelst Bibl. Orient. in the Article Abou-Hanifasty.

^e That is Chaldea: There is another Jerak in Persia.

^f Herbelst in the Article Hanbal, has many curious Observations.

prime Cause of this variety of Sects, of which the Mahometans seem to be proud^a; for having divided the Magi into seventy Parties, the Jews into seventy-one, the Christians into seventy-two, they reckon seventy-three of their own, and cite a Prophecy^b of Mahomet, importing that seventy-three Divisions of his Followers should perish by Fire, and his own only saved.

'Tis useless, and would be endless, to give a distinct Account of all the various Opinions of those Sects: But we must take Notice, that they had their Rise from the Separation made by Vassel-Ben-Altha, which happened on this Occasion. A Question was proposed in the School of one Hasan or Hassan of Basra; Whether a Man guilty of enormous Crimes is to be judged and condemned as an Infidel? Some held the Affirmative, some the Negative: But Vassel without waiting for his Master's Decision, left the Assembly, his Opinion being that such a Man is in a middle State, not an Infidel, because he had Faith, nor yet a Believer, because he did not act accordingly. Hassan then said^c, Vassel has separated himself from us, upon which he and his Followers were nicknamed Motazales, that is, separated. We have already mentioned these Motazales, and the various Sects derived from them, and from the other three chief Parties amongst Mahometans, which may likewise be seen in Sale, Herbelot, Ricault, Pocock, and Maracci. Therefore now we shall entertain our Readers with a short Account of some Men, who aimed at becoming Heads of Parties by the same Methods which Mahomet had followed. Two Arabians opposed him, viz. Mosseilama and Al-Afvad, surnamed by Mussulmen, The two Liars. The first endeavoured to persuade his Countrymen, that God had joined him with Mahomet in the prophetical Mission. He published his Revelations to imitate the Koran, and finding himself at the Head of a strong Party, he wrote to Mahomet in these Terms. "Mosseilama the Apostle of God, to Mahomet the Apostle of God. " Let one half of the World be mine, and the other yours." He died in a Battle^d sometime after Mahomet, and his Sect vanished. Al-Afvad or Aihala followed this Example, he pretended that two Angels appeared to him: His Eloquence, and some brave Actions drew great Crowds after him, but he maintained his Post only four Months, and was killed a few Hours before Mahomet. These two were succeeded by another Prophet^e and a Prophetess. This last mentioned had a Design of marrying Mosseilama^f to raise her Credit, and they had an Interview, not unlike the Communications of the Mysticks of our Days, carnally spiritual.

Hakem-Ben-Hajchem made his Appearance in the Middle of the second Century from the Hegira. Being very ugly, he wore a Vail or Mask, but his Followers pretended this was done by him in Imitation of Moses, lest he should dazzle his Hearers. His Tricks of Legerdemain made him be looked upon as a Magician, and he was at the Head of a powerful Party: Even some Christians followed him.^g He maintained that God did take a human Form, after he had ordered the Angels to adore Adam; that he appeared in the Shape of several Prophets and other great Men, Princes, Kings, &c. This Impostor failed in his Attempt as the others had ^a See Sale in the Place above cited.

^b This Prophecy is in Pocock's Work above-mentioned, Pag. 210.

^c See Herbelot on the Words Vassel, Motazala, &c. Sale Sect. 8. Ricault Book 2. Chap. 11. he mistakes and says Vassel was Hassan's Master, Bespier does not correct it.

^d See Herbelot on Mosseilama.

^e See Sale, Sect. 8. Pag. 181.

^f See what we have related of Betty Gray Lacy, the Labadists and other Fanatics.

^g See Herbelot on the Article Hakem.

done, but in order to persuade his Disciples that he was not dead, but only withdrawn to go to bring them some Help : When he found himself over-powered, and reduced to the last Streights by his Enemies, he flung himself head-long into a large Cystern, full of Aqua Fortis, wherein his whole Body was consumed, except his Hair, which floated on the Surface : This seems a plain Imitation of Empedocles : But as Virtue and Wisdom produce the same Effects in all Ages, Folly and Fanaticism have the like Privilege. He had so fully convinced his Followers of his coming back to them by Transmigration, in the Shape of an old Man mounted on a gray Horse, who should conquer the whole World, and make them embrace his Religion ; that we need not wonder, if, as some Authors pretend, Hakem's Sect lasted above five hundred Years after his Death.

One Babek became also the Head of a Party at the Beginning of the said second Century. “ He made an open Profession of Impiety ^a, embraced no Religion or “ Sect then known in Asia : ” But as he was called the Founder of the merry Religion ^b, it is highly probable his Religion was only a gross and sensual Epicurism.

Sometime after Babek, Mahmoud-ben-faray, pretended to be Moses risen again : This Fanaticism was not of a long Duration ; but a Man named Carmath attacked Mahometism, in a more refined and wily Manner. He gained some Reputation by an austere Life, a continual Application to Prayer, enjoining his Disciples to pray fifty Times every Day, whereas Mussulmanism required that Duty to be performed only five Times ; the Carmathians, like some other Men, addicted to Contemplation, disdained the ordinary Occupations of Life, and minded nothing but their Prayers : Such a devout Behaviour, procured him many Profelytes, ^c and in Hopes to spread his Doctrine, he chose twelve of his chief Disciples, whom he called Apostles, and to whom he gave the Government and Direction of his new Religion : But the Governor of the Province in which Carmath dogmatized, clapt into Prison that Impostor and Hypocrite, who only debauched the common People from their Work, to draw them after him : A young Girl, who espoused his Cause, brought about his Deliverance, which, howsoever it happened, was looked upon as miraculous by his Party, and they published that he was taken up to Heaven : Yet in a short Time, he appeared publickly in another Province, and was so far intoxicated with his Success, that he bragged no Man could hurt him. After all, his Courage failed, he fled into Syria, and was not heard of any more ; however his Sect still subsisted, and his Followers preached up and down that he was a new Prophet sent into the World to publish a new Law to Mankind, in order to suppress the legal Ceremonies of Mahometism, and reform the Method of Prayer established amongst Mussulmen. Thus Error often finds Abettors and specious Pretences to support it!

Carmath introduced amongst his Followers a new Form of Fasting : He enjoined a profound Silence, and inviolable Secrecy concerning his new Religion, in the Presence of those who were not initiated into it ; he allowed the use of Wine, and dispensed his Disciples from several Precepts of the Koran, which he said were only allegorical. Prayer was a Type of the Obedience due to the Imam, ^d Fast was a

^a These are Herbelot's Words in the Article Babek.

^b This is said to be the Meaning of the Word Horremi or Ghorremy, as the Hebrew Heth is pronounced.

^c See Sale, Sect. 8. Pag. 184, and 185.

^d So they called their Master the Head of the Sect.

Figure of the Silence and Secrecy so earnestly recommended by him. Even Fornication ^a and Adultery were, as he pretended, allegorically forbidden, as Emblems of those who either revealed the Secrets of the Sect, or did not blindly obey the Commands of their spiritual and temporal Governor; for their Imam enjoyed those two Dignities: This spiritual Notion of Adultery and Fornication seems to have been borrowed from several Passages of the Scripture. As to the Submission paid by those Sectaries to their Leader, it was exactly the same as that of the Assassins ^b so well known by the History of the Holy Wars called Crusades: And it seems evident that Ismaelians ^c Bathenians ^d Drusians and the said Assassins and Carmathians, were either the same fanatical Sect under different Appellations, or that all of them came originally from the same Stock. For it has been observed ^e that the Ismaelians have been also called Carmathians, and the Carmathians named Bathenians.

An Enthusiastick Poet, who lived at the Beginning of the third Century of the Hegira, (his Name was Motanabi) endeavoured likewise to raise a Sect of his own ^f, made some Progress at first in his Undertaking; but being taken and forced to retract his chimerical Opinions, a Stop was put to it.

Lastly, Baba, in the seventh Century from the Hegira, set up for a Prophet in Turkey, where he was born, and had many Followers: He, and his chief and only Minister Ifac, preached Sword in Hand, both to Christians and Mahometans, this short Profession of Faith, there is but one God, and Baba is his Apostle. We hear no more of him, and he met with the same Fate as his Predecessors.

Modern SECTS of MAHOMETISM.

We have before spoken of the Division of Mahometans into Sunnites and Schiites; the mutual Hatred and want of Toleration of those two Parties might be compared to what happens in other Countries, and produce the same Effects; the jarring Interests of the Princes, who govern in each Party, has made this Division a State Affair. At Constantinople, a Schiite is not so much hated as being the Enemy of God and of Mahomet, as for being supposed to be an Enemy to the Grand Seignior and to his Government. This Mixture of Policy and Religion engages the Turks to look upon the Persians, as People who believe in God in a different Manner from them. Moreover the Sunnites and Schiites load one the other with the most odious and infamous Crimes, Cheats, Perjuries, Treasons, forging and falsifying Manuscripts, and the most sacred Books; ^g holding absurd Opinions, which the accused Party disowns. The natural Consequence of all this is, that they mutually esteem each other, as forsaken of God, detestable Blasphemers, and that Princes devoutly attack their Neighbours, as Selim ^h did the Persians: Friend-

^a See Herbelot's Biblioth. Orient. on the Name Carmath.

^b See what has been said of them in the 3d. Volume of this Work, about the Greeks and Protestants. Herbelot relates that a Prince of these Carmathians ordered one of his Men to cut his own Throat, a second to drown himself in the Tygris, and a third to leap from the Battlements of a high Tower, which barbarous Commands they immediately obeyed.

^c See the same Author on the Articles Ismael, Ismaelians, Scheik-al-Gebal, that is, the Old Man of the Mountain, and elsewhere.

^d See him also on the Word Bathenia, in the following Title, he says Bathen signifies interiour Knowledge. We must allow the Turkish Mysticks to be as unintelligible as those amongst Christians.

^e See Sale at the End of the 8th Section.

^f See Herbelot on the Name Motanabi.

^g See Ricault above cited, Book 2. Chap. 10.

^h The same Author in the same Work.

ship and Charity disappear, and the young Persians are excluded from the Turkish Schools. The Animosity goes still greater Lengths: These pretended Enemies of God are supposed to be Friends to the Devil, instructed by him in Witchcraft and Incantations, and to be hurtful by their magical Arts. To prevent these direful Effects, several Means are used, and probably the following Ceremony at Persian Weddings took its Rise from such Suspicions. “ Their Hatred of the Turkish Sonnites is so inveterate, says Ricault ^a, that when they marry, they place the “ Statues of Abubeker, Othman, and Omar ^b at the Door of the nuptial Chamber,
 “ to the End that those who are invited may look at them, and leave upon them
 “ the magical Impressions which may flow from their Eyes, and bring some Mis“ fortune or Disgrace to the new married Couple. For it seems these Eastern Na“ tions are persuaded, that some People can bewitch those whom they look at “ This being done, and all the Guests being admitted into the Room, after having “ first fixed their Eyes on those Statues made of Sugar or Paste, they are imme“ diately broke to Pieces.” Add to this the frequent Curses thundered out by the “ Muefims of Persia, against the said Abubeker, Othman, and Omar, at the very
 Time of calling the People to Prayers; and every impartial Judge will be convinced there is more Policy in it, (to strengthen their own Party, and make their Adversaries incur the publick Hatred) than Religion. Some of our Readers will probably object, that such Excesses are only committed by the unruly Mobility, and that we should make a rational Distinction; as they suppose a Man of Sense, who should travel from Turkey or Persia into Europe, would do in regard of that senseless Rabble, who in some Countries burn Calvin, Luther, &c. and in others, the Pope, &c. We must beg Leave to answer, that Kingdoms and States are chiefly made up of these unpolished Clowns, without whom the Dominions of Princes would be reduced to very narrow Bounds, and they have but few Subjects. But to convince them, that Party Spirit rages even amongst Men in the highest Stations, and breaks through all Bonds of natural Right and Civil Society; we shall introduce here an Abstract of of a Sentence pronounced by a Turkish Mufti against the Persians. Ricault ^a assures us, it is taken from a Book published at Constantinople, with the Approbation and Permission requisite: We shall also learn from it which are the fundamental Errors charged by the Sonnites upon the Schiites.

“ Though your Heresy should only consist in abjuring those three excellent “ Friends of Mahomet, Omar, Othman, and Abubeker; yet a thousand Years of “ Prayers and Pilgrimages performed for the Love of God could not expiate this “ Crime, and you would be cast into the deepest Abyss of Hell, and for ever de“ prived of the Blessings of Heaven and Pleasures of Paradise. This Sentence is “ confirmed by the four Imams, viz. Imam ^c Azem, Imam Schafii, Imam Melic, and “ Imam Hambeli: Therefore I admonish you to quit your Error, and persuade your “ Disciple King Abbas to do the same.

“ But not content with this, for which you are deservedly called Kizilbachis ^e,
 “ that is, Persian Hereticks, you are become more detestable than the Drusians ^h . . .

^a The same Author in the same Work.

^b Those are the three lawful Successors of Mahomet, in the Opinion of the Turks.

^c See Bespier's Notes on Ricault, in the said Work.

^d Book 2. Chap. 10.

^e This Sentence was pronounced against Sari-Calif, Preceptor to the King of Persia, and against all the Persians.

^f That is the great Imam: His Name was Abau-hdnisa.

^g Signifies only a red Head. See Bespier and Herbelot.

^h Bespier has a long Note about them, with a Citation to shew that they drink Wine, and are not circumcised. See Herbelot on the Word Dararioun, which may be the same as the Drusians.

“ as to Faith and Morals, so that I cannot help saying against you, that, for the “ Service of God, it is lawful to kill and destroy you. Your Opinions are con-“ futed by Giafer Efendi, who declares you to be as infamous as Heathens, and “ has proved by seventy Passages of the Koran and Mahomet's own Words, that you “ are guilty of palpable and plain Errors. If the Christians are put to Death and “ deprived of their Possessions, for believing a Trinity in God, can you expect “ a better Treatment, since you are condemned by seventy Sentences of the “ Koran ?

“ One of your worst Tenets is, that you must meet in the Mosques, but not to “ pray ^a : For what else should you meet there ? Mahomet says that whoever comes “ into these Assemblies, without an Intention to pray is a Hypocrite, cursed by “ God, forsaken by the good Angels, accompanied by Devils, and shall never prof-“ per in this World, nor in the next.

“ You alledge for an Excuse, that the antient Order of Priesthood is extinct,
 “ that none amongst you lead so holy and religious a Life, as to be able to teach,
 “ instruct, and guide you ^b in performing the publick Prayers. What ! have you “ no Descendant of Mahomet's ? Or, if you have, why don't you follow their “ good Example ? But you are declared Enemies to the Family of Mahomet, and “ pretend you do not employ Imams, because they are not guiltless as Children :
 “ So far you are in the Right, for your Imams are neither sound in their Doctrine, “ nor in their Morals. Your King, who is your High-priest, goes to Stews and “ Places of Debauchery, he openly takes Women from their Husbands, to make “ them his Concubines ; and his Subjects readily follow this scandalous Practice.
 “ You reject the Chapter of the Blanket ^c as spurious ; and do the same of these “ Verses which were revealed to us upon Account of Saint ^d Aishe ; at the Abdest
 “ or Washing you do not wash the naked Foot, but slightly sprinkle the Top of “ it ; you never cut your Whiskers, and only shave your Chins, the Hair of “ which is an Ornament to Men, and gives them a majestick Air ; instead of using “ a green Colour to cover the noble Parts of the Body, you employ it on your “ Shoes, &c. to shew your Contempt for our Prophet ; you drink Wine ^e without “ Scruple, though the true Observers of the Law hold it as an Abomination ; you “ make no Distinction between ^f clean and unclean, and eat all Things indifferently.
 “ If I should mention the seventy Articles in which you err, it would require a “ whole Volume, whereas I intend Brevity in this Writing.

“ You have a detestable Custom, that you allow several Men to know ^g the same “ Woman, what Book, what Law, what Customs of other Nations au“ thorize this unnatural, infamous Crime ? What good Quality can be expected in

^a This Accusation is false ; but as Bespier observes, most Men, who speak of a Religion different from their own, charge it with Tenets of which its Professors never dreamed.

^b Chardin, Tom. 2. Pag. 296. Edit. in 1^{re} of 1735. mentions Pich-namas, which he translates, a Model or Guide of Prayers, and says the People repeat after them. This therefore is a groundless Accusation likewise.

^c See Bespier's Note on this false or doubtful Imputation. The Arabick Word is translated by Mr. Sale, Overwhelming, it may also signify a Blanket or Covering. See Maracci.

^d One of Mahomet's Wives.

^e Wine is forbid to the Persians also by the Koran, though the use of it is more common, and tolerated amongst them.

^f This is false. See Chardin, Pag. 101. and 102. of the 4th Tom.

^g If he means common Prostitutes, the Turks have as many : If only the Custom of taking Wives for a limited Time, this is also practised by the Turks, and even by some Europeans in that Country. The Truth is, Bespier shews from Figueras's Embassy into Persia, that the common People in Persia suffer their Wives to be Prostitutes, and let them out to those who will pay them.

“ the

“ the Children of such, and so uncertain Parents ? What wonder if you have so few worthy to be Priests or Judges ?

“ But how can you be so unreasonable as to pretend that the Prayers publicly said in the Temples are not necessary ? Did not Mahomet himself pray with the People, or order Abubeker to perform the publick Service, and follow him as the rest did ? Why do not you enquire of your Pilgrims, who go to Mecca, what is the Meaning of the four Oratories ^a in that Temple ? Are they not for the four orthodox Sects ? Why do you not follow that Pattern ? But you choose rather to persist in your Wickedness and Obstinacy ; you are Enemies to God and his Prophet, what Answer will you be able to give to Mahomet and his four Friends ^b at the Day of Judgment. They have been dead so many Centuries, and still you daily offer new Injuries to their Ashes ; at your Weddings you make their Statues with Sugar, to destroy them afterwards out of Contempt, and for the Diversion of the new married Couple and their Guests.

“ Was not Abubeker ^c the first who embraced the Faith ?

“ Was not Omar the greatest Mahometan Warrior against Christians ?

“ Did not the chaste Othman, put the Koran in order, and divide it by Chapters ?

“ Did not Ally the great, the learned Ally, carry the ^d Dkul-fecar or two pointed Sword ? Did not Imam Hassam, and Imam Hussain, suffer Martyrdom for the Faith in the Deserts of Kerbela ? Did not Mahomet say with his own Mouth, O Ally, two Sorts of Men are doomed to Hell upon your Account ; some who love you, and some who do not love you ? You wear also red Turbants as a Token of your Condemnation ; you do ill, and are not Friends to the Prophet's Family, nor to the Faithful, as it is expressly mentioned in the Book ^e Aadik. The Christians preserve in Gold and Silver Shrines the Hoofs of the As which carried Christ, they esteem it an Honour to kiss or touch this holy Relick : Whereas you, who pretend to be Disciples of God's Prophet, and to be the Offspring of his Friends, yet undervalue that glorious Quality, and order Blasphemies to be daily repeated after the Exan ^f against these holy Friends and Companions of the Prophet.

“ Moreover your Books allow to plunder, burn and destroy the Country of Musulmen, to take their Wives and Families Prisoners, and make them your Slaves. You are even so spiteful as to expose them naked in your Markets to be sold to the highest Bidder : The Heathens themselves think it shameful. However this shews you to be our most inveterate and irreconcilable Enemies : You are more cruel towards us, than the Sezidits ^g, the Kiasirs ^h, the Zindikits ⁱ, and Drusians.

^a See Bespier's Notes.

^b This is another false Accusation ; the Persians honour Ali.

^c This is not owned by the Persians.

^d See Herbelot on that Word, and Bespier, Pag. 265.

^e Hadaith Al-Rassoul, the Traditions of the Prophet. See Herbelot on that Article, and Bespier Pag. 265.

^f An Arabick Word which signifies calling the People to Prayer.

^g Or rather Jasids or Jasidies. See the Part of this Work concerning the Greeks. They were called so from Jeidan, in their Language God, they were Magies and Manicheans.

^h Or Kasars, that is, Infidels without Religion, from thence is derived the French Word Cassard, a Hypocrite or Bigot. The Mahometans call the East and South Parts of Africa Casrah, in which is contained Zanguebar, the Inhabitants of which, called Zenguies, spreading through Persia, and from thence into Europe, gave Rise to the German Word Zigener, and to the Italian Cingaro, meaning the Bohemians.

ⁱ The Zindikits are said to be the Sadducees of Mahometism, denying Providence and the Resurrection, holding that Matter is God, believing the Transmigration of Souls, and following the Magi's Book called Zend. Herbelot on that Word says they are looked upon as neither Jews, Christians, nor Mahometans, neither in their Belief, nor in their Practice.

“ In a Word, you are the Sink of all Filth ; Christians and Jews may become faithful, but you never can.

“ Therefore I am obliged by the Power which I have received from Mahomet himself to pronounce, that it is lawful for all the Faithful, of what Nation soever, to kill, destroy, and extirpate you. If it is meritorious in the Sight of God to kill a Christian, it is seventy Times better to put a Persian to Death. I hope the divine Majesty will at the Day of Judgment condemn you to be the Asses of the Jews, to be led into Hell by that detestable Nation. Moreover, I do not despair of seeing you destroyed in a short Time, by the Tartars, the Indians and Arabians, our Brethren and Associates in the Faith.

Now to give an Idea of the modern Sects which Ricault, who wrote about eighty Years ago, says were lately introduced amongst the Mahometans, we shall present our Readers with an Abstract of the Account given by him. “ The Zeidits maintain that God will send a Persian Prophet, who shall, by a new Law, abolish the Religion of Mahomet. Other Hereticks say no Man can be called a Saint in this World, except the Prophets, who were without Sin : They affirm also, that God will be seen by the Faithful in the next World, as plainly as the Full-moon appears now : Though Mahomet expressly teaches, that God is invisible in both this and the next Life.

“ ^b The Malumigists (which Bespier translates the knowing) teach that God may be known perfectly in this World, by the Knowledge which Men have of themselves. The Mexzacbulians ^c hold the reverse, believing that those, who have any Knowledge of God’s Glory and Essence in this World, may be saved, and reckoned amongst the Faithful.

“ The Jabajabits, or as Maracci calls them Jabajachits, believe that the Knowledge of God does not reach to every Thing, but that he governs the World according to the various Circumstances, which he did not know from all Eternity, nor at the Time of the Creation, his Knowledge improving by Experience, like that of Men.

“ The Kadezadelits appeared in the World under Sultan Morat ; their Master was Birgali Efenli, who invented the Ceremonies used at Funerals, when they pray for the Souls departed. Those Sectaries oblige their Imam to cry aloud to the dead Corpse, to bid him remember that there is but one God, and one Prophet. Most of them are Russians or other Christian Apostates, who have retained some Notion of Purgatory, and praying for the Dead.

“ Within a few Years the Opinion of the Chupmessabites ^d is become very common at Constantinople, and has been embraced by the chief Men of the Seraglio : They believe that Christ is God, and the Redeemer of the World : The young Scholars of the Grand Seignior’s Court are generally imbued with that Principle,

^a Maracci mentions some Zaidits, Discip’les of Zaid, Son or Grandson to Ali, who was Mahomet’s Son-in-law, but he charges the Opinion here related on those whom Pag. 85. he calls Seilits.

^b These seem to be the same as the Maalumitæ of Maracci, Part 3. Prod. ad Alcor. Pag. 79. Who says, they believed that no one knew God, and was faithful, unless he knew all his Names and Attributes. Yet Pag. 85. he mentions the Malumigists, as Ricault, almost Word for Word.

^c These are called Maghulits by Maracci, who assures us their Opinion is, that those who know only Part of the Names and Attributes of God, being intirely ignorant of the rest, still have a true Knowledge of him. And he adds that they believe likewise, that God creates or produces all the Actions of Men, But Maracci seems often to translate only Ricault into Italian ; and both have imitated the Mahometans. and the antient Writers of Catalogues of Hereticks, by an ill-grounded Multiplication of old and modern Sects.

^d Bespier says that Word signifies the support of Christians.

“ especially the best bred and politest of them ; infomuch that Chupmessabi-sen,
 “ that is, you are as civil and obliging as a Servant of the Messiah, is become a “ familiar Compliment paid to those who distinguish themselves by their amiable “ Behaviour, or other good Qualities. There are many of them at Constantinople, “ and they are so steady in that Belief, that some have suffered Martyrdom for the “ Profession of it, rather than retract it.

“ The Muſſerim, ^a that is, the Secret is with us ; are a Sect of Atheists, and all “ their Secret is, that there is no God, and that Nature, or the inward Principle of “ each Being, governs the World in that regular Order which we so much admire.
 “ To this is due, as they pretend, the Motion of the Sun, Moon, and Stars. This,
 “ they say, is the Cause of the Birth, Growth, and Death of Men, as likewise of “ Grass, Flowers, and Vegetables. The Progress of this Sect is dreadful, and “ their Increase, particularly in Constantinople, astonishing. Some of them are “ Cadics, Persons learned in the Arabick Books: Most are Renegado Christians, “ who to stifle the Remorse of their Consciences, endeavour to persuade them“ selves, that nothing is to be dreaded or hoped for after Death. A rich Man of “ that Sect, named Mahomet Efendi, who was versed in the Oriental Learning, “ grounded this detestable Opinion on this foolish Argument, either there is no God,
 “ or he is not so wise and prudent, as our Doctors would make us believe, otherwise he “ would not let me live, who am his greatest Enemy upon Earth, and daily scoffing his “ Godhead. He might have saved his Life, if he would have renounced his blas“ phemous Tenets, and promised to abstain from such Expressions for the future.
 “ But he chose to be put to Death, not, said he, for any Reward he might expect,
 “ but because the Love of Truth obliged him to suffer Martyrdom for its Defence. This “ pernicious Doctrine has infected the Women and Eunuchs of the Seraglio, the “ Basas, and most of the Court. It is related that Sultan Morat gave it great “ Encouragement in his Court and Armies. The Followers of that Sect are ex“ ceeding friendly, hospitable, and render all possible Services one to the other. If “ a Guest of their own Persuasion comes to them, they not only entertain him “ handsomely, but at Night leave with him some beautiful Woman, to spend it “ more to his Satisfaction.

“ The Cadizadelits are melancholy and severe, like the Stoicks, they affect Gravi“ ty, and avoid being present at Musick Meetings, Entertainments and Diversions.
 “ In publick and in private they always speak of God, everlastingly and unweariedly “ repeating these Words, La Ilah, illa, allah, there is but one only God. Some “ of them do this for a whole Night, sitting and leaning their Bodies towards the “ Ground. They are punctual Observers of all the Rules of their Religion, study
 “ the Civil Law, the Art of disputing Pro and Con, to leave no Question un-“ canvassed. In a Word, they are perfect Hypocrites in their whole Conduct, “ great Admirers of themselves, proudly despising all others, they neither talk with,
 “ nor salute them, always inter-marrying in the Families of their own Persuasion:
 “ They practise mutual Correction, they even excommunicate, and banish from “ their Society, those who after due and repeated Admonitions, prove incorrigible, “ and will not mend their loose or gay Manners. Most of them are Tradesmen or “ Merchants, whose sedentary Way of Life contributes not a little to their melan“ choly, chimerical Notions, and other Fooleries.

^a The same Author interprets that Word, those who keep a Secret.

“ Some of these stupid Sectaries jumble together the Christian Religion with “ Mahometism: The Soldiers, who live near Hungary and Bosnia, are generally fond “ of this Opinion: They read the Gospel in the Sclavonian Language, which they “ get from Moravia and Ragusa: They study the Arabick to understand the Koran;
 “ they also learn the Persian Tongue to be thought polite, it being much in Vogue
 “ at the Grand Seignior’s Court. They drink Wine in their Fast during the Month “ Ramazam, but to avoid giving Scandal, they call it Hardaly, and put no Cinna“ mon or other Spices in it: Then they think it a lawful drink. They love “ Christians, and screen them as much as they can from being ill used by the other “ Turks. They believe that Mahomet is the Holy Ghost promised by Christ, that “ the Word Paraclet always means their Prophet, since the white Pigeon ^a so often “ revealed to him in his Ear, the right Way of Happiness. All the Potures ^b of “ Bosnia are of that Sect, and loaded with the same Taxes as Christians. They “ hate Images, and the Sign of the Cross, are circumcised, and justify this last “ Custom by the Example of Christ.

“ Several Janizaries are Beſtaſchits, so called either from Beſtaſchuli, mentioned
 “ by Herbelot, and whom he proves to have been a Fanatick; or from Hagi Beſtaſch, “ a Turkish Saint, who instituted the Janizaries, and having given his Blessing to “ this new Militia, bestowed one of his Gown Sleeves as a Coif for their Leader.
 “ Be that as it will, Ricault and Maracci ^c say that the Beſtaſchits deprive God of “ all his Attributes: This Sect began in the Reign of Soliman the Magnificent.
 “ Other Writers call them Zeratiſts, that is, who think Incest lawful; for which “ Reason they are nick-named, Mum-scanduren, that is, who put out the Candle.

“ Some Sabeans ^d have introduced themselves amongst the Mahometans; they “ fancy the Sun and Moon have some divine Quality in them, by reason of their “ Influence on all other Creatures; some Astronomers and Physicians of Constanti- “ nople have embraced that Sect, which is very numerous ^e in Media and Parthia.
 “ The Men adore the Sun; Women the Moon, others pay their Respects to the “ Star of the North Pole. Their Way of living is not severe, they are not nice “ Observers of religious Ceremonies; but their outward Behaviour is blameless;
 “ the Immortality of the Soul, Rewards or Punishments in another Life, are not “ firmly believed by them. Repenting or revenging Affronts or Injuries, are seldom “ found amongst them, because they look upon them as necessary Influences of the “ Stars, and are no more moved to Anger by them, than we are at a heavy Rain “ or scorching Heat.

“ The Munafichits are downright Pythagoreans, believing the Transmigration of “ Souls: Some of them are to be found at Constantinople.

“ The Eſchbrakits, or as Bespier says, enlightened, from an Arabick Word, are “ Platonicians ^f, given to Contemplation of the Idea of God, and of the Num“ bers in him: For though they admit his Unity, they own also a Trinity as a “ Number growing from the Unity. This they explain by three Folds of one “ Handkerchief. Their Respect for the Koran is not great, what it contains “ agreeable to their Notions, serves them as a Proof, the rest they look upon as ^a See above what we have said of this Story of the Pigeon.

^b People of Bosnia.

^c See Maracci, Pag. 86. and Bespier on Ricault.

^d Ricault seems to confound the Sabeans of Turkey, with the ancient Sabeans of Media, &c.

^e Or rather Pythagoreans, like the former as appears by these Numbers. See Maracci.

“ abrogated. Being convinced that the supreme Happiness of Man consists in the “ Contemplation of the Divine Majesty, the gross Imaginations of Mahomet con“ cerning the Pleasures of Paradise, are looked upon by them as chimerical Dreams,
 “ and as such held in Contempt. All the Schærs and able Preachers of the royal “ Mosques are of this Sect, assiduous to their Devotions, sober at their Meals, of “ good Humour, and agreeable in their Conversation; love Musick, dabble in “ Poetry, and write some Verses for the Instruction of ^a their Audience; liberal and “ sensible to the Misfortunes of Mankind, and their Company is much courted at “ Constantinople, because they are neither avaricious nor severe, nor Self-conceited.
 “ They delight in seeing handsome and witty young People, to raise their Ideas to
 “ the Contemplation of God’s Beauty and Perfection; they love their Neighbour
 “ as his Creatures, and choose such for their Disciples, as join to a good Shape a “ majestick and winning Behaviour: They train them up to Moderation, Wisdom,
 “ and a grave Deportment, in a Word, to abstain from all Evil, and practise all “ Virtues: This Sect is preferable to all others amongst the Mahometans, and ’tis “ a deplorable Case that Men of such happy Dispositions, are not instructed in the “ Christian Mysteries, to become Members of the true Church.

“ The Hairakits is called, as Bayler informs us from an Arabick Word which “ signifies Wonder, are the reverse of the Ejebakits, they call every Thing in “ Question, and never decide it; they cannot bear canvassing any Truth or Enquiry
 “ about it; Persuasion or Dissuasion are Strangers to them; and like the Academicians
 “ of old, Truth and Falshood, say they, may be so much disguised by the Art and “ Cunning of Arguments, as to appear quite otherwise, than they are in Reality;
 “ from whence it is inferred by them, that Demonstration, or even Probability, are “ impossible Things. Accordingly their usual Answer to any controverted Point is, “ God knows it, we do not. Yet they have amongst them some Preachers, who “ being raised to the Dignity of a Mustî, are very negligent in performing the “ Duties of that high Station, and ready to sign any Thing in favour of those who “ ask their Advice, always adding at the Bottom, God knows what is best. They “ are punctual Observers of the Mahometan Ceremonies and Laws, both civil and re“ ligious; yielding nevertheless sometimes to their natural Inclinations or the Dictates
 “ of their Passions. They drink Wine, to avoid the Imputation of being morose “ and unsociable; but their ordinary Drink is Syrup mixt with Opium, which adds to “ their natural Stupidity, and in that Condition, they will give their Assent to any “ Proposition, though contradictory to what they had granted before: This they “ do to gratify their Friends, no Proposition being more true than another. ’Tis “ generally observed that Hairakite Musties are less successful in that Post than the “ Ejebakits, because the last mentioned, in the Execution of their Office, go up“ on sure Principles, sign their Fetla’s ^c with Caution, and when asked their De“ cision on important Affairs concerning the Welfare of the State, willingly ex“ pose themselves to lose their Dignity, rather than sign any Thing against their “ Conscience; whereas the others signing any Thing without Thought or Deli“ beration; all is left to Chance, without any share of Reason, and by Conse“ quence it often happens, that the Success not answering the Expectations of the

^a Spiritual Songs. See Bespier.

^b A Sort of Pyrrhonian or Sceptick Mahometans.

^c The Mustî’s Decision of any Affair civil or religious, is called Fatua or Fetfa.

“ Prince and his Ministers, the Blame is laid on the Musti’s Advice, who is deposed, banished, and even put to Death; which Misfortune seldom happens to “ the Eschrakites.”

To this Account of Ricault, we must add some Mention of Adbem, one of the most antient Mahometan Quietists. In one of his Visions, as his Legend says, he obtained that an Angel should write his Name amongst those who love God; and this his Love was no way inferior to that of our highest Mysticks. “ Hell, he said, “ was preferable with the Will of God, to Heaven without it: I had rather, was a “ common Expression used by him, I had rather go to Hell, doing the Will of “ God, than go to Heaven disobeying him.” This is palpable Nonsense, yet many such Quietists are to be met with amongst the Turks, and the Soufis of Persia. Some of them are likewise so refined in their Discourses about the Immensity of God, and his Presence in all Places, that to inspire their Disciples with a profound Veneration for that divine Attribute, they compare it to the Space ^a which contains the Universe; or to a Circle, the Center of which is the End of all the Actions of Creatures, &c. Others distinguish several Degrees of the Love of God, ^b Friendship, Love, Desire, Fervour, Extacy, and at the highest Pitch is Enthusiasm; which makes them say, “ That we ought to sacrifice, not only all our worldly “ Goods, but even all the Hopes we have for a better State hereafter: This is a “ sure Way, as they think, to obtain an intimate Union with God.” But we must observe, that the Arabians and Turks use the same Word to signify a Madman ^c, and one who loves God at this Rate; and that, as the same Author insinuates, these Mysticks of the East, like ours, raise themselves to Contemplation by spiritualising carnal Ideas; they use the same Phrases which are employed in Love Affairs by fond Lovers, &c. to which we shall add this farther Remark, that as the above-mentioned Word ^d literally signifies a Man possessed by some foreign Spirit, “ good or evil; . . . The Mahometans often take Madmen to be inspired by God,
 “ and holy Men.” So says Herbelot.

To conclude what belongs to Mahometism and its Sects, there is in the Bosom of that Religion, a Party of Indifferents, ^e who maintain that the Orthodox are not to be preferred to Hereticks, but all of them be looked upon as good Mussulmen: These Mahometan Latitudinarians are esteemed no better than Heathens, by both the Sunnites and the Schiites who make up the two great opposite Parties of Mahometans.
 This happens also in other Countries and Religions. For though Toleration is grounded on a Principle of natural Reason ^f, yet both in the East and in the West, the predominant Party will often endeavour, even by Force and Penal Laws, to compel all People to embrace it; and Neutrality, when too strictly observed, renders its Votaries obnoxious to be esteemed as dangerous Men.

Fœnum habet in Cornu, longe fuge.

Many Reflections might be made on this great Number of Sects, which may be seen in Ricault, and are obvious to any intelligent Reader; the most important is, that ^a See Herbelot in the Article Din.

^b The same on the Love of God, Pag. 321.

^c The same on Megnoun.

^d That Word is the said Megnoun.

^e See Herbelot on the Schoubiah.

^f Quod tibi fieri non vis alteri ne feceris. Do as you would be done by.

the various Opinions of these different Parties, are couched in such Terms as may be explained in a tolerable Sense, being generally ambiguous; there is no Error so palpable, but what is the Result of some Truth stretched too far: And after all, some Men in all Religions are prone to misrepresent the Sentiments of their Adversaries, in order to render them odious. The Muserims, for Instance, are not excusable, if they really held and practised what they are charged with; how shall we be sure of this? If what is reported of them is true, they probably were the Remains of the Disciples of one Schamalgani, who besides the Transmigration of Souls, thought it possible, even in this Life, to transfuse and mix the Soul of one, into and with that of another; to procure this perfect Transfusion, they allowed the most infamous Practices, Incests with the nearest Relations, &c. This Man and his Followers, who were called Enlightened, were so impudent as to assert, that the Souls of those who should reject this Way of communicating Knowledge, should, after their Death, come into other Bodies to expiate this pretended Crime. But once more; How shall we be sure of this? The only Golden Rule is to examine every Opinion by the Writings of those who maintain it, without relying on the Testimony of their Opponents.

S U P P L E M E N T
A N D
A M E N D M E N T S.

To the R E A D E R.

THE French Author of the Work now published in English, has added to it a Supplement and Amendments, we have followed his Directions as to this last Volume in the Body of our Translation of it. What regards the foregoing Volumes we shall now present to your View.

A D I S S E R-

A DISSERTATION
 ON THE
 RELIGION of the SABEANS.

THE Sabeans, of whom we now speak, are not those Christians of St. John ^a, mentioned before, who in their own Language style themselves ^b St. John's Disciples; though even these have retained several Remains of the antient Sabeism. The Subject of this Dissertation is a Sect still subsisting ^c, and to which Mahomet seems to grant a Toleration in his Koran ^d, as to Jews and Christians.

'Tis well known, this pretended Prophet shewed some Respect to the two last named Religions, and we have Reason to believe he was as indulgent to the Sabeans, since to this Day they pretend to be in Possession of some Books written by the Patriarchs, one in particular by Adam ^e, which they say contains all their Religion. Herbelot ^f assures us, it is almost wholly Chaldaick, but the Characters are, he says, very singular.

An Arabian Writer, cited by Herbelot, says the Sabeans are the most antient People in the World, and received their Religion from Seth and Enoch, to whom they attribute some Books; but the same People, who sometimes ^g bestow high Encomiums on the Sabeans, nevertheless looked on the Word Sabi as an Injury, since the Koraisbites, who were Enemies to Mahomet, called him a Sabean, because he had abandoned ^h their Religion. The Mahometans, the Jews, and the Christians of the East, generally confound Sabeism with Paganism ⁱ, looking upon those who left Paganism to embrace their Religion, as converted from Sabeism. Yet it is not unlikely that such an Apology might be made for Sabeism, as a learned modern Au-

^a In the foregoing Volume of this Work about the Grecians.

^b Mendai-Fabia.

^c Chardin, Tom. 3. Pag. 429. Edit. in 4^{to}. of 1735. says that the Mahometans believe, though not with Certainty, that there are still some Heathen Sabis about the Euphrates, whose Belief and Worship is the same as the old Chaldeans, owning a supreme Being, praying Morning, Noon, and Night, their Faces towards the North; calling upon the Stars, the Sun and Moon; they have three Lents, of seven, of nine, and of 30 Days; abstain from some Sorts of Fruits, believe a Heaven and Hell, so that all shall be saved at long run. But he owns, he has not seen any such Sabeans.

^d See the Koran, Chap. 2. with Sale's Note. See also Chap. 5. 3.

^e See Herbelot on the Article Sepher Adam. Some Apocryphal Fragments he says he had seen.

^f The same Author on the Word Sabeans or Sabis.

^g Herbelot in the said Article of Sabis.

^h The same Author says, that Sabi in the Arabick literally signifies one who leaves the Religion of his Fathers, to embrace a new one of his own.

ⁱ By Paganism we mean Idolatry.

thor^a has made for Magism. We shall not enter upon such an Undertaking, but the bare mention of it, requires we should distinguish two Sorts of Sabeans. 1. Those who owned one only God, and paid their Adoration to that supreme Being, according to his various Influences in the Sun, Moon, and Stars, which they looked upon as his Temples, or (as the Royal Prophet expresses it, Psal. xix.) his Tabernacle. 2. Those who worshipped these Tabernacles, as Partakers of the Divine Glory and Power, which the learned have called Cultus Sacellorum; or those whose grosser Superstition lead them to adore the Godhead in Statues; which at first were made only as Memorials and Monuments: This second Sort is deservedly ranked amongst Idolaters.

Several eminent Men in Antiquity might be reckoned amongst the first Sort of Sabeans, Lot, Jethro, Job and his Friends: Even some Heathen Philosophers^b who owned the Unity, Indivisibility, Infinity, Immutability, &c. of the Godhead, and gave Definitions of a supreme Being, far above all the Ideas of Paganism^c. But these Philosophers, &c. did not act according to their Knowledge, encouraged Idolatry; and though the Morality which they taught, is a Subject of Confusion, even to some Christian Divines; yet they themselves were given up to a reprobate Sense, Rom. ii.

The Notion of a supreme Being was fresh in the Minds of those Sabeans, by their Proximity to the first Man; the long Lives of the Patriarchs helpt to keep up this Tradition, of one only God, who governs the whole Universe according to his Will and Pleasure; directed in particular the heavenly Bodies to influence the other terrestrial Creatures, and was alone worthy to be worshipped by Mankind, with Praises, Thanks for all his Benefits, Vows, Prayers, &c. amidst the continual Wants to which this Life is exposed. They had also preserved the Idea of a Mediator, who was to reconcile Men to God: This Promise they carefully delivered to their Posterity; who being more ignorant, and more wicked than their Ancestors, and on the other Side stung with the Remorses of their Conscience, and the Apprehension of the Punishments they had deserved; superstitiously sought this Mediator amongst created Beings; instead of one, they applied to several, and in Process of Time adored them: Thus Wickedness, Ignorance, Superstition, joined to the Craft and Deceits of Self-interested Ministers of Religion brought on Idolatry, which is corrupted Sabeism, and makes the second Sort above-mentioned of Sabeans.

As to the Sect of that Denomination, which has subsisted so long in the East, and is said to remain still, and to retain its first Name: They believe one only God, yet pay a religious Worship to the Stars or Planets, &c. which they think^d are animated Bodies like ours; and are appointed to govern the Universe under the Direction of the supreme Being, as Vice-Roys govern Provinces under their Monarch. They apply themselves chiefly to obtain the utmost Perfection of the four intellectual Virtues: The Souls of the Wicked are, they own, to be punished for the Space of many Ages^e, after which God will forgive them. Their Devotion consists 1. In praying three Times^f a Day, at Sun-rising they have performed eight Adorations,

^a See Dr. Hide in his Treatise De Relig. Vet. Per.

^b See Hutt, Lib. 2. Cap. 2. quæst. Alnet.

^c Such is this given by Empedocles: Globus intelligens, cujus centrum ubique est, Circumferentia nusquam.

^d Precick in his Specim. &c. Pag. 139.

^e The same, Pag. 144. says nine thousand Centuries.

^f Others say seven times a Day.

each of which is made up of three profound Inclinations: At Noon they pay five such Adorations, and at Sun-setting. 2. In their grand Festival^a which they celebrate on the Day in which the Sun enters into the Sign Aries. 3. In three Fasts every Year, the first of thirty Days, the second of nine, the third of seven. 4. In Sacrifices, of which they never eat any Part, but burn the Whole, abstaining also from Beans of all Sorts, Garlick, and several other Plants. 5. In their Kebla or Place towards which they turn in their Prayers: Authors vary^b about it, and seem uncertain whether it is the North, or South, or Mecca, or the particular Star they then worship, or whether every Man has not his own Kebla. 6. In a Pilgrimage to Haran, a Town of Mesopotamia, about which many Sabeans inhabit; yet they profess great Veneration for the Temple of Mecca, and still more for the Pyramids of Egypt, looking upon them as the Burying-places of Seth, Enoch, and^c Sabi their Founder, from whom they derive their^d Name: They offer in Sacrifice (to these Pyramids, or to these Patriarchs, or to the supreme Being which dwelt in them) a Cock and a Calf all black, with some Incense.

They own Seth as their first Master; call him Nebi-Allah, the Prophet of God; and as a modern Author^e informs us, Sabeans are not to be trusted if they swear by the Name of God, but may be credited if they swear by the Name of Seth.

They chiefly value a Book written by Enoch^f in Chaldaick, which treats of Morality, and is looked upon by them as the Bible by Christians, and the Koran by Mahometans: The Book of Psalms is the only one of our Scripture which they read. They have likewise the above-mentioned Book of Adam^g and some others.

This Prayer of theirs “ O God, I consecrate myself wholly to your Service, you have no Companion but him (or them) whose absolute Master you are, as likewise “ of all that belongs to him (or them): ” is an evident Proof, that the grand Object of their Worship is the supreme God, the Creator and Lord of the Universe, the Being of Beings called by the Arabians the most high God^h, who has under him some intelligent Beings superior to human Nature, called by the same Arabians Divinities, placed in the Stars and Planets, to be Mediators between God and Men, and intercede for them with the supreme Being. But it must be owned these inferior Divinities were more punctually served than the supreme by the Sabeans. For Instance, when they planted or sowed, their Custom was to draw a Line, to part the Portion of God, from that of his Ministers or inferior Divinities; but whatever fell from God's Part into the others Field was lost to God; whereas what fell from their Part into God's Field, was immediately restored to them. The Reason alledged for this, and some such Customs, was, that the supreme Being did not want any Thing.

^a Some Writers assure us, the Sabeans keep five Holidays in Honour of the Planets called Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus, Mercury, to which they also consecrated the Days of the Week, and divided amongst them, and some other Divinities, the Months of the Year.

^b Hild, Cap. 5. Relig. Vet. Pers. fixes it to the North.

^c The Sabeans pretend that this Sabi was Brother to Enoch.

^d Pecock cited above, is of Opinion their Name is from Saba, an Army, which in Scripture is applied to the Stars; yet he gives some other Etymologies of the Word Sabean.

^e Hild, Cap. 5. Pag. 127.

^f Pecock, Pag. 138. cites a Passage, in which it is called the Book of Seth.

^g Stanley, and before him Hottinger, Lib. 1. Cap. 8. Pag. 176. Hist. Orient. mentions some of these Books about Talismans and such Superstitions.

^h Allah-Tadla, signifies the most high God; Al-Ilahat, Divinities; Herodotus Book 3. makes of those two Words two Arabian Gods, and takes them to be the Bacchus and Venus of that Nation. Some pretend that the Sun and Bacchus are but one God, and say the same of the Moon and Venus: These are of Opinion that the Word Allah-Tadla, or Urotalt, is derived from a Hebrew Word, meaning the Dew of Light, and the Word Alilabat, Alilat, from another, which signifies the Night.

The Beauty of these heavenly animated Bodies, their useful Revolutions, of the Sun to cause the variety of Seasons, of the Moon to supply the Loss of the Sun when set, raised their Admiration, their Curiosity and Superstition : This brought on Astrology so much in Vogue amongst the Chaldeans, Affyrians, Egyptians, and all the Eastern Nations : The best Astrologers were Sabeans ; and of them one Thebit ^a, who had explained the Doctrine and Ceremonies of his Religion : This Book is lost, and we are deprived by this Misfortune of many curious Observations on Sabeism.

We shall conclude this short Dissertation by referring our Readers to Stanley, to Hottinger, and to Maimonides, who was copied by the other two, and who being a Jew, is a suspected Author, which made a learned Critick of our Days ^b question the Truth of what is related of the Sabeans, who are also said to have been Præ-Adamites, and believed the World eternal.

^a He died at the End of the third Century after the Hegira. Albatani or Albategnius, another Astrologer of Sabeen Extraction, died in the following Century.

^b Le Clerc in his Ind. Philolog. ad Stanley, Philof. Orient.

La PENITENCE des JUIFS ALLEMANS dans leur SYNAGOGUE.

- La Fête de PURI II

A D D I T I O N S

A N D

C O R R E C T I O N S

Of the former V O L U M E S.

Additions and Corrections to the Ceremonies of the J E W S.

TH E Origin which we have assigned for the Taleb, in the Chapter which treats of it, is highly probable, but we must add to it, that some are of Opinion, the Jews borrowed this Ceremony from the Romans, who had it from Æneas ^a,

..... Caput ante aras Phrygio velamur amictu.

To prove this Assertion, they alledge that the Jews took up with several Customs of the Romans, as whipping, putting to Death with a Sword, the Manner of eating their Meals, practised by Christ and his Apostles at the last Supper, contrary to the express Directions given by Moses. This Argument will not appear very convincing, nor what is likewise said, that being covered at Prayers is, 1. A Token of Grief and Repentance. 2. Of Veneration and Humility. 3. Of Fear and Modesty.

We shall add nothing to our former Description of the Jewish Flagellation amongst their Works of Penance: A Print of it was wanting, which is placed here. We must not forget the Confession which some Jews in Italy make at the Point of Death. It is alphabetical, like some of the Psalms, and every Part of the Body is devoutly called to a strict Account. This might pass for the private Devotion of some particular Men, but we meet with such another Confession in the apocryphal Book called Historia Josephi Fabri lignarii, or the History of Joseph the Carpenter.

The Feast of Haman, called Purim, is one of those Solemnities, which are partly serious, partly merry; such are to be met with in most, if not in all Religions. We shall add nothing to the Description already given of it, only place it before our Reader's Eyes in the Print here annexed.

^a Virgil in his Æneid. Lib. 3. Ver. 545.

158 Additions and Corrections of the former Volumes.

In representing the State of the Jews under the Christian Governments, we have mentioned several heinous Crimes, with which they have been charged; without entering into a strict Enquiry about the Truth or Falshood of such Accusations, we must mention two more of great Moment. 1. That they have falsified the Scripture out of Hatred to Christianity. 2. That they have destroyed the Books which explained the Mysteries of their Religion. A learned Rabbin has published their Apology ^a, to which we refer our Readers, only transcribing a few Passages the most worthy of Notice.

“ We are accused, says he, of using Christian Blood at the Feast of unleavened Bread but, besides the wicked Contrivance of our Enemies, who to support their Calumny, have conveyed dead Corpse into our Houses, they might remember how strictly we are forbid eating Blood, insomuch that if a Drop of Blood is found in an Egg, it must be thrown away as unclean; if some Blood sticks to the Bread after biting it, the Part of it which is bloody, must be cut off . . . Moreover, we are to be in the utmost Purity at that Festival, and therefore by Consequence we should not choose to commit such Crimes. Not to mention the Order of Moses, to be tender of the Life of a Stranger, as of our own Brethren It is surprising the Mahometans do not accuse us of any such Practice, much less put us to Racks and Torments, to make us confess what we are not guilty of This odious Imputation of murdering Children, was first invented by Appion the Heathen Grammarian, and is mentioned by Josephus in his Work against that wicked Calumniator.”

A second Accusation is, that the Jews commit Idolatry: This they so carefully avoid, as to become ridiculous. For Instance, “ If, says Maimonides, a Jew passes by . . . a Statue, and at the same Moment a Thorn gets into his Foot, he must not stoop to take it up, lest this should be mistaken for a Mark of Respect paid to the Statue.” But it seems the Jews stand when the Book of the Law is taken out of the Hechal or Box which contains it, and when opened to the People, as is mentioned in the Book of Nebemiah ^b; and when the said Book is carried back to the Hechal, the Jews, who are in the Way, bow down their Heads: “ Yet as Rabbi Manasse judiciously observes; this is no Act of Idolatry, 'tis a Mark of Respect and Veneration widely different from Adoration.” And in Reality, this is proved by the Custom of all Nations, in regard to their Princes and other Superiors, even towards their Equals or Inferiors; the same Observation may serve for an Excuse to several Ceremonies practised by some Christians.

They are charged thirdly, “ with cursing the Christians thrice every Day, and desiring God to confound and destroy them. . . . This is said to be done by the Rabbins in the Synagogues.” Sixtus of Sienna endeavours to prove his Accusation from the Talmud: Manasse on the contrary avers, there is but one Prayer like it, which is not against Christians, but some Hereticks: As to the Prayer said by the Jews three Times a Day, it is far from cursing, since God is desired in it, to fill with his Blessings all his Creatures, which are the Work of his Hands. On the Day of Chippur, which is the first of the Year, the Jews pray for the Conversion of all Nations: Lord, say they, May all Creatures fear you! May they prostrate themselves

^a Manasse Ben Israel. This Apology is inserted in the 12th Tom. of the Biblioth. Raisonné, Pag. 176. and Fol. and Pag. 439. and following.

^b Chap. 8. Ver. 5. and Fol.

before you ! May they all unite to do your Will, &c. But who can tell, whether these Prayers, the Order of not abominating the Egyptians, and the Example of God, who desires not the Death of the Wicked, make a deeper Impression on the Minds of the Jews, than another Law which bids them destroy Infidels ? Who knows whether Policy and Dissimulation does not govern them in their outward Behaviour towards Christians, and whether they do not curse them in their Hearts ? &c. But who knows they do ? And are they to be accused without Proofs, they or any else ?

The learned Buxtorfius taxes the Synagogue with Blasphemy, upon account of a Prayer, in which it is said, that the Nations bow down before Things of no Value, and offer their Prayers to Gods who cannot save them, &c. To this it is answered, That this was true at the Time of *Esdra*s, when that Prayer was composed, which being long before Christ, it did not regard Christians ; but that however it is now left out of their Rituals. Neither is it probable that in their Synagogues they spit whenever the Name of Christ is pronounced ; since so publick an Injury could not be concealed from Christians, who often see their publick Service performed, and would severely punish them for it.

The fifth Accusation objected to the Jews, is, that they do their utmost to pervert Christians, and bring them over to Judaism. This is easily confuted ; for though it must be owned that Christians now and then embrace their Religion, yet in Holland where Toleration puts them almost on the Level with Christians, they avoid, out of Fear and Policy, using any Persuasions to induce those Christians to do it. On the contrary, “ when any one, says Manasse, desires to become a Jew, “ he is not admitted as a Member of the Synagogue till a strict Enquiry is made in- “ to the Motives of his Change, to find out whether it is not Poverty, Love, some “ Disappointment, or such other Passion, &c. Then he is forewarned of the Pu- “ nishments he is to undergo ; if after being received, he breaks the Mosaical “ Law and after all to avoid the Reproaches of Christians, they often refuse “ to circumcise the new Profelyte and some more bent upon becoming “ Jews, have been forced to circumcise themselves.”

As to their Cheats and exorbitant Usuries, the same Apologist says, they are obliged to this by the Persecutions raised against them, and Taxes laid upon them ; and that their Law does not enforce the Practice of them against Christians, only some Passages have been interpreted wrongfully by some of more corrupt Principles ; or who, as most Men are apt to do, by false Reasons persuade themselves they may hate any Religion but their own.

ADDITIONS and CORRECTIONS to the CEREMONIES of the ROMAN CATHOLICKS.

IN the Ceremony of the Pope's Coronation, we should have taken Notice, that in the twelfth Century some Customs were observed, which are now left off. See Mabillon in the second Tom. of his Musæum Italicum.

On the Devotion to the Blessed Virgin, these Words, sung heretofore on Christmas-day, were forgot : Sancta Dei Genitrix, &c. that is, Holy Mother of God who hath conceived by the Ear, our Lord. The Author of the Project of a new Breviary, printed in 1720. says that Expression was condemned above eight hundred Years ago, &c. A Book of Devotion was printed at Paris, and approved by Doctors of 160 Addit. and Correç7. to the Cerem. of the Grecians, &c.

Divinity, in 1627. under the Title of Holy Duties of a devout Soul, which contains a mystical Prayer to the Trinity of J. C. his holy Mother, and S. Joseph, in these Words, “ Holy Trinity who imitate without Intermission the Divine Trinity in the Empyrean Heaven, deified honourable and lovely Trinity, receive the Trinity which is in me my Understanding, my Will, my Memory Trinity loving the Salvation of Men, work efficaciously mine To this End, Jesu my Saviour, present to your Father your Wounds and the Blood you have spilt out of your Love for me ; Mary, shew your Breasts and the Virginal Milk with which you have fed the Word Incarnate ; Joseph, put forth your Hands, and the Sweat which has helpt to maintain Jesus May Jesus pour on me the Blessings of Heaven ! May Mary make me Partaker of the sweet Fruit of her sacred Womb ! May Joseph fill me with the Blessings of the Earth by his Sweat and Labours” This Heap of unintelligible Stuff cannot be charged upon the Catholick Church, being only the Whim of some private Man, but it is deplorable that it met with the Approbation and Sanction of Doctors.

In the Article of Processions, that of the infernal Bite^a, performed every Year at Tournay on the Exaltation of the Cross, was omitted. It was ordered in 1226. on Account of a Sicknes called infernal Bite, with which the Inhabitants of that Country were afflicted at that Time.

ADDITIONS and CORRECTIONS to the CEREMONIES of the GRECIANS, &c.

THE manner of giving the Habit or Clothing a Nun in Russia, was omitted in its proper Place, neither is it accompanied with any peculiar Circumstance or worth Notice : We shall therefore only refer our Readers to the new Memoirs of Russia, Pag. 234. of the French Edition printed at Paris in 1725. The Author of that Work mentions a Sect called Roscolnicks, who are strict Observers of the antient Liturgies, and are Dissenters from the Church of Russia, which they look upon as not Orthodox upon Account of some Alterations of Ceremonies. They live in Woods and remote Places to avoid the Persecutions of the Russians who follow the Grecian Rite.

We must add to what is said of the Drusians, the following Particulars^b. They inhabit part of Mount Libanus, the Hills about Seyd and Balbak, the Country of Hebail and Tripoli, and reach to Egypt. They pretend to be Descendants of some of those who went with Godfrey of Bouillon, to conquer the Holy Land in 1099 : That after the Loss of Jerusalem, they retired into the Mountains from the Turks, who pursued them in order to kill and destroy all the Christians, whose very Name was become odious.

Some Historians assure us that the Earl of Dreux, being defeated by Saladin, his Soldiers fled to, and intrenched themselves in, the Mountains, settled there, and took the Name of Drusians in Memory of their Leader ; but their Name was known in those Countries before the Croisades, from whence it appears the Origin is of an antienter Date.

^a Morsus infernalis.

^b See the 6th Volume of Memoires des Missions du Levant.

Their Books often compare the Union which they ought to entertain one with the other, their Steadiness in punctually observing their own Laws, Customs, and Ceremonies, to the Union of the two Parts of a Man's Skull : The Line or Sutura, which joins those two Parts, is called in Arabian, Deuz, from whence they probably might be called in the same Language Derzz, or in the Plural Number Derouz, that is, an united Nation, and from thence by Corruption Drusians.

They own for their Lawgiver an Egyptian, called by them Bomrillah, El Ubazem, Mawlana, that is, the Wife, our Judge and our Master; he appeared, they ignorantly say, only two thousand Years after Mahomet, was honoured as their King by his Disciples, who never came into his Presence without casting themselves at his Feet.

Their Religion is a monstrous Medley of Christianity, which they heretofore professed, and of Mahometan Customs and Ceremonies, taken up by them either from their daily Intercourse with the Turks, or rather out of Policy, to obtain their Friendship and Protection.

The Book left them by their Lawgiver is carefully preserved ; it is divided into three Sections or Letters, and contains, as they say, all the Mysteries of their Religion.

Besides this first, they likewise admit a second Lawgiver, whom they call Hamze, and say he was a holy Man and Disciple of the other. He wrote three Books^a for their Instruction, and charges them not to communicate their Contents to any Stranger whatever : This is probably the Reason, why they keep them under Ground, and take them out only on Fridays, which are their Days of Meeting, to read them to the Congregation.

Their Women are supposed to be better versed in their Religion, and are respected as such ; they teach each other, and explain their two Lawgivers Books, recommending Secrecy above all Things : This they keep so faithfully, that to this Day we know nothing of it, but a Number of fabulous Stories with which the Drusians fill their wild Imaginations.

There are two Sorts of Drusians, called in the Arabick Tukama, or Ukkal, that is, prudent, wise, spiritual ; and Jubbal, which signifies an unsteady, imprudent, ignorant Mind. The first Sort always wear dark coloured Clothes, carry no Kanjac, that is, Sword or Dagger to their Girdle ; they lead a reformed, retired, abstemious Life ; abhor Theft, insomuch that they will not receive what is given them, for fear it should have been unjustly acquired ; they accept more freely the Gifts of Country labouring Men, than those of the rich, as being earned by the Sweat of their Brows : They stick to the Koran, are circumcised, fast the Rhamadan, abstain from Hogs Flesh, and observe other Turkish Superstitions.

The second Sort are not admitted to the Assemblies of the former, they are ignorant of the Mysteries of their Religion, or rather live without any, and by Consequence lead disorderly Lives, without any Remorse, supposing no more is required of them, than to say a few Prayers in Honour of their Lawgiver Bomrillah, and to utter some Expressions used by the spiritual Drusians, viz. Ma, Fib, Elah, Ella, Hu, that is, no God but him : This is their Profession of Faith, which they often repeat, chiefly when they worship their Lawgiver's Statue, which is of Gold or Silver ; they shut it up in a wooden Box, and shew it only on their most solemn

^a This Work is in the French King's Library.

Days: They fancy that when they offer their Prayers to it, they are speaking to God himself, such is their Veneration for this Idol. Bagelin and Fredis, two Villages situate in the Mountains where the chief Drusians inhabit, are the only two Places honoured, as they term it, with the Possession of their great Lawgiver's Statue.

To the Note about the Abrahamites, this may be added. "We are inclined to believe, they are a kind of Sabeans; yet it seems there is such a Sect in the East, little worth Notice, as having but few Members, and none of any Consideration. So says Herbelot in his Biblioth. Orient. on the Word Ibrabimiab."

After the Article of the said Abrahamites, add what follows. "Hide, Pag. 555. of his Work de Relig. Persar. Vcter. mentions a small Sect of about a thousand Souls, which he calls Ckamfii or Solares. They have no Priests nor Doctors, no Places of meeting, but perform in Caves their religious Worship, the Mysteries of which are kept so secret, that they have not been discovered, even by those who have been converted to the Christian Religion. The Mahometans obliged them to declare themselves Members of some Christian Society; they made choice of the Jacobite Sect, baptize their Children, bury their Dead according to that Rite: Believe a God, (Hide says Ca'lam, by which doubtless they mean the Godhead) Hell and Judgment, and that Christ died for Mankind. They are strictly united amongst themselves, detest Usury, and when they receive any Thing from a Jew or a Mahometan, oblige him to swear he did not come by it that Way. May not this Sect be the same as the Houbames, mentioned in the Dissertation on the Adamites, upon the Credit of Thevenot, or a Branch of the Drusians, Nazarians or Jesidians, &c.

ADDITIONS and CORRECTIONS to the CEREMONIES of the IDOLA- TROUS NATIONS in the EAST- INDIES, &c.

TO what has been said of Brama and the Indians Trinity add this learned Note of De la Croze. "Brama^b comes from the Egyptian Word Piroumi, a Man: And has the same Signification in the holy Language of the Indians, called Samseret (or as Bernier has it, Hanscrit :) The Inhabitants of Malabar instead of Brama say Pirouma which comes still nearer to the Egyptian Word . . . in the Language of . . . Ceilan, Pirimba signifies also a Man." Some Missionaries pretend to have found several Representations of the Trinity amongst several Indian Idolaters. At Tudemala, for Instance, a Picture was worshipped representing an old Man, a young Man and a Bird, which was one only God, called Bidi, that is, Fate; and this Bidi these Indians said was the Author of all Things. The Missionaries readily explained this, in a Christian Sense of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. Navarette says the same was done in favour of San-Pao, the Idol of Tibet. Because without any Addition or Diminution, it was exactly like what was ^a Nullas Ecclesias, says Hide.

^b Hist. du Christianisme des Indes, Book 6.

A. Pulleyar B.B. Signes Superstieux et marques prophanes avec leurs couleurs. C.C.C. Sur le né seen in his Days on the high Altar of the Convent of the Trinity at Madrid. De la Croze makes in the above cited Work ^a, several curious Observations, very useful in tracing the Origin of Indian Idolatry.
D. Double Lingam.E.E. Lingam ou PILALLUS. F.F.. Marques tolérées par les Missionnaires avec les couleurs.

The same Writer and others take Notice that Ixora, or, as many Indians pronounce it, Ifuren, is the same with Osiris, pronounced Ysiris by the Egyptians.

The Idol Quenevadi seems to be the same which is worshipped in Malabar, and called Pulleyar, here represented in the Print. Pulleyar, say those Indians, presides over nuptial Ceremonies, is worn as an Ornament by the Indian Women about their Necks, is a Sign that they are no more Virgins, and serves them as a Preservative in the State of Womanhood.

The Lingam is akin to the Phallus. De la Croze, in the above cited Work, has some curious Remarks upon both, by which he proves, that the Worship of the Lingam is also from Egypt. He adds with a malicious Sncer, that it resembles St. Anthony's Cross: However, there are several Sorts of them, too obscene to be farther insisted on, but which may be seen in the Print with their Names and Colours; the Indians wear those superstitious Signs on their Forehead and Nose, and the Missionaries not being able to make them leave it quite off, have been obliged to allow their Profelytes the use of some that are least offensive.

The Indian Kings have a Morning Worship, which was forgot in the Article of the daily Order observed in their Prayers. They spend most of the Morning till Noon, in Offerings and Prayers punctually performed, and then they give no Audience.

The Cow-worship is doubtless derived from Egypt; the Virtues of their Dung have been rehearsed, but not a Word of their Weddings. De la Croze cites a Passage, by which we are informed that in the Year 1597 a rich Indian spent sixteen thousand Crowns on marrying his Cow to a Bull, of high Birth to be sure!

In the second Volume of idolatrous Religions, before these Words, all these Superstitions, &c. add this, "some Ingrians have a particular Religion which bears " some Affinity to Judaism. They have Lutheran Ministers, whom they despise; " on certain Days they repair to the Woods, consecrate a certain Number of Trees, " cut them down and burn them; with the Remains they raise a Pile of Wood upon " which they burn to Death a Cock, having first glutted themselves with Beer."

We shall conclude this whole Work with two Prayers, the one made by an Indian of Malabar runs thus, "O Sovereign of all Beings, Lord of Heaven and Earth, " I do not contain you in my Heart. Before whom shall I deplore my Misery, " my Help and Preservation is due to you, without you I cannot live, call me, O " Lord, that I may come to you" Again in another Prayer he says, "Lord " you have known me, when you created me, but I learnt to know you, only " when I became able to use my Reason you have given yourself to me, and " I have given myself to you you came to me, O God! like a Lightning from " Heaven" The other made by a Tartar of Tanguth or Boutan is as follows, "Our Prayer be to God. You who are raised above every Creature, give us Wis- " dom . . . whether I travel Evening or Morning be with me . . . shew Mercy . . . fend me my Guardian Angel, at all Hours, and all Days, have Mercy on the Dead, ^a De la Croze, besides his being versed in Antiquity, was helped by the Memoirs of the Catholic Missionaries, and of some Protestants, chiefly of Zingelbalg, a Danish Missionary at Franquebar.

“ and on the Living give me a holy Mind, a good Health, Strength, and “ good Success Be with me every Hour, and do not withdraw May “ the Blessing of the Lord, which is the Root of Roots, good Success come and “ stay upon me May the Blessing of the strengthening Angel be upon me !”
 Should any supercilious Critick ask why we have set down those Prayers, we answer, that 1^o. vulgar Christians may know by it that they are not the only Men, who offer their Prayers to God, with some Fervour : 2^o. This is also a Proof that even Pagans have sublime Notions of the Godhead. It must be owned, that it appears by holy Writ, and the Words of our Saviour ^a that most Heathens think only and pray for temporal Goods ; but these Prayers and some such we meet with in Antiquity, are also a convincing Argument that all of them were not so bold as to say with Horace ^b, that they could acquire by their own Industry, Wisdom, or a just and quiet Mind.

^a Matth. Chap. 5.

^b Det vitam, det opes, æquum mi animum ipse parabo.

T H E E N D.

I N D E X.

A.

A B A S I T S, Their War against the Dhsbia-nists, 3
Abdal, Signification of that Word, 126
Abdo'llach, How much he was beloved by all Women, 11. History of him, ibid. Was the Father of Mahomet, 12
Abrahamites, A Sect of that Name, very little known, 162
Abu-Gjekel, Chief of the Keraishites, 19. Is defeated and killed in a Battle against the Mussulmen, ibid.
Abu-Talib, Uncle and Tutor to Mahomet, 15. It was under him that Mahomet began the War against the Keraishites, ibid.
Acc, Son of Adnan and Father of the Accits, 8
Ad, Name of the Father of the Adits, 2. His Origin, ibid. Where he settled after the Confusion of Language, ibid.
Adad, Signifies whatever Mahomet has done once or twice, 57
Adam, Looked upon as a Prophet, 69
Adham, One of the most ancient Mahometan Quietists, 149. Opinions attributed to him, ibid.
Adits, A People of Arabia, 2. Worshipped three Idols, ibid. Represented as a Sort of Giants of an extraordinary Size, 3. How they were punished for their Incredulity, ibid.
Adnan, His Sons, 8
Adnery, Punishment inflicted by the Mahometans on a Man that accuses his Wife of that Crime, without being able to prove it, 113
Aera, Beginning of the Mahometan Aera, 123
Achuric, What, 113
Achul, Imposition of that false Prophet, 139
Adia (ilbert of), Cited, 83
Akhrat, A Sort of Adoption called so among the Turks, 115
Al-Malaf, A District of Arabia called so, 2. The Signification of that Word is moving Sands, ibid. Extension of that Country, ibid.
Al-dyad or Al-dy, Surnamed the Liar by the Mahometans, 139
Al-dal, Families sprung from him, 5
Al-Bu'i, Name of a Church-yard where several of Mahomet's Companions lye interred, 29
Al-brack, Name of Mahomet's white Mare, 18
Al-Dhikr, Signification of that Word, 49
Al-madar, Name the Turks give to the Bearer of Mahomet's green Standard, 124
Alfican, Signification of it, 49
Al-fahed, Name of the Chief of a Sect that held the Koran to be an animated Being, sometimes a Man, and sometimes a Beast, 54
Al, Declaration Mahomet ordered him to make that no Infidel should ever be admitted into Paradise, 23. Invested with the Dignity of a Millionary, ibid. His Conversion, ibid.
Al-Kalam, A Sort of Theology to which the Mahometans give that Name, 137
Alons, How many Sorts among the Mahometans, 75. What they are allowed to give, ibid. In what manner bestowed, ibid.
Al-Nachais, Origin of that People, 6
Al-Tai, Families sprung from him, 6
Al-Yas, Called the Prince of the People, 8. His good Qualities, ibid.
Ally, How great Veneration the Persians have for him, 134
Amala, Tribes sprung from him, 6
Amala, What, ibid.

Vol. VII.

Amlab, One of Saba's Sons, 5
Amru, Son of Saba, 6
Anas, Father of a Tribe of Arabians, ibid.
Angels, Notion of the Mahometans concerning them, 67
Animosity, How great between the Persians and the Turks, 142
Anmar, What Families are sprung from him, 6
Apostles from God, What Distinction the Mahometans make of them, 68, 69
Arabia, Origin of the Name of that Country, 1
Arabians called Moslarabians. See that Word.
Arabians (Pure and unmixed), Who are designed by that Appellation, 2. Part in which they settled, ibid.
Arabians, Tribes into which they are divided, 2
Arabians (primitive or ancient), Looked upon as the first Inhabitants of Arabia after the Flood, 2. How they are distinguished, ibid.
Artus Thomas, Cited, 78
Ascharians, A Sect among the Mahometans, 137. Idea they have of God, ibid.
Aschari, Name of the Founder of a Sect among the Mahometans, 137
Ajarites, Origin of that Tribe of Arabians, 6
Azar, One of Saba's Sons, 5
Aus, or Us, His Origin, 2

B.

B A B A, Time in which lived that false Prophet, 141. His Companion, ibid. Preached Sword in Hand to both Christians and Mahometans, ibid. His Profession of Faith, ibid.
Babat, Called the Founder of the Merry Religion, 140. Made an open Profession of Impiety. ibid.
Bairam, The Mahometans have two Feasts of that Name, the one they call the great Bairam, and the other the little one, 128
Babets, Origin of that People, ibid.
Barekites, Their Origin, 5
(Bayle), Cited, 100
Beckaschits, A Sect among the Mahometans, 147. Many Janizaries have embraced it, ibid. They deprive God of all his Attributes, ibid. Origin of their Name, ibid. Called Zeratists, because they think Incest lawful, ibid. Time they began to appear, ibid. Nicknamed Alum-scanduren, which signifies who put out the Candle, ibid.
Belarmin (Cardinal), Cited, 78
Beng or Benghe. See Heng.
Behaira, Owns Mahomet for God's Apostle, 14
Becks, (Sacred and Divine), Notion of the Mussulmen on that Point, 67, and 68
Bestangis, Who called by that Name among the Turks, 131
Bridge (the Sharp), Is in the Opinion of the Mahometans a Bridge over which all Mankind must go after Death, 68. How easily the Just shall pass it over, ibid.

C.

C A' A B, His great Authority among the Arabians, 10. Changed the Name of Friday which was called Araba, to that of Gjama'a, ibid. His Instructions and Exhortations, ibid.
Cabin, A kind of half Marriage so called among the Turks, 112
Cadbarians, Their Belief, 138
Cadilifquers, Who, 123

U u

Cadiza-

I N D E X.

Cadizoddits, A Sect among the Turks, 146. Are melancholy and severe, ibid. Affect an extraordinary Gravity, ibid. Avoid all Kinds of Diversions, ibid. Words they repeat incessantly, ibid. They observe punctually all the Ceremonies and Rules of their Religion, ibid. Apply themselves to the Art of disputing Pro and Con, ibid. Looked upon as perfect Hypocrites in their whole Conduct, ibid. How much they despise all those that are not of their own Sect, ibid. In what Families they marry their Children, ibid. Their Discipline, ibid.

Cahan, A Son of Saba, 5. Tribes issued from him, ibid.

C. J., His Origin, 5

Calendars or Calendars, See Santens.

Canal, Religious Veneration we are told the Mahometans have for them, 1-6. That Animal proposed in the Koran as an Emblem of God's Wisdom, ibid.

Capt. Gey, or Capan Agah, Signification of those Words, 131

Carnal, Time in which he attacked the Church of Mahomet, 122. He held twelve Disciples, and called them his Apostles, 12. Inspired not by the Governor of the Province, a young Galilean, but by the Devil, 122. New Point of View, 122. He was among the Turks, 122. In what manner he explained the Precepts of the Law, 122. The Disciples, 121

Carnal, of the Mahometans, or Abjuration of their Tribes, 65

Carnal, With the Turks give the Name to, 125

Carnal, Signification of that Term, 125

Chalch or Chalch, A small sect among the Mahometans kept to secret that they could not as yet be discovered, 162. How much they despise Umay, ibid.

Chalch or Chalch, Name the Mahometans give to a Minister of their Religion, 124

Chalch or Chalch, Approved by most of the Mahometan Doctors, 126. Whether they are forbid by Mahomet under the Name of Images, ibid.

Chalch, Their Functions, 132

Chalch, A Festival kept by the Iranian Mahometans, 127. What they use to do on that Day, ibid.

Chalch, Have been charged to many Calumnies, 21. Impurities they have been charged with, ibid. Accused of being infidels, ibid. Some Heathen Authors have spoke of them with Moderation, how little Conformity there is between their Doctrine and their Lives, 17

Chalch, Name of a Sect lately sprung up at Constantinople, embraced by most of the chief Men of the Seraglio, 145. They believe that Christ is God, and the Redeemer of the World, ibid. Some have suffered Martyrdom for the Profession of it, 145

Chalch, Whether Mahomet borrowed it from the Jews, 106. At what Age performed among the Mahometans, 115. Necessary in hot Climates, ibid. Pompous Manner in which a Child is led to be circumcised, ibid. Different from that of a grown up Person, 116

Chalch, What Wonder is related of Mahomet's white Cock, 28

Chalch, Only tolerated among the Mahometans, 107

Chalch, A Sect that attributed some Divinity to the Virgin Mary, 2. Origin of their Name, ibid.

Commence (day), Cited, 72

Compensation on the last Day, Idea the Mahometans entertain of it, 62

Cow, Reason that have prompted the East-Indians to worship them, 136. An Account of one that a rich Indian married to a Bull at great Expence, 163

Cusa (Cardinal), Cited, 78

D.

D. J. (St. J. A.), Cited, 7

Dance, What Sort of Dancing in use among the Mahometans, 110

Danish, Origin of that People, 5

D. J., What they are among the Turks, 126

D. J., Signification of that Word, 125

D. J., Name given to the Mahometan religious Disciples, 126

De Hout, An Account of their War against the Mahometans, 9

De Hout, An Account of it, 114. Seldom practised among the Mahometans, and why, ibid. Have three different Sorts of Divorce, 115

De Hout, What Country they inhabit, 160. What they compare their Umay to, 161. Who they own for their Lawgiver, ibid. Their Religion a religious Medley of Christianity and Mahometanism, ibid. All the Mahometans of their Religion contained in one Book let down by their Lawgiver, ibid. Their Worship the Teachers of the time, ibid. Their Disciples, 122. There are two Sorts of Mahometans, ibid. Mahomet called and, ibid.

De Hout or De Hout, Name the Mahometans give to a Minister of their Religion, 124. Looked upon as infidels by the Mahometans, ibid.

De Hout, His Office among the Turks, 131

De Hout, See De Hout.

De Hout, Name of one Month among the Mahometans, 127. Kept as sacred among the ancient Arabians, ibid.

De Hout, A Prophet according to the Mahometans, 69. Number of Dead he raised to Life, ibid.

E.

E. J. or E. J., His Functions, among the Turks, 131

E. J., An Order of Mahometan Hermits in Persia, who lead a very austere Life, 126

E. J., Signification of that Word, 124

E. J., Who they are among the Mahometans, 123

E. J., Their great Privileges, 124

E. J., Signification of that Word, 133

E. J. or E. J., A Sect of Platonicians among the Turks, 117. Own the Trinity of God, which they explain by three Folds of one Handkerchief, ibid. All the Scholars and able Preachers of the royal Mosques are of this Sect, ibid. Are Lovers of Musick and Poetry, ibid. Their great Affability, ibid. Prete able to all the other Sects among the Mahometans, ibid.

F.

F. J., Is to be found in all Religions, 126

F. J., Name the Mahometans give to every Thing clearly declared in the Koran, 57

F. J., Condition the Mahometans believe necessary to make it acceptable to God, 75. How many Things render it void and useless, 76

F. J. or F. J., Pilgrimages of the Mahometans to her Tomb, 135

F. J., His Character, 9, His Sons, ibid.

F. J. of the Mosque, How it is announced to the People among the Turks, 129. Great Rejoicings on that Occasion, ibid.

F. J. (Royal), Description of it among the Persians, 129

F. J., Looked upon by the Mahometans as an instrument sacred by the use Jacob and other holy Shepherds have made of it, 110

F. J., Kept holy by the Mahometans, as Saturday by the Jews, and Sunday by Christians, 127. Called by them the Chief and most excellent of all Days, ibid.

I N D E X.

G.

- GAGNIE R, Cited, 1
Gash, A Sort of Ablution to which the Moslems give that Name, 72
Genebrardus, Archbishop of Aix, What he has laid to the Charge of the Protestants, 42
Giubarians, Inevitable Fate to which they think all Men are subject, 138
Giadis, Country in which he settled after the Confusion of Languages, 4 Giadists, Their Origin, 4. Utterly destroyed by the King of Arabia Felix, ibid.
Giamb, Arabian Family of that Name, 6
Gieft, Origin of that Arabian Family, 6
Giurham, Name of the Founder of the Kingdom of Hyaz or Hegias, 2. His Origin, ibid.
God, What Idea the Mahometans have of him, 66
Grave (Examen of the) Is according to the Mahometans an Examination which every one is to undergo after Death by two Angels, 59
Grecians, Additions and Corrections to their Ceremonies, 160. Dissenters they have in Russia, ibid.
Gregory the Great, What Dispensation he granted to the English to bring them over to Christianity, 20
Grelot, Cited, 81
Guadagnole (Philip), Proves that the Koran is full of Contradictions, 37
Gualterius, What he lays to the Charge of the Mahometans, 71

H.

- HABBA, A kind of Gown the devout Mahometans throw over their Shoulders after Purification, 127
Hadith, Signification of that Word, 136
Hadramaut, A Country of South Arabia, called by that Name which signifies Mezing Saints, 2
Hagar, Wife to Ibrahim or Abraham, 7. Banished to Mecca, where she dies, ibid.
Hainctites, A Sect among the Mahometans, 143. Signification of that Name, ibid. They call every thing in Question, ibid. Hold that Demonstration and Probability are impossible Things, ibid. Their Answer to any controverted Point, ibid. Punctual Observers of the Ceremonies of the Mahometan Religion, ibid. Drink Wine notwithstanding to avoid the Imputation of being morose and unfociable, ibid.
Hakem Ben Hafehem, Time in which that false Prophet made his Appearance among the Mahometans, 139. Got a strong Party by his Tricks of Legerdemain, ibid. Followed by some Christians, ibid. His Doctrine, ibid. Threw himself into a Cistern full of Aqua Fortis to make his Followers believe he was gone to bring them some Help, ibid. How long his Sect subsisted after him, ibid.
Hama, Time of his Birth, 8. His Sons, ibid.
Haman, Whether Mahomet makes him Contemporary with Pharash, 94
Hamdan, People descended from him, 6
Hamir, One of Saba's Sons, 5. Tribes sprung from him, ibid.
Hanabalians, A Sect of Mahometans composed of some Arabians, 138
Hannifians, A Sect among the Mahometans, 138. Origin of that Name ibid. Followed by the Turks, Tartars, and the Mahometans of Ferak, ibid.
Haram, What, 57
Hafhem, Surnamed the Sublime. His good Qualities, 10
Heaven, What the Mahometans believe on that Point, 62
Heber. See Hud.
Hegias, Name of a Kingdom in Arabia, 2
Hegira. See Fira.

- Hell, Idea of the Mahometans on that Subject, 64
Hong, Bing, or Bingbe, A Sort of Drug very much used by the Turks, 108. Effect it produces, ibid.
Hyaz. See Hegias.
Hidalia, A Town bordering on the sacred Territory of Mecca, 20. Miracles wrought in that Place by Mahomet, ibid.
Hedgias, Names of the Mahometan Preachers, who are Doctors and Lawyers, all together, 124
Hegs, Held as unclean by the Mahometans, 96
Hernius, Cited, 73
Hornbui, Cited, ibid.
Hessin. See Hoffin.
Hud, Whether he be the same with Heber, 2. Sent to the Adits to preach to them the Unity of God, ibid. An Account of his Mission, ibid. Place in which his Tomb is to be seen, 3 Hujain or Hoffin, Festival kept in Persia in Memory of the Martyrdom of the Children of Abi, 130. Extraordinary Lamentations made on that Occasion, ibid.

I.

- Abajabits or Jalajachits. A Sect among the Mahometans, who hold that God is not All-knowing, but that his Knowledge increases by Experience, 145
Jenghar-Haghi, or General of the Janissaries. His Functions in Turkey, 132
Idians Nations in the East-Indies, See Additions and Corrections to their Ceremonies, 162. Origin of the Names of Brama Indra and Queen Sadi, ibid. Morning Worship of the Indian Kings, ibid. A Specimen of the Prayers of some idolatrous Men, 163, 164
Ibis, Whether he is the same with Ensch, 68.
Jews, Accused often of divers Crimes with out just Grounds, 40
Jews, Thought to have borrowed the Ceremony of the Tahb from the Romans, 157. Their Confession at the Point of Death in some Parts of Italy, ibid. An Apology published by a learned Rabbin to justify them from various Crimes they have been charged with, 158
Imams, Name of the Parish Priests among the Mahometans, 124. Their Qualifications and Functions, ibid.
Indifferents, A Sect of Mahometan Latitudinarians, 149. Looked upon as no better than Heathens, by both the Sunites and the Shiites, who make up the two great opposite Parties in which the Mahometans are divided, ibid.
Ingrians, Religion of some of that Nation, 163
Ishmael, His Birth-place, 7. Time in which he was circumcised, ibid. Banished to Mecca, ibid. Alliances he contracted, ibid. His Wife and Children, ibid. Time of his Death, ibid.
Jeseph, Surnamed Dhu-Novas. Accused of having used the Christians with much Severity, 6
Ishizuptar or Cubdar or Cuptar Aga. What he is among the Turks, 131
Islamijm, Signification of that Word, 54
Ijrafil, Name of the Angel who according to the Mahometans shall sound the Trumpet on the last Day, 60
Judgment, Belief of the Mahometans, that there will be a Day of Judgment, 61

K.

- KAFAR S, Origin of that Name, 144
Kais, Son of Modbar, illustrious by the Number of Tribes and Families descended from him, 8. A Description of them, 9
Kathan or Tetan, Considered as the Father of the pure or unmixed Arabians, 5. His Sons, ibid.
Kadezalites, Name of some Sectaries among the Mahometans, for the most part Christian Apostates, 145. Their Tenets, ibid.
Kenda,

I N D E X.

Kenda, Families sprang from him, 6
Keramians, Name of a Sect among the Mahometans, 128. Idea they have of God, ibid.
Khalifa, Name of a rich Merchant's Widow, to whom Mahomet became Factor at 25 Years of Age, 15. She courts and marries him, ibid.
Khaligists, Their Origin, 5
Kishir, Origin of their Name, 5. Place where they settled, ibid. Grew very powerful, ibid.
Kishir, Son of Imam, - The same with Eli or Chir mentioned in the Bible, 11. Advantage God had favoured him with, ibid. The Number of his Wives, ibid.
Kishir Agaz, What that Office is among the Turks, 131
Kishir (David), What that Rashid reproaches to the Perfians, 86
Kishir, Signification of that Word, 49
Kishir, King of the Province of Saba, His Origin, 5. Tribes sprang from him, ibid.
Kishir, In a battle defeated by the M. T. M., 18. Time in which that famous Battle was fought, ibid. Mahomet himself was in the Battle, ibid.
Kishir, Signification of that Word, 40. Different Names the Mahometans give to the Kishir, ibid. The Number of the Chapters it contains, ibid. Seven chief Copies of it, 50. Places where they have been made, ibid. Mysterious Letters at the Head of some Chapters, 51
Kishir, Legacy of the Style in which it is wrote, 51. The Figures in it very bold, ibid. Looked upon by the Mahometans as a standing Miracle, ibid. Is according to some, uncreated and eternal, 52. A Copy of it brought by the Angel Gabriel to the lowest Heaven, ibid.
Kishir, Many Passages in it might furnish some Parallel between the Christian and Mahometan Religion, 52. Has occasioned many Commentaries and Expositions, 53. Dispute concerning the Eternity of it, 54. Sect that maintain it to be an animated Being, Person of a Man, sometimes a Beast, ibid.
Kishir, Whether Mahomet be declared it unintelligible to Men, 100. Whether no mention is made in it of an immortal God and Creator of all Things, ibid.
Kishir. See Ishtar.

I.

L E P E R S, What gives occasion to imagine that there was a great many Lepers among the Israhelites, 20
Livian, Curious Remarks upon it, 165
Leban, Holiness of that Arabian, and his Conversation with God, 3

M.

M A' A D, Origin of that Arabian's Name, 8
Mahomet, His Depredations upon the Israhelites, ibid.
Maccarius, Cited, 85
Mactub, What, 57
Madhisi, Families that owe their Origin to him, 6
Madmen, Why the Mahometans think them holy Men inspired by God, 149
Mahmud-ben-faray, Chief of a Sect or Party among the Mahometans, 140. Pretended to be Moses risen again, ibid.
Mahomet or Mohammed, His Genealogy, 6. Surnamed Abul-Kasem, ibid. His Birth foretold by all the Arabian Witches, 11. Time in which it happened, 13. Attended with Prodigies, ibid. 14. His constant Cleanliness, ibid. His Father dying he is put under the Tuition of an Uncle, ibid. His Voyage to Syria, where he is owned as God's Apostle, ibid. The Seal of Prophecy imprinted on his Shoulders, 15. Wisdom and Modesty the Ornaments of his youth, ibid. Why called Al-Muvin or Faithful, ibid. Serves under Ala-Tahh his Uncle in the War against the Koraghtes at 10 Years of Age, ibid. Becomes a Factor to a rich Widow at 25, ibid. Miracles he did at Bysa, ibid. Is courted by the Widow and marries her, 15. His Children by her, ibid. Retires into a Solitude in a Cave near Mecca, ibid. Declared a Prophet at 40 Years of Age, ibid.

Mahomet, In what consisted his Mission, 15. His Idea of Christianity, ibid. Who he called true Israhelites, 16. Night in which he received the true Gift of Prophecy, ibid. Time he was wont to retire into his Cave, ibid. His Conversation with the Angel Gabriel, ibid. His Faintness after a Vision, ibid. Receives the Rite of Ablution with Prayers, ibid. Publishes his Mission, ibid. Preaches publicly and with Authority, ibid. Accused of Witchcraft by his Enemies, 17. In what that Arabian can be compared to Jesus Christ, ibid.
Mahomet, His Voyage from Mecca to Jerusalem, and thence to the highest Heaven in one Night, 18. New Oath or Fidelity he requires from his Followers, ibid. His Flight to Medina, ibid. Begins the War against the Unbelievers of Mecca, ibid. Orders all the Faithful to turn towards that Place in their Prayer, ibid. Ordains the grand Fast of Ramadan, ibid. Victory he gains over the Koraghtes, ibid. His other Conquests, ibid. Return of his army, and his illness on the drinking of Wine, ibid. Provides Water to his Followers in a miraculous Manner, 20. Veneration of the Mahometans for him, ibid. Resolution of his to send Embassies to foreign Princes, 21. Potentates he wrote to, ibid. His Wars against the Yemenis, ibid.
Mahomet, His Pilgrimage to Mecca, 21. His War against the Yemenis, 22. Deputation sent to him to pay him Homage, 23. His spiritual Conquest of the Yemenis, a People bordering upon Souda, ibid. Makes a new Pilgrimage to Mecca, escorted by a hundred thousand Men, 24. Alters the Arabian Calendar, 25. His Orders in the Height of his dying Sickness, 26. Last Testimony of the great Hero he bore to the Yemenis, ibid. His Death and Obsequies, ibid. 27. What is related of his Grave, ibid. Advantageous Description of his Body, ibid.
Mahomet, Austerity of his Life, 27. The Number of his Wives, ibid. Wonders related of that Prophet's Cock, 28. Privilege he reserved to himself alone of conversing with his Women on Fasting-days, ibid. Of glancing amorously at other Women, and be with them in private, ibid. His Tomb guarded by an Angel, ibid.
Mahomet, His Character 31. His Measures in establishing a new System of Religion, ibid. 32. How his Followers justify his Polygamy, ibid. Gained an Arabian Astrologer over to his Interests, and induced him to foretell to the People the great Revolution he intended, 33. His political Views in building a Temple at Medina, ibid.
Mahomet, Whether he took Pharazab under whom Moses was brought up, to be the same that was drowned in the Red Sea, 98. Accused of placing Mecca in the Country of the Hammonites, ibid. Whether he contradicts himself in his Koran, in saying sometimes that he could read, and sometimes that he could not, 99. Other Contradictions laid to his Charge, 100. Whether according to him Man was made of a Leech, 103. Whether he denied the Immortality of the Soul, ibid. 104
Mahomet Ben-Koran, Chief of a Sect among the Mahometans, who maintained the Corporality of God, 138
Mahomet Esfendi, Name of an Atheist executed at Constantinople, for speaking impudently against the Deity, 146. Argument he made use of to prove that there was no God, ibid. His surprizing Constancy, or rather Obstinacy, in maintaining that detestable Opinion

I N D E X.

- Opinion, choosing rather to die than to renounce his blasphemous Tenets, ibid.
- Mahometans*, Whether averse to dispute about Religion, 45. What is to be distinguished on that Point. ibid. The Freedom of disputing with them has been greater than it now is, 46
- Mahometans*, Idea they have of the Prophets of the Old Testament, 55. The Number of Apostles they reckon to have been appointed to withdraw Mankind from Corruption, ibid. Look upon Religion as a publick Good, 56. Whether they favour Latitudinarians, ibid. Their Idea of the Immenfity of God, ibid. Their Profession of Faith, 58. and foll. What they think of Providence and Predestination, 59
- Mahometans*, Whether they adore all Creatures, 84. Accused of denying Providence, ibid. Whether they hold that God prays himself for Mahomet, 85. Whether they deny Hell, ibid. How many Heavens or different Degrees of Happiness they own, ibid. Accused of believing, that the bare washing of their Bodies, can blot out the Sins of the Soul, 86. Whether according to their Principles, the Devils are Friends of God and Mahomet, 87. Whether they admit female Angels, ibid.
- Mahometans*, Whether they are Originists, 89. Accused of proposing nothing in Heaven but sensual and carnal Happiness, 90. Of denying the Salvation of Women, 91. Whether they deny the Death of Jesus Christ, 91. Whether they reckon Dogs among the clean Beasts, 96. Animals which they do not touch, ibid. 97. Whether they hold it as an Article of their Faith, that they may lawfully break their Treaties with those they call Infidels, ibid. Whether they can marry as many Wives as they think proper, 100, 101
- Mahometans*, Whether they wash their Faces without proper Precautions, 102. Their most usual Diversions, 109, 110. Great Regard they have for Marriage, 112. In what Degree they can marry their Relations, ibid. Punishment they inflict on a Man who accuses his Wife of Adultery, and cannot prove it, 113. Their Funerals, 117, and foll. Their Mourning, 121
- Mahometans*, Fervency that appears in their Prayers, 127. Instruments of their Devotion, ibid. Number of their Months, 128. Their Feasts, ibid. and foll.
- Mahometism*, See Religion of the Turks.
- Malicians*, a Sect of Mahometans, which comprehends the Mozors of Africa, 138
- Mahomigists*, called otherwise the Knowing. They teach that God may be known perfectly in this World, 145
- Mary*, Whether the Mahometans believe that the Virgin Mary became pregnant by eating Dates, 95
- Marracci*, cited, 43
- Marriage*, How transacted among the Turks, 111. Several Sorts amongst them, 112. Privilege of the Wife to sue her Husband for Marriage-duty, ibid. Ceremonies practised at a Grandee's Marriage with an Ottoman Princess, 113, 114
- Murfigli*, (Count), cited, 136
- Mazdae*, his Doctrine, and his great Number of Followers, 31
- Meats*, Distinction of the Mahometans on that Subject, 110
- Mevclava*, Signification of that Term, 125
- Mevclavites*, An Order of Mahometan Monks, 125. What they profess, ibid. Their Habit, 126
- Mifchna*, Signification of that Word, 138
- Mezzachulians*, or Magbulits, A Sect among the Mahometans, 145. Their Tenets, ibid.
- Mobah*, What, 56
- Modhar*, Virtue of that Arabian, 9
- Modrecab*, His Qualities, 9
- Mogiaffemians*, A Sect who follow Mahomet Ben-Keran's Doctrine, 138
- Moharram*, Name the Mahometans give to one of Vol. VII. 3
- their Months, 128. Locked upon as sacred by the ancient Arabians, ibid.
- Moine* (Mir. 10), Accuses the Mahometans of adoring Venus in private, 82
- Molla*, See Mirzas
- Munkir*, Name of one of the two Angels which the Mahometans believe will give the Dead a new Life, examine their Faith and Works, and punish the Guilty, 133
- Monks* (Mahometan), See Dervises.
- Months*, How reckoned by the Mahometans, 123
- Moradites*, Their Origin, 6
- Mordich's*, Signification of that Term, 119
- Morgians*, Beliet attributed to that Sect, 138
- Mosliman*, Surnamed the Liar, and why, 139
- Moslarabians*, Name given to those who became Arabians, either by settling amongst, or contracting Alliance with the pure Arabians, 2. Are the Offspring of Ishmael, ibid.
- Mestike*, What, 57
- Metanali*, An enthusiastick Poet, who lived at the Beginning of the third Century of the Hegira, 141. Endeavoured to form a Sect, ibid. Forced to retract his chimerical Opinions, ibid.
- Motazales*, or Motazalites, A Sect among the Mahometans, 138. Their Belief, ibid.
- Moula's*, Judges and Doctors in Turkey called by that Name, 123
- Muefims*, Name given by the Mahometans to those that call the People to Prayers, 124
- Musti*, Functions and Prerogatives of that Chief of the Turkish Clergy, 123. Officers he has under him, ibid. His Place of Residence, ibid.
- Munfichists*, Sectaries among the Turks, who believe the Transmigration of Souls, 147
- Muferim*, Signification of that Word, 146
- Muferims*, A Kind of Atheists among the Turks, 146. How they explain the Cause of every Thing in Nature, ibid. Their Increase at Constantinople astonishing, ibid. Most of them Renegado Christians, ibid. Mahomet Efendi, Author of that Opinion, ibid. Has infected the Women and Eunuchs of the Seraglio, the Beyhas and most of the Court, ibid. The Followers of that Sect exceedingly hospitable to one another, ibid.
- Mutafuraca*, Signification of that Term, 132

N.

- NABET*, Name of Ishmael's eldest Son, 7
- Nadhamians*, What they believed concerning God, 138
- Nakil Efeures*, Signification of that Term, 124
- Nakir*, An Angel, who, together with another called Munkir, shall, according to the Mahometans, punish the Guilty, 68. See Munkir.
- New Year*, (Royal or Imperial), See Festival (Royal).

O.

- OCKLEY*, Professor at Cambridge, cited, 104
- Odad*, His Qualities, 8. Considered as the first of the Ishmaelites, that made Use of a Reed to write with, ibid.
- Oman*, A Country of Arabia, 2
- Omrabs*, What they were, 133
- Opium*, forbid by the Rigorists among the Mahometans, 108
- Ouch-talat*, Divorce the Turks call by that Name, 115

P.

- PEIKS*, Who are called so in Turkey, 131
- Pentateuch*, Whether altered by the Jews and Christians, 55
- Perck* or Pirka, Signification of it, 49
- Persians*, Number of their Feasts, 129. How many Miracles they reckon in the Koran, 135

X x

Peter

I N D E X.

- Peter Gregory, of Thoulouse, cited,* 100
Pilgrims of Mecca, Their great Privilege, 134
Pius II. (Pope), Cited, 84
Plutarch, Criticised, 40
Prayers, Rules prescribed on that Point among the Mahometans, 74. Called by them the Key of Heaven, 127
Prayers, A Specimen of the Prayers of some idolatrous Men, 153, 164
Prophets, How the Prophets of the Old Testament, used to deliver their Prophecies, 53. Manner in which the Heathenish Oracles were delivered, ibid.
Protestants, Calumniated by the Roman Catholics, 42
Phalgar, An Idol worshipped in Malabar, 163
Purgatory, Belief of the Mahometans on that Point, 62
Purifications, How many Sorts among the Mahometans, 72. What they are bound to do on that Occasion, ibid. Reasons that render it necessary, 73

Q.

- Quietists of the East, Great Number of them among the Mahometans, 149. Are as extravagant and unintelligible as our Mysticks, ibid. Opinions attributed to them,* ibid.

R.

- RABIA, Name the Mahometans give to one of their Months,* 128
Raimond Lulle, His Disputes with the Mahometans, 45
Religions, most of them misrepresented and ill understood by those of a contrary Persuasion, 40
Religion of the Turks, How much the Corruption of the Christians has contributed to its Progress, as well as the Decline of the Greek and Roman Empire, and that of the Persian Monarchy, 30, 31. What renders it so odious to the Christians, 32. Why so little known, 42. Parallel or the same with Christianity, 43. Whether necessary to be inquired into, 44
Regis, Name of a Month among the Mahometans, 128. Looked upon as sacred by the ancient Arabians, ibid.
Resurrection, Idea of the Mahometans on that Point, 60
Rhamadan, Name of a Month among the Mahometans, 128
Rhamadham, Fast called so by the Mahometans, 129. Is a Mixture of Devotion and Debauchery, ibid.
Roman Catholics, Additions and Corrections to their Ceremonies, 159. Unintelligible Stuff contained in one Book approved by their Doctors, 160. Procession of the Infernal Bits, ibid.
Refrinick, A Sect so called in Russia, 160. Are strict Observers of the ancient Liturgies, and look upon the Church of Russia as not orthodox, ibid. Live in Woods and remote Places to avoid Persecution, ibid.

S.

- SABIA, Tribes sprung from him,* 5
SABEANS, A Sect introduced among the Mahometans, 127. Believe the Sun and the Moon have some divine Qualities, &c. Some Physicians and Astronomers have embraced that Opinion, ibid. Their Way of living not severe, ibid. Are not nice Observers of religious Ceremonies, ibid. They do not revenge Injuries, thinking them necessary Influences of the Stars, ibid.
Sabeans, Who they are, 153. Said by an Arabian Author to be the most ancient People of the World, ibid. Are to be distinguished in two Sorts, 154. Several eminent Men in Antiquity, might be ranked amongst them, ibid. How they preserved the Idea of a supreme Being, ibid.
Sabeans, Believe one God, yet paid Adoration to the Planets, 154. Their Notion concerning the Punish-

- ment of the Wicked, ibid. In what consists their Devotion, ibid. 155. Have a great Veneration for the Temple of Mecca, and the Pyramids of Egypt, ibid. Own Seth as their first Master, and call him The Prophet of God, ibid. Value a Book which they think was left them by Enock, ibid. A Specimen of their Prayers, ibid. Are said to have been Pra-Adamites,* 156
Sale (Mr.), Cited, 1
Saleh, Origin of that Arabian, 3. Sent to the Thamudites to preach to them the Unity of God, ibid. Miracle they required of him, 4. Time of his Death, ibid.
Salibites, Habitation of that People, 5. By whom vanquished, ibid.
Santons, Name of certain Friars among the Mahometans, 126. Their scandalous Way of Living, ibid. Their Habits, ibid. Called Calenders or Calenderans, ibid. One of their Tenets shews how dangerous they are to Religion and Society, ibid.
Saracens, Origin of that Word, 1
Saphar, Name of a Month among the Mahometans, 128
Schafits, Mahometan Sect followed by the Arabians, 134
Schamalgani, Opinions attributed to him, 150. Infamous Practices of his Followers, ibid.
Schedad, First Ruler or King of the Alids, 2. To what Pitch he carried his Pride, ibid.
Schists, One of the most considerable Sects of the Mahometans, 79. Hold that Ali should have been the immediate Successor of Mahomet, ibid. Signification of their Name, ibid. Followed by the Persians, the Indians of Gokonda and the Coast of Ceramandel, ibid.
Sects, Various Sects of Mahometism, 137, and foll.
Sadre, Name the ancient Persians gave to their High Priest, 124. His Power and Dignity, ibid.
Selden, Cited, 78
Selissar-Aga, Who, 132
Sergius, Whether that Monk helped Mahomet in the Composition of the Koran, 14
Siaban, A Month of the Mahometans, 128
Sjewal, Name the Mahometans give to one of their Months, 128
Sil-Ai-Arem, Flood to which the Koran gives that Name, 5
Siumada, Name the Mahometans give to two of their Months, 128
Slocks, What they are, 132
Salmou, Science attributed to him, 69
Sanna, Name the Mahometans give to Tradition, 137
Sunnits, Name of one of the two great opposite Sects of Mahometism, 133. Reputed truly orthodox, ibid. This and the opposite Sect the Schists, load one the other with the most odious and infamous Crimes, 141

T.

- TACITUS, Cited,* 40
Tannuchites, Origin of that People, 5
Tarick, Signification of that Word, 68
Tam, Father of the Tjmites, Countries he inhabited, ibid.
Talligants, Publick Dancers in Turkey, 109
Temple of Mecca, Description of it, 34, and foll.
Thamud, Father of the Thamudites, 3. Country in which he settled after the Confusion of Languages, ibid.
Thamudites, a Prophet sent them by God, 3. Destroyed for their Incredulity, 4
Thammus, Whether the same with Amon or Osiris, 130
Theology, Of two Sorts among the Mahometans, 137
Theophanes, Cited, 106
Thomas of Jesis, Cited, 85
Tobacco, Prophecy of Mahomet relating to it, 107. Much used by the Turks and Persians, ibid.
Tomb (Mahomet's), Guarded by an Angel, 28. Visitation of the same by the Mussulmen, ibid. 29
Tjaoou, 3

I N D E X.

Tjiaous. See Chiaous.

Y.

V.

V Affel-Ben-Altha, Chief of a Sect among the Mahometans, 138
Venus, Whether worshiped by the Mahometans, 82
Vitry (James of), Cited, 78
Vigenerius, Accuses Mahomet of having held and taught Latitudinarian Principles, 78
Ufury, Accounted an enormous Sin by the Mahometans, 110. Thought very prejudicial by the Romans, ibid.
Uz. See Aws.

W.

W Arner (Lewin), His Account of the ancient Arabians, 106
Wine, Mahomet's Precept on that Article, 107
Wadou, A Sort of Ablution, 72

Y A R A B, Name of the Founder of the Kingdom of Yemen, or Arabia Fælix, 2
Year, How divided by the Mahometans, 128
Yemen, or Arabia Fælix. See Yarab.
Yoetan. See Kathan.

Z.

Z A I D, Surnamed Kofa, His Qualities and his Family, 10
Zeratists. See Beftaschits
Zeidits, A Sect among the Mahometans, who believe that God will send a Persian Prophet who shall by a new Law abolish the Religion of Mahomet, 145
Zindikites, The Sadducees of Mahometism, 144. Their Doctrine, ibid.
Zinehs, Name of the publick Réjoicings made on the Birth of a Prince in the Seraglio, 133
Zobaidits, Origin of that Family, 6

F I N I S.

THE CONTENTS OF VOLUME VII.

I Introduction to the History of Mahometism	Page 1	CHAP. II. Of Faith in God	66
Dissertation on the Life of Mahomet	13	CHAP. III. Of Angels	67
Dissertation on the Rise of Mahometism, and the Causes of its Progress	30	CHAP. IV. Of the sacred or divine Books	ibid.
Dissertation on the false Notions generally entertained concerning Mahometism	40	CHAP. V. Of the Apostles from God	68
SECT. I. Most Religions have been misrepresented by Adversaries, first the Jewish	ibid.	CHAP. VI. On the last Day	70
SECT. II. Christian Religion has not been more spared than the Jewish,	41	CHAP. VII. On the Decrees of God	71
SECT. III. The same Misrepresentations still practised	42	CHAP. VIII. Of Ablutions and Purifications	72
SECT. IV. The Reasons why Mahometism is so much misrepresented	ibid.	I. Of the Ablution called Gassl	ibid.
SECT. V. On the Necessity of inquiring into the Tenets of Mahometism	44	II. Of the Purification called Woudou, which chiefly belongs to the Hands and Feet	ibid.
SECT. VI. Whether Mahometans are allowed to dispute about Religion	45	III. Of the Purification with Earth or Gravel	73
SECT. VII. Most of the Latin and other Books against Mahometism are not sufficient to give us a true Notion of it	47	CHAP. IX. On Prayers	74
SECT. VII. On the Usefulness of the Arabick Language	ibid.	CHAP. X. On Alms	75
Dissertation on the Koran	49	CHAP. XI. Of Fasts	ibid.
The Mahometan Profession of Faith, or a Treatise on the Articles which every Mahometan is obliged to receive and believe to be a good Mussulman	58	CHAP. XII. On the Pilgrimage of Mecca	78
I. On the Existence of God	ibid.	Explanation of the Mahometan Religion.
II. On the Prophet Mahomet and his Koran	ibid.	SECT. I. The Drift of this Treatise	77
III. On Providence and Predestination	59	SECT. II. Whether Mahometans believe that every one may be saved in his Religion, if he leads a moral good Life?	ibid.
IV. On the Examen of the Grave	ibid.	SECT. III. Whether Mahometans believe that God is corporeal?	79
V. On the future Annihilation of all Things	60	SECT. IV. Whether God is the Author of Sin according to the Mahometan Doctrine	81
VI. On the Resurrection to come	ibid.	SECT. V. Whether the Mahometans pay Adoration to Venus	82
VII. On the Day of Judgment	61	SECT. VI. Whether Mahometans adore all Creatures	84
VIII. On the Intercession of Mahomet	ibid.	SECT. VII. Whether Mahometans deny Providence	ibid.
IX. On the Compensation of the last Day	62	SECT. VIII. Whether the Mahometans hold that God himself prays for Mahomet	85
X. On the Scale and Purgatory	ibid.	SECT. IX. Whether the Mahometans deny Hell	ibid.
XI. On the sharp Bridge which must be passed over	63	SECT. X. To what Part the Mahometans turn their Faces at their Prayers	86
XII. On Heaven	ibid.	SECT. XI. Whether Mahometans believe that their frequent washing of the Body can blot out Sins	ibid.
XIII. Of Hell	64	SECT. XII. Whether the Mahometans believe that the Devils are Friends of God and of Mahomet	87
The Mahometan Catechism, or an Abstract of the Mahometan Divinity, from the Latin of Reland	65	SECT. XIII. Whether Mahometans admit Female Angels	ibid.
CHAP. I. A general Notion of Religion as to Theory and Practice	ibid.	SECT. XIV. Whether Mahomet teaches that	the
VOL. VII.		A

The CONTENTS, &c.

the blessed Angels can commit Sins?	88	SECT. XXXVII. Whether Mahometans are allowed by their Religion to keep as many Wives as they can maintain	ibid.
SECT. XV. Whether the Devils bear?	89	SECT. XXXVIII. Whether the Mahometans wash their Faces without proper Precautions	102
SECT. XVI. Whether Mahometans are Originists?	ibid.	SECT. XXXIV. Whether Moses is a Reprobate according to the Mahometans	103
SECT. XVII. Of Mahomet's Paradise, and his Notions about supreme Happiness	90	SECT. XXXV. Whether the Mahometans own only three Prophets, Moses, Christ and Mahomet	ibid.
SECT. XVIII. Whether Women are to be forced according to the Mahometan Religion	91	SECT. XXXVI. Whether according to Mahomet, Man was made of a Lizard	ibid.
SECT. XIX. Whether the Mahometans go to Mecca, in order to visit the Tomb of Mahomet	92	SECT. XXXVII. Whether Mahomet denied the Immortality of the Soul	ibid.
SECT. XX. Whether the Koran confounds the blessed Virgin Mary, with Mary Sister to Moses	93	SECT. XXXVIII. Whether Mahomet teaches that whoever kills his Enemy, or is killed by him, is undoubtedly saved	104
SECT. XXI. On two other Anachronisms with which Mahomet is reproached	94	SECT. XXXIX. Whether Mahomet had brought up a Pigeon to come to his Ear, when in Fits of the Falling-sickness	ibid.
SECT. XXII. Whether Mahomet denied the Death of Christ	95	SECT. XL. Whether the Mahometans believe a Plurality of Worlds	105
SECT. XXIII. Whether the blessed Virgin became pregnant by eating Dates	ibid.	SECT. XLI. Whether Mahomet borrowed the Circumcision from the Jews of his own Times	106
SECT. XXIV. Whether Mahometans reckon Dogs among the clean Beasts	96	Dissertation on some Precepts, Duties, and several Customs, directly or indirectly authorised by the Koran	107
SECT. XXV. Whether Mahometans believe it as a Point of Faith, that they may lawfully break Treasuries made by them, with those whom they call Infidels	97	Continuation of the foregoing Dissertation, or a general Account of the religious Ceremonies of Mahometism	122
SECT. XXVI. Whether the Author of the Koran contradicts himself with Regard to the said Koran	98	Dissertation on the various Sects of Mahometism	137
SECT. XXVII. Whether Mahomet has thought that Pharaoh under whom Moses was brought up, was the same who was drowned in the Red-sea	ibid.	Modern Sects of Mahometism	141
SECT. XXVIII. Whether Mahomet placed Mecca in the Country of the Hammonites	ibid.	Dissertation on the Religion of the Sabæans	153
SECT. XXIX. Whether Mahomet contradicts himself in his Koran, by saying sometimes he could read, and sometimes that he could not	99	Additions and Corrections to the Ceremonies of the Jews	157
SECT. XXX. Whether Mahomet has said in some Places, that he led Men in the Way of Salvation, and at other Times that he did not know whether he and his Disciples were in it themselves	ibid.	Additions and Corrections to the Ceremonies of the Roman Catholicks	159
SECT. XXXI. Whether the Koran mentions an immortal God and Creator	100	Additions and Corrections to the Ceremonies of the Grecians, &c.	160
		Additions and Corrections to the Ceremonies of the Idolatrous Nations in the East-Indies	162

EXPLANATION

OF THE

SEVERAL PLATES

In the SEVENTH VOLUME,

With Directions to the Book-binder for placing the Figures.

No 1.
GENEALOGIE de Mahomet depuis Ismael
 1. Ismael, 2. Kedar, 3. Salem, . . . 9. Ednan, qui fut d'une rare beauté, 10. Moab, grand Capitaine Ennemi des Juifs, 11. Nisâr dont les Turcs disent avoir encore l'Etendart . . . 18. Malic celebre entre les Prophetes 22. Kaab.
Mahomet le Prophete, Phatime Femme d'Ali : . . .
Asma Mere d'Abubeker . . .
Abubeker le Juste . . . Aijcha Femme de Mahomet . . .
Phatime Mere d'Ali . . .
Ali, Phatime sa Femme étoit fille de Mahomet . . .
Armina Mere de Mahomet : . . .
Arwi Mere d'Otman, Hinda Mere de Moavia, Abu-jifian, dit Sahab.

No 2.
 Temple de la Mecque
 A. La pierre noire enchassée dans le mur de la Ca'aba
 B. Endroit où on montre des Vestiges des pieds d'Abraham
 C. Bâtiment qui renferme le puits de Zemzem
 D. Porte de la Ca'aba
 E. Endroit où l'on donne de l'eau du puits de Zemzem aux Pelerins

No 3.
Dgi-guerdgi, Albanois qui porte au Bezeistein des Foyes de mouton pour nourrir les Chats

No 4.
 Danse des Dervis

No 5.
 Dervich, ou Moine Turc qui tourne par Devotion
 Saka, Charitable Dervich qui porte de l'eau par la Ville et la donne par charité
 Turc qui fait sa prière
 Dervich des Indes

No 6.
 Amant Turc qui se cicatrise devant sa Maitresse pour preuve de son Amour
 Enfant Turc que l'on mene à la Circoncision
 Tchingui, Danceur Turc
 Tchinguis, ou Danseuse Turque

No 7.
 Mariage Turc

No 8.
 Afriquaine en habit de Ceremonie
 Afriquaine en deshabillé
 Femme Morelique
 Femme d'Afrique allant par les rues

No 9.
 Femme Persienne
 Persian

No 1. Page 10.
GENEALOGY of Mahomet from Ismael
 1. Ismael, 2. Kedar, 3. Salem . . . 9. Ednan who was of an exquisite Beauty, 10. Moab great Captain, Enemy the Jews, 11. Nisâr whose Standard the Turks say they have still . . . 18. Malic celebrated among the Prophets, 22. Kaab . . .
Mahomet the Prophet, Phatime Wife to Ali . . .
Asma Mother to Abubeker . . .
Abubeker the Just . . . Aijcha, Wife to Mahomet . . .
Phatime Mother to Ali . . .
Ali, His Wife Phatime was Mahomet's Daughter . . .
Armina Mother to Mahomet . . .
Arwi, Mother to Otman, Hinda Mother to Moavia, Abusefian or Sahab.

No 2. Page 34.
 Temple of Mecca.
 A. The Black-stone enshased in the Wall of the Ca'aba
 B. Place where is shown the Impression of Abraham's Feet
 C. Building that incloses the Well Zemzem
 D. Door of the Ca'aba
 E. Place where they give some Water of the Well Zemzem, to Pilgrims

No 3. Page 97.
Dgi-guerdgi, Albanian, who carries Sheeps-Liver to the Bezeistein to feed Cats with

No 4. Page 109.
 Dance of the Dervises

No 5. Page 110.
 Dervise, or Turkish Monk who turns about out of Devotion
 Saka, Charitable Dervise who carries Water about the Town and gives it away out of Charity
 A Turk in Prayer
 An Indian Dervise

No 6. Page 111.
 Turkish Lover who slashes himself before his Mistress to testify his Love Turkish Child led to be circumcised
 Tchingui, Turkish Dancer
 Tchinguis or Turkish Woman Dancer

No 7. Page 111.
 Turkish Marriage

No 8. Page 112.
 African Woman in a Ceremony-dress
 African Woman in her Deshabille
 Moorish Woman
 African Woman walking along the Streets

No 9. Page 112.
 Persian Woman
 Persian

Arabs

EXPLANATION of the PLATES.

Arabe du Desert	Arabian of the Desert
Habillement des Principaux Barbaresques	Habilement of the Chief Men in Barbary
No 10.	No 10. Page 117.
Enterrement des Turcs a Constantinople	Interment of the Turks at Constantinople
No 11.	No 11. Page 122.
Le Grand Seigneur en Habit de Ceremonie le jour de Bairam	The Grand Seignior in Ceremonial Habit the Day of Bairam
No 12.	No 12. Page 122.
La Sultane Affeki ou Sultane Reine	The Sultana Affeki, or Sultana Queen
No 13.	No 13. Page 123.
Le Moufti ou Chef de la Loy	The Mufti or Chief of the Law
No 14.	No 14. Page 123.
Le Cadi Leskier Chef des Loix, il y en a un d'Europe et un d'Asie	The Cadilefquer Chief of the Laws, there is one of Europe, and one of Asia
Emir, Homme de Loy de la race de Mahomet	Emir, Lawyer of the Race of Mahomet
Efendi, Homme de Loy dans son Etude	Efendi, Lawyer in his Study
Iman, Ministre d'une Mosquée	Iman, Minister of a Mosque
No 15.	No 15. Page 124.
Emir Chef des Descendants de Mahomet	Emir Chief of the Descendants of Mahomet
No 16.	No 16. Page 124.
A. Petite Enseigne ou guidon de Cavalerie	A. Little Ensign or Guidon of Cavalry
B. Drapeau des Jannissaires	B. Banner of the Janizaries
C. Etendard de Cavalerie	C. Etendard of Cavalry
D. Drapeau des Canoniers	D. Banner of the Cannoneers
E. Etendard du Grand Vizir, &c.	E. Etendard of the Grand Vizir, &c.
F. La Queue de Cheval	F. Horse-Tail
No 17.	No 17. Page 124.
Le grand Emir des Arabes du Desert	The great Emir of the Arabians of the Desert
Criminel garde en Perse au Carcan	Criminal guarded in Persia with an Iron-collar round his Neck
Espece de Dervis qui voyage	Sort of Dervise travelling
Religieux de l'Ordre des Edhemites	Religious Man of the Order of the Edhemits
No 18.	No 18. Page 126.
Prieur d'un Convent de Dervis	Prior of a Convent of Dervises
Deli, espece de Brave qui suit le Grand Vizir	Deli, Sort of Bravado who follows the Grand Vizir
Different Habits des Dervis	Different Habits of the Dervises
Santon, autrement Calendar et Abdal	Santon, otherwise Calendar and Abdal
No 19.	No 19. Page 128.
Le Bairam ou la Pâque des Mahometans	The Bairam or the Passover of the Mahometans
No 20.	No 20. Page 129.
Le Carnaval des Turcs	The Carnival of the Turks
La Fête d'Huilem	The Feast or Haffin
No 21.	No 21. Page 131.
Cavalcade du Grand Seigneur	Cavalcade of the Grand Seignior
La Fête du Poids au Mogol	The Feast of Weight in Mogul
No 22.	No 22. Page 132.
Selihtar Aga	Selihtar Aga
Libric-Dar Aga	Libric-Dar Aga
Solak	Solak
Peik ou Valet de pied	Peik or Footman
No 23.	No 23. Page 136.
La Tente du Grand Vizir	The Tent of the Grand Vizir
A. Endroit ou étoit attaché un billet superstitieux au dessus de la fenêtre	A. Place where stuck a superstitious Paper over the Window
B. Talisman	B. Talisman
1. La Tente du Divan ou se donne l'Audience	1. The Tent of the Divan where they give Audience
2. Tente de retraite pour le Grand Vizir	2. Tent of Retreat for the Grand Vizir
3. Autre Tente de Retraite	3. Other Tent of Retreat
4. Retranchement pour certains besoins	4. Retrenchment for certain Necessaries
No 24.	No 24. Page 157.
La Penitence des Juifs Allemands dans leur Synagogue	Penitence of the German Jews in their Synagogue
No 25.	No 25. Page 157.
La Fête de Purim	The Feast of Purim
No 26.	No 26. Page 163.
A. Pulleyar, B. B. Signes Superstitieux et Marques prophanes avec leurs Couleurs, C. C. C. Sur le nez	A. Pulleyar, B. B. Superstitious Signs and prophane Marks with their Colours, C. C. C. On the Nose
D. Double Lingam E. E. Lingam ou Phallus, F. F. Marques tolérées par les Millionnaires avec les Couleurs	D. Double Lingam E. E. Lingam or Phallus F. F. Marks tolerated by the Millionaries with the Colours